WE'VE DUG UP HIDDEN TREASURE!

JUST like finding King Solomon's gold—that's what the Success Series means to you.

Out of hundreds of motion pictures made by the greatest stars when they were building the success that now is theirs—out of these hundreds of negatives that have been treasured in our steel vaults we have chosen the best fifty-two, to be re-issued in the year to come.

The schedule for September, in order of release, for instance:

Mary Pickford in "The Eagle's Mate"
Marguerite Clark in "Wildflower"
All Star Cast in "The Girl of the Golden West"
Pauline Frederick in "Zaza"
Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen"

They were wonderful pictures when they were first issued. They're even finer now, for they have been re-edited, re-titled, re-printed.

Every one is a proved money getter, a builder of good will for you.

Hundreds of theatres now playing the productions of these world-famous stars never have shown these pictures. The theatres that did show them played to tremendous business.

Those who have seen them will want to go again—they'll be a great source of free advertising, for they'll spread the glad news that "Here come those pictures we've been raving about."

Get your share of the treasure NOW!

"A motion picture you have never seen is as new as a book you have never read."

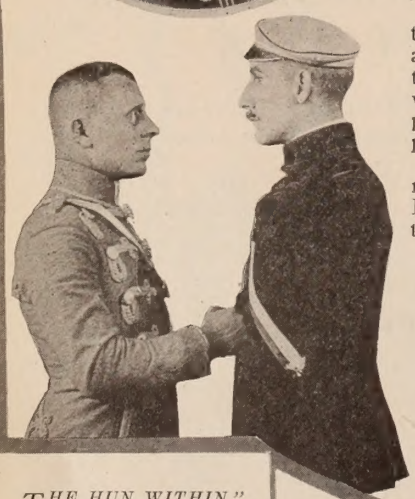
The First Paramount-Artcraft Special



A Fair Sample of the Entire Series of Nine

NEW YORK TIMES: "It is not often that spectators in a motion picture theatre are held as tensely and stirred as frequently to spontaneous applause as were those who witnessed 'The Hun Within,' a Paramount-Artcraft Special, at the Rialto yesterday afternoon.

"The play is highly colored by the temper of the time, but it is free from the too prevalent buncombe and bombast by which some producers are turning the passions of the people into dollars for themselves without giving anything worth while in return. It possesses elements of photodramatic excellence that put it far above the average of all productions.

"Dorothy Gish as the American girl will conquer new worlds of motion picture spectators. George Fawcett gives realistically sympathetic portrayal of the German-American father."

IN "The Hun Within" the Rialto Theatre has one of the most remarkable pictures ever shown on a New York screen.
"In plot, in setting, in photography and direction, it comes very near to being in the masterpiece class."—New York Evening Mail.

ARTCRAFT PICTURES

"THE HUN WITHIN" is one of the most beautifully produced pictures seen recently and it is hard to mention any one, excepting Griffith, who could make a picture like it. . . . . It is a masterpiece. One of the best pictures shown this season.
—New York Tribune.

ALIVE with interest in numerous scenes that are genuinely exciting is the photoplay "The Hun Within" now at the Rialto Theatre. There is not a moment when the action drops. Dorothy Gish most effective. George Fawcett plays with telling effect and force.—New York Evening Telegram.

"A NYMPH OF THE FOOTHILLS"

A Winsome Love-Tale of the Cumberlands

by
REX TAYLOR
Directed by
FREDERIC THOMSON

A FIVE PART BLUE RIBBON FEATURE

(Use this as program copy)

She had been promised from childhood to Jeff Crandall. But when Ben Kirkland, with his polished city ways, came into his life, she knew that Jeff was not for her. And Ben, jaded with the girls he had known, girls who had designs on the Kirkland fortune, knew that he had at last found his ideal in this unspoiled nymph of the Cumberlands.

But Jeff—what of him? Would he see his promised bride carried away by a stranger? And later, when Emmy's father was found slain, following a quarrel with Ben—when a native jury held the fate of the gentlemanly stranger in their calloused hands—what then? Could even the nimble wit of Emmy snatch the man she loved from the shadow of the gallows?

In "The Nymph of the Foothills", little Gladys Leslie has the most whimsical and fitting characterization of her successful screen career.

Select Pictures for 1918–1919

ONE FACT confronts the exhibitor as he faces the opening of the new season—judging from past performances, not from promises, there are no pictures that he can book with the certainty of receiving a high quality evenly maintained throughout the year that he can with Select Pictures.

This is not a statement needing proof: It is a fact! The exhibitor who keeps posted knows that houses running Select Pictures during the past season have been not only satisfied but highly pleased by the high average of quality maintained throughout by these productions. He knows that last year's Select exhibitors are bidding strongly to hold Select during the coming season. In a word, he knows that Select Pictures pay!

During the coming season Select will produce only a restricted number of the highest quality of pictures made by a small number of the foremost stars. Some details of the first of these productions follow.

SELECT SP PICTURES

THE Second Star Series of Select Pictures will bring to the theatres of the country the same desirable qualities which have distinguished Select's previous output. This means that the very best stories and stage successes which the market affords will be employed by Select stars in making their screen attractions. It also means productions made with the greatest care, embellished with the most desirable scenic and costume investiture, and thoughtfully produced under the foremost directors of the screen. Starting at high level, Select Pictures during the new season may be depended upon to present the acme of the photo-play art. Dependability of product is Select's watchword.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG

One of the first of the truly great stars, Clara Kimball Young brings to her Second Series of Select Pictures that glorious beauty and exquisite artistry which have made her a favorite of the screen all over the world. Appearing only in attractions of highest merit, she begins her new series with a war play, "The Road Through the Dark," from a story recently published in the Metropolitan Magazine. This is a drama of intense emotions, and a vehicle superbly suited to Miss Young's abilities. Following it she will be seen in "Cheating Cheaters," Max Marcin's great stage hit which ran for a solid year in New York.

NORMA TALMADGE

Enjoying an unsurpassed popularity, created by one splendid success after another, Norma Talmadge begins her Second Select Series with the most ambitious production of her career, "A Tale of a Forbidden City" (temporary title) by George Scarborough, the author of "Her Only Way." This will be followed by the great David Belasco stage success, "The Heart of Wetona," which will be made into a lavish screen-drama.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE

Having achieved in her First Series of Select Pictures success that places her in the front rank of stars, Constance Talmadge opens her Second Series with "Sauce for the Goose," the smart comedy in which Grace George scored a hit on the stage. Miss Talmadge follows this with Augustus Thomas's celebrated play, "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots"—with Constance wearing the boots!

ALICE BRADY

The sincere acting of Alice Brady was never seen to better advantage than in Miriam Michelson's clever story, "The Better Half," which furnishes the exceptional opening attraction of Miss Brady's Second Series. The brilliant technique which has characterized Miss Brady's photoplays is again in evidence, and the picture is one that will be remembered among the season's best. Stories from the pens of Fannie Hurst, who writes so crisply of New York life, and George Barr McCutcheon, who stands foremost among the novelists of the day, are among Miss Brady's forthcoming productions.

MARION DAVIES

Widely advertised in the first of her Select pictures, "Cecilia of the Pink Roses," this lovely star has for her second production "The Burden of Proof," an international romance of today with a background of war-time activities. Another sensational campaign of publicity will surround this feature, and will accompany also her forthcoming splendid production of that best beloved of stage successes, "The Belle of New York."

A Steady Flow of Splendid Select Productions

FROM the stars whose names appear in the foregoing pages Select Pictures will release a steady flow of high grade pictures — thirty-eight in number — during the year. This will bring one of these features on an average every ten days to exhibitors using Select Service. The number of productions to be made by each star follows:

Clara Kimball Young	8
Norma Talmadge	8
Constance Talmadge	8
Marion Davies	6

Select wishes to emphasize the fact that each of these productions will be a new picture — new in every sense of the word. There are included no reprints or reissues. Each succeeding picture will be the latest effort of the star and her supporting company of players, and will, needless to say, be a sincere attempt to keep the Select standard of quality in the position to which it has already been carried — at the front!

In addition to the pictures comprised in these Star Series, Select Pictures will place upon the market during the coming months a number of special productions of high merit, announcemen of which will be made through the usual channels.

"This is a Goldwyn Year!"

-and here are the proofs of it.

GOLDWYN'S announcement of fifty productions a year was the signal gun for the exhibitors of America who wanted to declare their independence. We are proud of the fact that Goldwyn has been the means of restoring the element of competition in the field of Quality Pictures.

That is why Goldwyn was conceived and established.

We knew that you did not want to be at the mercy of any one producer. The proof of exhibitor loyalty to Goldwyn, to the new factor that was organized for the protection of the exhibitors of America, was found in the fact that most of the biggest exhibitors stood by Goldwyn loyally in its first year when the volume of productions we offered them were not quite sufficient to give them the independence they desired.

But this year it is different.

This is YOUR year and Goldwyn's year. A year when the Goldwyn exhibitor customer can match, counter-balance or outweigh any star any producer has—or will have.

The exhibitor with Geradine Farrar, Rex Beach, Pauline Frederick, Mabel Normand, Madge Kennedy, Mae Marsh and Tom Moore productions doesn't have to truckle or play second fiddle to anybody.

He leads by sheer DOMINATION.

Humanity's living Devil stretched out his hand to unloose a Mongolian horde upon the white races of Europe battling to save the world from Prussian brutality.

Berlin's sinister, sneering agent advanced to raise the floodgate and drown the world under the flood of China's 400 million people.

Civilization stood breathless with its back against the wall.

But with one mysterious signal a beautiful Chinese girl saved the world from disaster—

She was a girl who loved America. She has been educated in an American mission. She loved those daring Yankees who always were the true friends of her country.

She had seen China made the helpless pawn of evil German rulers. She hated the Kaiser in whose mind was born "The Yellow Peril."

With her one signal she galvanized China's Secret Socities.

And she said: "China takes its place in the world today beside the Allies; the Dragon and Eagle shall hunt together."

Can you imagine a more stirring story for the screen? A story bringing into pictures the first Chinese star you have ever seen? In this picture you can feel the throb of preparation as America's, Japan's and China's armies make ready to swing across the Siberian plains—at the very moment you are reading the news of their march in the newspapers—in

"IF YOU ONLY KNEW—"

THE tragedy of France—the vivid story brought to America by a little refugee with sorrowful eyes—the story that makes patriots out of pacifists—the hope that kindles hope—the sublime faith in America's answer to the great cry: "When are you going to realize that the other fellow's sister is just as sacred as your own?"

ARE you teaching your patrons to HATE the misguided, Prussian-ridden German people? There are millions of Germans in this country who, with their children, abhor autocracy and ask only the opportunity to prove themselves loyal American citizens. For them, and for ALL thinking Americans, there is an eloquent message in Wyndham Gittens' thundering drama, "Me und Gott."

What Hodkinson Independence means to You

W. W. Hodkinson is free from producer or exhibitor control. His organization is likewise free and completely controlled by himself.

He is the only free man in the industry and his freedom can do for you what you would like to do yourself, but as an individual exhibitor have not the power to accomplish.

This is the selection of your own product. The picking and choosing of just those pictures that you know will make money in your house.

The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation is going to, and in fact is now, acting as a separator and selector for you.

Unlike producer-dominated companies which must force their product down your throat irrespective of merit, Hodkinson can accept or reject product for you strictly on its merits and the producer's willingness to sell it on an equitable basis and at a fair price.

When you think of the Hodkinson organization remember it in this light—of a separating machine that is working for your benefit; that is drawing the good product to you and eliminating the bad.

Every exhibitor that supports the Hodkinson organization, whether he throws his full weight behind it by becoming a Hodkinson co-partner and thereby helping to consolidate the exhibitor's buying power throughout the country, or whether he simply takes Hodkinson service, is helping to protect his own investment from the absorption and elimination that threatens it today.

—CHICAGO HERALD-EXAMINER.

Should prove of the most vital interest to men, women and children.
—CHICAGO DAILY TRIBUNE.

A feature you'll be glad you saw. You will remember this picture after you have forgotten dozens of ordinary features—well worth anyone's time.
—CHICAGO EVENING POST.

"Behind the lines in Italy" tells of the remarkable achievements of the Neapolitans in the brief space of three years. —CHICAGO DAILY NEWS.

A worth while subject handled in a worth while way—an hour's worth of pleasure that can be found nowhere else. —CHICAGO JOURNAL.

It is a new Italy—one glimpse from "Behind the lines in Italy"—not the languorous, lyric Italy but the iron Italy—which her eternal enemy across the Alps has awakened into life.

AMERICA MUST CONQUER

THE KING OF THE HUNS

Who is he? Who was born amidst royal splendor? and with the roaring guns to announce his royal birth?

Kaiser Wilhelm
The King of the Huns

Who is he? Who was born in a cottage amidst simple surroundings, born to be a citizen of the people?

President Wilson

Who is he? Who caused to be destroyed 43,198 buildings, and to be massacred nearly 5,000 non-combatants—women, old men and children —without inquiry or trial?

Kaiser Wilhelm
The King of the Huns

Who is he? Who stretches forth a helping hand to devastated cities (Belgium, Servia, Rumania, Armenia, Poland, Russia), to bereaved women and to maimed children?

President Wilson

Who is he? Who committed arson, pillage, and rape, executed hostages, deported civilians from their native lands, placed them in the front of German troops, laid to ruin the cities of Liege, Namur, Louvain, Termonde, Lierre, Luxembourg, Haimant, Barabant, Antwerp, Aerschot?

Kaiser Wilhelm
The King of the Huns

Who is he? Who with the help of One Hundred Millions of freemen, proclaims the world free for Democracy, forever protecting our homes, our women, and our children, from arson, pillage, and rape?

President Wilson

AND SO—

"The King of Prussia shall do all that may seem to advantage the Kingdom of Prussia among nations, notwithstanding any European conventions or any traditions of Christendom, or even any of those wider and more general conventions which govern the international conduct of the other Christian people."

My dear Exhibitor:

We shall take our critical American audiences into our confidence, and, like the wonderful Burton Holmes, travel with them through the lands of Geography and History, into the lands of Atrocities and "Kultur," and then through the lands of Truth and Love, and tell a story.

The story vizualizes Hun-ism in its true colors as it exists today, and yet tells this story so vividly and so humanely that your patrons will marvel.

Sincerely yours,

AMERICA MUST CONQUER
The King of the Huns

Will be a five-reel production released about September 15th:

1. Portraying the birth of the Kaiser, and the birth of President Wilson.
2. Omitting the atrocities as committed by the individual Hun, but showing those atrocities sanctioned by the German Government.
3. Showing by a series of most instructive, animated flashes the whole atrocious plot of the Hohenzollerns' menace to the World's peace and security.
4. Visualizing the interlocking blood relations of the genealogical tree of the Prussian family, over almost the entire world.
5. Telling a story of the Franco-German border: "It makes a difference whose sister it is."
6. Revealing the oath made by the King of Prussia. This fiendish oath will be depicted in all its hellishness.

This FIRST work will be released about September 15th, 1918. To be followed by others.

"Italy's Flaming Front"

The First Films of a Whole Battle that it actually does show

Mountain fighting: Bombarding the enemy's trenches with big guns in preparation for infantry charge; men crouching low in trenches, bullets "spatting" on sandbags overhead, they go over the top, advancing in sprints, taking advantage of every cover, the final rush, hand-to-hand bayonet fighting, victory!; bringing back hordes of prisoners.

Italian "75" hit by Austrian shell—smithereens! Italian artillery's hot reply—you never saw prettier work. Close-ups of dozens of different types of big guns from 40 centimeter to trench "bombards" in action. Panorama of enemy's trenches and works under fire. These pictures, taken from one side of a mountain valley, give a wonderfully graphic picture of a bombardment.

First complete air fight ever photographed. Austrian bombing plane attacks fleet; six Italian sea planes give chase (two carrying enlisted cameramen); Austrian drops bombs at fleet, the explosions hurl huge pillars of water and spray skyward; a submarine chaser hit, you see the explosion and the craft capsize from quarter mile distance; Italian planes close in; Austrian in desperation does dare-devil tail dive to sea and saves his life but is captured by Italian torpedo boat.

Italian monitors and floating gun carriages each mounting one great gun in action.

In general: Fighting on mountain peaks above the clouds, Italy's spider men, on skis; the wonderful aerial cable communications; unbelievable feats of patience and hardihood bridging mountain torrents and dragging great guns by hand to lofty positions where tractors, even mules, are unable to go.

The eyes of the night, searchlights make night artillery possible. Shrapnel and barbed wire in night action.

And many graphic pictures not listed here because of lack of space.

Never has feature film had such powerful endorsement from men who know the business and there is not a newspaper editor in America who will not similarly endorse this wonderful film—and you know what that will mean.

Reproduction of strategic sketch diagram made during the action by military observer

A—Observation balloon, the eyes of the artillery. Note fleet of planes to protetct it from enemy planes and "spot" the shots. The destruction or interruption of this signal system would be the equivalent of blinding the gunners. BBB—Italian big gun positions. CC—Aerial cable ways, often several miles long. E—Summit Mt. Pasubio, elevation 9,200 feet, covered with eternal snows. The Italians hewed one tunnel 29,000 feet long through solid rock to secure uninterrupted communication. D—Austrian base against which attack was directed

Reproduction of strategic sketch diagram made immediately after the action by a military observer

AAA—Indicates capital ships steaming in a great circle and firing broadsides as they come within range of their 12 and 14 inch guns. B—Austrian stronghold mounting long range coast defense artillery. CCC—Indicates destroyers and submarine destroyers which steam in wide circles around the battleships to protect them from enemy submarines. The speed of these craft is from 30 to 45 miles per hour. DD—Italian floating gun carriages. These are large scows mounting but one heavy gun. They are towed to their positions and anchored. EE—Indicates Italian monitors. These are the only known films of these unwieldy but destructive craft in action. The fleet's observation balloon will be seen to be hovering well out of range of the enemy's guns, but high enough to watch and direct the Italian fire

Reproduction of the strategic sketch diagram made the day after the air fight by a military observer

A—Austrian battle plane rises from behind Austrian stronghold and climbing to about 10,200 feet proceeds to bomb fleet. B—One of the bombs explodes just alongside a small destroyer which is damaged and capsized by the explosion. (The films show it clearly.) C—Italian planes hidden in cove behind headland rise and pursue Austrian airman. After a thrilling chase they pocket him and to escape their machine guns he does a dare-devil tail dive to the sea and is captured by an Italian destroyer. D—Indicates point of his capture, within range of both shore batteries and the fleet's guns. Dotted line indicates Italian plane's flight. Heavy line indicates Austrian's

Gentlemen:-

We feel very gratified with the results we have obtained from our Ad which we placed in your paper in the Issue of August 24th of our two reel picture, "WHO'S AFRAID OF THE HUN?"

Not alone were we deluged with inquiries, but the unusual feature was that we closed two territories through Long Distance telephone.

Mr. Dave Mundstuck of Strand Features, Detroit, Michigan, called us up by phone from Detroit, and closed for the state of Michigan, and W.H.Film Co, of Baltimore, Md. also called us up by phone from Baltimore and closed for states of Delaware, Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia.

We have also closed with Mr. Lande of the Quality Film Co, of Pittsburg, Pa for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, and we are on the verge of closing several other territories of which we will inform you later.

Your paper was the only one in which we carried our Ad. With best wishes for your success, I remain,

Very truly yours,

J. WEINBERG.

Kill the Adjective

A FEW years ago when the straight advertising of motion pictures began to put them over—half pages were being used in New York dailies—the brotherhood of theatrical press agents wailed to high heaven.

"You're paying good money for space we can steal," they cried (which a hard-hearted logician would translate into : "You're paying to newspapers the money you ought to pay us.")

But the straight advertising of pictures went on—and on, till now the exhibitor is climbing right up to the department store as the greatest user of newspaper advertising in the country.

Which is as it should be, and must and will be—till pictures, happily, are the most widely advertised commodities in the world.

But one factor is holding back the sane development.

That factor is the advertising adjective—

The hot-air, hysterical, lying adjective.

The adjective that never sold anything but circuses—and these but once a year.

The adjective that pleases one man only—the press agent who stole it from Tody Hamilton or Daniel Webster—and nauseates every exhibitor in the United States from the country cross-roads to the metropolis.

There are two interesting statements in this issue.

One is from E. V. Richards, Jr., head of a concern that owns or books half a hundred picture houses.

He entreats the trade paper advertiser to discard superlatives—to use only the descriptive terms the exhibitor dares use in advertising to a public the confidence of which he has to hold day in and day out.

The other is from an advertiser, stating that a new kind of advertising writer has been employed to tell the exhibitor how to advertise to his public—honestly, intelligently and without superlatives.

Kill the adjective, gentlemen in your trade and public advertising.

It fools nobody but yourself.

Clothes—No Judge

SAID a film distributor the other day:

"If you should publish Motion Picture News in typewritten form on 'flimsy' paper, the exhibitor, forgetting it was a trade paper and realizing that he was getting each week a big bundle of special, fresh, practical, money-making service, would pay you fifty dollars a year for it."

We are handicapped then by having the appearance of a trade paper. We exist in spite of this unfortunate classification, not because of it.

Very well, we accept this rating. The News is a service paper.

The Picture And Essential

OUR mail of the last week would indicate that a few plain statements of fact are needed to clear the granting of essential classification to the motion picture industry by the War Trade Board.

In the first place—and this answers a number of letters—the new ruling in no way affects the selective draft regulations.

If you are a theatre manager, salesman, or other employe you are amenable to all the rules of the draft act as originally promulgated—but—you are exempt from the provisions of the "Work or Fight" ruling. Your case under this ruling rests solely on the language of Provost Marshal Crowder, exempting "owners and managers, actual performers including musicians, in . . . motion pictures . . . and the skilled persons who are necessary to such productions, performances, or presentations."

It hinges on the words "skilled" and "necessary."

Aside from these points the new ruling of the War Trade Board has value of its own in the aid it will give manufacturers in securing shipments and materials, and the aid it will give all branches in dealings with Fuel Conservation officials this winter.

It further has value in suggesting economies that the industry might well take to mind even in the peace times to come. Uncle Sam will have done us a favor if he makes us put our house in order.

And, finally, the ruling has value in enabling us to say a word of praise for William A. Brady on his successful efforts.

Fine Outlook

MANY exhibitors who have never before attended a convention will be in Chicago September 3-7, according to a wire from American exhibitor headquarters. The mails are heavy with acceptances.

The simultaneous holding, in Chicago, of the meeting of the franchise holders of the first national exhibitor circuit will also bring to the convention an imposing list of prominent exhibitors who heretofore have been noticeable at league conventions by their absence.

The outlook for a new kind of national organization is excellent.

Serving It with Speed and Ginger

IF we had only saved up some of the adjectives that we lavished so freely in our own trouble days as a "fillum" company press agent!

We wouldn't be in the fix we are now.

Oh, if we had some untouched adjectives—a few fresh ones—some ringing phrases that would be certain to land sure-fire and convincingly.

We wouldn't be sitting here in fear and trembling, haunted by the thought that some of you fellows might be so foolish or so busy as to put this copy of Motion Picture News down before you get to Page 1591.

We'd say something right here that would make you fellows turn there the moment you finished this scintillating page—if not sooner.

Here's our dilemma:

This week we spring another new Motion Picture News Idea.

We firmly, sincerely and deeply feel that it's a year in advance SERVICE to manufacturer and exhibitor.

And, hang it all, we can't cook up the language that we feel will make it almost obligatory for you to turn to Page 1591.

We call it The Complete Plan Book.

It's only another way of saying—Dominates the Field.

But here we are—oh, rats—

Turn to Page 1591.

And read what W. A. J. says about it.

* * * *

It's a boy.

* * * *

WE are glad you turned to Page 1591 before going on to finish this palpitating screed.

You saved us a lot of work—and yourself fifteen inches more of sales talk.

For if you hadn't turned to Page 1591 we would have gone right ahead and used up this whole page writing sentences around the phrase "turn to Page 1591."

But now that you have turned to Page 1591 and glanced through The Complete Plan Book we won't say those fateful words again.

We'll let up on you after planting this idea: Watch The Complete Plan Book next week and the week after—and after that. For we are frankly willing to say that there are still some rough edges; we mysteriously say that there are some corking additions planned and ready.

* * * *

It's a Boy.

WE think William Fox should have been a newspaper publisher. We are willing to lay a small bet that he would have had Hearst backed off the map long ago.

We have thought this for a long time—as, month after month, Fox comes to bat with a production that shows the top-notch publisher's knack of feeling the public pulse.

And now he comes along with "18 to 45"—a picture ready to play to the two million odd and their friends and relatives who will be affected by the new draft.

With it—to cheer the heart of a trade paper editor—comes a news story on the effects of the draft on the industry which makes corking reading. You will find it on Page 1515. When you read the story, if you are like some fellows we know, you are going to say: "Gosh, Fox stole a whole page in The News." If you are like some other fellows we know you'll say: "I see The News is glad to give you space if you send a real news story. Guess I'll give the waste-basket that interview with the boss on the super-excellence of Super-Excellent Fillums and look for some news."

IT'S A BOY!

THIS week, ladies and gentlemen, we expose in all his shrinking colors a Famous Silent Partner.

None other than J. B. Clark!

How often have you heard, since you cut your eyeteeth in this picture game, of the team of Clark and Rowland. How many of you know what kind of a feller this Clark is? Which one of you knew his initials before we sprung them on you in the paragraph above?

Blame few, say we. (Always excepting Bill Kalem Wright who used to sell him film in the days before Bill reached the affluence of treasurer and general manager.)

Of course we all know Dick Rowland—for that member of the duo carries the title "President of the Metro Corporation" and with the duties he must necessarily take the glory.

But this week shake hands with J. B. Clark—the Silent Partner. He's on Page 1517.

WITH September here, Famous Players-Lasky inaugurates its campaign on the Success Series.

One of the features of this issue is a Special Service Section on the releases in this series for September.

This service has been prepared by the Exhibitors' Service Bureau—for exhibitors. It's all common-sense, hard-pan, constructive exploitation talk.

We dont' suggest that the exhibitor dress his girl ushers solely in wildflowers for Marguerite Clark's picture of that name; we don't tell the man in Kinderhook, N. Y., to buy a dozen live or stuffed eagles for his lobby on a one-day run of "The Eagle's Mate;" we don't ask the theatre man to induce his local bars to put on a special sale of Zaza Cocktails.

We don't because the hundreds of letters received by the Exhibitor Service Bureau lean us strongly to the belief that the exhibitor is an intelligent animal.

What do you say?

It's a boy!

GENTLEMEN, we have with us this week—and we hope for many moons to come—Tom Hamlin, former publisher of Amusements of Minneapolis. Tom has joined the staff of Motion Picture News and will be with us shoulder to shoulder in kicking up dust during the coming year's drive.

With Tom's coming we began to check up forces the other day. And we are perfectly willing to confess to some pride in the personnel of Motion Picture News—always including ourselves.

We have tried to build an organization with seasoned, all-around motion picture experience, rather than a staff of real and near typewriter pounders. Straining at our modesty we admit that we believe we are succeeding.

What do you say?

* * * *

Yes, gol darn it, IT'S A BOY!

* * * *

And it's blamed lucky to have a managing editor for a daddy for what other press agent could steal so much editorial page publicity as we have on this bit of valuable white paper.

Yes, thank you, both Mrs. Welsh and the youngster are doing nicely. And as for Robert E—— he's glad this page is finished so he can run home and rock the cradle.

Strike On In Studios At Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES (Special).—Four hundred of the eleven hundred stage employes, members of Local 33, International Alliance Theatrical Stage Employes, "walked out" at eight o'clock last Wednesday morning when several Los Angeles studio managers refused to grant the increase demanded in the new stangard wage scale of the local union.

This new scale calls for six dollars a day for electricians, mechanics and carpenters; five dollars a day for Grips, with time and a half for overtime and double time for Sunday work. The increase in each instance is one dollar per day.

The studios that have already acceded to the new advanced wage scale are: Fox, Griffith, Diando, Lois Weber, Jesse Hampton, Hart, Metro, Ince, National, Chaplin, Sennett, Universal, Balshofer-Eltinge, Astra, Haworth and Helen Keller. The Rolin Company has also accepted the new scale pending the return of Manager Hal Roach from New York.

National Vice-President Dolliver and International Representative Roy Stephenson are acting here for the union. Where Government Propaganda pictures were being made, the men continued at work on these pictures at the old wage scale.

The walkout is declared one hundred per cent efficient at all studios not granting the new scale. The Los Angeles union men declare that the New York offices would send out a national order prohibiting union operators from projecting film made in studios not accepting the new union scale.

Final negotiations are on with Adolph Zukor before this proposed step is taken. The new scale is equivalent to the wage fixed by the Government for workmen at shipyards.

Los Angeles union operators who are affiliated with the same international union decided at local meeting last Wednesday night to call on all their operators to walk out unless the Theatre Owners' Association discontinue projection school for girls now being operated here.

NEW YORK.—S. B. Newman, acting for Vice-President Dolliver during the latter's absence on vacation visiting his home city of San Francisco, declares that nothing has been heard anent the Los Angeles strike, but that he presumed that the local union there had submitted its proposed new wage scale to the International and that it had been probably O. K'd. Nothing had been heard at the national offices anent the reported action of the Los Angeles operators in refusing to project films whose sets had been arranged by non-union men.

Universal Quickly Complies with New U. S. Ruling

The Government ruling, just issued, declaring motion pictures an essential industry, but requesting that all branches of that business be swept clean of inefficient, wasteful methods, has received instant response from the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal, dispatched special orders to heads of the west coast studios, commanding a wholesale cut in the consumption of negatives. He also issued general orders putting the company, in effect, on the operating basis of a railroad.

Mr. Laemmle's decree concerning footage waste, puts the directors and players under the necessity of making every foot of film count. An absolute limit will be fixed for the amount of negative to be taken for each scene. This limit allowance will be written into the working scenario before it goes into the director's hands. Universal executives are confident that through this measure the old studio practice—true of all companies in the past—of "shooting" excessive footage of film for a five-reel production, will be chloroformed at Universal City.

Mutual Appoints Merrick on the Coast

Mutual announces the appointment of Joseph Merrick as coast supervisor, with direct supervision over Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle. Mr. Merrick was formerly branch manager for Mutual at Los Angeles and Seattle. He is particularly well equipped for his new position on account of his wide acquaintance with exhibitors and intimate knowledge of conditions in his territory, having formerly operated on the coast as special representative for Metro.

Industry Co-Operates with Fuel Board

At a well attended meeting of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry held Wednesday, August 28, plans were made for the active and intimate co-operation of the industry with the United States Fuel Administration in its campaign to conserve 50,000,000 tons of coal during the coming winter.

The meeting was called for the purpose of permitting E. R. Sartwell, publicity director of the Fuel Administration and the representative of Fuel Administrator Doctor Harry A. Garfield, to explain to the members of the association the size and the difficulty of the coal problem, and its intimate relationship with the winning of the war. P. B. Noyes, conservation director of the Fuel Administration, expected to be present but was detained at the last moment and could not arrive in time for the meeting.

As a result of recommendations made to the United States Fuel Administration by the Fuel Conservation Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, there is now in the process of formation a Standardization Commission of the Fuel Administration, which will draw up regulations effecting the use of all electric current in the United States used for the purpose of lighting, heating and household utilities.

This commission will be made up of a representative of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, a representative of the National Electric Light Association and a representative of the United States Fuel Administration.

General Moves in Dallas

It is officially stated now that the Dallas office of General Film Company is doing business in its new location at 1924 Main street, after several weeks of arranging a transfer. The new location is considered an improvement over the old.

In and Out of Town

Marshall Neilan, who was engaged recently by Harry Garson to take general supervision of Garson productions, leaves Monday for Los Angeles to take up his new duties.

E. C. Blackburn, Chicago, arrived in New York this week. Mr. Blackburn represents Rothacker Film Mfg. Company in New York.

David Hosley arrived in New York from the Coast this week. He is stopping at the Astor.

J. L. Morrissey, manager of the Lyceum theatre at Duluth, Minn., was seen along Broadway conversing with several mysterious characters. It finally developed that Mr. Morrissey was organizing a stock company to play during the winter season at Duluth between special picture productions. Mr. Morrissey was at one time heavily interested in the Zenith Feature Film Company of Minneapolis and Duluth.

Fox Receives Thanks for Entertainment

The Fox Film Corporation's Los Angeles office has received a letter from Gunner F. E. Fitzgerald, amusement officer of the United States Naval Reserve Training Camp at San Pedro, Cal., thanking the corporation for the assistance given in connection with a recent entertainment staged at the camp.

In his letter Gunner Fitzgerald says: "Your patriotic action in making this possible was a most laudable one, and it will please me if you will convey to the entire company our thanks for their kind participation. Again thanking you for your valued assistance, we wish the Fox Film Corporation continued success and prosperity."

New War Act A Scorcher

THE New York Herald on Thursday publishes exclusively the full text of the new war revenue bill as it has been drafted by the Ways and Means Committee of the House.

Opinion in legislative Washington is that, while the bill will undergo many changes before being finally approved by both Senate and House, the provisions regarding motion pictures are likely to stand with little alteration.

The most important feature of the bill is the new excise tax to replace the former tax of one-quarter of a cent on negative and one-half cent on positive film. In the new bill no tax is placed on negative, but on "positive film containing a picture ready for projection," a flat tax of ten per cent of the sale or lease price is levied.

Picture manufacturers had counted on a five per cent rental tax, which it was confidently expected would be passed on to the exhibitor.

The admission tax provision calls for a tax of two cents on each ten-cent unit of admission charge, "to be paid by the person paying for such admission." The tax will be only one cent in the case of theatres charging less than seven cents admission and for children under twelve years.

The price of the ticket, exclusive of the tax, "shall be conspicuously, indelibly printed, stamped or written on the face of the ticket," under penalty of heavy fine.

Sale of "stills," cameras and other photographic material will be taxed ten per cent.

The new seat tax reads as follows:

(5) Proprietors of theatres, museums and concert halls, where a charge for admission is made, having a seating capacity of not more than two hundred and fifty, shall pay $50; having a seating capacity of more than two hundred and fifty and not exceeding five hundred, shall pay $100; having a seating capacity exceeding five hundred and not exceeding eight hundred, shall pay $150; having a seating capacity of more than eight hundred, shall pay $200.

Export Figures Made Public

National City Bank of New York Declares That One Year's Export of Film Would Encircle the World

SURPRISING figures in the export branch of the motion picture industry shows good financial strength during the many ups and downs of the war. One hundred million feet of film has been exported during the twelve months. The National City Bank pointed out that the United States is now the world's largest manufacturer of films for the camera and the projecting machine.

The bank points out that it was only in 1912 that the exportation of this class of merchandise was considered of sufficient importance to justify a mention in the statistics of our international commerce. In that fiscal year the total exports of films amounted to 80,000,000 feet. By 1914 the total was 188,000,000 feet, and in 1915 it was 151,000,000 feet. It was figured that the value of the 1918 moving picture exports was close to $7,000,000, against $8,978,000 in 1916 and $5,000,000 in 1915.

Of the films exported in 1918 over one-half were exposed, ready for use. The average export price of the exposed film was 6 cents per foot, and of unexposed film 2½ cents per foot. The valuation per foot of the imported film was less than that of the films exported, the stated value of 50,000,000 feet of unexposed films imported being about 1½ cents per foot, and nearly 3 cents per foot for the exposed, of which, however, the quantity was extremely small.

Most of the films exported go to Great Britain and Canada, the total to Great Britain in 1918 amounting to 24,000,000 feet, and to Canada 16,000,000 feet. While no exact figures are available on the quantity of films now produced in the United States, an estimate based upon the known quantity exported suggests that the entire domestic production considerably exceeds 1,000,000,000 feet, with a value of approximately $40,000,000 per annum when exposed and ready for use in the projecting machine.

The character of the views presented on the exposed ready-to-use film exported was, the bank said, quite similar to that of the films in use in the United States, probably three-fourths being photo plays, and the remainder chiefly travelogues, "news service," and comedies. The value of the motion picture films exported from the United States since the official record of exports was begun in 1913 aggregates about $36,000,000, while that of the imports since 1910 amounts to nearly $10,000,000, including unexposed and exposed positives and negatives.

Of the 128,000,000 feet of exposed films exported in 1917, it was said 30,000,000 went to England, 16,000,000 to Italy, 15,000,000 to Russia, 11,000,000 to France, 14,000,000 to Canada, 10,000,000 to Australia, 6,000,000 to Argentina, 2,375,000 to Japan, and 1,320,000 to China. The American-made films are also in great demand in Cuba, Porto Rico, Philippines and Hawaii.

Powell Completing "The Forfeit"

Frank Powell, well known picture producer and now vice-president and director-general of Sunset Pictures, Inc., is in New York putting the finishing editing touches to "the Forfeit," his initial production with the Sunset organization.

"The Forfeit," which is from the well-known story by Ridgewell Cullom, presents House Peters and Jane Miller in the leading roles. It is the first production under the Sunset Pictures plan to produce six big special attractions a year. The next production planned is "Good Indian," from the B. M. Bower story. Miss Miller will appear in the feminine lead, while Mr. Powell expects to engage a prominent male star also while in New York.

Sunset Pictures, Inc., is a San Antonio, Texas, organization. All its productions will be semi-western of both dramatic and light comedy nature. Different male stars and supporting casts will be engaged for each production.

Chicago Convention Looms Up

Chicago promises to become the centre of the motion picture industry next week according to all indications.

The enthusiasm displayed by the promoters of the American Exhibitors' Association would warrant this claim, and their action in throwing their convention doors open to all assures a co-operative spirit which may well become prevalent in Uncle Sam's fifth biggest industry.

"Our program is open to you," declares Frank Rembusch; "and hundreds of personal invitations sent throughout the country has brought such an apparently unanimous response that we look for a record-breaking attendance."

Leading producers and distributors, prominent exhibitors and many notable stars will also be present if the letters and wires received by the committee in charge can be relied upon:

"Your country wants you. Your organization wants you. The Chicago meeting at the Hotel Sherman, September 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7 is not a one-man meeting. It is a meeting of the entire industry.

"It is a national motion picture meeting in which every one in the picture business is cordially invited to participate. If you are in the picture business this is your meeting.

"There can be no politics because the first three days are taken up with a set program open to the entire industry. The American Exhibitors' Association is not calling this meeting to sell pictures, trade journals, co-operative booking, etc.

"Our national directors want a real business meeting and will do anything necessary to perfect an organization that will protect the motion picture industry as a whole."

From the above terse statements can be determined the attitude of the officers towards the proposed affiliation or amalgamation with the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

Whole Industry Is Declared Essential

The Priorities Committee of the War Industries Board Has Stated That the Motion Picture Industry in All Its Branches Is Absolutely Necessary

THE declaration of the motion picture industry as essential came about as a result of a conference between the Priorities Committee of the Board headed by Judge Edwin B. Parker and a committee from the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry headed by President William A. Brady, and consisting of the following officials and members of the association: W. C. Smith of the Nicholas Power Company, E. M. Porter of the Precision Machine Company, D. H. Haight of the Eastman Kodak Company, A. J. Mitchell of the National Carbon Company, Albert Lowe of Paragon Films, Inc., and Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary of the association.

Limitations Placed

In the ruling declaring the industry essential the following limitations were placed upon it:

1. Each member of the industry will pledge himself to discontinue all non-essential production and eliminate all wasteful methods. Old film must be scraped and reclaimed and returned to the manufacturer for use in the manufacture of new films. Only wholesome pictures are to be produced. To save chemicals used in the production of explosives only one negative of a single picture will be made unless the picture is for export when two will be permitted.

2. Permits for the erection of new theatre buildings and equipment for new theatres will be denied during the war. Where localities are over-theatred no new theatre will be permitted to replace those retiring from business.

3. Manufacturers will encourage the repair of existing machines, (projection machines) rather than the purchase of new. Manufacture of new iron and tin containers for film will be discontinued and substitutes used to conserve the metals.

When these regulations and others to be announced later are complied with the members of the industry will be granted the priorities necessary to enable them to operate.

Brady Makes Speech

In presenting the reasons as to why the industry should be declared essential President Brady made an exceedingly strong and convincing speech. He reviewed the war service work of the industry from the time he was requested to organize it on a war basis by President Wilson down to the present, calling attention to the twenty-eight page brief that had previously been filed with Provost Marshal General Crowder, setting forth in detail the accomplishments of the motion picture and the National Association as a direct aid of the Government and its associated activities, such as the Red Cross, in the winning of the war.

Judge Parker, in replying to Mr. Brady's speech, said that the war work of the motion picture industry did not need to be gone into, as every prominent official in Washington was familiar with that work and the great good that it had accomplished. He stated that there was no question of the value of the motion picture and the screens of America to the Government.

THE COMPLETE PLAN BOOK

A Step Forward in Seven League Boots—That's It

TURN to Page 1591 and see the first issue of The Complete Plan Book—a new weekly feature of Motion Picture News.

Everything you want on each of the current pictures will be given every week in a page of The Complete Plan Book.

The critical review, the story, the cast, the ad-talk, a list and description of the advertising aids, suggestions for exploitation, etc.—all in one page.

No more skirmishing through a half dozen numbers of The News, and digging through a ton of circular matter—everything is on the one page.

And always at the back of the book, so you can lift it out and keep a file of The Complete Plan Book—and have available in a second all the information you want on any picture.

Turn to Page 1591 and look it over now.

The association committee also called the attention of Judge Parker to the work it had accomplished over nine months ago in eliminating the tin film cans from film shipments when such shipments were made in sheet iron carrying cases, and the manner in which it had succeeded in bringing about the necessary changes in the railroad and express regulations that would make this elimination possible.

This information was a distinct surprise to Judge Parker, and he expressed his extreme gratification, stating that one of the important methods of conservation that he had in mind was the elimination of the tin film cans. He expressed himself as being more than pleased to find that tin film cans were no longer required, and stated that the motion picture industry was the only industry so far examined by the board in which they had found that their requirements and demands had been anticipated and voluntarily put into effect.

Judge Parker then pointed out the absolute necessity for the rigid conservation of metals, all kinds, but more especially iron, steel and tin. Several plans were discussed for the conservation of these metals in the industry, and it was pointed out that the greatest use was in the manufacture of projection machines and parts.

The Priorities Committee inquired into the feasibility of inaugurating a campaign of education among the users of the machines, setting forth the necessity for care against accident and breakage and uring that old machines be repaired rather than new ones purchased. The Association committee assured them that this would be done.

Picture History Told

During the course of the conference the history of the manufacture and life of the motion picture was gone into in detail from the time the raw film was manufactured until the finished picture was shown in the theatre and the old and worn out prints scraped for the recovery of the base celluloid and the emulsion. Mr. Haight of the Eastman Kodak Company, and Mr. Lowe, representing the laboratories, were very valuable in this respect.

Plans were then made for the conservation of film in every way, shape and manner. In the past it has been the custom of some directors to shoot thirty and forty thousand feet of negative in order to obtain a five-reel picture. Directors have also used from one to five cameras in shooting the same scene. Under the rulings of the Board this will no longer be permitted.

The necessity for the conservation of film is the fact that the same chemicals are used in the manufacture of the base celluloid as are required in many forms of explosives, and these chemicals naturally must be greatly conserved. Plans were also entered into whereby all waste film must be returned to the manufacturer for use in making new film, and all old pictures when they have outworn their usefulness must be scraped and returned to the manufacturer.

President Brady when told of the order of the War Industries Board declaring the industry essential, said: "This is one of the greatest achievements of the National Association, and I am extremely gratified that it was a committee composed entirely of officials and members of the association that was instrumental in bringing it about. I know of nothing of greater importance to the industry as a whole, and I am more than pleased that the credit for its accomplishment can rightly go to the National Association."

War Service Stages Another Ball

A most dignified and highly successful event of the West Coast film industry was a masked ball given by the Motion Picture War Service Association, Saturday evening, August 17, at Shrine Auditorium. The officers of the association planned that this should be an event of credit to all people of the film world, and one that would be in keeping with war times, and devoid of the usual solicitation for funds through the sale of various articles and refreshments with no auctioning or other money-raising schemes.

The technical directors of all studios were invited to submit decorative schemes, and that prepared by G. Harold Percival of the Thomas H. Ince Studios, was the unanimous choice of members of the executive committee of the association. The work of preparing the decorations was divided between the Sennett, Triangle, Brunton, Vitagraph, Fox, Griffith, Ince and Famous Players-Lasky Studios, and all prepared under the supervision of Mr. Percival. The general color scheme was red and orange with lighting effects of various shades of blue. The back drops for the stage where vaudeville numbers were given between each dance number, was a riot of colors effectively lighted. Around the edge of the main floor about 200 x 500, were boxes decorated in harmony with the other portion of the big hall. The ceiling was covered with hundreds of large flags of all the Allies, and a service flag of the West Coast industry showing nearly 3,000 stars, hung in front of the proscenium arch of the stage. From the score of chandeliers were red and yellow streamers twenty feet in length. The lights were red and blue throughout the big hall, and during the dances spot lights and other effects were used.

Much of the success of the ball is attributed by the officers to Secretary S. E. V. Taylor, who had the co-operation of a number of very efficient committees. The soliciting of advertising for a souvenir program was done by Mesdames Bryant Washburn, Elmer Clifton, Charles Ray, Charles O. Canfield, Wallace Reid, Margaret Whistler and Misses Jeanie Macpherson, Sylvia Ashton, Cleo Madison, Julia Faye, Ethel Weber and Mary Talbot.

Credit is given Mrs. Jessie Lynton, Misses Ann Malone, Maude Wayne, Ruth Langston, Peggy Schneider, Nell Newman, Peggy O'Connell, Mary Bruce, Irene Yeager and Mrs. Jack Standing, for sale of tickets at studios, and Messrs. Norval MacGregor and Arthur Howard arranged the vaudeville program given between dance numbers.

The reception, floor, booth and other committees were made up of the leading people of the studios. Music for the occasion was furnished by two big orchestras, the one for dancing by a fifteen-piece organization, and accompaniment for vaudeville numbers by the Venice Symphony Orchestra.

It will be probably ten days before the total receipts and expenditures can be audited, but it is now estimated by the officers that fully $1,800 will be turned into the association treasury as a result of the ball. This will go to the general fund, the purpose of which will be to build a 500-bed home, or hospital, for aged and dependent persons, and it is the intention of the association to turn it over to the Government to be used as a vocational training institution for maimed or blinded soldiers. The estimated cost and equipment of this is $250,000.

HARRISON REVIEWS

Now Found in The Complete Plan Book with Every Other Needed Fact

P. S. HARRISON'S Exhibitor to Exhibitor Reviews will be found this week and every week hereafter in The Complete Plan Book—it starts on Page 1591.

And what a surprise—on the same page with the Harrison review you will find a list of the advertising accessories available on the production, a ready-made ad-talk, a cast, a story, suggestions for exploitation, etc.

Yes, we said it, ALL ON ONE PAGE!

This is not just a one week stunt—The Complete Plan Book is going to be there every week covering every picture released.

You said it! Some idea! But you don't realize just how big a Service this is until you turn to Page 1591.

Do it now!

Government Ruling on Film Importations

It is announced from Washington, through the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, that the ruling that American films cannot be sent direct to foreign consignees, but must be forwarded through the American Consul, is identical with rules put into effect by the French Government. French cinema journals accept this ruling as necessary under war conditions, recognizing the danger of films being utilized for dangerous propaganda, as well as the great good they have accomplished. They also praise the letters of Secretary McAdoo, Herbert Hoover, George Creel and Mr. Garfield and others who have written of the importance of motion pictures in wartime, and declare that their conclusions in regard to the helpfulness of motion pictures in the United States is appdicable to every country at war.

More Smoke!

F. L. Harris, manager of the Olympic theatre, Portsmouth, Va., has sent another check, this time for $11.50, for Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund. This is Mr. Harris's third check since the first of the year.

Rhode Island Active in War Service

A copy of the brief prepared by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry setting forth in detail the war service accomplishments of the industry was recently mailed to all of the State Chairmen of the War Council Committee of the Association by President William A. Brady.

In reply to the letter which accompanied the brief, Charles H. Williams, state chairman for Rhode Island takes occasion to make a report of the war work accomplished by the motion picture theatres of that state.

Immediately following his appointment he organized all of the exhibitors of the state in such a manner that each could be reached by either telephone or telegraph within one hour's time in case of emergency.

The announcement of his appointment brought him into active work on the Rhode Island Food Committee and the Rhode Island division of the Four Minute Men thus tying up the motion picture exhibitor with these two very important spheres of Government activity.

Famous Players Helps to Catch Film Thieves

After five months of continuous investigation the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, through the direct efforts of the Burns Detective Agency, has uncovered a nest of alleged film thieves and smugglers, resulting in several raids last week, which netted a number of the ringleaders. One raid by the District Attorney's office took place in 45th street. Among the stolen prints obtained at this office were "Barbary Sheep," starring Elsie Ferguson; "The Silent Man," starring William S. Hart; "The Whip," "Down to Earth," a Douglas Fairbanks-Artcraft film and several old Chaplin reels.

Another raid was made at the same address, this raid being conducted by the Military Intelligence Bureau officers. Among the films taken from this office were prints of "The Tiger Man," another Hart-Artcraft picture, and "The Zeppelins Last Raid," together with the original titles of "The Web of Life," indicating that foreign titles had been placed in the photoplay in their stead.

Metro Puts U. S. Slogan on Films

Metro Pictures Corporation is the first motion picture company to adopt the national trademark, "Made in the United States." This label will hereafter be used on all Metro and Screen Classics, Inc., features and superfeatures.

"Made in the United States" will thus appear on seventy-six multiple-reel screen productions distributed by Metro during the coming year.

In Metro pictures, the "Made in U. S. A." label will be seen not only in America, but throughout the civilized world. The parrot brand is especially popular in the Orient, where it has been demonstrated that Metro and Screen Classics, Inc., stars have an appeal that is universal.

Honor Roll

Michael S. Boyland of Universal City publicity department, and director of the Pacific coast section of the Universal Animated Weekly, leaves September 12th to become a member of the photographic department of the Signal Corps.

W. E. Lawrence, who has played leading man and juvenile parts at principal coast studios for the past four years, and leading man for Fannie Ward in her last three subjects, has enlisted in the Tanks Division and leaves August 26th for Gettysburg, Pa., for training. He expects to be in France by January 1st. Mrs. Lawrence, who is known as Julia Carrol, former vaudeville actress and singer, will return to the stage.

"Hoot" Gibson, cowboy actor and prize winner at scores of Rodeos, has enlisted in the Tanks Division, and will leave in a few days for training. Gibson is the husband of Helen Gibson, who is to continue her work before the camera.

William Perry, assistant in the still department at the Christie Comedy studio, leaves August 26th for Gulfport, Miss., where he will enter the aviation training school.

Harry Edwards, leading man for Christie Film Company, has enlisted in the naval reserves, and August 17th reported for duty at the Naval Reserve Training School at San Pedro.

The most unique service flag among the Los Angeles picture studios probably floats from the flag-pole in the yard of the Diamond studios in Glendale. It is unique for the fact that it contains thirteen stars.

Three members of Al Christie's company are about to go into service under, over and on the water. Bobby Vernon goes to the Submarine Base, Harry Edwards into Naval Reserve duty and Bill Perry into the Marine Aviation Corps.

Neal Burns is heard from as Drill Sergeant at Camp Lewis.

Appropriate ceremony was held this week when the Universal City service flag bearing 133 stars was raised for the first time on the flag pole in front of the administration building. The honor of unfurling the service flag fell to Mary MacLaren, who is the first member of the Universal staff to wear a gold star, this being for her cousin who was killed on the western front.

Notification has been received by Charles Simone, manager of General Film's New Haven branch, that his son Peter C. E. Simone, who has been on active duty abroad as a member of the 101st Infantry, is suffering from a serious wound, and about to be sent from an evacuation hospital to a base hospital. The wound is in the right groin. Young Simone had been wounded before, and also slightly, but had always been able to return to the trenches. His home is in Bayonne, N. J., where he is well known as a former laboratory man for several film companies.

Madame Petrova, who recently completed a personal patriotic tour, has two brothers in active service in the war. The relatives of the emotional star joined the ranks of the English Army at the outbreak of the war. It was learned this week that one of them has won the Cross of Honor for conspicuous bravery.

Monte M. Katterjohn, the noted screen author, has just received information that his brother, Fred F. Katterjohn, is on his way to Siberia as a member of the American Expeditionary Forces.

General Manager Arthur S. Kane, of Select Pictures, is in receipt of a letter from B. E. Loper, Los Angeles branch manager, in which Mr. Loper tells of the arrival of his son, B. E. Loper, Jr., in France, and of his promotion to a lieutenancy. While Mr. Loper was stationed at Camp Lewis, American Lake, Washington, he rose to the rank of sergeant.

Private George Landy, formerly connected with Select Pictures publicity office, paid a flying visit to Publicity Director Vivian Moses last Tuesday while on a short furlough from camp. Landy is with an outfit of regulars, the 22d Infantry, and has been stationed at Fort Niagara. He brought the good news he is soon to be transferred to an officers' training camp.

The Honor Roll of the next Liberty Loan should carry every name in the industry

Empey Gets Back in the Fight

Enlists as Private in Tank Corps and Goes Into Training at Fort Slocum—Letter from Tumulty

ARTHUR GUY EMPEY, star of Vitagraph's production, "Over the Top," and one of the best known soldiers the war has produced, has enlisted as a private in the Tank Corps of the United States Army and is now in training at Fort Slocum. Later he will be sent to Camp Colt, Gettysburg, Pa., it is reported.

Empey recently was awarded a captain's commission in the army for special recruiting service, but his value was automatically curtailed and he was given an honorable discharge from the army. Within a few days he received a letter from the White House, signed by Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President, stating the reason for his discharge and informing him that the Secretary of War saw no reason why he should not enter the army in the ordinary way and win a commission for himself by merit.

Mr. Tumulty also stated that there was a sound rule now in force in the army which prohibits granting of commissions except where earned by service.

The letter from Secretary Tumulty was as follows:

THE WHITE HOUSE

Washington, August 13, 1918.

My dear Mr. Empey:

Referring to your letter of August 5, the Secretary of War reports that the sole purpose of the commission was to enable you to do recruiting service, but the fact was, and is, that voluntary enlistments were already beginning to be a serious invasion of the orderly selective process through which it is now necessary to increase the army, and any active recruiting campaign would be quite out of the question. The commission having thus been issued for a very special purpose, it would have been obviously unwise to have allowed it to remain outstanding, particularly in view of the fact that it would have then constituted an exception to the sound rule whereby commissions in the line of army are awarded only to those who have attended training schools and, having undergone comparative tests, are selective.

The Secretary of War states that there was no reflection of any sort upon you and that he stated so to the newspaper men in order that there should be no possible misunderstanding of your entire innocence in the matter. He also states that should you enter the army by the ordinary process and by your work commend yourself for promotion, there is no reason why you may not receive and enjoy a commission so earned.

Sincerely yours,
J. P. TUMULTY,
Secretary to President.

Empey immediately applied for permission to enlist in the Tank Corps, and this was granted by the War Department. He arranged his affairs at once, enlisted in the service on Friday, August 24, at New York, and on Monday entered the camp at Fort Slocum.

The spirit which sent Empey to London in 1915 to join the British Expeditionary Forces, with which he served eighteen months in France, still grips him, apparently, for in a statement he gave out as he went to Fort Slocum, he said:

"Naturally, a man would sooner serve as a captain than as a private, but when it resolves itself in the question of serving or not serving, then if the only way is to enter as a private, why, by all means be a private. I am no better or no worse than the millions of privates serving. I am lucky to get in as a private and tickled to death to do so. If Uncle Sam wants potatoes peeled or ditches dug—well, hand me a spud knife or a banjo, as they call a spade in the army, and I'll get busy. It won't be the first time that I have dug ditches or peeled spuds under the American flag.

"I joined the Tank Corps because I like them; they are a regular bunch, and their motto is "Treat 'em Rough!"

In a statement last week, Empey said: "The person or persons who originated the propaganda that I have ever criticized the drafted men or the fighting qualities of our good old United States Army, are liars, and I defy them to make themselves known. They are pro-Germans and fight just like the rest of their spawn in the German Imperial Army of Murderers. They will not fight in the open but lurk in holes like rats. I am not criticizing the newspapers for publishing this attack, except the pro-German ones, and thank God we have very few in the United States, because they did so in innocence and good faith."

Industry Rallies 'Round the Liberty Loan

Los Angeles Film Stars in Big Loan Drive

Five million dollars for Fourth Liberty Loan bonds is the mark set for the Tank meetings to be held in Central Park, Los Angeles, during the drive, September 28 to October 19 inclusive, under the management of J. C. Jessen, western representative of Motion Picture News, and the auspices of every organization of the film industry of Los Angeles included in the three branches of producing, releasing and exhibiting.

Plans have been formulated for the organization of bond selling committees in every studio, among the erchanges and the theatres. These provide that subscription shall be taken in the studios and turned in at the Tank meetings the night designated for a given producing plant to have charge of the meeting. Each studio will have one meeting, and several of the organization of the film colony will be in charge on other nights. One evening is to be known as exchange meeting, and another will be conducted by the theatre men. In this way all bonds sold to people of the industry will pass through the auditors of the tank meeting, and there statistics of what the industry accomplishes will be compiled.

An important feature of the drive will be nightly sales at practically all of the theatres in Los Angeles. Stars will appear at the theatre in connection with their subjects, and lead in the sales to be conducted in the lobby as the people leave the theatre. The totals of sales to people of the industry, and the sales they make to friends and patrons, will be kept separate.

The Tank meetings were originated during the Third Liberty Loan drive, and conducted the last two weeks of the campaign with the result of sales aggregating $582,000 worth of bonds. This amount did not include more than a million and a half purchased by employees of the studios through various committees there. The previous Tank meetings were conducted by Mr. Jessen. The studio subscriptions were made through a committee in charge of Charles Christie.

Norma Talmadge in Film for Liberty Loan

Miss Norma Talmadge unhesitatingly interrupted the making of her big Chinese feature this week to do a Liberty Loan trailer for the Government.

She had promised to do the Loan picture at the conclusion of work on her present feature, but Monday the Liberty Loan Committee asked the star if it would be possible for her to get out the trailer for them ahead of time, and she immediately ordered all work stopped on her own picture and rushed through the special feature, so that it is now in the hands of the committee and ready to be shown in the picture theatres.

Plan of Distribution on Liberty Loan Films

With the initial announcement this week of plans for the distribution of the Liberty Loan films being produced by more than fifty of the film world's brightest stars, the Fourth Liberty Loan drive being conducted by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has assumed the definite proportions which indicate that it will exceed even the highest expectations of the association's committee in charge of the movement, according to Adolph Zukor, the chairman. The first of the films have already been received at the New York headquarters of the committee, and enough films have been completed to insure that every exhibitor in the United States will have an opportunity to screen a new Liberty Loan appeal every day of the three weeks' drive which begins on September 28, all without cost to himself.

A competent film man will be placed in each distribution centre throughout the country and will be directly responsible to the committee for this feature of the work. He will also work in co-operation with the Federal Reserve Board in his district. All bookings must be made through the committee's representative, and the exhibitors of the country are urged by the committee to watch closely all future announcements concerning the personnel of its assistants in the various distribution centres.

While all bookings must be made through the committee, the physical handling of the films will be attended to by the various exchange organizations, which have volunteered this service without charge to the Government. The organizations contributing this service are: Paramount, Universal, Vitagraph, Metro, Fox, Goldwyn, Pathe, Triangle, World Film, Select, General Film and Mutual.

The stars who have announced their intention of being represented in the motion picture industry's drive are: William S. Hart, Mae Murray, Harold Lockwood, Emily Stevens, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Chaplin, Edith Storey, Mme. Nazimova, Lillian Gish, Dustin Farnum, William Farnum, Charles Ray, Enid Bennett, Dorothy Dalton, Sessue Hayakawa, Wallace Reid, "Fatty" Arbuckle, Alice Brady, Elsie Ferguson, Enrico Caruso, Billie Burke, William Faversham (special), Mae Marsh, Pauline Frederick, Mabel Normand, Madge Kennedy, Dorothy Phillips, Norma Talmadge, Lillian Walker, Clara Kimball Young, William Duncan, Earle Williams, Alice Joyce, Harry T. Morey, Corrinne Griffith, Gladys Leslie, John Barrymore, George Beban, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew,. Mary MacLaren, Monroe Salisbury, Harry Carey, Bessie Love, Jack Sherill, Ethel Barrymore, Fred Stone, George M. Cohan, Marguerite Clark, Pearl White, Frank Keenan, Fannie Ward, Ruth Roland, Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels and Baby Marie Osborne.

"The Bond" is Title of Charlie Chaplin's

Charlie Chaplin's propaganda picture, made for the United States Government, is completed and named "The Bond." It will be released by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit and the proceeds will go to the Red Cross.

As well as being a picture to forward the welfare of American propaganda, it is said to be a startling revelation to the close followers of motion picture progress. The settings of "The Bond" are novel, quite futuristic and decidedly impressionistic, and may establish a precedent of a vogue in this particular style of perspective.

In view of the kindly co-operation of the motion picture industry in giving the United States Government the best and quickest assistance in this and other patriotic subjects, the British and Canadian Governments have requested Mr. Chaplin to make them a propaganda picture, and work upon the production will start immediately.

Betty Blythe-Harry Morey in Vitagraph's Film

Vitagraph's contributions to the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign is a picture that Betty Blythe and Harry Morey made up in Kingston, N. Y., last week under the direction of Paul Scardon. Betty says that she had more real fun and got more genuine satisfaction out of making this film than any other she has ever appeared in.

Many of the scenes were taken in and about an old Colonial home that at one time served as Washington's headquarters and which is filled with relics of Revolutionary War times. Mistress Betty found herself continually looking in the miror to see if her hair was powdered, did a minuet down the village street, and then insisted that the whole company do the same dance in the hotel dining room. It was the talk of the town and a real nine days' wonder.

Hayakawa Prepares One for Uncle Sam

Sessue Hayakawa is making a propaganda film for the Government, at the request of Adolph Zukor, chairman of the Liberty Loan Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, in its campaign to assist the coming Fourth Liberty Loan drive.

The plan, which has the backing of the Treasury Department, is to enlist the services of popular stars in making short pictures to be used to stimulate the buying of bonds. In a general way, these pictures will be of the style of the "Swat the Kaiser" film produced for the Third Liberty Loan, which was universally commended.

Effect of New Draft on Industry

William Fox Discloses Vitally Interesting Facts Which Tend to Show Far Reaching Effects of New Draft Law—War Is Forcibly Brought Home to All Members of Motion Picture Industry

THAT William Fox has made a keen study of the new draft law and its possible effects on the industry in which he is so heavily interested, is evidenced by the following statements made by him in a recent and exclusive interview:

"The war will be forcibly brought home to the moving picture industry within the next few weeks. The new draft bill, involving all men between the ages of 18 and 45 years, now assured of passage, will directly and closely affect practically every person in the amusement business.

May Clog the Wheels

"It will reach into production, complicate distribution and necessitate innumerable readjustments. It will reach into the theatre much more widely than the previous draft has done, taking operators, ushers, musicians and other classes of employees. It will reach into the homes—the homes of exhibitors as well as of the patrons. Yes, the new draft law will give to every man, to every woman, to every child, a very responsible part, and a very vital personal interest in the great world war. It will broaden opportunity for service—increase responsibility—and make a decided exception of the exhibitor who cannot display the service flag of honor in his box-office window.

"Already Uncle Sam has approximately 1,500,000 men in France. By June 30, 1919, he expects to have—will have—practically 4,000,000. He plans nearly to triple his present foreign military strength.

"'If you put eight divisions of Americans in France of approximately 45,000 men to a division, you will give us marked superiority in rifle power,' says General March, the chief of staff, 'and we should be able to bring the war to a successful conclusion in 1919.'

"The new draft will entail a total estimated registration of 13,200,646 men, of whom it is estimated about 2,398,845 will be available for military service. But the 10,801,801 who will not be called upon to bear arms are liable to service in other avenues. The war not only will reach every man between the ages of 18 and 45; it will reach the fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, aunts, uncles, cousins and friends of all these men. Ten millions may register, but fifty millions will be vitally affected. The war is coming to America, to be a doorstep companion—a daily comrade—of every human being in all this broad land of freedom and democracy.

Figures Not Perfected

"It is impossible, of course, to give absolutely accurate figures of the result of all this to exhibitors, or even to the industry as a whole. There are about 15,000 exhibitors in the country. Ninety per cent. of them will register. Probably 2,000 of them will be in France before the end of another twelve months. The new ones will go, according to Secretary of War Baker, in this order: First, those between 19 and 36 years, then those between the ages of 36 and 45, and, finally, those of 18 years. Their procedure will be first to register on a day to be set—probably in September—by General Crowder. Then there will be an assignment of numbers by lot. After that the questionnaire will be filled out, and individual classifications will be determined by the local boards. Those in Class 1 will be called for physical examination on a basis of their lottery numbers. Those in deferred classes will be subject to reclassification at any time and subject also to such war regulations as may be made from time to time respecting employment.

"All of the eligibles, it is planned, will be called by spring. Indeed, according to General March, 'Every single man between 18 and 45 in Class 1 will be NEEDED by next spring.' The program calls for an average of four months' training abroad before June 30, 1919.

"What effect this may have in an industry such as that of the motion pictures is, perhaps, slightly indicated by the experiences of the New York police department. This organization of about 11,000 men already has sent 700 members to the front, will have 1,000 in the service of January 1, and, according to Mayor Hylan, will contribute to the fighting forces of democracy at least 3,000 men, or 28 per cent. of the organization.

PROJECTION

It's An Important Part of Service What We Give And Why

SERVICE to the man with an eighteen hundred seat house is of one kind. Motion Picture News gives it and is proud of it.

But Service to the man with two hundred seats, showing three nights a week in Hick's Corners is of another kind. And of great importance to this man is aid in his projection difficulties.

What Motion Picture News gives to this man—as well as to the operator in all theatres—and why we give it makes an interesting story.

It is told on Page 1577. Read it.

Effect Is Universal

"Nothing except a food famine could so universally affect the people of a nation as well as the extension of the draft ages. It hits every one, everywhere—the rich and the poor, the club and the corner saloon, the stock exchange and the day laborer. It already has made the public utility corporations sit up and take notice, and now gives promise of affording them reason for utilizing some of their surplus water for perspiration purposes," concluded Mr. Fox.

After making such a close study of conditions, as the above interview discloses, it is not surprising to find that such an enterprising producer would find great material for a topical film production to bring these facts forcibly before the American people.

The production has been logically titled—given a name that both tells the story and makes an appeal for business. It is called: "18 to 45"—only six characters, but full of punch. The film is the product of William Fox, who says the idea for it was conceived by the director, R. A. Walsh, several months ago. Mr. Walsh was gathering his material and working quietly on the picture even before he started his latest announced production, "The Prussian Cur." The work was leisurely done and, according to the producer, will be ranked as the best of the big pictures that Mr. Walsh has made.

"It hits every home, every man and woman in the land," says an announcement from the Fox Film Corporation, "and is consequently of broader personal appeal than any picture of any sort hitherto released. It will be the biggest producer for exhibitors that has been offered in the history of the industry."

Brady Helps Red Cross Incorporate Its Scenes

While in Washington last week William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, held a conference with Joseph Johnson, publicity director of the Red Cross. During the course of the conversation Mr. Johnson asked if it would be possible to have pictures of the Red Cross activities in France incorporated into the Universal picture, "Crashing Through to Berlin."

Mr. Johnson explained that the picture shows the landing of General Pershing, and the first members of the American Expeditionary Forces in France and their reception, and then there is a period of inaction for nine months.

Mr. Brady immediately got in touch with officials of the Universal Company by telephone from Mr. Johnson's office and in five minutes the desired permission was obtained. Orders were immediately given for the delivery of the negative to Universal, and when the picture is released throughout the motion picture theatres of the country it will contain these Red Cross pictures.

Newsy Reports From All Sections

Rochester Awaits Result of New Draft Law

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—What effect the new draft will have on the moving picture business is a question that is disturbing some of the exhibitors of Rochester, N. Y., more than they care to admit. So far the work or fight order has touched them lightly, for most of the ushers in Rochester houses are under the draft age and most of the doormen are over it. Most of the larger downtown houses have always employed women ticket sellers, so that the government order has not worried them there.

With the new draft it is believed that there will be a different story, provided the work or fight order is made to cover the increased age limit. Already the difficulty of obtaining musicians is making itself felt. That difficulty is partly responsible for the closing of the Gordon Theatre, which for the last year or so has been running on Saturdays and Sundays. The management announces that it is almost impossible to obtain musicians or other workers willing to work on only the two days, and the result is that the theatre cannot continue longer on that policy without cutting down on its music. Plans for making the Gordon into a vaudeville house, which Albert H. Fenyvessy, of the Family Theatre, was reported to be contemplating, have not matured, and the announcement now is that the Gordon is to be closed temporarily, until a new policy can be formulated. What that new policy will be is not hinted. It is believed that the theatre will not remain closed long, for it is piling up rental every week. Even when open only two days the theatre was able to pay expenses, although there was not much profit left over.

While many of the house employes can be replaced by women if necessary, there are some, such as the operators, who require special training that makes them hard to replace. Rochester managers are waiting eagerly to know what the ruling will be in regard to such workers.

Jewel Film Brings Conviction and Prison

U. S. District Court has made use of the "Kaiser, Beast of Berlin" as exhibit "A" in criminal action against Rudolph Lahnemann of Fresno. When the picture was shown there, Lahnemann made remarks which caused officers to be suspicious, and when reports of these were made to the U. S. District Attorney, J. Robert O'Conner, he secured a Presidential warrant for the man's arrest, after federal grand jury had returned indictments. At the trial the court adjourned to the Williams Theatre at Fresno where the jury saw the picture three times. After eight minutes deliberation Lahnemann was found guilty and sentenced by Judge Oscar Trippett to five years in federal prison at McNeil Island.

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

Now Incorporated in the Big New Idea—The Complete Plan Book

ALL Motion Picture News reviews of productions will now be found in the one spot—The Complete Plan Book.

Peter Milne, favorite reviewer of so many exhibitors, will join forces with P. S. Harrison in giving you crisp, straight-from-the-shoulder reviews on the pictures released.

But what is more—with the reviews you will have all the other information on the picture that you need in successfully presenting it.

Advertising aid of all kinds is right there on the same page with the review—you don't have to turn to back numbers of The News or wait for later numbers.

Blue Mouse Theatre to Open in Baltimore

BALTIMORE, MD.—With the completion of the improvements of the Blue Mouse theatre in Baltimore, the city will have virtually a new motion picture playhouse. The auditorium as well as the exterior of the theatre have been remodeled at a cost of $10,000, and the management is contemplating installing a pipe organ of the latest type at an additional expenditure of $3,000. The playhouse is still in the hands of its former owners, but it is now under the management of Arthur B. Price, who also is director of the Rialto and the Mount Royal theatres.

According to Mr. Price none but first-run photoplays will be shown at the theatre. Another thing that will add to the attractiveness of the playhouse is the fact that two new motion picture machines of the latest improved Simplex model will be used to present the pictures. The theatre has not been enlarged because of its location in the heart of the business district it was impossible to lease any adjoining property, but included in the improvements wah the regrading of the floors and an addition of another row of seats, made possible by decreasing the size of the former lobby.

Owing to the shortage of labor and increased cost of building materials the construction work consumed more time than was at first thought necessary.

Pennsylvania Cities Hold Operator Tests

HARRISBURG, PA.—To relieve the great shortage of motion picture machine operators created throughout Pennsylvania by the war, it became necessary for the Department of Labor & Industry of the State to announce that special examinations for operators will be held in 32 cities of Pennsylvania on September 7.

No such plan of general examinations has ever before been undertaken in Pennsylvania, and the need for it is due in part to the recent adoption by the Industrial Board of the Labor Department of a Safety Code prescribing strict regulations for the licensing of operators.

"The Motion Picture Machine Operation Safety Code of the Industrial Board of the Department of Labor and Industry, applicable throughout the State, excepting in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, requires operators to be over eighteen years of age and licensed in accordance with the provisions of the Code," says the statement issued by the Labor Department. "However, the Code specifies that an operator between the ages of sixteen and eighteen years of age and who prior to the enactment of the Code has operated a machine for at least one year may be granted an operator's license if, after special inquiry and examination, he is deemed competent.

"An operator is considered as licensed if he holds a license from a local board or bureau created by law or ordinance to issue such a license in the town in which he operates. In the absence of such license he must take the examination given by the Department of Labor and Industry.

"The examination, questions and requirements are being compiled in the Department of Labor and Industry, and will be sent to the supervising inspectors who will have charge of the various examinations in their respective districts. The papers of the applicants for licenses will be returned to the main office of the Department of Labor and Industry for determination of the eligibility of each applicant for a license.

"Applicants for licenses will take the examinations in the city on the following list nearest their home: Allentown, Bradford, Butler, Bellefonte, Chambersburg, Clearfield, Erie, Greensburg, Harrisburg, Indiana, Johnstown, Lancaster, Lawrenceville, Lock Haven, Meadville, New Castle, Oil City, Pittsburgh, Pottsville, Philadelphia, Ridgway, Reading, Sharon, Sunbury, Scranton, Tyrone, Uniontown, Washington, Wilkes-Barre, Williamsport, Warren and Wellsboro."

Dayton Gets Visits from Film People

DAYTON, O.—J. C. Hutchison, photographer for the "Committee on Public Information," was in the city last week catching the Serial Exhibition at Hills and Dales, the city park. While in Dayton Mr. Hutchison was the guest of John Seifert, manager of the Ideal theatre.

Wid Gunning, from New York, stopped at the Dayton theatre while en route to Chillicothe to visit Martin D. Chandler, who is the author of "Parentage." Mr. Gunning is a good friend of Mr. Chandler, and his nephew, Paul Gray, who is now assistant manager at the Dayton.

Bert Fiala, manager of the Alhambra theatre here, and Gus Kinsler were in Cincinnati last booking some pictures. Bert is now sporting a new suit that he purchased while in the Queen City.

Harry Neimyer, selling Pathe pictures, was in Dayton all last week.

"The Beast of Berlin" had a very good two-day run at the Alhambra this week. Capacity business was visible at all times.

What Kind of a Fellow Is—Clarke?

Being a Glance at the Real Human Side of the Big Men of the Picture Game Caught in Action

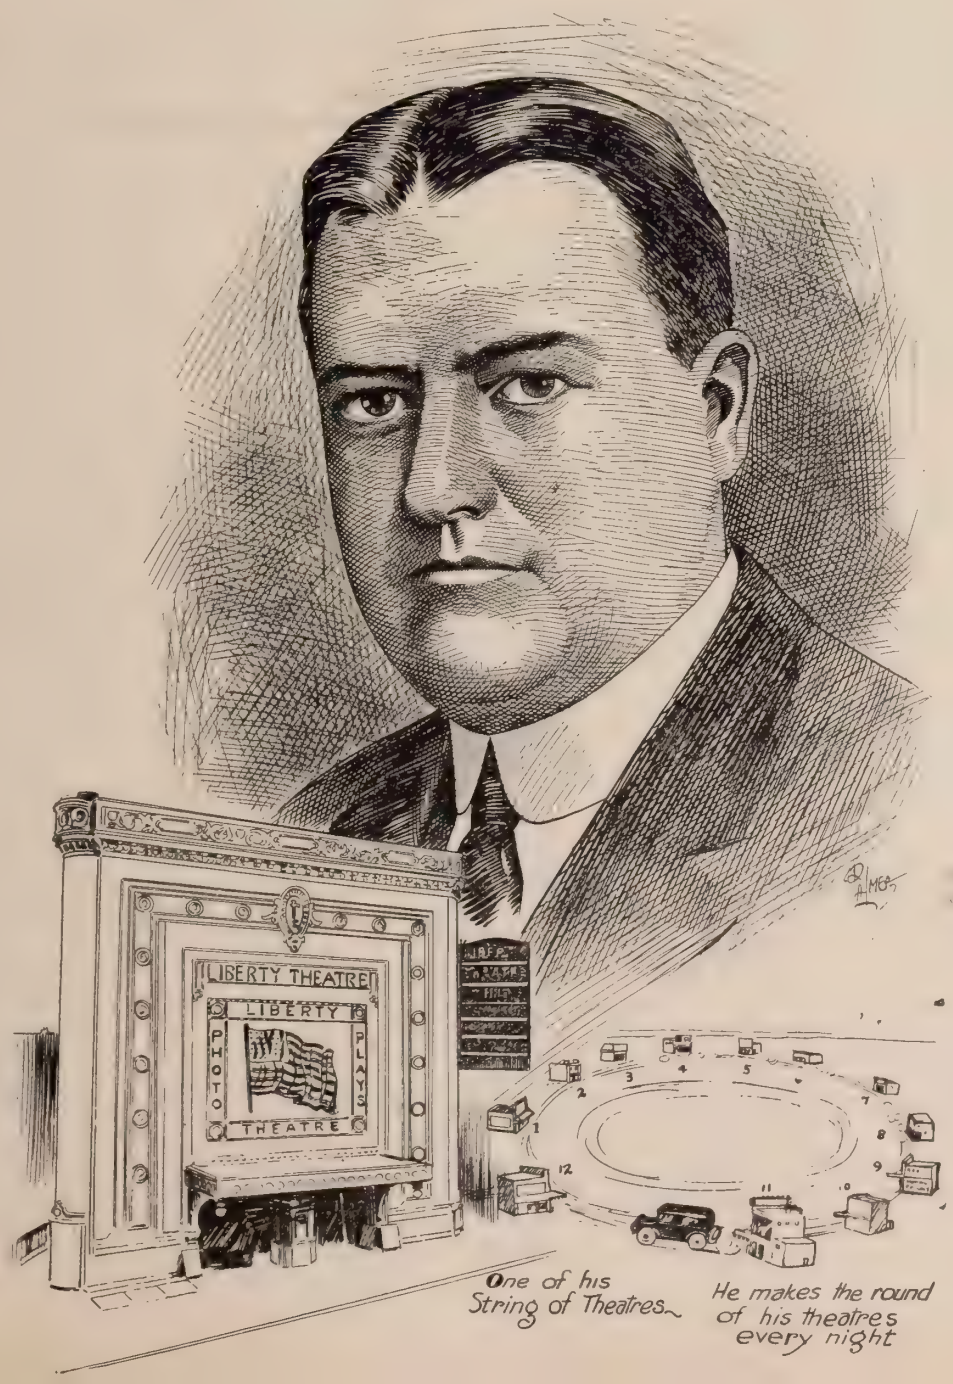
CLARKE, Jim Clarke or James B. Clarke is the greatest silent partner in motion pictures as Richard A. Rowland will tell you any fine day you ask him. He is the Clarke of the Rowland and Clarke Theatres, the Clarke of the Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Company, the Clarke of the Columbia and the Pennsylvania Film Companies and the Clarke who is vice-president of Metro. But more than all that he is the Clarke who is R. A. Rowland's brother-in-law and it was wise picking either way you look at it.

Indiana, Pa., is best known to fame as a town, metropolis or centre from the fact that Jim Clarke picked it out as a birthplace and Pittsburg, now that Charlie Schwab has been adopted by Bethlehem and Washington, points to Jim as its greatest little first citizen from bankroll to ballyhoo.

It was in the year 1906 when the waves of the Atlantic had ceased to beat against McKee's Rocks and the smoke was thick across the downs, that R. A. Rowland stretched forth his hand through the Pittsburg murk and invited Jim forth from the marts of the wholesale grocery trade, and planted him firmly in the film business. He inveigled him into becoming a partner in the Pittsburg Calcium Light and Film Company, a pioneer concern that tore up the turf from Buffalo, Wilkesbarre, Omaha, Des Moines and Cincinnati as well as Pittsburg, and began to contract the habit of making money.

Jim was a great man with the pencil and through this medium he made most of his conversation. He was also a conservative and a good judge of money whether in bales, kits or stacks. To these necessary qualifications he added a long distance capacity for silence and a genius for listening to the other man's story and was right on the very spot when the Columbia and Pennsylvania Film Companies went into competition in the field, each blessed with the same ownership - Rowland and Clarke.

Jim likewise was very present when the partnership with associates opened the Mutual, Universal and Paramount Exchanges in their territory and was exceedingly there also when these valuables were sold to the several companies that bear their names, just as he had been in the immediate neighborhood when in 1910 the partners sold their business to the General Film Company and took a rest from their labors to take account of stock and open a couple of theatres in Braddock, Pa. These latter ventures also made money so that now there are more than fifteen Rowland and Clarke theatres, all successful and in the prime of life.



It was three years ago last March that Jim Clarke followed Rowland into the organization of Metro and he's had nothing but silent partnering, pencil work and investing to do ever since.

They call Jim a quiet man and they're right and he has a lot of money which his brother - in - law, Rowland, takes advantage of. In fact, it may be said that Clarke thinks Rowland can do anything with his money, and does.

In stature he splits it fifty fifty with the late Napoleon but lacks Napoleon's mean disposition. When he laughs, he's quiet about it, when he plans he's long-headed about it and there's nobody who will deny he's one of the best fellows in the world.

He's a fisherman who fishes for the fishing's sake and never has occasioned any considerable mortality among the fish. He golfs and motors and films, all with good judgment. He's reliable, he's trustworthy, and his favorite sport is to be let alone. His one fear in life is the long distance telephone with his brother-in-law at the other end.

As a patriot—he's one of us. The word Liberty stands forth prominently in his vocabulary—and on his theatres.

Exhibitors Box Office Reports

LAST MINUTE REPORTS

The Following Individual Reports Came in as Motion Picture News Was Going to Press

"The Still Alarm" (Pioneer-State rights)—"Went extra big solid week amid hottest weather in history of city."

"Conquered Hearts" (Marguerite Marsh-Ivan)—"Two solid weeks, business fair, hot weather."

"The Fallen Angel" (Carmen-Fox)—"A sex play. Star does not draw, although we have run a good many with her."

"Back to the Woods" (Normand-Goldwyn)—"All outdoor but rather thin story, but well produced."

"To Hell With the Kaiser" (Screen Classics-Metro)—"Best thing yet; three days' run; record breaker."

"A Pair of Cupids" (Bushman-Bayne-Metro)—"Why the producers continue making comedies I can't see. The public don't want them."

"Winner Takes All" (Monroe Salisbury-Bluebird)—"Went big. Salisbury good card."

Editor's Note: The Box Office Report chart includes all pictures released since June 1 on which a sufficient number of exhibitor reports have been received to base a verdict. In the column "Average of Exhibitors' Reports" the term "Extra Big" indicates a picture which far surpassed expectations; "Big" means a picture doing better than the usual business for that day under average conditions; "Average" is the grading given the production on which business held up to normal; "Poor" indicates the picture falling below normal in box office and entertainment value.

The comments given are no indication of the number of reports received, as many exhibitors merely check off the grading without comment.

"The Marked Man" (Universal)—"Big."

Exhibitor Service Bureau

Atlanta Shows Willingness

Theatres Ready to Advertise and Newspapers Co-Operate, But Reading Matter Is Very Dead

ATLANTA occupies a most unique position among the cities of the countries so far as advertising co-operation of the newspapers and exhibitors is concerned. In the first place the whole motion picture business is practically confined to ten downtown houses and all but one of these use at least two of the three newspapers for advertising. The neighborhood theatre business of Atlanta amounts to nothing.

When the writer of these articles started in to work with motion picture advertising it was in one of the principal cities of the country where the chief rivalry was between the neighborhood theatres which existed in large numbers and in all sections of the city and the group of downtown houses, none of which advertised properly at that time. When the newspaper solicitor went to seek their advertising he at first could not understand their position at refusing to use more than the smallest space and irregularly.

Finally the secret was admitted by one of the managers. He pointed out that the chief competition was from the neighborhood theatres. "We have to pay high rental for the pictures that we show and we do not intend to advertise them for the benefit of the neighborhood theatres, and that is just what we would be doing if we used big space. Do you know that lots of these houses, when we are showing some big picture that is attracting attention, will throw on their screen: 'Don't pay twenty cents to see so and so downtown. It will be at this theatre at such and such a date for a dime.' Don't you see that if we advertise these big attractions heavily that we will be playing right into their hands?"

We did not see it and the fallacy of the argument is too apparent to discuss. That is proven by the fact that the situation had been completely changed since that time and not only do the towntown houses advertise liberally, but there are many of the neighborhood theatres represented in the newspapers.

But the point that we wanted to bring out from the manager's statement was the idea that occurred to us at the time: "If the downtown, first-run theatres had originally started out with liberal advertising and high grade presentation of pictures, would there have ever been a place for the neighborhood theatre?" And we do not believe there would, and the situation in Atlanta seems to prove that.

We do not believe that there is a city in the country where the first-run downtown houses couldn't control practically the whole business of the town provided they showed the proper disposition to higher grade of exhibitor, and provided they advertised liberally and consistently and got the real support of the newspapers—provided still further than the neighborhood theatres did not advertise. And just the same way where the newspaper grants the neighborhood a proper rate they can greatly increase their business advertising. And the big point about newspaper advertising, where real co-operation exists, is that where the various classes of the theatres are all liberal, intelligent advertisers, a greater volume of business is done by EVERYBODY.

Now Atlanta has a census population of 179,392. There is not a great deal of business outside of the city within easy reaching distance for the theatres to draw from, there being several small towns in the county and a city of some 5,000 a short distance away and connected by trolley system.

The newspaper situation in Atlanta is almost ideal so far as covering the field is concerned for there are only three dailies. And since there is only one political party in Georgia it is now a case of the newspapers appealing much to different elements of the community, as the reader simply buys the paper that he likes the best. Here are the newspapers, with their circulation as given by Lord and Thomas:

Constitution: Morning, 47,620, and Sunday, 53,479.

Journal: Evening, 53,091, and Sunday, 64,829.

Georgian: Evening, 58,778, and Sunday Hearst's American, 94,612.

In order to cover the whole field eight of the theatres use all three of the papers; in the Sunday editions one does not use the Journal and the other does not advertise at all.

The first-run theatres with their seating capacities are Forsyth, 1,500; Rialto, 1,000; Tudor, 500; Criterion, 1,000, and Strand, 750. The other downtown houses are the Savoy, 400; the Alamo No. 2, 5; Vaudette, 500, the Alpha, 350 and the Alamo No. 1, 350, and the only theatres in the section that cannot see the value of newspaper advertising.

Several of these theatres are excellent advertisers, ranking among the best in the country as the specimens that have been printed from time to time under the heading "Your Idea and Ours" have shown you.

Now the one thing that we do not like about the Atlanta newspapers, and we suspect that the exhibitors are somewhat to blame for it, is the fact that there is no news in them. The papers show a willingness to grant the room by giving long reading notices and ample cut representation. We doubt very much if the long reading notices are not overdone. There can be too much verbiage in such matter and we would very much rather see the reading notices shortened and the remainder of the newspaper space devoted to real NEWS about the pictures and the players. We feel mighty sure that there would be hundreds of readers in Atlanta that would appreciate this.

And we repeat that the Atlanta papers apparently show a willingness to co-operate and that we believe that they would do this if they got the proper requests from the exhibitors.

Two full pages are devoted to the motion picture matter and advertising in the Constitution and on a third page a couple of other theatres are cared for and there are two advertisements. On the first page there is a two-column layout of stars at the various theatres and extended notices for the attractions at the Criterion, Tudor and Forsyth.

The Criterion, which is a mighty good advertiser, is a liberal user of space, and in the issue of the papers selected it has twelve inches across three columns, an attractive hand-drawn display illustrated with half-tones. Although the Tudor theatre seats just half as many as the Criterion, it does equally large advertising, and employs all three of the Sunday papers, while the Criterion drops out of the Journal. Most of the Tudor advertising is excellent, but we must say that we do not care for the one here, for, though there ought to be liberal space in four columns ten inches, the effect is confused here by the black and white effects and the series of curving arrows to the picture of the star.

Forsyth used an attractive five column thirteen-inch display prepared by Famous Players-Lasky and hand letters in the name of the theatre, date and other matter to agree with the general style. Strand theatre has seven inches across three, but the cut prints poorly in all the papers, and we double the advisability of giving the whole display over to this. It would have stood out strikingly had the display been about twice as deep.

Rialto, the remaining first-run house, uses seven inches across three columns and advertises the middle of the week change almost as prominently as the first attraction. There are no Sunday showings in Atlanta. Alpha, with four inches double, calls attention to the bills for the week, putting special emphasis on the serials. Alamo No. 2 has six inches double, an all-type display,

More Exhibitors Make Birthday Happy

Our first birthday certainly has brought us the sort of congratulations on the work of the Exhibitors' Serivce that encourages the staff to put in a few more hours and holidays trying to give increased SERVICE to the exhibitors.

If you have not been using this department read what these leading men of the industry say about it. If they find help here certainly there should be reasons why these pages should be of great value to you.

Vacation plans have caused a little delay in putting into effect some new policies, but they will be announced shortly.

S. Barret McCormick, Circle Theatre, Indianapolis:

In our industry imagination is the greatest asset and the very life blood of our business.

What we have always needed was a meeting place for the exchange of ideas and in the Motion Picture News Exhibitors' Service Bureau we have found a great convention held weekly, in which we can all have a voice, all gain inspiration and sharpen the edges of our imagination on the emery wheel of associated thought.

The Service Bureau has become as essential to exploitation as the lens in projection.

George E. Carpenter, Paramount-Empress Theatre, Salt Lake City:

Congratulations on the anniversary of the Exhibitors' Service Bureau, which marks another milestone in the historic road of the much abused trade journal.

Personally I always turn first to the Review Service, Box Office Reports, Service Bureau, and Your Idea and Mine when our new copy arrives.

To read the Motion Picture News minus these condiments would be like eating prime roast beef sans mustard—'nuff said!

That other trade journals have fallen into line in the same direction is indicative of the values of this class of news to the average reader.

This clearing house for ideas is a great boon to the abused exhibitor. Verily we can now swipe the children of the brain of the other fellow without undue blushes.

The writer believes that the Motion Picture News has established the enviable reputation of being in the same class with Caesar's wife. It has been his experience that the reviews on current releases are fair and unbiased so that the exhibitor can come near banking on a picture being as represented, advertising announcements in another part of the edition to the contrary notwithstanding—all of which is some achievement in one brief year.

You can't stand still. You must either advance or retreat. Your readers, I am sure, echo the writer's sentiments when he says that he looks for still greater progress in the Exhibitors' Service Bureau during the coming year.

Yours for truth and liberty, to say nothing of big biz.

F. L. Newman, President and Manager, Royal and Regent Theatres, Kansas City, Mo.:

Being that this is the end of the first year of the Exhibitors' Service Bureau, I feel that I owe you an expression of just what I think of it. It is really the first time in my eleven years' experience that any trade journal has taken enough interest to allow the exhibitors to give their opinion of what the public wants, and Motion Picture News has been the first to give the real SERVICE to the exhibitors, regardless of any other influences, and there is no doubt that you are leading a new awakening.

It is only through the Exhibitors' Service Bureau that we can tell the producers the mistakes they are making and give us an opportunity, in a way, to co-operate with them and bring us closer in touch with the general conditions.

Many times motion picture concerns ask me my opinion of different subjects, but I do not believe that my criticisms have the same effect that we can get through the Service Bureau, and I think Motion Picture News should be complimented on this movement. I am sure that the coming year will bring great things and prove a great benefit to both the exhibitor and the producer.

George J. Schade, Proprietor Schade Theatre, Sandusky, O.:

Congratulations! The Exhibitors' Service Bureau is some yearling.

This Bureau is one of the most essential propositions ever offered an exhibitor. I mean a real exhibitor, one who will read up on what you offer and then put his thinker to work to avail himself of the experiences of others to his best financial advantage. Locality, size of town, seating capacity, and length of run must of course be considered by the exhibitor. Personally, advertisements are a second consideration, but the Bureau is always first upon the arrival of the Motion Picture News.

You have certainly made a remarkable showing and have gone to considerable expense to help the exhibitor, to show him how to do it, to give him what the producer has failed to furnish him to exploit his pictures, and just realize, it costs the exhibitor practically nothing.

You ask "Have we kept faith?" Say Bo, are you dreaming? If so, pinch yourself, get out the last fifty-two editions, and if you don't say it's more than keeping your pledge, cancel my subscription, because if you give us more than you have in the past, it will require additional office help to read up and keep posted on what is going on, and you know we can't increase our overhead right at this time.

G. F. Fullerton, Advertising Manager, Greater Theatres Co., Seattle:

Your Exhibitors' Service Bureau is doing good. Any time you get together a number of exhibitors and let them really tell what is the matter with the other fellow, it is bound to bring some great truths to the surface as well as a lot of smaller ones, and not a few imaginary ones! It means a better understanding between the producers and exhibitors and the better the understanding between these two legs of the motion picture industry, the more solid its footing and consequent advance. More power to you!

H. C. Horater, Manager Alhambra Theatre, Toledo, O.:

I wish to say that I received my inspiration, and education, of how to exploit a picture, as well as advertising ideas from the Service Bureau Department of the Motion Picture News. I haver carefully and conscientiously read all that has been said in every issue for a long time, and if I am a live wire as I am often called, I certainly got, at least, some of the pointers and ideas from the columns of the News.

I eagerly await the arrival of the same each week, I further believe that everybody connected with the exhibiting end of the great motion picture industry should not only follow up the Service Bureau items, but read the News from the first to the last page.

I even go so far as to keep our operators posted, cutting out news items pertaining to projection and other matter that I think will be of interest to them. Long live the Service Bureau.

C. A. Lick, Manager New Theatre, Fort Smith, Ark.:

I want to say that altogether I subscribe to about six trade papers. While all of them have some good features, I think the Exhibitors' Service Bureau of the Motion Picture News is by far the most valuable to the exhibitor. I have particular reference to your criticisms, which might be sized up as in three different installments in each issue.

The exhibitors' box-office reports are certainly very valuable, and I have always done my best to give correct reports on all the cards I have sent in.

I am not going to make it so strong as to state that I could not run a picture theatre without the News, but I can say truthfully that it makes it a much easier and safer proposition than any other trade paper of which I know.

ELIMINATE THE BUNK, URGES RICHARDS

LOOK back one year ago, and ask whether there was any motion picture trade paper criticising the advertising of the producers. See whether there was any actual aid given the exhibitors. It was then that the Exhibitors' Service Bureau was started and there is no one to deny that it has given the exhibitor real and honest service and that it has not failed to urge the producer and distributor to employ his trade paper advertising in a manner that will be of value to the exhibitor.

The successful exhibitor has long ago learned that he cannot continue in business by "Bunking" the public. He has realized that he is not merely running his business for today and tomorrow, but for next month and next year. And so the exhibitor who is making a success today is the man who is trying to sell the pictures to his public on their merits—he is trying salesmanship with each production. And the exhibitor demands that the manufacturer shall talk to him in the same spirit.

E. V. RICHARDS, Jr., is general manager of the Saenger Amusement Company, New Orleans, operating some half a hundred houses. Now these include the finest theatres in the South, houses in small cities and neighborhood houses. In its different patronages this company has to appeal to all classes of patrons, and so a complaint that comes from the Saenger interests is not a complaint from a big city exhibitor, or from a neighborhood manager, or from a small town manager. It means that it is the opinion of one who knows conditions that exist generally.

Certainly, a complaint that comes from a man like Mr. Richards is a complaint that is voiced by exhibitors everywhere. We would know that from realizing his position even if we had not received letters from every class of exhibitor making the same sort of complaint. And although he has been in the business for years Mr. Richards belongs to the new class of exhibitors. He is a man who is in close touch with the exact conditions in every community in which he operates, and from his visits to New York several times each year he comes in closer touch with the producing and distributing interests than does nearly any other similar official. Therefore there is weight to what he has to say—it is the sort of an opinion that the producer ought to welcome and with which he ought to comply.

"DO not the producers realize by this time," asks Mr. Richards, "that they are wasting space in devoting their trade paper advertising to superlatives and exaggeration when they are trying to sell the pictures to exhibitors?

"Why should they not use the same class of descriptive adjectives in the trade paper, that could be used to a conservative point by the exhibitor in exploiting that picture to the general public through his local newspaper? We do not buy pictures simply because we want them for ourselves but we buy them because we want to sell them in turn to the public.

"How can it be successful policy on the part of the producer and distributor to book the exhibitor up with contracts for pictures that he cannot sell to the public, simply for the reason that he has been misled by exaggeration? He cannot in turn mislead the public day after day, yet sometimes a study of the advertising of the trade papers almost convinces one that many of the producers believe that they always follow that policy in dealing with the exhibitor.

"LET us make the producer advertising in the trade papers like the Liberty Motor—of standard quality so that the parts will fit throughout. In other words the advertising should be such that with comparatively simple modifications the exhibitor could use the same style of advertising in selling the picture to his public. There isn't the slightest difference; there are not two distinct types of advertising, even if the producer does think so. The sort of advertising that will bring him the biggest returns is the sort that allows the exhibitor to do his part and be honest with the public.

"The exhibitor is fast growing sick of misrepresentations made by supposedly big and reliable concerns. This policy is not only going to hurt the exhibitor, but the producer, and the trade paper and the industry in general. We will soon be in a position that we do not know WHO or WHAT to believe."

CERTAINLY the producer and the distributor want to book their pictures in the fifty Saenger houses, and certainly they want to sell their pictures to hundreds of other exhibitors. That is the reason they are advertising in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS. But they know that before Mr. Richards can successfully sell to the public these same pictures to the high-class patronage of the Strand theatre in New Orleans, or to a neighborhood house in the same city, or to the people of a small Mississippi city he must be given the same correct idea about the character of the picture that he has to pass along to his various patronages.

If Mr. Richards and the other exhibitors do not sell these pictures to the public in a quantity, or rather to the number of people, and at a price to make a profit it is apparent that his company and other exhibitors will not remain in the field to buy more pictures from the producers.

ISN'T the producer working for himself when he is giving the exhibitor the same sales argument that he can use to the public? The manufacturer of a standard brand of merchandise doesn't exaggerate it in seeking to place it with the retailer, for he knows that this merchant must move the stock from his shelves, and to the satisfaction of the consumer, before he can buy further stock. Isn't that simple business?

Your Idea and Ours

SUNSET THEATRE, Portland, Ore., did some unusual good advertising during a Clara Kimball Young week at the theatre. Seven of the star's pictures were run, one for each day. It was apparent that the thing to do was to bring out the name of the star very strong, and this was done, the half-tone adding much to the general effect. The names of the different pictures were used in calendar effect. Contrast being provided by using the names of the various productions in outline type.

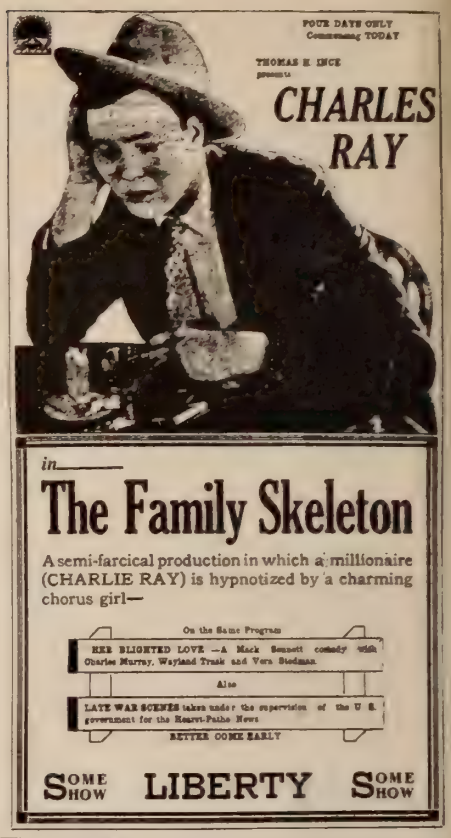
There was ample white space provided, and the whole display was far more attractive than it would have been had the advertiser been content with merely listing the names of the productions with the date. The appeal to see the star in all seven of these pictures is well put over.

Don't merely talk about the ideas that you have; try and make them work for you today.

ALHAMBRA THEATRE, Milwaukee, gets an intimate touch with this Fairbanks picture with the line, "He's in a Harem Now." There is piquancy in the display without anything that is improperly suggestive or apt to give offense.

We often hear the argument that this and that star is such a drawing card that it is not necessary to say anything about the picture further than to announce that it is a new production. Of course, every one knows the comparative value of most stars, but such an argument is so ridiculous as to scarcely merit notice. However, here is a case where the cleverness of the sales talk on a specific picture is going to result in increased business. Of course, the people who want to see Fairbanks any way are coming, but there are a whole lot of others who are going to conclude that this is an exceptional clever offering and something that they don't want to miss. Instead of the theory that the popular star does not need advertising, we believe that the opposite is true, and that the greater and the better advertising that you can put behind the strongest drawing cards is always the best thing for your theatre.

With the exception of the fact that the half-tone printed poorly, we have never seen a better, more intimate, appealing piece of exploitation than this use of seven inches across three columns.



Yes, the medicine show doesn't advertise.

DID you ever consider the little details in designing your advertising, the keeping of the atmosphere through every element of your display? Some of your patrons will ignore these little things at first, but gradually they will be noticed and their particular appeal will begin to go over.

In this display of the Dayton theatre, Dayton, Ohio, we call your attention to the black and white work at the lower portion. You will note the outline of the Oriental buildings, in keeping with the character of the picture. It is just a subtle little touch that makes the eye linger a little longer on the display. This same plan is being followed on various pictures.

THERE has been a marked tendency recently for some of the producers to build pictures around the liquor evil. Certainly it seems to us that the sight of a drunken man that we are forced to meet in the streets is sufficient without picturing such incidents on the screen.

Now Sam W. B. Cohn is one of the most original advertisers and easily one of the most successful in the country, and he makes the Liberty at Spokane, Wash., stand out as one of the most enterprising theatres anywhere. But even the best of us make slips, and there is a distinct slip in this display on "The Family Skeleton." Of course, if you get down to the real truth this Charles Ray picture is centered around liquor, and Mr. Cohn got the real selling point, but there are times when exhibitors will have to avoid the basic theme on which the picture is made. It is unfortunate that such a thing is true, but in the past six months there have been a number of pictures made which are far away from the spirit of happiness that people want in pictures to-day.

Keep "booze" and murder and things unpleasant out of your advertising. People don't want to come to your theatre in these days of the Hun horror to be made unhappy.

Space in the newspaper that you use counts, but not like that in an empty box or one filled with rubbish and junk.

HERE is a case where we believe that going into too much detail results in an advertisement being badly weakened. Unquestionably the points to be made in the exploitation of this picture were combined in the facts that Theda Bara was the star, and that this was especially a picture which would appeal to women. In most cases, except where the illustration itself is able to carry the spirit of the production, we believe in selling talks with pictures, but here the advertiser gives almost a synopsis of the entire production.

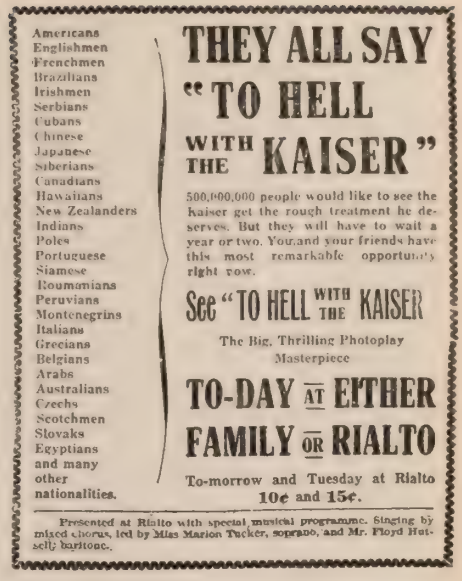
Grand theatre, Faribault, Minn., which uses ten inches across three columns (and many other houses), apparently sometimes believes it has to tell everything about a picture. Let us say here that the Grand theatre does some mighty good advertising for the facilities at hand, but here the writer has succumbed to the temptation of "just a little more." We repeat that the detailed recital of what the picture shows is likely to keep people away, not on account of the production itself, but because these various sentences seem to attempt to exploit sordidness. There are half a dozen splendid selling arguments to this picture. Any one of them would have impressed the public more and would have resulted in more universal appeal.

We are strongly opposed to telling the public that this is "Miss Bara's greatest picture" or any other star's greatest. It may be, but the public gets mighty tired of hearing that expression, and it is too often used on mere hearsay.

Less adjectives in your advertisement will bring you more believers in what you have to say.

WE admit that we are prone to talk often about white space in advertising. We believe that it is essential to get the best results. And so we are glad to get this comment from an exhibitor: "I note that you recommend insistently the use of plenty of white space in advertising. I agree with you, absolutely. But why is it that the producers, in the advertising aids that they supply insist on filling every inch of the space, even to the names of the photographer and the art directors?"

Presumably the reason that this is done is that a great majority of the exhibitors still appear to believe that they must use every inch that they buy, and that the exhibitor won't use the display where there is something to be filled in. So we take this display from the Kinema theatre, Los Angeles, as an illustration of what can be done. The center of the display is one of the ads sent out by Goldwyn, used in fact. This the theatre has SURROUNDED with white space, he placed the name of the theatre attractively, and has used just enough room to give the rest of the program, a brief selling sentence and "Let's go." It's a splendid example of what can be done when you are willing to go the producer one more and use increased space.

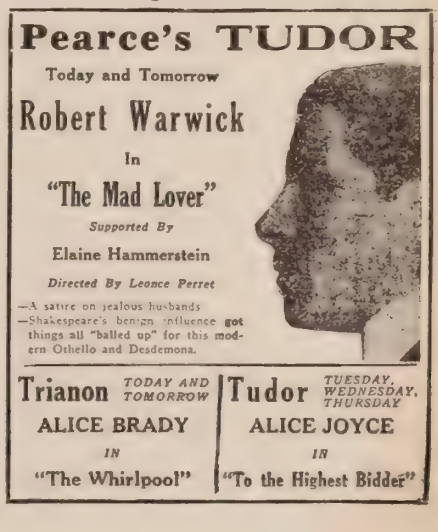


Any exhibitor could do the same thing—and any exhibitor would get more business by following the example of the Kinema.

It is generally he who is without advertising that casts the first stone at suggestions for progress.

WHY does bad advertising appear as local epidemics? There are certain cities where the exploitation of pictures is prevalently bad, and one of these is Rochester.

As an instance could any one imagine a worse display that this of the Family and Rialto theatres on "To Hell With the Kaiser." Here the advertiser has used six inches across two columns, and he has absolutely wasted the money that he spent for the space. Note at the left the names of the various nationalities and the bracket which indicates that all of these people say, "To Hell With the Kaiser." We can see nothing even "clever" about this, and certainly the mass of meaningless type that is used will bring no one into the theatre. And where there were not sufficient advertising aids supplied, and where there has not been a special service section of the NEWS, as there was in this case, there might be some excuse for this sort of exploitation, but in this instance the theatre is just as truly throwing away money as if the manager took his bankroll out and dumped it in the river. It's an amazing case of lost opportunity.



Courtesy begins with the sale of the ticket and never ends.

ON several occasions we have had something to say about theatres under the same ownership grouping their advertising. Here is a case of it from New Orleans. The Tudor and the Trianon theatres are houses of about equal quality, and under the same ownership. Certainly the effect of this advertisement would be to lead the general public to believe that the one production to be seen was Robert Warwick in "The Mad Lover." The Alice Brady picture is playing the same days at the other theatre, but still it is given no more prominence than the middle of the week announcement at the Tudor.

Apparently the reason why the same company builds two high-class houses is that it believes there is patronage enough for both theatres. Now if the Pearce interests controlled the situation in New Orleans this style of advertising might pass, but it doesn't, for there are at least three other high-class motion picture houses there.

Don't play one of your theatres against the other, but advertise each production so as to create a desire to see EACH production. And advertise the theatres separately, and you will get the better results.

Seeing Rialto and Rivoli with Rothapfel

HERE we are back again seeing the Rialto and Rivoli with Rothapfel. And though we like vacations as well as anyone else it seemed that something was wrong because on Sunday the only thing we could do was to go to the little church or go fishing—the good and bad end of things in the little North Carolina hamlet that we almost call home. And so, even if the train was a few hours late and our ham and eggs had to be hurried, is there any reason to wonder why we were at the Rialto right on time for the opening of the first full performance and right there at the Rivoli for the second?

While we were on the return journey we dropped into a theatre in a city of some 45,000. It is a nice theatre and it plays good pictures as a rule. The feature was one that we had seen at the Rivoli shortly before we left and we enjoyed it so much there that we were fully convinced that it was a picture that was well worth seeing the second time. But, oh, the difference, between the Rothapfel way and the any old way. After the performance we talked with the manager and the first thing that he remarked was how he enjoyed reading this department each week and that prompted the question whether he was trying to apply any of the Rothapfel ideas to his own house.

We knew he wasn't and expected the answer that he gave: "Oh, you know Rothapfel has wonderful theatres and all the money that he wants to spend and all the successful talent there in New York, but we couldn't do it here." Yet, the very things that Rothapfel did in the presentation of that particular picture were extremely simple and could have been done by the manager in question at practically no expense and would have had his audiences talking for a week. And we know the city in question, for we attended college there and we know that this theatre has as high a class of patronage as any in the country. It is a patronage that would appreciate a touch of the Rothapfel way.

We were delighted about the nice things that this manager and other managers said about this department, but what is the use if they are not attempting to apply the same methods in a different degree to their own houses, and if they are not getting the spirit of it and uplift from it. Thank heaven, we know that there are scores of exhibitors who are getting this benefit.

And so with these observations we will open the week's show at the Rialto. The overture is Victor Herbert's "American Fantasie," opening with the drum rolls and bugle calls. The lighting for the number was all in gold and just at the ending of this patriotic selection all of the lights go out suddenly, so that the transition into the Animated Weekly which itself flashes on to the screen with trumpets and drums, the first number being Gaumont pictures of the student soldiers being inspected at Berkeley, Cal. After the "Adjutant's Call" the music turns to "Invincible Eagle" which is intensely effective with the picture of the marching men. Then follow Gaumont picture of convicts dedicating their flag and the same music continues. From the same source come pictures of the tests of observation balloons on the Pacific and here the music becomes "Our Jackies" continuing through Hearst-Pathe views of the jackies at San Diego.

ON WAR PICTURES

There's a Valuable Suggestion Here for You on Showing Them

AS the war goes along there are going to be more and more pictures based on various phases of the great conflict. People like war pictures when they are properly presented and when the hurrah, flag waving stuff is eliminated from their presentation.

Two such pictures are shown at the Rothapfel houses this week. There was plenty of the patriotism of the right sort, but the bunk was eliminated. Read how they were presented.

Gaumont pictures then take us to the fighting front in France and we are shown views of the Pennsylvania troops, officers being decorated with the Cross de Guerre and finally a thrilling picture of the review of the Thirtieth division. First the music is "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall," and this is played once through and then follows "Yankee Doodle Boy," played fairly slowly until the pictures of General Dickman and the marching men when "Over There," with the introduction omitted stirs the audience to great enthusiasm.

Now the Animated is especially short at the Rialto, as well as at the Rivoli this week, and there is a reason for that for the features on both bills are based on war and a very long new section would have made the bill tiresome. There is quite an art in not overdoing things. Never let your audiences TIRE, for when you do you begin to lose business.

With all of the lights blue and just a touch of red on the curtains at the side panels Morrie Grimaldi sings Handel's "Shall I in Mamre's Fertile Plain." There is no light on the singer and with the accompaniment of the organ the number is so effective that it gets a big hand.

Then comes the feature, Dorothy Gish in "The Hun Within," a picture which is based on pro-German activities in this country and which deals with a loyal father and the son who is a traitor to this nation. It is the splendid music that makes the picture get the enjoyment that is evidenced at the Rialto this week. "What Kind of an American Are You?" is the theme for the main action and is played as the title comes on the screen and then with the title "In the Spring" Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" is rendered, followed by "Yankee Girl Caprice" and "Nature's Adoration," Now when the loyal father is introduced "What Kind of an American" is used again and then we have "Lovelight Serenade" once through and "Yankee Girl Caprice" repeated. Now the love theme is introduced with Beth and the hero, only the chorus being played here—"Only One Girl." Now at the title referring to the outset of the war we have a tympani rumble followed by a mysterioso with the meeting of the intriguers and "When a Maid Comes Knocking at Your Heart" with the chorus played once through and then the first strains of "The Vacant Chair" and "To a Wild Rose."

There is an effective arrangement when the screen flashes a title "In Germany" and the orchestra remains silent, so that every one gets the full effect of the contrasting scenes. Three dramatic numbers and "Yankee Girl" then come in and then we return to the love theme with the couple entering the automobile. The main theme follows immediately afterwards and then with the newsboy crying his papers we have a tympani rumble with the music changing to an agitato as the news revealed is that America has declared war on Germany. Chorus of "What Kind of an American" is repeated with the peace at any price man and then the organ takes up the music effectively, picking out the theme of "Peace at Any Price" which is played to action, turning to the love theme as the girl and hero are seen together and when we have excerpts from the President's speech we get the last sixteen bars of "Over There." Now through the plotting and action that follows we have a series of mysteriosos, agitatos and furiosos and finally just at the end "Only One Girl" comes back and is played once through. And we believe that the way that this was brought in again after the strains of the weird music is responsible for the big hand that the picture gets.

With the lights all gold, selections from "You're in Love" are played, and then follows one of the Mack Sennett girl comedies, "The Summer Girl," and there's so much action and fun in it that the audience is kept mighty busy watching and laughing. It opens with "By the Beautiful Sea" with the scene on the beach, and then follow "The Campbells Are Coming," "Go Get 'Em," "Happy Go Lucky," "Nights of Gladness," "Peter Piper" and "Saddle Back" and "Furore" gallops for the chase stuff. The comedy dog, with a crane as an added starter furnish a great portion of the laughs.

Now although the feature at the Rivoli is also a war picture there is as different arrangement of the program as well could be imagined. One of the things that strikes the observer is that all of the music is that of the Allies and though the more strenuous spirit of the war is kept down except in the Animated and in the feature, still one thoroughly gets the French-Belgian, Italian-American atmosphere of the whole production.

With the main lights in red and the proscenium lights in gold the orchestra starts off with selections from Puccini's "Madame Butterfly," and after a few bars the curtains part and give us a beautiful Wenger setting with the interior of a Japanese room with the blooming cherry trees seen through the huge window. Then the curtains slowly fall and the selection continues to the end.

But the very spirit of it continues through the wonderful beautiful scenic that follows, a Post-Pathe, made by von Scoy and titled "Come Watch With Me the Passing Night." There are some wonderful night pictures of the water, of the clouds and the moon. And again the music plays a big portion for it starts with "Tales by Moonlight," and then there follows through "Twilight Sketches" and "Lullaby" until we are shown the figure of the soldier silhouetted against the night when we have "Taps" sounded, followed by "Meditation" to the end of the picture. All the titles are quotations from noted poems adding a great deal to the artistry of the picture.

All the lights are in blue for Mlle. D'Espinoy's rendition of "Gavotte" from "Maon." The stage setting reveals a huge window with the stars seen through it. As the curtains part the singer is seated on a sofa and as she begins to sing she rises and comes a few steps forward.

Now comes the Animated, "The Fairest of the Fair," is the music for the opening pictures, from Screen Telegram, showing flying over Washington during war times. Then comes the Official War Review and with drum and piccolo, "Tommy Atkins," is played from the fifth bar from the stirring pictures of the marching Essex men who stir the audiences to great enthusiasm. Then comes the patro effect, and when the pictures change to the heroic dog messenger carriers. It is remarkable how pictures of animals stir audiences to emotions. Several times the dog shown barely escaped shells that burst around him, and the applause each time when he is seen to be safe is almost as great as one would expect for a battle won. "La Coquette" is the music here.

But the audience goes really wild when we are shown pictures of transports filled with American troops, and we get close-ups of the waving men while the huge orchestra crashes out "Over There," playing it once through when we have pictures of the American boys reaching France and the tune shifts to "When Yankee Doodle Learns to Parley Vous." As the men land the music becomes "Battle Hymn of the Republic," and this lasts until the final pictures which show the 22,000 sailor boys there forming a living American flag, and "Red, White and Blue" adds to the great enthusiasm.

Carlos Mejia then sings, "When First the Heavenly Grace," from "La Juive," with the stage hung only with heavy blue curtains and an evergreen at either side.

Now as the orchestra begins to play "Brabaconne," there are thrown on the screen the Pathe picture, "Following the Belgian Army to Victory," which gives us a few glimpses of them, and then a close up of King Albert. As he is one of the principal figures in the feature that follows the cleverness of this little touch is apparent. A storm furioso is used with the marching Belgians, and then we return to "Brabaconne" for the pictures of the heroic king.

A great portion of the music for the feature consists of the numbered selections arranged by the Rothapfel musical department, and which have no meaning for other exhibitors as they are designated on the music score here. "There's a Million Heroes" is introduced twice, once at "Answering the Call," and the other time when the American holds up his hand to be shot. "A Little Love, a Little Kiss" and "Un Peu d'Amour" are used for some of the love scenes, and "My Own United States" is brought in with the toast to America. At the end of the pictures the chorus from "There's a Million" is used, followed by the chorus of "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," which is played twice through, and then comes "Battle Hymn of the Republic" at the very end.

This is the end of the bill, except that Prof. Firmin Swinnen—a Belgian—then renders a march by Francois Fetis.

Now, there have several articles appeared in these pages by Mr. Rothapfel himself about the use of patriotic music with pictures, but we ourselves want to call your attention to what he has done with these two war pictures this week. Now, there is plenty of room for enthusiasm in both of them, and the Rivoli feature is especially moving, but you never see any of the blatant effects put into the music.

You get the thrill of patriotism, for the melodies bring out the action, but you never have it jarring on you, you never get any of that "waving the flag" stuff.

This is what we consider perfection in presenting the patriotic sort of picture. During the war and probably after it there are going to be a lot of these pictures. At the start some exhibitors thought that they had to use the "Star Spangled Banner" or some other such selection at the conclusion, and, of course, then every one in the audience had to get up.

But you never see that happening at the Rothapfel houses. You are led fully into the spirit of the picture, and tears come to your eyes, and you applaud with earnest applause, but when you leave the theatre you have enjoyed yourself and you don't feel that you have been pulled into the theatre and literally forced to show enthusiasm.

And there's quite a difference between professional patriotism and the regular sort.

Heard an exhibitor say: "Well, I've booked my pictures and now I am all done for six months." And in most cases he's right if that's the way he feels about it.

P. E. Noble, now of Portland

Noble Directs Publicity for Jensen-Von Herberg Portland Houses

PAUL EMERSON NOBLE, known to the film world as "No-Bull" Noble—trade mark registered—is once more a member of the Portland, Ore., film forces. Noble has joined Jensen and Von Herberg, the biggest motion picture exhibitors in the Pacific Northwest, and member of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, and at present is publicity director for the Liberty and Columbia theatres, at Portland.

Mr. Noble was a Portlander for several years until 1916, managing the Metro Exchange and then the old National theatre until he went to Butte, Mont., to direct the affairs of the American theatre. He put that house most emphatically on the map and attracted national attention by his aggressive and progressive showmanship and striking publicity stunts.

The Portland Jensen and Von Herberg interests are now looked after by C. S. Jensen, who has made that city his home; E. J. Myrick, manager of the Liberty theatre, and recognized as one of the live wire exhibitors of the country, Mr. Noble and A. E. Laflar, who recently left the Oregon theatre, Salem, to manage the Columbia.

Goldwyn Features Star in New 24-Sheets

Goldwyn Pictures announces that it is to provide a special series of 24-sheet stands for use with the first six pictures to be released under the new Star Series plan. Special attention will be given in this paper to the personality of the star and a striking head will be reproduced at the left of each stand. At the right end will be the space for a six-sheet on the particular production.

Plain striking lettering will be used to bring out the name of the star and the title of the production. These 24-sheets are now in the hands of the exchange managers and Goldwyn is asking the exhibitors to look over this paper in advance.

Stage setting at the New Garrick, Minneapolis, for "Bound in Morocco"

"Shortest Bill" Makes Big Hit and Runs Full Week, Due to Method of Presentation

IT will be some time before Minneapolis photoplay patrons forget the program that Manager Julius K. Johnson, of the New Garrick, offered the week of August 11. The program was one of the shortest the New Garrick has had in several months, and yet it undoubtedly has proved more pleasing to lovers of good entertainment than any bill offered at any local theatre in a long time.

The New Garrick provides Mr. Johnson with ample opportunity to present pictures in a de luxe way, and with rare artistry he put on his August 11 week presentations so that his bill became the talk of the town.

The bill lasted one hour and forty minutes.

The program opened with the Hearst-Pathe News and a patriotic medley by the orchestra. Following the close of the weekly the Big V Comedies, entitled "Shines and Monkey Shines," was offered with appropriate jazz music by the orchestra and pipe organ. The comedy was followed by a two-reel special Pathe picture, entitled "Fourth of July in France." This short reel subject showed Americans and French joining in the celebration of the United States' natal day in the war zone, and in Paris and each audience cheered the film to the echo. Seldom has such enthusiasm been shown by audiences as was demstrated at the New Garrick during the showing of the Fourth of July film.

To get his audiences out of the Parisian war mood into the quaint atmosphere of Morocco and into a receptive mood for Douglas Fairbanks in "Bound in Morocco." Mr. Johnson broke up his program pleasantly and effectively by playing his overture and working his stage effects just before the feature. While the orchestra played "Allah's Holiday," and with the pipe organ worked into "Cortage du Czardarre," by Tschaikowsky, dark blue, green and red light effects played upon the clever Moroccan stage settings Mr. Johnson designed for the presentation. As the above sketch shows on either side of the stage was a drop showing a typical Moroccan stone building with palm trees and vines. In the central panel of the stage velvet curtains covered a back drop showing the interior of a harem with its palms, lavish rugs and fixtures and dancer, with hand maidens. As the light effects changed on these scenes the velvet curtains slowly were drawn apart, and the dancing girl rose from her lounge and danced up stage bending, sweeping, gliding gracefully to "Allah's Holiday," now and again slowly salamming before the incense pot that sent forth fragrant odors from the front centre of the stage. As the music came to a close the dancer swung back to her lounge in perfect time, and the curtains were drawn. Immediately after the curtains were drawn the picture sheet was slipped down behind the velvets, and when the stage effects gradually faded out the curtain parted again and the feature was started off. Incidentally with the fading out of the light effects, Mr. Johnson, who is the organ soloist, as well as the manager of the theatre, took up the music where the orchestra left off and played several feature numbers before the orchestra returned to the score.

The newspaper critics were loud in their praise of the program, and it proved so pleasing from a box-office standpoint that it stood without any change for the entire seven-day run. The New Garrick seats 2,400 people, and is the largest exclusive picture theatre in the Northwest.

Mr. Johnson, prior to becoming manager of the theatre last fall was organist for two years, and previous to that was organist at the Minneapolis Lyric, when Sam Rothapfel managed it, and he also became organist at the Regent theatre in New York for over a year after Rothapfel took over that theatre. Mr. Johnson arranges his own musical programs complete, and also designs his stage settings and effects which he changes weekly. His stage is sixty feet wide, about thirty-five feet deep and three stage employees look after the various scenic effects and handling.

The New Garrick has always maintained a reputation for presenting its shows better than any other theatre in the Northwest wih the possible exception of the New Garrick, St. Paul, which recently has become a worthy rival, and in addition to being proud of the way it introduces its features and novelties the theatre is justly proud of a service flag bearing eleven blue stars and one gold one, and which hangs over the main entrance.

Nifty Window Cards Supplied by Fox

As an aid to exhibitors who have booked "Queen of the Sea," "The Prussian Cur" and "Why America Will Win," the Fox Film Corporation has had printed more than a million copies each of some striking window cards advertising "Queen of the Sea," "Why America Will Win" and "The Prussian Cur."

The card advertising "Queen of the Sea" shows the magnitude of this submarine phantasy, which, it is said, cost more than $1,000,000 to make. Several striking pictures, illustrating Annette Kellerman, star of the production, in some of her most attractive poses as the ruling sovereign of the creatures of the deep, are shown in this card, which has a space for the name of the theatre.

One of the most striking features of the present world conflict furnishes the theme of the window card to be issued in connection with "Why America Will Win." A picture of a duplicate of the famous 75-mile gun used by the Germans is shown just at the moment of discharge, while in another part of the card is a portrait of General Pershing.

The window card to be sent out in connection with "The Prussian Cur" shows the Kaiser, typifying all the brutality of the Hun, squatting on a ruined cathedral, while behind him is a giant American cannon cracker, printed in red, all ready to explode.

Two views of lobby display at Broadway theatre on "Crashing Through to Berlin"

Leaders of Allies Basis for Most Unique Lobby Display by Kashin at Broadway

THREE years ago the MOTION PICTURE NEWS first called attention to the lobby displays that M. Kashin was presenting at the Midway theatre, Montreal, and it predicted that such displays would be found essential to many of the large cities where an appeal is made to the big crowds passing the doors.

Since he has taken over the direction of the Broadway theatre he has been making New York sit up and take notice by the way he has arranged the front of his house. And he is attracting not only the attention of the public, but the press of New York as well, for in S. Jay Kaufman's column, "Round the Town," in the Evening Globe we find the following:

"Kashin means lobby display. If Rothapfel is synonymous with movie plus music, Kashin will soon be synonymous with lobby display."

This reference was made on the occasion of the presentation of "Crashing Through to Berlin" at the Broadway where it has had a three week's run. Several thousands of people were turned away the first night and the sale of tickets stopped an hour and a half before the first show. Since then business has been strong.

The picture is an historical review in chronological sequence of the important events in the World War, from the assassination of Archduke Francis Ferdinand in Servia, up till the present offensive in France.

The lobby of the Broadway was turned by Kashin into a Hall of Fame, and called "A Pantheon of Patriots," or "Democracy's Hall of Fame."

About seven feet above the ground, across the main entrance, and around three sides of the lobby proper, were a series of niches, and in these were the marble busts of all the big men of the Allies.

Below this, on panels were eleven by fourteen enlargements of actual film, and so placed that all you had to do was to start at the left-hand side of the lobby entrance, enter, go around the three sides, and then finish on the right-hand side out on the sidewalk again, and during your little walk you would haave seen a pictorial history of the war. Of course, there were war relics picked up from the field of France. The reading matter or sales talks were in the usual Kashin style, and full of punch.

Of all the displays at the Broadway so far, this display attracted more people, and by casual observation it could be easily seen that many of the onlookers after walking around the lobby finally advanced to the box-office. The light effects greatly enhanced the display.

There were three stage effects connected with Kashin's presentation of "Crashing Through to Berlin."

The first effect was a scene of a six-foot hour glass. In place of the usual sand there was shown red blood flowing from the upper glass to the lower. A muted horn played taps. The strings played "Over There," and four strokes were sounded on a gong. This brought out the theme of the picture, viz., "The Passing of Four Years of a Crimson Epoch."

The next effect was when the first Americans paraded in Paris. Just before this scene, the picture was stopped. A singer off stage started to sing "As Washington Crossed the Delaware, so will Pershing Cross the Rhine." On the first chorus, the curtains parted and showed a tableau with living pictures, showing Washington crossing the Delaware, this then fading into a scene of Pershing crossing a pontoon bridge over the Rhine. The singer sang throughout. Then the picture went on again.

At the end of the picture another tableau was staged. This represented a huge cannon, stuffed at the mouth with a bird's nest, a Peace Dove perched on the top-most part, and a shower of flowers and blossoms descending on all.

"Crashing Through To Berlin" was one huge round of applause. The fever was maintained throughout the picture, except for one rather slow part, and that was where Kashin inserted his tableau in order to keep them awake. Over seventy-five different pieces of music were employed in rendering the score.

Australian Theatre Puts Over Striking Display

Strand theatre, Brisbane, Australia, has just completed an exploitation plan on the Fox production of "Les Miserables" that is worthy of the attention of any of the livest exhibitors in this country.

Eight days before the opening of the week's engagement the Strand ran a four-column, nine-inch display in all four of the dailies, illustrated with drawings of incidents in the production and then each day for the next six days carried one-column, five-inch displays, built around some special episode in the story.

The first of these carried a drawing of the book written by Victor Hugo, with an inset of William Farnum. It told an interesting story of the writing of the book, what effect it had in France and the place it holds in literature. The second had to do with the arrest of Jean Valjean for the theft of a loaf of bread. The third recounted how Jean Valjean, the galley slave, escaped by wrenching the bars of his prison window. The fourth related the incident of the Bishop's candlesticks and in the fifth installment the story of how Jean Valjean was discovered by Javert, the detective, who recognized the escaped prisoner when he lifted a heavy cart off a man. The sixth showed Jean Valjean in the sewers of Paris, the copy of the display paraphrasing the remarkable description given by Victor Hugo of this episode.

On the day before the opening, Sunday, the Strand ran a four-column, page-length advertisement summing up all the incidents and carrying a big cut of William Farnum, the star.

"Can't do it" is easy to say and hard to prove.

Universal Giving Real Service Helps On New Pictures Direct from the Studios

REAL service direct to the exhibitor from an exploitation who sees the pictures in the studios and immediately writes his matter is a new plan that has just been put in operation by the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. First announcement of that service is made this week, although the plan has been in operation several weeks. This service will be issued in advance of every picture released whether it is a Universal Special Attraction, a Jewel, a Bluebird, or distributed without any special brand name.

A big share of the exploitation work of producing company has to be done without the writer having seen the picture, but this has been overcome by Universal through employing a man at the coast studios and having him mail the matter directly to those asking for it. It is in typewritten form and assumes the character of special advice to the first run man by giving him a thorough insight into the character of the production and laying the basis for his exploitation.

Special emphasis is laid on the fact that this matter is prepared without adjectives and without superlatives and that its one purpose is to equip the exhibitor for handling the production to get the most money out of it.

Now the first sheet contains general information about the production. For instance here is the one being sent out on "The Talk of the Town":

Star, Dorothy Phillips.
Previous Hits, "A Soul for Sale," "Hell Morgan's Girl," "The Mortgaged Wife," "Broadway Love," "The Risky Road," etc.
Directed by Allen J. Holubar.
Story by Harold Vickers in "Snappy Stories."
Scenario by Allen Holubar.
Supporting Cast, William Stowell, George Fawcett, Clarissa Selwynn, Norma Kerry, Charles Hill Mailes, etc.
Locale, interiors and exteriors of a suburban estate. A girls' boarding school. An oriental cafe, an underworld cafe. A luxurious business office.
Time, today.
Thumb-Nail Theme: Genevra is brought from babyhood to the threshold of her marriage by her father, a retired major, who tries to run his home along lines of strict military discipline. The girl is reared in a luxurious prison with no idea of the outside world. Her first curiosity comes when she sees kittens nursing from a mother cat. Denied information by her aunt, she acquires a book on "How to Attract the Opposite Sex." Following out its suggestions she wins the love of a rich young bachelor, the youngest member of her father's small circle of friends. She marries him so that she can do as she pleases. Her new-found freedom takes a risky turn and she falls into the tentacles of a libertine. Her husband pays the man to pretend to attack his wife—which takes the glamour out of the shadowy romance and brings her to her senses.

Next there are given a number of short sentences about the character of the production which the exhibitor can use in his newspaper, programs or around his lobby and then there is a series of advertising catch lines. Next follows copy for the herald and then three press notices that may be used just as they are or rewritten to give the exhibitor just what he requires.

Samples of the matter which have been sent to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS show that the principles laid down by the company are being carefully followed in this matter. The exhibitor is given a frank insight into the character of the production and he ought to have a mighty good idea of what he is going to do well in advance of its showing, as this matter goes out just as soon as the production is completed.

This matter is not being given general distribution, but is being sent out to those exhibitors who request it, so as to avoid waste distribution.

Atlanta Newspapers and Theatres Both Show Willingness To Cooperate and Savoy announces the bills for the week in four inches double, while Vaudette uses ten inches single.

The Journal gives two three-column layouts on the local attractions and the reading notices and carries the same advertising as the Constitution with the exception of the Criterion. The display on the Alamo No. 2 is much better set up in the Journal than in either of the other papers. We have reproduced a third page from the Journal to show the advertising of the two vaudeville houses, the Lyric and Loew's Grand, each five inches double. This is the sort of competition that the motion picture theatres are up against. The Lyric shows a news reel, Pictograph and a travel picture, while there is a feature on the bill at the Grand, with changes twice weekly, though merely a line is devoted to this in the advertising.

Hearst's Sunday American carries the same advertising as the Constitution and has the same general policy in giving reading notices and no news.

One general conclusion is that where the newspapers devote no space to the theatres have to use large space to attract attention, since they cannot count on the real news of the photoplay, the individual public going through these long reading notices. Where the newspapers make their motion picture department so lively and interesting that the thousands of fans will immediately turn to these pages there is not the necessity for such a volume of advertising, though this always does have the effect of causing more increase in the space.

On Monday the Constitution carries three inches double for the Forsyth, three inches single for the Rialto together with reading notices for the advertising houses. On Tuesday the Tudor, Criterion, Strand, Rialo and Vaudette are all in for two inches single while the Forsyth remains and these continue through the week, nearly all of the theatres changing their displays on Thursday, on account of changes in the bills. The other two papers do practically the same thing, the Georgian, giving the title of the productions at the various houses daily in directory form.

Merchants Cooperate with Theatre in Advertising "Pershings' Crusaders"

SUCCESS of "Pershing's Crusaders" in La Cross August 11-13 was due largely to an intelligent campaign of advertising on the part of Manager Koppelberger of the La Cross theatre. This campaign was materially aided by the business men of La Crosse, Wis., who divided the expense of a full page in the Sunday newspaper.

When the nature of the picture was brought to their attention, they very gladly co-operated. The principal department store devoted its best window to a very intelligent display of posters, "stills" and flags, using as a central decorative piece a life size figure in the costume of an ancient Crusader leading an American soldier in full field equipment over to France. The window was especially effective at night, when a skillful lighting arrangement drew the attention of hundreds. This window was in place for four days preceding the showing, and up to the day before the close of the engagement.

The theatre management, engaged the services of Gunner C. Van Raalti of the Canadian Army, who saw nineteen months of service in the front line trenches. He entertained and thrilled the audiences of the La Crosse theatre with his descriptions of life in the trenches, hand-to-hand fighting, and all the various features of life with a great army.

How George J. Schade put on a regular show at Sandusky while he was exhibiting "Pershing's Crusaders"

"Regular Show" in Front of Theatre Draws Great Crowds and Expense Is Very Small

GEORGE J. SCHADE, proprietor of Schade's theatre, Sandusky, Ohio, is easily in the lead as the originator of the most unique fronts. We have told you that often and again and again we have proven this with photographs of the theatre during the runs of productions.

Mr. Schade has just completed the showing of "Pershing's Crusaders," and on this occasion he got the punch over with a wallop and attracted unusual crowds. The display was something on the order of the usual stage presentation, and he may be said to have staged the production in front of the house instead of on the interior.

One thing that commends the greater portion of the displays at the Schade is the fact that they are inexpensive.

The main feature of the display was on either side of the marquis, and this decoration was supplied by cut outs of the twenty-four sheets supplied by First National. This marquis was extended out over the roadway for ten feet, leaving about eleven feet clearance. Immediately above the marquis and below the electric sign a huge American flag was so placed as to form a background for the mounted figure of Gen. Pershing. Banked about the front and sides were evergreens so arranged as to give the forest effect.

Built up from the top of the marquis was the place of the Kaiser, with a background of two American flags, and the Stars and Stripes flying from each tower. This palace was arranged with transparent windows, and from the outside it was made the more prominent with indirect lighting system.

Immediately on the curb was the reproduction of a trench scene, with American soldiers wearing helmets. These figures were made of papier mache, but they were very realistic imitations. One glance at the two photographs will show how thoroughly in keeping are the various parts of the display, and how they merge into one patriotic effect.

"This was the talk of the town," is Mr. Schade's own comment on the boys in the trenches. Then he adds: "Some exhibitors may think that this is a very expensive front. For their benefit I will say that the entire layout was made of corrugated paper board stiffened with 2-inch strips. The 24-sheets were cut out, pasted on and then varnished with a cheap grade of varnish so that they would stand the weather. The palace was made of the same material and painted with cheap barn paint, making a mighty expensive looking front with a very small amount expended. And it will get them inside every time, because it looks big."

And the box-office results bear out the statements on Mr. Schade. The picture ran for three days, the business being big on Monday, increasing on Tuesday and Wednesday it was described as "a knock-out—full up and down." In addition to the regular matinee and evening business there were special morning matinees given on Tuesday and Wednesday especially for the children, and there were long line-ups for each performance.

There are a whole lot of exhibitors who can take valuable tips from Mr. Schade. Sandusky, with a census population of 20,000, is not in the big city class by a whole lot, but there is not an exhibitor anywhere who is taking greater advantage of the pulling power of each picture, and who is working out new ideas with showing after showing.

Your patron does not want to know whether your picture is the "greatest ever," but he wants to know why he should go to see it and what he is going to find there.

Pershing Record Helps with "Crusaders"

Here is a clever and a very simple idea in connection with exploiting "Pershing's Crusaders" which was worked out by D. H. Schulmann, manager of the Florence theatre, Pasadena, Cal.

He arranged with a local phonograph dealer to install one of his largest machines on the dark side of the theatre and supply the theatre with record of "Pershing's Message" which was reproduced just before running the picture at each show. This got perfect attention, even from audiences of children, and always brought forth much applause at the conclusion.

Not only did the dealer make no charge for this service, as it was a great advertisement for him, but he also decorated his show window with flags, the records and a poster and then cards calling attention to the fact that the picture was being shown at the Florence and the record played there.

A "Four Minute Man" spoke before each rendition of the record, mentioning it and the picture and calling attention to their authenticity.

Error Brings Criticism to Wrong Paper

In the second of the articles recently published about the newspaper-motion picture situation in Los Angles, a typographical error made us say that the Saturday Express was the poorest of the papers in Los Angeles so far as cooperation was concerned, with the exception of the Times, which prints only reading notices in the Sunday issue. The paragraph making this statement comes just after another paragraph pointing out why the Saturday department of the Record was poor, and the remark should have referred to that paper and not to the Express, which is always readable and interesting.

Manager Earl L. Crabb "shooting" Colonel Lillian Russell in her Marine Corps drive and view of Strand News car

Buffalo Theatre and Newspaper Show Real Cooperation in Local News Weekly

A BUFFALO newspaper and a Buffalo motion picture theatre have just completed an arrangement linking these two greatest publicity agencies. The paper is the Buffalo Evening News, and the theatre is the Strand, managed by Earl L. Crabb. Under this arrangement the News-Strand Local Events comes into existence. This will be a weekly release, covering all events in which Buffalonians are interested. All activities of interest in this city and western New York will hereafter be screened.

In preparing for this stunt, Mr. Crabb several weeks ago journeyed to New York, where he purchased a big camera car, which he drove back to Buffalo, and had attractively painted and fitted out as the News-Strand Camera Car. This machine is a big town car model with an opening in the roof for the camera to project while "shooting" pictures.

Almost simultaneous with the purchase of this car, Mr. Crabb began the installation of a complete developing and printing studio in the Strand, where in a very short time after "shooting" the pictures, the complete films are made ready for the Strand screen. An expert photographer has been engaged to aid in the developing of the films, and a colored chauffeur engaged to drive the camera car to the points where pictures are to be made.

Through this arrangement the Strand is getting a "million dollars' worth" of publicity in the columns of the Evening News, which is the largest paper between New York and Chicago. This publicity is all on page 1 and 2, which could not be purchased at any price.

This is the way the plan works out. When there is a big fire or accident, a gathering of Buffalonians or other event of local interest, the News informs Mr. Crabb of the details, and he with the camera car rushes to the scene. If it is a celebration, patriotic rally or gathering, he gets a much longer notice, and no rush is necessary.

However, three days before it was intended to announce the first News-Strand local events an accident occurred, which made Mr. Crabb rush, and which necessitated a preliminary announcement of the plan. It was the breaking away of a scow in the Niagara River not far above the Niagara Falls, and the rushing toward the brink of the falls of that scow with two men aboard. Through a miracle the scow caught between some rocks in the rapids and stuck all night, during which time hundreds of men made desperate efforts to save those aboard.

In the morning the Strand Camera Car rushed from Buffalo to Niagara Falls, and Mr. Crabb succeeded in getting some exclusive views of the rescue of the men, the almost wrecked scow and some excellent scenes of the Falls. The pictures were developed, printed, and the News came out with a two-column head on page 1, announcing the scoop and the fact that the pictures were the preliminary to the regular edition of the Local Events. It was a great introduction, and thousands crowded into the Strand to see the pictures.

Sunday, August 11, the first complete edition of the Local Events were shown, and included in it were the Falls rescue pictures, scenes of the activities of the local Motor Corps Girls, films showing Buffalo firemen selling war savings stamps for which the fire fighters staged a special run of the apparatus down one of the principal streets, the Municipal Swimming Carnival in which hundreds of children were filmed and Congressman Charles Bennett Smith addressing a W. S. S. rally at Lafayette Square.

In this series there were hundreds who recognized themselves as screen stars. In this way the Strand will add to the box-office receipts.

Each week the News and Mr. Crabb will co-operate in getting out a motion picture review of the events of the week and the activities of Buffalo folk.

When Lillian Russell was in Buffalo in the interest of the Marines' Recruiting Drive, Mr. Crabb "shot" almost 2,000 feet of "Colonel" Russell's activities in various parts of the city appealing for recruits for "the soldiers of the sea." These films were taken the first half of the recruiting week, and shown on the Strand screen the last half with the "Colonel" herself an interested patron at the first showing.

But the one big point in this plan is the great publicity given the Strand by the News, and there is not a city in the country of any size that does not have some live wire exhibitor who can put over a similar plan. The one difficulty in fast work for most exhibitors would be the printing and developing. Most exhibitors would have to send their films away to be printed. This is where Mr. Crabb is fortunate. He is a real expert in the technical side of the game, having been at one time a director for the Universal Film Company. He is the inventor of several appliances for motion picture projecting machines. He is also familiar with the printing and developing end, and thus is able to work the plan to perfection.

In those cities where there are exhibitors who can "shoot" local pictures, it will be found worth while to tie up with the leading newspaper on a similar proposition, even if the films have to be sent away to be printed. The publicity which the exhibitor will receive, all page 1 and 2 position, will make the expense involved seem small.

An interesting sidelight in connection with the News-Strand Local Events is the working out of an arrangement whereby most of the films will be sent to France, and there shown to Buffalo boys who will receive these pictures, showing their old home town and its activities with about as much enthusiasm as a big victory over the Hun. And when these boys come home the Strand and the News will be on the tongues of all of them. It is easy to imagine the excitement among the soldiers when the films are thrown on a screen behind the lines, and the boys recognize some of their own friends, their relatives, and scenes dear to the hearts of all of them.

The plan promises to develop into a big proposition, and it is possible that Mr. Crabb may book the films in other theatres to help in cutting down the expense of producing the films. It is a sure bet that a lot of houses will be anxious to show these pictures because of their local interest and because of the publicity given them in the News.

Franklin, in Raising Prices, Declares Public Demands Best in Whole Presentation

SHEA'S Hippodrome, Buffalo, has started the higher admissions ball rolling, on Sunday, August 25, a raise in prices being put into effect. Under the new price scale the war tax is included. The boost amounts to five cents on all present admissions, with the exception that boxes Sunday and holidays will be sold at a ten-cent advance, tickets being fifty cents instead of forty.

In announcing the raise in prices Manager Harold B. Franklin in a neat folder says:

"The management has fixed these prices not that they reflect the full value of the entertainment given, but rather that they represent the least price for which it is possible to continue the high quality demanded by Hippodrome audiences.

"Shea's Hippodrome has at its disposal the features that are presented at the four leading theatres in New York City and are shown here at the same time they are released there. From these the best is selected to make up the program at the Hippodrome. Each picture is specially staged, which distinguishes the entertainment here. Shea's Hippodrome features are not shown elsewhere in the city for thirty days.

"High class cinema theatres in New York, Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles, Seattle and other cities have an admission scale double that in force at the Hippodrome. Shea's Hippodrome will continue to be the best theatre in every respect."

With the raise in prices Mr. Franklin also announces the augmentation of his big orchestra to thirty pieces, which under the direction of Alfred Moulton, will be one of the finest in the country.

In discussing the boost in admission with the MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative, Mr. Franklin said:

"The day for the successful ten-cent theatre is gradually dying out. It is no longer possible to give audiences the elaborate programs demanded for a ten-cent admission. The big programs demanded by present day audiences can only be provided through increased revenue.

"The public will pay for quality. The present releasing method demands high rentals. Good music costs money. Efficient attaches command good salaries. Expert operators are worth their weight in gold. The 101 items connected with the operating end of the theatre have trebled in cost. To meet these exhibitors must set higher prices.

"Audiences expect bigger things continually from the motion picture exhibitor. That house that does not progress cannot keep pace with the rapidly moving events in the cinema industry. Bigger prices will enable the exhibitor to give bigger shows. Bigger shows mean bigger patronage. The public is prepared to pay for value received. All commodities are commanding higher prices than heretofore. Why not the motion picture?

"For the theatre today there is added taxes, higher light bills, both gas and electricity and employes are continually demanding higher wages in order to meet the continually rising cost of living. At Shea's Hippodrome we have put the problem frankly up to the patron.

"We find that the public is not interested in how cheap you run your theatre, but how good. In announcing our price raise we show at the same time our plans for the coming season and let the patron judge as to whether the higher price is justifiable.

"One big advantage of the new prices is the elimination of the odd pennies. Eleven-cent seats have been increased to fifteen cents and seventeen-cent seats to twenty."

The week of August 25 was the fourth anniversary at Shea's Hippodrome and elaborate programs were arranged by Manager Franklin, which will be described for MOTION PICTURE NEWS readers in an early edition.

Service Star Poll Gives New Interest to Film

Charles G. Branham, manager of the Strand theatre, Minneapolis, used a unique plan in connection with the Minneapolis Daily News in exploiting Madge Kennedy in "The Service Star."

Announcement of the contest was made under the caption of: "The Daily News wants to know how many stars you have in your service flag," and then were followed the rules. There were no limit to those available for entry and two season passes to the Strand offered to those who could show the greatest number of stars. The number of stars were not limited to husbands, brothers or sons, for cousins, uncles—in short, any relative—could be included. Of course, the coupling up of the contest with the picture was apparent.

Select Announces New Output

For the 1918-19 Season the Select Pictures Corporation Will Release Thirty-eight Pictures with Five Women Stars

Select Pictures Corporation has announced its second series of star pictures, for the season of 1918-1919. The names of Norma Talmadge, Clara Kimball Young, Constance Talmadge, Alice Brady and Marion Davies appear as the stars contributing to this series during the coming year. The list is to comprise eight pictures from each of the first four of these stars, and six pictures from Marion Davies. This makes a total of thirty-eight productions from these five artists.

Norma Talmadge's first picture in her new series will be "A Tale of a Forbidden City," from the pen of George Scarborough, the dramatist who wrote the story of Miss Talmadge's last production, "Her Only Way."

Miss Talmadge and her director, Sydney A. Franklin, have been at great pains and expense to provide authentic and adequate Chinese settings for the story. Thomas Meighan is her new leading man.

Her second production in the new series will be David Belasco's great stage success, "The Heart of Wetona." This play is also from the pen of George Scarborough.

Clara Kimball Young will begin her Second Star Series with a war play, "The Road Through the Dark," from the pen of Maude Radford Warren. This story appeared in the March number of the Metropolitan Magazine. Marshall Neilan will be supervising director and Jack Holt will appear as leading man.

Second in Clara Kimball Young's new series will come a very ambitious production of "Cheating Cheaters," Max Marcin's stage success which drew crowds to the Eltinge theatre in New York City for an entire season.

Constance Talmadge provides the first attraction to be released by Select during the new season, as the first of her second series, "Sauce for the Goose," is being released during the present week. Miss Talmadge is again supported by Harrison Ford and a capable cast, and is again very ably directed by Walter Edwards.

Following this, and making the second feature upon her list, Constance Talmadge will be seen in another screen presentation of a successful comedy, "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots." The play by this name is from the pen of that master American dramatist, Augustus Thomas, and provided one of the early successes at the New Lyceum theatre in New York.

Alice Brady's first picture in her new series has been called "The Better Half," and is taken from a story, "Michael Thwaite's Wife," which is the work of Miriam Michelson, whose romance, "In the Bishop's Carriage," enjoyed such wide success both in book form and upon the stage.

Following "The Better Half," Alice Brady will be presented by Select in a photoplay based on a story by Fannie Hurst which recently appeared in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Following "Cecilia of the Pink Roses," which is the first of Marion Davies' Select Pictures, this star will be seen in a new production entitled "The Burden of Proof," which has just been finished under the supervision of Julius Steger.

The Select management desires to call attention to the fact that all of its announced productions are new pictures. There are no reprints or reissues included in the list.

General Film Aids W. S. S.

In co-operation with the National W. S. War Savings Committee, General Film Company has instructed its twenty-eight exchanges in the United States to give energetic attention to the War Savings Stamp campaign. Arrangements have been made to send at least fifty animated W. S. S. cartoon trailers to each exchange, these to be attached to the most active films and kept working. At the same time the Committee will be kept informed by General Film of the subjects that carry these "Thrifette" trailers and also the houses displaying them.

Alice Brady Resumes Her Motion Picture Work

Alice Brady returned to New York this week from her preliminary road tour, for the purpose of getting started on her newest Select Picture, to follow her forthcoming production, "The Better Half." The play in which Miss Brady is making her return to the stage closed in Washington last week for ten days before its metropolitan premiere.

Charles Maigne will direct Miss Brady in the picture she is now making, and he also wrote the scenario for this piece.

Miss Brady will not abandon moving pictures, but will continue to make pictures for Select according to her regular schedule.

Theda Bara Starts on "The Siren's Song"

Theda Bara has begun work at Hollywood on "The Siren's Son," a new drama, which is her thirty-fifth picture for William Fox.

"The Siren's Song" is being directed by J. Gordon Edwards, this being the thirtieth production Mr. Edwards has made for William Fox. Story and scenario by Charles Kenyon, author of "Kindling." A large and especially notable cast has been chosen for this play, and it was selected by Miss Bara herself from among a number of manuscripts submitted to her.

Norma Talmadge's Most Recent Select Picture Is "Her Only Way." Clara Kimball Young Is Laying Plans for a New Picture to Follow "The Savage Woman"

Ince Turns Earth on New Studio Site

Thomas H. Ince and his staff motored to Culver City last week where the producer of Paramount and Artcraft Pictures personally turned the first shovelful of earth for the new studio to be erected in the old site from which Mr. Ince has been absent for a year and a half, while occupying the Biograph studios in Los Angeles.

J. Parker Read, Jr., Harry Culver and others were in the party and all are enthusiastic over the new plant which is expected to be one of the handsomest in the country. From an architectural point of view, the new studio will be very unique, it is said. There is a complete departure in the design from even a semblance of a commercial institution. There will be the usual stages, work buildings, etc., but these will be hidden from the view of the passer-by along Washington Boulevard. All the traveler going through Culver City will see, will be a great Colonial Mansion set back 150 feet or more from the boulevard in a tree-studded lawn. This stately building, with its spreading wings will have a frontage of more than 250 feet, leaving only a twenty-foot strip lawn on either side. The structure will stand on a slight rise, all the work buildings being behind and out of sight.

Essanay Reports "Triple Trouble" Success

"Triple Trouble," Essanay's new Charlie Chaplin comedy, is booking exceptionally strong, according to the reports of Essanay and the George Kleine releasing system. They also state that exhibitors running the picture are reporting that they are doing an exceptionally large business and pleasing their audiences thoroughly.

Many of the first-run houses which booked the picture for one week held it for a second week's run, so great was the interest of the public in the picture.

Essanay has had to make a number of new positive prints in order to take care of the increased bookings, these coming in faster even than was anticipated.

"Over the Top" to Help Liberty Loan

"Over the Top," Vitagraph feature, continues to run strong in all parts of the country, and letters from exhibitors indicate a still greater demand for the feature in connection with the coming Liberty Loan Drive, in support of which many are planning to run the picture on a mutual benefit basis, as it has been run in hundreds of instances for the benefit of the Red Cross, Knights of Columbus, Y. M. C. A. and other war organizations.

L-Ko Completes "The Fast Male"

"The Fast Male," a railroad comedy, has been completed by Craig Hutchinson at the L-Ko studios. In the cast are Harry Gribbon, May Emory, Harry Mann, Helen Lynch and Chester Rickman.

Keeney Takes Gotham Studio

Located Adjoining Talmadge Plant in Forty-eighth Street—Plans Going Forward to Begin Jewel Carmen Production

IT was announced this week that papers have been signed whereby Frank A. Keeney, of the Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation, takes over the studios at 308 East Forty-eighth street, Manhattan, adjoining the Norma Talmadge studio. It is said these studios were originally built for Mr. Keeney by Manhattan Studios, Inc., under the direction of John W. Mahan, president of that concern.

Together with the statement that Keeney secures the plant, is the announcement that in about two weeks work will start on a feature production in which Jewel Carmen will have the star role.

The new studios are among the best equipped in the city. They are on the location formerly occupied by the Lee Lash Studios. There is a frontage of 75 feet, with a depth of 100. The studio building proper, which is 50 by 100 feet in floor dimensions, is fitted with a semi-glass roof, for daylight work. It has a cemented basement 50 feet wide and 100 feet long with a height of 15 feet. There are no posts in the studio, everything being in the clear.

The offices, director's rooms, property rooms and dressing rooms are in a three-story building, 25 by 100 feet, equipped throughout with underwriters' improved fire doors. Studio, offices and property rooms are on the street level. The electrical installation has the latest improved Trumbull switchboard with double pole throw, all lights in the studio being controlled from the switchboard, thus giving a maximum of convenience and efficiency. Studio and dressing rooms are heated with steam throughout.

About the middle of September Mr. Keeney will resume production with Catherine Calvert, whom he is exploiting as "The Lady Beautiful of the Screen." It was his success with the earlier Calvert pictures that spurred Mr. Keeney to go ahead with his larger plans as a producer. He has now made four pictures featuring Miss Calvert, "A Romance of the Underworld," by Paul Armstrong; "Out of the Night," by E. Lloyd Sheldon; "Marriage," by Guy Bolton, a screen adaptation of Mr. Bolton's powerful drama, "The Game," and "The Uphill Path," by Mr. Armstrong. The first two pictures named have been released.

Vitagraph Names Releases for September 9

The Vitagraph program of releases for the week of September 9 has been scheduled as follows:

Blue Ribbon Feature, five parts, "A Nymph of the Foothills," featuring Gladys Leslie; written by Rex Taylor; directed by Frederic Thomson. Serial, two parts, William Duncan in "The Escape," Episode No. 9 of "A Fight for Millions," supported by an all-star cast, including Edith Johnson and Joe Ryan; written by Albert E. Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady; directed by William Duncan. Big V Comedy, one part, "Capers and Crooks," featuring Earl Montgomery and Jos. Rock. Vitagraph Drew Comedy, one part, "A Lady in the Library," featuring Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew.

Fox Features Play Opposition Successfully

One big Fox picture being chosen to play in opposition to another super Fox production, and both doing big business, was the situation which developed in Seattle during the opening week of "Salome." The rival Fox production was William Farnum in "Les Miserables." Both pictures broke house records and turned away hundreds, according to a letter sent to the Fox Film Corporation by P. S. Mattox, the William Fox agent with the "Salome" production in the Washington territory.

World Applies Direct Energy

Helps Exhibitor by Giving Publicity to Picture Instead of Company Head—Tells of Misapplied Publicity Energy

THAT misapplied energy is the besetting evil of the average publicity department is intimated in an announcement this week from World Pictures, in which it tells how the exhibitor is aided in exhibiting World productions.

The statement said: "The policy of the publicity department of World Pictures is to help the exhibitor sell the picture to the public by concentrating all publicity issued by the department on the stars, actors, authors and directors. Publicity concerning the managing heads of departments being of no value to the man who signs his name to a contract for World pictures, this sort of publicity is consequently not employed. Direct energy is applied to the theatre and not the home office end.

"There is no part of the motion picture industry in which there is as much misapplied energy as in the publicity departments. The purpose of a publicity organization should primarily be the dissemination of matters of interest that will excite the curiosity of the public to the current program of the local theatre and thereby increase the box-office takings. The methods employed by the publicity agent are not along set rules, but rather he should be guided by experience either of his own or of those who have spent years in this line of endeavor. It seems that in the picture business the press agent is influenced greatly by the evident desire of his boss to keep his name before the public, for what purpose no one knows except the boss. The public is not interested in John Jones personally but rather in the offerings of John Jones when they have certain ear marks of profitable entertainment value. This fact is arrived at by the public either through the publicity given to the subject matter of the particular picture, the drawing power of the star or the actors who compose the cast or the following the director has who had the offering in charge. This is the whole story in a nutshell.

"To Him That Hath," World Picture, Presents Montagu Love in the Main Role

"If the same amount of time, energy and print paper were used in dealing with pictures themselves instead of the personal publicity given to the president, vice-president, secretary, sales manager, exchange manager and other satellites of the organization, the exhibitor would be able to cash in with larger profits than he does where he contracts for service and has to read in the trade papers effusions about the genius of the heads of departments who do not come in contact with the box-office patrons. All of this work in the publicity line is a fair example of misdirected energy. It means nothing in putting a picture over and the only one who is pleased is the boss. All he gets out of it is a sop to his vanity.

"Press departments are but another branch of the sales organization, and such being the case, this cog in the wheel should be made to apply its energy to giving the public a jab to call their attention to the fact that there is a certain picture with Miss So-and-So as the star and May Jones and Tom Brown in the cast."

Ideals Needed Says Hodkinson Producers

JESSE D. HAMPTON, a producer, who recently became allied with Hodkinson Service, making pictures starring J. Warren Kerrigan, recalls the fact that it was just three years ago that he first talked with Mr. W. W. Hodkinson about producing and found they both had the same ideas.

In a recent letter to Mr. Hodkinson, Mr. Hampton writes: "Through all the changes and turmoil of these three years I have retained my original viewpoint—that the business needs new ideas and more ideals.

"I selected your organization because of my belief that the policy you have adopted for exhibitors will, in the long run, prove most satisfactory to all interests—exhibitor, distributor and producer."

Lester Park, president of the Lillian Walker Pictures Corporation, another Hodkinson producer, writes as follows: "I feel it would be a serious personal lapse to let the consummation of our contract for the distribution of eight Lillian Walker pictures pass without an expression of my satisfaction in having effected this releasing arrangement with you.

"In placing the series of Lillian Walker pictures in your hands for distribution, therefore, it is my honest belief that I have not only served the interests of my own company best, but that I am going 'my bit' along lines that have a most vital bearing on the interests of the exhibitors of the country as a whole."

The Complete Plan Book on Pages 1591 to 1608

Anderson Signs with Wm. L. Sherry

Gilbert M. Anderson arrived in New York last week and immediately got in touch with William L. Sherry. The result announced following the conference is that the new G. M. Anderson features will be released exclusively through the William L. Sherry Service. Contracts were signed and sealed after Mr. Sherry had looked at the productions.

The first release will be September 22, a five reeler entitled "Red Blood and Yellow." This will be followed October 6 with a special two-reel subject entitled "Shooting Mad," followed by a five-reel subject entitled "Son-of-a-Gun" to be released October 20. There will be a long list of pictures following these, in which Mr. Anderson will be seen in the modern style of Western plays. Mr. Sherry and Mr. Anderson are both desirous that it should be understood that none of these pictures will be re-issues. They are all distinctly new and up-to-date and far more pretentious than anything that Mr. Anderson has ever done.

Cruze Finishes His First Paramount

James Cruze has just finished directing his first Paramount picture for the Lasky Company and Wallace Reid, who is starring in the picture, is said to be delighted with Mr. Cruze's work and believes the picture will be a wonderful success. Ora Carewe is playing the feminine lead opposite Wallace. The picture is from a novel by Porter Emerson Browne and was scenarioized by Gardner Hunting.

Katterjohn Prepares "Puppy Love" for Lee

Monte M. Katterjohn, special writer for Paramount and Artcraft stars, has gone into retirement at his home in Beverly Hills, and will not emerge until he has completed all the continuity of "Puppy Love," which will form the next production starring Lila Lee, the new Paramount star "Puppy Love" is an original story by Mr. Katterjohn.

Margarita Fisher, in the American Film Production, "Money Isn't Everything"

On the Left Is a Moment in "Queen of the Sea," Starring Annette Kellermann, and in the Center Is Theda Bara, in "When a Woman Sins." At the Right Is Gladys Brockwell in "Kultur." All Are Fox Stars and Productions

"Laughing Bill Hyde" Progresses

Goldwyn is bending every energy at its Fort Lee studios to produce from Rex Beach's novel, "Laughing Bill Hyde," a motion picture commensurate in strength and interest with the original story. With Will Rogers, famous lariat-throwing wit of the Ziegfeld "Follies," in the name role and a cast of unusual distinction, including John Sainpolis, Anna Lehr and Mabel Ballin, work on the production is rapidly progressing under the direction of Hobart Henley.

Rex Beach delves into the psychology which keeps down the "under dog" in this story of the redemption by kindness he had no right to expect of a cast-off of society. It has been called "the story of the man who licked Fate."

"Silent Sentinel" Features Helen Gibson

"The Silent Sentinel" is the working title of the second of the series of two-reel Western dramas now being made for Universal by Harry Harvey, with Helen Gibson, the dashing queen of the plains, as the star.

The first of these has just been completed under the title of "The Tigress," a story of a feminine hell-cat of a small mining town.

Mary Miles Minter, American Star, in "The Eyes of Julia Deep"

Goldwyn Releases Lowry Film

"For the Freedom of the East" Made by Betzwood Company, with Chinese Star—On the October Schedule

WHAT Goldwyn declares is the first great motion picture production showing how Germany was foiled in the Orient and how the Yankee, Japanese and Chinese troops have rescued all of Northern Asia from the grip of Berlin is now ready for nation-wide distribution. Goldwyn announces itself as the distributor.

The Betzwood Film Corporation, owned by a group of Philadelphians known throughout the industry, is the producer of this new patriotic thriller, "For the Freedom of the East," presenting on the screen for the first time a Chinese star, Lady Tsen Mei, supported by a cast of well-known American players.

For months great secrecy has been observed at the Betzwood plant while Ira M. Lowry was making this new picture, and with his associates anticipating the day when one of the focal and vital fronts of the war would be maintained in Northern Asia, where American, Chinese and Japanese troops would close Russia's back door to the Hun.

Announcement is now made by the Betzwood company of the completion of its patriotic picture and in a few days prints will be shipped to all Goldwyn branches for immediate booking. It is anticipated by its owners that "For the Freedom of the East" will eclipse box-office records made during the last year by the company's other Ira M. Lowry production, "For the Freedom of the World," which is still one of the hits of the industry.

In brief, "For the Freedom of the East" tells the story of a lovely Chinese girl with an abiding faith in and love for Americans, a girl educated in an American mission and looking up to the people of the United States as the tried and true friends of her country. This role is played by Lady Tsen Mei.

A publicity campaign and advertising of great power and novelty will be inaugurated at once and maintained for months to add to the drawing power of this production for exhibitors. "For the Freedom of the East" will be released early in October.

Fox "Big Six" Uphold Their Big Names

THE Fox Film Corporation made a statement this week to the effect that the William Fox Big Six of 1918—a series of six former successes, which were revised, retitled and re-edited—has proved the most successful series of Fox pictures ever issued, both from the standpoint of exhibitor's box-office receipts and also from the acclaim with which they have been greeted in their new form by the public.

The Big Six of 1918 consist of three plays by Theda Bara—"A Fool There Was," "The Two Orphans" and "The Clemenceau Case"—and three plays by William Farnum, "The Plunderer," "The Bondman" and "A Soldier's Oath."

All six of these plays, when they were first issued, scored. They were at that time the best Fox plays from a box office standpoint that exhibitors had shown for a long time; in fact, these six plays, it could almost be said, laid the foundations for the fame of Theda Bara and William Farnum.

"When the Fox Film Corporation contemplated the issuing of these six big successes," said the Fox statement, "we instinctively turned to these plays, because they were our favorites. But we decided to make sure that our choice was correct. So we put it up to the exhibitors of the country, taking a poll of 15,000 theatre managers all over the United States. The plays chosen by these 15,000 men were the plays that were our own favorites.

"In releasing these plays again, however, we decided that they could be made even better than they were in their original form. Therefore, we went carefully ov the films, revised them, re-titled them, m them swifter, more finished and bett every way."

John Barrymore, Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex Are Three of the Famous Players-Lasky Stars to Be Presented in Pictures on That Company's New Program, Recently Announced

Paramount Films Kaiser Story

Is Travesty on the Many Pictures Already Screened—Elsie Ferguson in Midst of New Feature—Clark Story Finished

WORK on the second John Emerson-Anita Loos production for Paramount, in which Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex will again be co-starred, was begun last week at the Fifty-sixth Street studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The title of the new photoplay is "Gosh Darn the Kaiser," and it is a travesty on the many Kaiser plays that have lately been produced. It relates how Teddy Swift, a live young American soldier, played by Mr. Truex, saves his sweetheart, played by Miss Mason, and what happens to the Kaiser's dream of world domination.

Following the completion of the filming of Enrico Caruso's first Artcraft picture, "My Cousin," Director Edward Jose and his assistant, William J. Scully, have been busily engaged during the past week or ten days in cutting and assembling the film.

At Fort Lee, Director Emile Chautard and Assistant Director Al Lena are well into the production of Elsie Ferguson's new Artcraft picture, "Under the Greenwood Tree." Mr. Chautard is a staunch champion of realism in picture producing. When he needs pirates, burglars or barmaids in a picture he insists on getting the real thing. Extra persons dressed up in costumes hold no appeal for him.

Billie Burke is still at Lake Placid in the Adirondacks, where under the direction of John Stewart Robinson scenes are being made for her new Paramount picture, "The Make-Believe Wife." Plans for John Barrymore's second Paramount picture are now under way, and an early announcement concerning the production may be expected.

Marguerite Clark's new Paramount picture, "Three Men and a Girl," was finished at the Fifty-sixth Street studio under Marshall Neilan's direction the day before Miss Clark's marriage to Lieut. H. Palmerson Williams. In this picture Richard Barthelmess will be seen as Miss Clark's leading man, and the supporting cast includes Ida Darling, Percy Marmont, Jerome Patrick, Maggie Holloway Fisher, Charles Craig, Sydney D'Albrook, and Betty Bouton. Immediately following the completion of the picture Mr. Barthelmess left for Hollywood, Cal., where he will work as leading man for Dorothy Gish in her second Paramount picture.

Robertson-Cole Company Gets Johnson Series

World rights for Martin Johnson's series of pictorial adventures, "Among the Cannibal Isles of the South Pacific," has just been acquired by the Robertson-Cole Company. These scenes consist of 50,000 feet and were shown at the Rivoli theatre in New York City.

These scenes will be put out as a feature in legitimate houses at top prices for admission. The Robertson-Cole Company has also closed for foreign rights for "Intolerance" for Holland for $6,000, and $2,000 was said to have been received for "Intolerance" for Egypt. "A Daughter of the Gods" was also sold for Egypt and the Balkans.

Parts of Martin Johnson's scenics will be released as one-reel scenics, and Mr. Johnson is already planning another trip to the South Sea Islands for additional scenics to be released later.

Barriscale Print Reaches New York

A print of "The Heart of Rachel," Bessie Barriscale's Paralta Play to follow "The White Lie," has been received at the New York office and will be viewed by Paralta and Hodkinson officials soon.

Adapted from the book by Kathleen Norris, "The Heart of Rachel" is said to have offered excellent material for a picture, containing something more than merely a star part. Robert Brunton, manager of productions for Paralta Plays, is in New York and states this picture has exceeded their highest expectations for it.

Howard Hickman directed the picture, and the cast supporting Miss Barriscale consists of Herbert Heyes, Edward Coxen, Ella Hall, Gloria Hope, Herschall Mayall, Joseph J. Dowling, Grace Travers, Ben Alexander and Mary Jane Irving. "The Heart of Rachel" will be released October 14 by W. W. Hodkinson.

Tallulah Bankhead with Tom Moore

Carrying out its promise of a surprise in making public the name of Tom Moore's leading woman in his second Goldwyn starring vehicle, "Thirty a Week," Goldwyn announces the engagement in this capacity of Tallulah Bankhead, granddaughter of United States Senator John H. Bankhead of Alabama and daughter of Representative Bankhead, of the same state, both serving together in the same Congress. Senator Bankhead, who has been in Congress more than thirty-seven years, is the only Confederate veteran left in the Senate.

Tallulah Bankhead is a comparative newcomer in motion pictures, and Goldwyn believes that in her it has a genuine "find." In "Thirty a Week" she has the role of Cindy, with whom Tom Moore, as the thirty-a-week chauffeur of a disgracefully rich employer, falls in love with and marries. Cindy happens to be Lan's employer's daughter; but that only makes the more fun and drama for the picture.

Marguerite Clark Film September 15

Marguerite Clark's next appearance on the screen will be in "Out of a Clear Sky," which will be released on the Paramount schedule September 15.

The action starts in Belgium, Miss Clark having the role of a Belgian Countess who refuses to be used as a pawn of state to further the ambitions of her scheming uncle, who insists that she marry a German prince and thereby aid his political plans.

Mutual Appoints Oklahoma City Manager

L. L. Pennybaker has been appointed branch manager for Mutual at Oklahoma City, Okla. Mr. Pennybaker was formerly associated with Mutual as branch manager at Memphis, Tenn. Prior to that he conducted an independent exchange in Oklahoma City. On account of wide acquaintance in Oklahoma City and surrounding territory, Mr. Pennybaker should prove a valuable acquisition to the Mutual roster.

Thrills Are Promised in Large Numbers in the Vitagraph Film, "The Green God," in which Harry Morey Is Featured

World Engages Duprez as Photographer

World Pictures has engaged Charles J. Duprez, who for nine years has been with Brown Brothers, as publicity photographer. Mr. Duprez in his new capacity will have charge of the taking of unconventional photos of stars and studio scenes to be sent to fan publications, newspapers, etc. In a desultory way the World has been doing this work for some time, but, encouraged by the reception accorded the unusual character of pictures obtained, it will from now on lay special stress on this valuable and highly interesting accessory of publicity work.

"Young America" Completed by Spoor

"Young America," the new George K. Spoor feature taken from the Cohan and Harris stage play written by Fred Ballard, has been completed as far as the taking of scenes, both interior and exterior. The assembling of the picture is rapidly being completed and it will be ready for release in a short time.

The play promises to be unusually striking in photography as well as strong in plot and action. It touches on the spirit of young American manhood in time of a crisis to the nation.

"Perfect Thirty-Six" Coming from Goldwyn

Picture Mabel Normand as a boarding house slavey transformed, by a comedy of errors, into a travelling saleswoman for a fashionable corset house! She's said to be just that in "A Perfect 36," her newest Goldwyn comedy-drama. Tex Charwate, who wrote "Peck's Bad Girl," the subject of Mabel Normand's return to the field of broad comedy, is the author of "A Perfect 36." Charles Giblyn is directing.

Work on this new production has just been begun at the Fort Lee studios of Goldwyn.

Sylvia Breamer Is the Feminine Star of J. Stuart Blackton's "The Common Cause"

Canada Anticipating "The Common Cause"

ON his return to New York from Canada last week, a representative of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission under whose auspices J. Stuart Blackton is producing "The Common Cause," declared that all Canada is looking forward to the exhibition throughout the country of this special war production.

"'The Common Cause' is being widely heralded in Canada," he said, "and all the Canadian newspapers are directing attention to it. Its theme, which is the bringing together of all the allied nations, and its aim to aid recruiting in all branches of the service, have aroused the interest of editors, military associations and various public spirited men and organizations in Canada who are anticipating the film as a potent force in stimulating the work of winning the war and crushing Hun propaganda; at the same time providing the entertainment so essential for a people at war.

"Canadians are especially interested in this newest Blackton superfeature because 'The Battle Cry of Peace' which was a forerunner of the many war subjects since released was particularly successful in Canada. The war department there had printed and displayed posters urging the people to see 'The Battle Cry of Peace.'"

Herbert Rawlinson and Sylvia Breamer are featured in the all-star cast under Mr. Blackton's personal direction, with Charles and Violet Blackton in prominent roles. The scenario was adapted by Anthony Kelly from the play by J. Hartley Manners, Major Ian Hay Beith and Percival Knight, and it will be released through the Vitagraph.

Canada and Great Britain have reason for anticipating "The Common Cause" in the fact that many important army officials appear in various scenes. Among them will be recognized Colonel J. S. Dennis, Lieutenant Gitz-Rice, Lieutenant Creswell, Brigadier-General White, Colonel Hunter, Major Brooman-White, Major Thwaits, Lieutenant Arthur Gardner and Major Julian Smith.

General Takes Pride in O. Henry Reels

WITH the cumulative strength of more than a year's productions preceding them, the success of recent O. Henry releases on the Broadway Star Features program is thoroughly natural, reads a statement from General Film Company, which has been able to point to prominence given these short-length classics in such "big picture" strongholds as the Rivoli, New York. However, an excellence in production of even increasing quality is claimed for the O. Henry pictures as a contrast to the mistake sometimes made of slacking in production after a type of picture has made its hit.

The current series of O. Henry pictures has presented some especially high-grade stars in the leading roles. Agnes Ayres and Edward Earle, favorites with the public as feature stars, take the hero and heroine parts, and have blended so perfectly with the O. Henry atmosphere as to win credit equal to their best multiple-reel work. Miss Ayres has been in a considerable number of O. Henry productions during the last year, while Mr. Earle began to take part in them a little more recently, each being cast whenever the style of the story warranted. Of late there has been a block of stories distinctly suited to their abilities, and they have been featured in them only second to the great American short story writer's fame itself. These productions are being directed by Kenneth Webb, who is proving himself one of the most brilliant in the exclusive circle of O. Henry directors.

Success Series Claims Heavy Bookings

THE Success Series of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is being heavily booked, according to Walter E. Greene, Managing Director in charge of Distribution, the demand for these re-issues of famous masterpieces of the past having already resulted in the placing of orders by the branch offices for additional copies.

"While these extensive bookings are gratifying," said Mr. Greene, "they are not surprising when it is considered that the determination of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to launch this series was in acquiescence to the numerous demands of exhibitors throughout the country who had not forgotten the success attained in showing these subjects in the past.

"The theatre showing the Success Series will present to its patrons pictures of proven quality and drawing power, many of them the best efforts of our famous stars, and in the supporting casts will be found a number of actors who are themselves stars today. For the coming year, beginning September 1, fifty-two subjects have been carefully selected from a list of nearly four hundred, presenting an astounding array of stars and famous books and plays."

Frank Meyer, technical director of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, declares that the re-issues will prove a pleasant surprise to the exhibitors and the public. "The technical end of the industry has advanced tremendously since many of these pictures were made," says Mr. Meyer, "and the reconstruction and re-titling of these already famous productions and the addition of art titles and other little touches that mean so much to the modern picture have made a new dress for the Success Series that makes them compare favorably with our latest releases."

An entirely new department has been created for the reconstruction of the Success Series in charge of H. J. Streychmans, under the personal supervision of Mr. Meyer. The first release is "The Eagle's Mate," in which Mary Pickford scored a success, and this is followed by "Wildflower," in which Marguerite Clark made her debut to the picture public.

Universal Cites New Era in Advertising

SOME of the enterprising motion picture exhibitors over the country are adopting the policy of advertising their theatres with greater emphasis than the pictures they show. This system is considered a distinct revolt against methods that have grown to be almost a fetish.

Joe Brandt, assistant treasurer of the Universal, brought to New York after one of his recent trips the first news of the changing trend.

"Some of the most courageous exhibitors have adopted the example set by the Rialto, Strand and Rivoli theatres in New York," he said. "These men have dressed up and remodelled their playhouses and have established either orchestras or the best organs they can get, and are advertising the theatres in preference to the film star.

"The exhibitors argue that in emphasizing the title of the star they are building up a reputation for the star instead of building up a patronage for the theatre as a place of amusement; and they would get more lasting advantage for themselves by submerging the star a little in favor of their playhouse."

Mr. Brandt's information shows that better theatres are being built and better accommodations are being provided by those who put the theatres above the film star in importance. Samuel Zierler, manager of the New York exchange for Universal, reported this week that several new theatres of unusual splendor have sprung up in the remotest parts of this city.

"They're really two years ahead of their time, in point of high class," said Mr. Zierler. "Yet they are drawing capacity crowds."

The exchangeman asserted his belief that the era of big and fine film houses had come into being from the example set by such theatres as the Rialto, Rivoli and Strand on Broadway.

Following further the pace of these houses, many exhibitors are providing concerts of a high order in addition to film entertainment. These exhibitors, Mr. Brandt believes, are the ones who ought to advertise their theatres first and their pictures second.

Geraghty Joins Metro Coast Forces

Tom J. Geraghty, author of many motion picture successes, including a number of the earlier Drew comedies, has joined the scenario staff at Metro's West Coast studios in Hollywood. Geraghty already has turned in his first completed manuscript tentatively titled "Thirty Days," intended as a starring vehicle for May Allison. The continuity was done from an original story written by Luther A. Reed, who has since entered an officers' training school at Camp Lee, Va.

Coast Theatres Look Forward to Hayakawa

Pacific Coast exhibitors are said to be manifesting a personal interest in the release at an early date of the new productions in which Sessue Hayakawa, the well-known silent drama exponent, is to be starred.

Last week three exhibitors from San Francisco and one each from San Diego and Tucson visited the Hayakawa studio and saw "His Birthright" and "The Temple of Dusk," the first and second of the new pictures, run in the projection theatre.

Early this week two exhibitors from Portland and three from Seattle were the guests of the star.

World Changes Smith Story Title

World Pictures has changed the title of Hamilton Smith's story, "The Millionth Chance," to "Courage for Two." This change grew about through a letter addressed to the World Company from Arthur Somers Roche, the well-known novelist and magazine writer, who wrote that he had recently written a novel that bore for its title "The Millionth Chance." Mr. Roche said, "This novel depends greatly on the title, 'The Millionth Chance,' which is most apt and appropriate, and as you will suffer no loss by changing the title and it will be a great favor to me." The World wrote Mr. Roche it would be glad to oblige him by acceding to his wishes.

Triangle Finishes New Features

Four directors finished their pictures last week at the Culver City Studios, and two others will probably complete their work at the end of the present week. Two new pictures have been started, and it is quite possible that two more will be under way by the first of next week. Triangle's big drive in picture making is moving along without interruption, with several more surprises promised in the near future in the way of new stars and directors.

John Barrymore Is Back Again, in Paramount's "On the Quiet"

American-Russell Picture Ready for Screen

The first of the William Russell productions to be marketed through sales representatives of the American Film Company and sold direct to the exhibitors, is now ready for exhibition at the various Pathe exchanges throughout the country. It bears the title, "Hobbs in a Hurry," and is declared to be one of the most uproarious features in which William Russell has ever appeared.

The story has to do with the sale of a mine in Arizona and much of the action takes place aboard a private car of a New York millionaire, attached to the rear of a limited train west-bound from New York. Winifred Westover enacts the leading feminine role and Hayward Mack is seen in a dual role, appearing first as the one twin brother and then as the other, while the minor parts are assigned to players particularly chosen.

Famous Players Expects Big Send-Off

According to every indication at the Distribution headquarters of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in New York, the initial month of this organization's new year, starting September 1, will present a most pretentious beginning for the season of 1918-19. Following the announcement of the policies and plans concerning the activities of this company for the coming year, made two months ago, the exchanges as well as the New York offices have been extremely busy with arrangements involving thousands of new contracts with exhibitors for Paramount and Artcraft pictures.

World Buys Hill Story

Raymond C. Hill, of Brooklyn, has sold to World Pictures the picture rights to his melodramatic story, "The Far East."

The story of "The Far East" deals with the seventh assistant secretary of the American Embassy to China and has to do with his trip to the Far East, where he goes to assume his duties.

About New Pictures

Barbara Castleton is at work at World studio at Fort Lee on Gardner Hunting's story, "What Love Forgives." The picture is being directed by Perry Vekroff. Prominent in the cast are John Bowers, Muriel Ostriche and Johnnie Hines.

Dorothy Phillips, the emotional star who has starred in some of Universal's best productions, is featured in the Special Attraction entitled "The Talk of the Town," which will be released September 23.

Notable response is chronicled for "The Italian Battlefront" by General Film Company, which has the distribution of this Italian government fighting-line production in important territory.

In "Triple Trouble" the two-part Charlie Chaplin comedy produced by Essanay, the comic situations are said to add almost as much to the fun of the production as the droll humor of Chaplin himself.

When "The Eagle's Mate," the first of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's Success Series of re-issues, is released September 1, the public will probably be considerably interested in the fact that two members of the Pickford family appear in prominent roles in the picture.

The Hamilton Club, Chicago's G. O. P. organization, saw "A Hoosier Romance," the Selig-Mutual release, at a private screening, and in a letter to A. S. Kirkpatrick, assistant general manager of Mutual, Roderick Ross, chairman of the committee of the evening, expressed pleasure at the entertainment the production provided.

Elinor Field, in the character of Elinor Brown in the next Strand-Mutual comedy release, "Taking the Count," carries out that military slogan, "Treat 'em Rough," adopted by one of our famous regiments.

When "Kildare of Storm," Emily Stevens' next Metro feature, is released, some unique effects in motion picture photography are promised, the results of some of the "pet" notions of Director Harry L. Franklin. They have been obtained with the co-operation of Cameraman Arthur Martinelli.

A fashionable French gambling Casino will be shown in "Lady Frederick," Metro's screen version of W. Somerset Maugham's society drama, which will be issued as a multiple-reel screen romance starring Ethel Barrymore.

Alice Joyce has returned from Saugerties, N. Y., where she made some of the most dramatic of her scenes in her latest Blue Ribbon Feature, which is a picture version of O. Henry's famous yarn, "Brickdust Row."

All the hardships in store for a man who doesn't know how to work are revealed in the comedy, "Work or Fight," just made by the L-KO Company. It tells the story of a man rejected in the draft and unable to hold any job.

"A Hoosier Romance," the new Selig-Mutual production featuring Miss Colleen Moore, is a dramatization af a poem said by Mutual to be of world fame. The true spirit of James Whitcomb Riley's story is said to be preserved in the play.

Corinne Griffith, the Vitagraph star, is seen as a factory girl in the first part of the Blue Ribbon feature, "The Clutch of Circumstance," an engrossing film drama written by Leighton Graves Osmun and directed by Henry-Houry, which is scheduled for release August 26.

Probably the fewest number of scenes in which a popular and prominent artist of the screen has yet appeared are those played by the actor and producer, Tefft Johnson, in "The Panther Woman," the newest feature from the studios of Madame Olga Petrova.

To her devotion to out-of-door life may be partially due Miss Hammerstein's splendid work in the role she has in the new and first of the 1918-19 season features which is to be released by Pathe Exchange, Inc., the first week in September, entitled "Her Man."

Mary MacLaren, who has finished her vacation, is at work with an unusually strong supporting cast on the making of another Special Attraction. The forthcoming film is entitled "Vanity Pool." It is an adaptation from a novelette in Young's Magazine by Nalbro Bartley.

"The Cruise of the Make-Believes," the Paramount picture in which Lila Lee makes her screen debut, is announced as a fanciful story of present-day life that has been chosen because it gives such a splendid opportunity for the star to display her talents.

The Accuser of Sessue Hayakawa in His New Haworth-Mutual Picture, "His Birthright"

Hayakawa Films Establish Mutual Record

Advance bookings on the Hayakawa Specials, produced by Haworth Pictures Corporation and released through Mutual, are said to have established a record for production of this type released by Mutual.

More than five hundred theatres in the United States booked "His Birthright," the first production, released September 1, before pre-view, and the indications are that the bookings for the entire series will cover at least 2,500 of the theatres in the country.

More than fifty houses in Chicago have already booked the entire series of Hayakawa Specials, among them being the new Riviera, which will open the North Side theatre with "His Birthright"; the Woodlawn, the South Side house; the Ziegfeld, one of the Loop theatres located on Michigan Avenue; the Gold theatre, Central Park and others.

Adopts Slogan for "Pershing's Crusaders"

"For the honor and glory of Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Southern Idaho," is the slogan adopted by J. H. Ashby, manager of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit at Denver and Salt Lake City, in his campaign to secure 100 per cent bookings in "Pershing's Crusaders" for his territory.

When Manager Ashby learned that the United States Government, through the Division of Films, was going to present a "Victory Screen Pledge" to every exhibitor throughout the country who booked "Pershing's Crusaders," he then and there vowed that he would practically paper his territory with these pledges.

Red Cross Prints Busy

Exhibition of "The Historic Fourth of July in Paris," the patriotic American Red Cross picture distributed by General Film Company, is now going all over the country, and every print of the many available is fast being booked solidly.

Vitagraph Serials are Lauded

New York Exhibitor Declares They Changed His House from Lemon to a Turnaway Theatre—Schedule Well Ahead

A TRIBUTE was paid to Vitagraph serials and William Duncan, star of "The Fighting Trail," "Vengeance—and the Woman," and "A Fight for Millions," by a New York City exhibitor last week. He wrote that the Vitagraph serials had been the salvation of his house and that before he began to run them he was in very serious straits.

The writer of the letter is Harry Fogarty, proprietor of the Screen theatre, and his letter, which is only twenty-nine words long, pays high tribute to William Duncan and "A Fight for Millions," Vitagraph's latest serial. It reads:

"William Duncan, star in 'A Fight for Millions,' a sure fine winner. Made my house. One year ago house was a lemon. Now on Sunday I turn them away."

This is the shortest testimonial, probably, that Vitagraph or any other company ever received, but it speaks volumes for the company's serial product.

Vitagraph, during the last year, has brought its serial department up to the point where it is now on an equal footing with the feature production department in point of importance. Since last September the company has released four fifteen-episode serials and every one of them, judging from exhibitors' reports, has been a winner. High praise followed the run of "The Fighting Trail," and it was repeated on "Vengeance—and the Woman." William Duncan directed and starred in both of these. "The Woman in the Web," featuring Hedda Nova and J. Frank Glendon, still is scoring throughout the country, and

"A Fight for Millions," the latest in which Duncan is featured, is declared to be the greatest of them all.

Vitagraph now has two serial companies in operation all the time, both working at the company's Western studio. One of them, headed by Antonio Moreno and Carol Halloway, is now in the midst of "The Iron Test," a serial thriller with a circus background, and William Duncan, supported by an all-star cast including Edith Johnson and Joe Ryan, is soon to start on one bearing the title of "A Man of Might." Duncan, as usual, will direct himself and company, while Paul Hurst has the direction of "The Iron" in hand.

Vitagraph has its serial production so well in hand that the company has already laid out its dates for the serial releases a year hence.

Kennedy and Moore in "Kingdom of Youth"

A CAST of prominent screen players supports Madge Kennedy in her newest Goldwyn picture, "The Kingdom of Youth," by Charles A. Logue, this star's first production of Goldwyn's second year output.

Tom Moore is Madge Kennedy's leading man. This popular artist duplicates, it is said, in "The Kingdom of Youth" his performance with the same star in her picture, "The Danger Game." Moore has the role of Jimmy Betts.

Marie De Wolfe, prominently identified with many high class stage productions and equally well known for her work before the camera, makes her first appearance in Goldwyn Pictures. Five years' experience in stock companies and twelve years of work in stage productions fit her for the role she is called upon to portray in support of Madge Kennedy.

Another important part is in the hands of Lee Baker, long on the stage and screen as a portrayer of character roles. He, too, has always been entrusted with important parts on the speaking stage, and it has been the same since Baker made his advent before the camera four years ago. In "The Kingdom of Youth" he has the role of Count Luval.

Jennie Dickerson, remembered by New York's first nighters for her characterizations in stage productions, has the role of Aunt Sophronia. Miss Dickerson began her stage career in England and her work in grand dames roles won her marked praise from the critics.

"Fourth of July" Still Claims Much Interest

Pathe's "The Fourth of July in France," according to information received, continues to get good bookings and excellent notices.

Significant of the number of bookings is the fact that though the U. B. O. desired to book the picture solid over the entire circuit, it was impossible for Pathe to accommodate them, as the various exchanges had already planted it in every nook and corner of the field.

Among the exhibitors showing it are Turner and Dahnken. The Oakland, Sacramento, San Jose, Berkeley, Stockton, Richmond and Watsonville all played it with very good success. The Cortelyou theatre of San Francisco played it the entire week of August 11.

Metro Kaiser Film Smashes Through

"To Hell with the Kaiser," the Screen Classics super-feature, featuring Lawrence Grant with Olive Tell, continues its tour through the country in a continual patriotic drive, Mutual declares. This was the medium chosen by the New Orleans Lodge of Elks as the attraction for its benefit to raise money for the Washington Artillery Armory. In this connection it was shown at the Strand theatre, New Orleans, the week beginning August 14, by the six thousand Elks of New Orleans in co-operation with the Citizens' Committee, and the attraction not only "cleaned up" for the Armory Fund, but delighted the audiences who attended the performances at the Strand.

"To Hell with the Kaiser" has also been obtained for exhibition to the soldiers at Camp Jackson, Columbia, S. C., at the Liberty theatre, September 16 to 19 inclusive, in accordance with the request of Brigadier-General French, commanding general. The superfeature was recommended by the Intelligence Officer of the camp on account of its strong patriotic value.

Danford with General at Atlanta

Effective immediately, C. D. Danford takes charge of the Atlanta office of General Film Company as branch manager, according to a bulletin issued by the company. Mr. Danford is well known in Atlanta and the surrounding territory, being known to film people as a former exhibitor of motion pictures. He was more recently connected with the Paramount-Artcraft office in Atlanta in a responsible capacity.

Jewel Poster in Wisconsin Museum

C. E. Brown, chief of the Wisconsin Historical Museum, paid a tribute to the advertising on "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," recently, by obtaining a copy of one of the posters used for the film at the Whitehouse theatre, Milwaukee, and placing it on display in the museum. Mr. Brown declared the poster had high educational value.

Elsie Ferguson, Artcraft Star, in "The Heart of the Wilds"

Clara Kimball Young Changes Her Plans

Production plans for Clara Kimball Young's forthcoming Select Pictures have been slightly changed in regard to the order in which pictures of Miss Young's new Select Star Series will be produced, it was announced this week.

"Cheating Cheaters," a photoplay version of the stage play, which was announced as the production to follow "The Savage Woman," Miss Young's current picture, will not be the next attraction in which this star will be seen. Miss Young will make first "The Road Through the Dark," a picture based on the short story of the same name.

"Cheating Cheaters" has not been abandoned by Miss Young, as the play has been definitely purchased by her. In all probabilities "Cheating Cheaters" will follow the filming of "The Road Through the Dark." Both of these productions will be made in the West, at the Sunset Studio, Los Angeles.

Essanay Gives Food Trailers with Films

Essanay has made six food conservation pictures for the United States Government and is releasing them free in conjunction with its Broncho Billy pictures. The pictures were directed by Miss Eleanor Lee Wright, expert in domestic science, and show the making of various foods for the table. The necessary ingredients to be used are given in the subtitles, so that anyone seeing the pictures can make the table dainties. The pictures are issued to educate the public in the making of tasteful dishes in an economical manner, so as to save the material which the Government especially wishes conserved. Posters also are being given to all exhibitors using the pictures to advertise the film. The first release is August 16 and each week thereafter.

"Love's Law" Set for September 1

Gail Kane's newest picture, "Love's Law," will be released by the Mutual Film Corporation September 1. This is the first of the Gail Kane Productions specials. While it was finished before scheduled time it was due to the hard work of Miss Kane who spent many nights at the studio to retake some parts which she believed could be improved. Courtenay Foote is the leading man.

Hart Nears Finish of New Feature

William S. Hart is nearing the finish of his latest Artcraft picture, "The Border Wireless." It is declared that the action in this Thomas H. Ince production is greater than in almost any previous offering and that the characterization essayed by the virile star is distinct from anything else he has done. Wanda Hawley is leading woman.

Laemmle Sees Competition Ahead

Declares Exhibitors Are More Averse to Signing Long Contracts—Puts Greatest Efforts Into Each Picture

Mary MacLaren Is a Leading Player in Universal's Picture, "Bread"

"UNIVERSAL holds to the belief that the coming season is bound to be a big one, and that competition among producers will be keener than ever," said Carl Laemmle several days ago, discussing the results of recent trips he has made over the country.

"Exhibitors nowadays are becoming more and more averse to signing up long-time contracts with producers," he continued. "The films hereafter will have to stand or fall on their own individual merit."

"The Universal is meeting this condition by putting the greatest effort possible into the making of each picture. We intend that the productions shall be so strong that none will have to depend on previous contracts or the record of the company's past successes to make good."

Mr. Laemmle announced that Universal was devoting a large share of its attention this season to the production and exploitation of its Special Attractions. He declared that these pictures are proving and will continue to prove leaders among big films.

"Bread," the current film on the Special Attraction list, featuring Mary MacLaren, is being booked heavily. "Modern Love," featuring Mae Murray, is next on the list and also is drawing the interest of exhibitors.

Miss Murray plays the part of a young girl who experiences a brief and bitter adventure on the stage. Della Arnold (Mae Murray) nearly starves to death, attempting to avoid Julian Lawrence, a matinee idol, who has forced unworthy attentions on her. Through a letter from George Addison, a wealthy man about town, she obtains engagement as a model for the artist, Henderson. Lawrence spreads scandalous stories about the young woman, and she suffers the buffets of fate in an uphill fight. The film ends delightfully.

The next Special Attraction is "Talk of the Town," featuring Dorothy Phillips. The latter, who has achieved many laurels in the past as an emotional star, has big opportunities in this picture. "Talk of the Town" presents the spectacle of a man hiring a love vulture to pursue his wife so that she will tire of shadowy romance and return to him before it is too late. "Talk of the Town" is released September 23.

"Vanity Pool," with Mary MacLaren in the chief role, is next on the list. It is set for October 7.

"Three Mounted Men," in which Harry Carey is starred, and which is scheduled for October 21, is a rugged film of the West. Mr. Carey plays the part of a convict held unjustly in solitary confinement, then suddenly to bring the cause of his sufferings to justice. It is full of strong action.

Lillian Hall as "Beth" in Brady's "Little Women"

When William A. Brady's second independent production, a screen version of Louise M. Olcott's famous novel, "Little Women," is released early in the Fall, Lillian Hall, one of the screen's most accomplished ingenue types, will be seen in the role of Beth. Miss Hall is not as well known as some of the screen's ingenue types for it is only recently that she gave up work on the speaking stage to appear before the camera.

The role of Beth is one of the most important in "Little Women." Miss Hall was casted for the part because of her youth, her dramatic ability and experience and her ideal type. She has a wealth of curly blonde hair, is a mere child in stature, is vivacious and full of so-called dramatic "pep," and would, according to her director, Harley Knowles, be mistaken for the character of Beth, by the authoress, herself, if she were to see her. Miss Hall's last appearance on the screen before her role in "Little Women" was in Norma Talmadge's "The Safety Curtain."

It is said that a prominent director who has recently signified his intention of forming his own producing company, is considering starring Miss Hall.

One-Reelers Show Activities of Allied Forces in All Parts of World—To Be Issued on Weekly Basis

"THE FAR FLUNG BATTLE LINE" is the general title for a series of twelve one- reel pictures, presenting the activities of the armies of Great Britain and France in all quarters of the globe. These one-reel productions are the Official French and British war pictures, the films being taken by intrepid cameramen attached to the armies of our allies, and will be distributed by Pathe.

Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., in a statement said: "Pathe Exchange, Inc., considers itself most fortunate in being selected as a distributing medium of these most wonderful war pictures. They are not only certain to keep ablaze the fires of patriotism, but these one-reel productions present absolutely new and exclusive scenes of warfare and of the gigantic strides made by our brave allies in warfare against the enemy."

"All for Liberty" is the title of the pictures scheduled for release through the Pathe Exchange, Inc., on September 8. "All for Liberty" shows allied troops gathering in Paris for the celebration of the Fourteenth of July, Bastille Day.

"Crusaders of 1917" is the title of the production to be released on September 15. This picture presents British troops fighting for democracy in far-off Palestine.

On September 22 will be released the picture presenting French and American troops on furlough in France. The soldier boys are shown enjoying mountain trips by way of trolley and in other ways enjoying relaxation from arduous work on the firing lines.

"The Capture of Jerusalem" is the title of the picture in this series to be released on September 29.

On October 6 the French Colonial troops in war will be shown. On October 13 the activities of the Egyptian troops preparing to go to the battle front. On October 20 the Moroccan army. On October 27 the new inventions and forms of air power. On November 3, Polish troops in France. On November 10, British troops in Italy.

On November 17, the first pictures of the new war invention, flying ships, showing the latest and most marvelous engines of destruction.

It is announced that this series, "The Far Flung Battle Line," presents some of the most marvelous pictures of the war yet seen. There will be one-sheets on each subject, stock three-sheets and slides.

Bluebird Names Stars for Coming Season

BLUEBIRD announces this week schedule of features, and the particular stars to bee featured in rotation during the coming season. The productions are declared among the best that have appeared on the Bluebird program for a long time.

The official designation of stars is as follows: Ruth Clifford, Monroe Salisbury, Carmel Myers, Edith Roberts, Violet Mersereau and the star team, Juanita Hansen and Jack Mulhall.

Miss Clifford, whose second star film was "Fires of Youth," is at work on "The Bargain True," an original story by Nalbro Bartley, directed by Elsie Jane Wilson. Salisbury appears in the first picture set for September release. The latter is "That Devil, Bateese," a great story of the Canadian north woods. Following this he will be seen in "Hugon the Mighty."

Carmel Myers' first release is "The Borrowed Duchess," written by Perley Poore Sheehan. R. Sturge, formerly a Vitagraph director, is directing her.

Miss Roberts, the youngest of the stars, who appeared in "The Deciding Kiss," will appear in "A Billion in Beans." The story was written by John B. Clymer and is directed by Jack Dillon.

Miss Mersereau, well known for many successes, is at work on a picture the title of which has not yet been decided, directed by O. A. C. Lund.

Miss Hansen and Mr. Mulhall, as soon as they finish the Universal serial, "The Brass Bullet," will be starred in a series of five-reel Bluebird comedy dramas.

World Releases Number Many Complete Negatives

If World Pictures closes its Fort Lee studio at the present moment it would still be able to release a new picture every week until the first of next April. The World has twenty-seven completed negatives," made from novels and original scripts, in its vaults. It also has the raw film stock and chemicals with which to make prints of these negatives. In other words, if the Government should close up the making of new pictures for six months, or even a year, World exhibitors need have no fear of being forced to use re-issues, now and then in order to fill out—they would still be getting their weekly releases of original subjects from the World.

At the present time World production is going forward as rapidly as it has been going during the entire summer. By the time that snow begins to fly at Fort Lee the World will have a sufficient stock of completed negatives on hand to permit closing the studio for the entire winter.

Pathe Names Releases for September 1

Pathe claims a program of unusual interest for release the week beginning Sunday, September 1. The first of the series of two-reel pictures to be released under the general title, "The Far Flung Battle Line," will be released by the Pathe Exchanges, Sunday, September 1, and the title of the first production of the series is "Training of Britain's Land Cruisers."

The third episode of the latest and what many consider the best of Pathe serials, "Hands Up," will be released. The title of the third episode is "The Phantom and the Girl," produced by Astra.

"Two Scrambled" is the title of the Harold Lloyd comedy to be released. The Post Travel Series, No. 12, is entitled "After Twenty Years—Porto Rico," and presents interesting and odd scenes in this locality.

The Allies Official War Review, No. 10, continues the presentation of exclusive and sensational pictures along the firing line of the Great War.

Universal Focuses on Special Attractions

Universal is focusing much of its energy these days on its Special Attractions. "Bread," the production featuring Mary MacLaren, has procured, it is said, heavy booking, and interest is reported to be growing fast in the films of that series scheduled to follow.

The titles of the forthcoming Special Attractions are: "Modern Love," set for release September 9; "Talk of the Town," September 23; "Vanity Pool," October 7; "Three Mounted Men," October 21; "Danger—Go Slow," November 4; "Kiss or Kill," November 18; "Till We Meet Again," December 2; "The Big, Little Person," December 16, and "Boiling Over," December 30.

Features Ruth Clifford

"The Bargain True" will be Bluebird's release for October 7. It features Ruth Clifford, with a supporting cast including Edward Hearn, Harry V. Meter, Elizabeth Janes and Janet Sully.

Evelyn Nesbit, Engaged to Appear in William Fox Productions

General Names New Wolfville Release

Following "The Wooing of Riley" as the Wolfville Tale for the first part of September, another production of an Alfred Henry Lewis short story will be "The Heir of the Broken O." The Wolfville Tales are released by General Film Company on the Broadway Star Features program, each new Lewis subject alternating with a new O. Henry story.

So far there are a dozen of the Wolfville Tales of cowboy life released or scheduled, up to October 1. Featured players now working in the releases include Patricia Palmer, Carol Holloway, Bob Burns, George Holt, Kate Price, Otto Lederer, William Lester and other well-known West Coast people.

Ince Supplies Three for September Program

The September schedule of feature releases of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, impressive as it is in the aggregate, should prove especially attractive in that it contains three Paramount subjects from the studios of Thomas H. Ince, in which three of the most popular stars in filmdom will appear. These pictures are "Vive La France," released September 15. "The Law of the North" and "Coals of Fire," both of which will be released the 29th. Dorothy Dalton, Charles Ray and Enid Bennett are the respective stars.

How He Comes Back

Wallace Reid portrays the come-back of a "bum" in the Green Mountain lumber country in "The Source," his Paramount Picture released September 1. The story is said to be of the strong, swiftly moving king that gives Reid plenty of chance to portray both rapid-fire action and character development.

In the Cutting Room

The process of filming Metro's screen production of "Pals First" of which Harold Lockwood is the star, having been completed, Managing Director Edwin Carewe is now cutting and titling the picture. "Pals First" will be distributed under the banner of Screen Classics, Inc.

Program Glances

That "Till I Come Back to You," the latest De Mille Artcraft special production released August 26, is destined to be recorded as the best thing he has ever done is the confident assertion of those who witnessed the making of this story of the war at the Coast studios.

Florence Short, who is already popular among Metro audiences, is playing the important part of Mahaly in "Kildare of Storm," Emily Stevens' current starring photoplay by Eleanor Mercein Kelly, now being directed by Harry L. Franklin.

One of the most prosperous weeks ever experienced by the Los Angeles Kinema theatre has been that which signalized the western premiere of "We Can't Have Everything," Cecil B. De Mille's Artcraft special production, from Rupert Hughes' novel, the scenario by W. C. De Mille.

Lon Chaney, who is supporting Monroe Salisbury in his Bluebird production, "That Devil Bateese," is establishing a great record as a character actor. He has played every racial type almost, from Hindu to Hottentot.

May Allison, who is rounding out her first month in the Hollywood film colony, has started work on her second picture at Metro's Western studios. It is called "The Testing of Mildred Vane," and is responsible for the far-away look which has of late crept into the star's eyes. For it deals with—spiritualism!

The Helen Keller Company is now at work on a ten or twelve-reel production in which the producers aim to give to the screen something entirely new, their intentions being to show in the film a soul (symbolically) instead of heart interest. The first two or three weeks will require but four principals of the production, but a great number of extra players will be used later.

An order for making a series of two-reel Western subjects featuring Helen Gibson, who has been seen in scores of this type of films as well as railroad melodrama, was received this week at Universal City, and Harry Harvey will direct their production. Harvey has just finished the filming of "The Lion's Claw," the eighteen episode serial which stars Marie Walcamp.

"Lady Fredericks," the society comedy, by W. Somerset Maugham, has been secured for screen purposes by Metro Pictures Corporation from Mr. Maugham's American agents. Ethel Barrymore, who introduced the play at the Hudson theatre, New York, a few seasons ago, will also present it to the American public by way of the screen.

"The Yellow Dog" was given screen examination at Universal City theatre recently when a number of Los Angeles exhibitors were invited to view the film. As a propaganda picture, they believe this will have wonderful results, and a spirited booking for the subject is expected in the Los Angeles territory, if one may judge from the expressions of those who viewed the picture.

Recruiting scenes for J. Stuart Blackton's "The Common Cause" were actually staged on Fifth Avenue in front of the Public Library. The Government cooperated in allowing a real recruiting drive to take place at the time, in which a detachment of French sailors, the Canadian-Scottish pipe band, a company of Italian soldiers, British officers, and every branch of our service were represented.

Alice Brady, with her usual pep, is willing to work all night as well as all day, even in August. In a short time she will open in a new play of her father's called "Forever After," and will have to divide her time between the Cooper-Hewitts and the footlights.

Again the Delmar estate will furnish backgrounds for a picture. This time it is for Metros "Secret Springs," starring Olive Tell. Captain Delmar's spacious yacht, his collection of marbles, his stables, his swimming pool, his music room with its $150,000 organ, are all used.

Paul Everton has all too small a part in "Friend Husband," in the estimation of his admirers. But he makes of Rockcliffe Fellows' father, a person of whom one would like to see more. The impression which he gives of closely resembling Mr. Fellows is quite extraordinary.

Corinne Uzzell will have an important part in the next Gail Kane picture, and one in which she will have a chance to wear gorgeous costumes as only Miss Uzzell knows how to wear them.

Gail Kane, Starred in Mutual Film Productions

Five Metro Features in September

Five Metro productions headed by an equal number of stars, comprise this firm's contribution to screen attractions for the month of September. In addition to these, two de luxe Screen Classics, Inc., superfeatures will probably be released. In Metro's All-Star Series the stars represented in September releases will be Edith Storey, Ethel Barrymore, Emily Stevens, May Allison and Bert Lytell, appearing in the order named.

First on the list is "The Silent Woman," starring Edith Storey, to be released on Labor Day.

"Our Mrs. McChesney," with Ethel Barrymore as star, is scheduled for general release September 9. This feature had its premiers and pre-view at the Strand.

"Kildare of Storm," a screen romance of vitally dramatic features, comes next in the list of September attractions. Emily Stevens plays the star part in this picturization of Eleanor Mercein Kelly's novel.

May Allison is the star of "The Return of Mary," her first picture completed since her arrival in the California studio. "The Return of Mary" will be released in the All-Star Series, September 23.

A Bert Lytell feature, "Unexpected Places," completes Metro's list of regular releases for September. "Unexpected Places" is from the pen of Lieut. Frank R. Adams.

General Announces Oakdale Ideal Combination

In the distribution of the Oakdale Productions, what is described by General Film Company as an ideal combination of releases, has been developed. The increasing popularity of the Oakdale pictures is found to be stimulated by the timing of the releases, the consistent character of the stories, the appropriate number of subjects released, the distinct featuring of the little girl star in each production, and the series appeal made possible through the method of distribution.

The current Oakdale Production with Gloria Joy is the fourth of the series, "The Midnight Burglar." There are two September releases to complete the six. "Little Miss Grown-Up" and "Wanted, a Brother."

To Advertising Managers Of First Run Houses:

(An advertisement suggested by Wm. A. Johnston, of Motion Picture News.)

YOU—the Advertising Managers of the first run houses—have complained that picture producers do not furnish you with the right sort of press matter.

You have said that all, or most, of the stuff sent out in the form of ready-made publicity or advertising matter is amateurishly stereotyped, absurd and bombastic. You have asserted that it did not give you enough information on which to base your own ads.

Possibly you do not know (Mr. Johnston of the News did not know until this week) that for several months the Universal company has been distributing exactly the sort of matter you have been asking for. Mr. Johnston was somewhat amazed to learn that at least one producing company is "doing it in the right way—the way the exhibitors want it done."

Note this!

In advance of every picture released—whether it's a Universal Special Attraction, a Jewel, a Bluebird, or a picture distributed without any special brand name, the Universal has been furnishing the following matter to every exhibitor asking for it:

FIRST—A list of facts, without adjectives, giving the name of the star, the star's previous picture successes, the name of the director, the name of the scenario writer, the supporting cast, the locale and the time. No adjectives.

SECOND—A thumb-nail theme, telling the plot of the story in not more than ten lines of typewriting. No adjectives.

THIRD—The advertising punches. This is a list of the high spots in the picture, merely suggesting the various things that your advertisements can be hung on.

FOURTH—Suggestions for display lines. Under this heading we suggest from five to ten different display lines for ads or publicity matter. You may like some of them, or all of them, or none. They are intended as labor savers.

FIFTH—A herald synopsis. This is slightly longer than the thumb-nail theme mentioned above. It will do on your herald or your program, if you like. No adjectives.

SIXTH—An advertising synopsis. This is a little more in detail than the herald synopsis. No adjectives.

SEVENTH—Two or three advance notices which you may or may not like. If you like them, much trouble is spared you. If not, you can still write your own. They are boiled down, with the necessary blanks in which you can fill your theatre's name.

And now note this!

This matter has been painstakingly prepared by the ablest man we can get hold of; he is under instructions to forget he is working for us, and to act as your advertising man, not ours; he's supposed to tell you just what your own preview of the picture would tell you—and, furthermore, he doesn't work from a mere synopsis of the picture here in New York, but only from the finished picture and at our West Coast Studios.

All of this is in addition to the great volumes of press and advertising matter that we publish every week in The Moving Picture Weekly and the various trade papers. It is prepared by the best men we have been able to engage after years of experimenting.

We do not want to send this to you unless you care enough about it to ask for it. In such case we will send it to you without charge. You now receive so much matter that you probably throw most of it away without reading it. We don't want to have this happen to the matter described above.

WHAT WILL YOU DO ABOUT IT?

If you want this new kind of service tell the nearest Universal, Bluebird or Jewel exchange that you want to be put on the mailing list for our weekly "FACTS WITHOUT ADJECTIVES." The exchange man will forward your request to us and we will do the rest.

If this service isn't what you want; if there are any flaws in it, then surely, judging from your complaints, it's important enough for you to write us and tell us what's wrong.

Will you?

—nobody repeats an imitation—they repeat the Original

We frankly concede that some Exhibitors book imitations of "The KAISER, the Beast of Berlin". But—have you heard of any Exhibitor that repeated that imitation? And—if he didn't—why didn't he? Simply and solely because it wasn't worth it. And if it isn't worth repeating why show the imitation in the first place? There isn't a town in the world where "The KAISER, the Beast of Berlin," the Original and Only Artistic Triumph, won't repeat two, three and four times to big money—often, to a bigger net than the first time, because your advertising is bought and paid for. Hall Launches Fixed-Rate Plan

"Her Mistake," with Evelyn Nesbit, is First of the Twelve Productions of Coming Year—On Monthly Schedule

FRANK HALL has launched his new fixed-price releasing plan, in which he promises twelve big special productions this coming season at ten, twenty and thirty dollars per day, with the new Evelyn Nesbit production, "Her Mistake."

Under the name of Producers' Distributing Corporation the new Hall company is now fully organized and a large sales force under the supervision of Lynn S. Card is operating from the third floor of the Leavitt Building closing contracts with exhibitors for the complete year's output of twelve features.

The policy of the Producers' Distributing Corporation, announced in this publication several weeks ago, is unique in the annals of the picture distribution in that, no matter how successful from a box office standpoint the special productions acquired by the corporation may prove to be, the prices to the exhibitors are absolutely fixed at ten, twenty and thirty dollars. Also although a franchise holder signs for twelve pictures during the year he has the privilege of cancelling his contract with a two-picture notice. In addition to these advantages franchise holders are not expected to become stockholders in the new organization.

Announcing the Evelyn Nesbit production as his first picture, Frank Hall said: "If I can give my fellow exhibitors a thousand-dollar-a-week picture every month for thirty dollars a day, all the better. I have made a careful study of conditions during the past year with this move in mind. Confining my efforts to the buying and booking of big special production through my different companies in the past, I know that I can supply the theatres with the very best extra attractions the market affords at a thirty dollar top price and with no strings tied to the proposition. It stands to reason that every production will not be of Evelyn Nesbitt box office value. Some may fall below it and some may even surpass it. But don't forget that it is to my interest and the interest of every one concerned that the Producers' Distributing Corporation supply the very biggest attractions the market affords. The two-picture cancellation clause forces us to do our best while the money-making power of the first picture is gilt-edged security against loss on the part of the franchise holders."

Kenyon Increases Yearly Number of Films

BY a special arrangement entered into between Theodore C. Deitrich, president of De Luxe Pictures, Inc., and William L. Sherry, president of the William L. Sherry Service, eight Doris Kenyon features with Miss Kenyon at the head of her own company will be produced within the next year, beginning September 1. The original arrangement entered into between De Luxe Pictures, Inc., and the Sherry Service called for from four to six productions for the first year.

The success of the two first Doris Kenyon pictures, "The Street of Seven Stars," by Mary Roberts Rinehart, and "The Inn of the Blue Moon," by Louis Joseph Vance, resulted in a demand by exhibitors and motion picture patrons throughout the country for a larger number of Doris Kenyon features. To this end, Miss Kenyon will appear in eight additional productions during the year beginning September 1. They will be released through the Sherry Service upon specified dates so that exhibitors will be enabled to reserve space for them on their programs.

The same policy will be maintained in future as has marked the past productions by Miss Kenyon at the head of her own company. Clean, wholesome stories by famous authors produced upon elaborate scale will be the rule followed in every one of Miss Kenyon's pictures.

Letters of congratulation from exhibitors all over the country have been received upon Miss Kenyon's first pictures, with requests that an unlimited number of similar productions be provided. Miss Kenyon will start work next week on her next production, "Wild Honey," adapted by Louis Joseph Vance from the original story by Vingie E. Roe, which appeared in Pictorial Review.

Sherman Works on New United Feature

Word from Harry A. Sherman, just arrived in Los Angeles, announces commencement of work on the production of "Wolf Breed," from the story by Jackson Gregory, which is to constitute the second of the series of big Western features starring Dustin Farnum to be manufactured for exclusive showing in the houses comprising the circuit of United Picture Theatres of America. Reports on this story indicate that it contains the same action, the same climaxes that characterized Zane Grey's "The Light of Western Stars," the first of the Farnum-United productions.

Ford Makes More One-Reel Independents

Francis Ford has resumed the making of one-reel miniaturettes, a series of six to be offered for release on the independent market.

Director Ford is also working on five episodes of his serial, "The Silent Mystery," at one time. According to the members of Mr. Ford's company the director is always about six laps ahead of the rest of the troupe. Thus, frequently, when they are ready to make up for an Egyptian scene Mr. Ford will command—

"You will spend the rest of the afternoon in America," and a mad scramble into up-to-date wardrobe results. Mae Gaston, who is playing opposite Mr. Ford in this serial, says the episodes are like Burton Holmes' travelogues—they take one into many foreign locations.

W. H. Productions Releases Chaplin Film

W. H. Productions Co. released this week the Charlie Chaplin single-reel comedy entitled, "The Squarehead," former title being "Mabel's Married Life," which is the sixteenth subject in the series of 26 Charlie Chaplin one and two-reel comedies.

Practically the entire country has now been sold for this series of 26 Charlie Chaplin comedies. It is needless to say what a great attraction these Chaplin masterfilms continue to prove.

"Fatty's Suitless Day," formerly entitled "Fatty's Magic Pants," the third of the series of single-reel Fatty Arbuckle comedies, has also been released his week by W. H. Productions Co., it is announced.

National Plans Daring Super-Production

The next super-production which the National Film Corporation is contemplating, as a follow-up on "Tarzan of the Apes" and "The Romance of Tarzan," promises to be one of the most sensational and daring ever screened. Mystery shrouds the plans for the production, "Smiling Bill" Parsons, president of the corporation, refusing to even give out its name.

Ernest Gagnon Wed

Ernest Gagnon, who has taken offices at 130 West Forty-sixth street, to exploit productions of California Motion Picture Enterprises, was married on August 22, the bride being Miss Evelyn Conner, of St. Louis. Mrs. Conner was matron to her daughter, while Tom Bedding was best man.

Mr. Gagnon is president of the company mentioned above.

Sales Director J. L. Kempner, of "The Manx-Man" company, is anxious to have recorded the fact that the Hall Caine film is not a propaganda subject, although having official sanction and calling for strong publicity along propaganda lines.

"It is simply a thrilling story that is not linked to any cause," states Mr. Kempner, "although we have found British-Canadian societies in many parts of the country who were glad to boost it along as a subject that brought their mother country just a bit closer to the heart of America.

"Our special representatives, operating from the Goldwyn offices, have made an effort to link the publicity accruing from such boosting to the theatres showing 'Manx-Man.' This has led to an impression on the part of theatres who haven't had the picture that it was a strictly propaganda film. The fact that many players in the picture are now in the fighting line in France, and we have featured it, has strengthened this impression. The picture, as a matter of fact, follows the original Hall Caine story in every detail, and there is naught of propaganda in that story."

Hall Enthuses Over "Sins of Kaiser"

Frank G. Hall is said to be enthusiastic about a coming Producers' Distributing Corporation feature entitled "Sins of the Kaiser." After a private showing of the picture, which has now reached the cutting and titling stage of production, Mr. Hall predicted that it would prove to be the biggest money-maker of any picture dealing with the secret activities of the Beast of Berlin and his conscienceless agents.

Whether "Sins of the Kaiser" will be the second or third Producers' Distributing Corporation release will be decided in a few days.

Arline Pretty in First Selig Star Series

Following the announcement last week that Arline Pretty, former Vitagraph and Artcraft star, is to return to the screen in a series of eight special photoplays, it became known that six of this number are to be produced as part of a series of twelve by Colonel William N. Selig, in association with E. Lanning Masters and Sidney Garrett, President of J. Frank Brockliss Company.

The name of the featured star to be presented in the remaining six of the series of twelve is to be announced within the next few days. This star is one of the best known of the younger players who have come to the front within the last year. She will be under the direct management of Sidney Garrett, who will collaborate with Colonel Selig in the presentation of her pictures.

The twelve pictures are to be known as the Selig Star Series and will mark renewed activity on the part of this widely known producer upon a scale larger and more ambitious than the many achievements which are already to his credit.

Possessed of the largest studios in Los Angeles, with another mammoth plant in Chicago, and having assembled what is declared by many producing executives to be the most remarkable library of stories ever collected for either the stage or screen, Colonel Selig is in a happy position to do big things during the next year.

Colonel Selig, who is responsible for the success of a large number of the best known stars of the screen of the past five years, announces that his new series will overshadow in merit any of his past achievements.

Cromelin Awaits Welcome of English Films

ACCORDING to a statement this week it is the belief of President Paul H. Cromelin of Inter-Ocean Film that English and French photoplays really worth while will find a different reception from the American public than has heretofore been the case. Mr. Cromelin feels that the millions of "letters home" from the American millions in France has created a new, direct interest in the lands the latter have adopted, at least temporarily.

"If there is one letter that finds first welcome in American households it is the one from England or France," said Mr. Cromelin. "It is the letter from the boy of the family who is now 'Over There' training for, or participating in, the great struggle for human freedom. There should be magic for that household in the very invitation to view the things their boy sees. I am sure all that American exhibitors have to do to put Franco-British films over is to advertise the seat of production enough."

President Cromelin states that dramatic features from "Over There" should come as "dessert" on the bill of fare of American official war films being served in the picture houses of the country. Audiences will like the war movies better, in Mr. Cromelin's opinion, for the change to films that, while still from the favored locales, are of the straight story type. The Inter-Ocean announces the placement of "Inside the Lines," featuring Lewis S. Stone in England, France, Spain, Italy, Mexico, Chile, Brazil, India, Straits Settlements, Dutch East Indies and South Africa.

Victory in Bronx Opens

An event of double interest to Bronx theatregoers is contained in the announcement that David V. Picker will open the new Victory theatre, 156th Street and Third Avenue, on August 31, and that the attraction for the first week will be "Ashes of Love," the latest picture written and directed by Ivan Abramson for the Graphic Film Corporation.

B. A. Rolfe, Arthur B. Reeve, Burton King and Harry Grossman Appear to Have Struck a Snag in the Houdini Serial, But Reports Smash That Theory to Pieces

Bruce Heads Eastward With New Scenics

THE ever-growing circle of purchasers of Bruce Scenics of Adventure in the Northwest is keenly interested in the results of Robert C. Bruce's current picture-taking and the news from the Educational that Mr. Bruce will come East shortly with a new bunch of Scenics. The reports to the Educational are that he has obtained some splendid novelties in photography of natural wonders and has found a number of congenial themes for his peculiar faculties of observation and humor.

The Far Western Nature director originated the type of Scenic that bears his name. Its success is testified to by the imitators of his work now springing up. But the creator of an art keeps several jumps ahead of the copyists, and in this new series it is promised that Bruce will have a lot of new wrinkles that his imitators haven't even thought of.

Not only in the East but also on the Pacific Coast, the director's home land, are the Bruce Scenics coming into wide popularity. The bookings at the three Educational Exchanges in San Francisco, Seattle and Los Angeles have practically doubled within the last four months. E. J. Myrick, manager of the Liberty theatre, Portland, Ore., has wired to E. W. Hammons, the vice-president and general manager of the Educational, as follows:

"Have just finished running Robert C. Bruce's 'The Ridge Roamers' and 'The World of Dreams.' Both of these are positively the most wonderful pictures I have ever seen."

Both in Portland and Seattle the runs of the Bruce Scenics have been frequently extended. Managers who had booked them for a day insisted on keeping them a half week. Those who had booked them for a half week finished out the week with them and in one instance a half week run was prolonged to ten days. Other leading theatres report long runs also.

"My Lady's Garter" Purchased by Tourneur

Maurice Tourneur Productions announces the purchase of the photoplay rights to the late Jacques Futrelle famous novel "My Lady's Garter," which enjoyed a phenomenal run of popularity when it was brought out several seasons ago. In the Saturday Evening Post it appeared in serial form and created a record and was published in book form later.

The story has many unusual twists in construction. It will give Mr. Tourneur many opportunities to work out surprises and novel effects, and he promises an unusual cast in this production. The picture will be distributed in the open market, as all the offerings of the Maurice Tourneur Productions are being placed through Hiller & Wilk, Inc.

In commenting on the purchase Mr. Tourneur said: "We had to pay the largest price yet to secure the rights to this very popular novel, but the scarcity of high-grade material is so evident and pressing that producers are competing against each other, with the results that material like 'My Lady's Garter' brings prices that are tenfold greater than they were two years ago."

Garfield Handles "Five Nights" in Four States

"Five Nights," adapted from the book by Victoria Cross, has been purchased by Herman Garfield of Cleveland, for distribution in Ohio, Michigan, Kentucky and Indiana. Garfield handled "The Submarine Eye" for the same territory with great success, but he expects to exceed his business on the "Submarine Eye" with "Five Nights."

"The Submarine Eye" is still booking strong through the Central States. While most of these bookings are in the smaller towns, Mr. Garfield has under consideration several large contracts for rebookings on the Williamson undersea spectacle.

United Reports Growth in Membership

The announcement that United Picture Theatres of America had already begun active work in the assembling of a program of superfeatures for weekly release and that the future appearances of stars of the calibre of Dustin Farnum and Kitty Gordon would be made exclusively in houses comprising United's co-operative circuit has brought with it a rush of applications for membership in the movement, it is said. Those familiar with the statistics of the growth of the circuit freely predict that the last few days with the first fortnight in September would about double the strength of United's membership as it stood at the moment of the appearance of the announcement of the first picture obtained. This estimate was based on the growing momentum already felt and takes no account of the increase in applications that may result from the publication of future announcements of the acquisition of further stars for the circuit.

Loew Holds Producers' Contract

Among the theatre owners who have taken advantage of the Producers' Distributing Corporation franchise, to make sure of the twelve big special productions promised by Frank Hall during the coming year, is Marcus Loew, who holds a contract with the new organization entitling him to one picture with advertising possibilities each month.

The Loew application for a franchise was among the first to be filed.

"Her Mistake" is now ready for the screen and will be released at an early date. Meanwhile Mr. Hall is considering the relative merits of several other features with a view to announcing as his second picture an extra attraction.

Claire Whitney Returns from Ohio Vacation

Miss Claire Whitney, after finishing her work in "Ruling Passions," written and directed by Abraham S. Schomer, utilized her vacation time spent in Ohio by personal work in combating the Sunday closing propaganda promoted by enemies of the theatres and other clean amusement enterprises. Miss Whitney is now back again in New York, and when "Ruling Passions" is presented she will personally deliver a recitative indicating the theme upon which the plot was founded.

Gaumont Closes Serial Deal for Canada

The Gaumont Company announces that contracts have been signed this week for the handling of its new ten-episode photo-serial "The Hand of Vengeance" in the Dominion of Canada by Regal Films, Limited, of Toronto, and in Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, south of Montgomery, and the western part of Florida by Josiah Pearce and Sons, of New Orleans, La.

Jewel Carmen, Who Is to Be Starred in a Frank A. Keeney Picture

Rialto De Luxe Films "Upstairs and Down"

Rialto De Luxe Productions announce the purchase of a second Oliver Morosco Broadway stage success in their third picture, "Upstairs and Down," which is now in preparation.

Grace Valentine will be the featured star in "Upstairs and Down," a vehicle said to be eminently suited to her dramatic ability. The play is by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, the popular authors of "Lombardi, Ltd., "The Great Lover," and other plays. Permanent arrangements have been made for distribution through the George Kleine System in the United States and Canada, and for all foreign countries through the Piedmont Pictures Corporation.

Mary Boland and Lucy Cotton with Screencraft

Leading roles in the first Screencraft Pictures, Inc., production will be in the hands of Mary Boland and Lucy Cotton, both of whom have enjoyed a wide stage exeperience and some filming also. The story is by Edith Barnard Delano, with Frank Reicher as director. Miss Eva Unsell wrote the screen version, which is taken from "Flaming Ramparts," published in Harper's Magazine.

Harris Gordon and Raymond Bloomer will appear in the leading male roles and Ira Schwarz will do the camera work. Messrs. Fleckles and Weinberg announce that they will start filming this first production at the Thanhouser studios in New Rochelle next Monday.

Leo Pierson with Billie Rhodes

Billie Rhodes, the new National Film Corporation star, who is being featured in five-reel productions, has as her leading man in her first picture, "The Girl of My Dreams," Leo Pierson, well-known juvenile. Lamar Johnstone is playing the heavy and Jack MacDonald the character lead.

"Mickey" Elaborately Exploited

W. H. Productions Co. Inaugurating Comprehensive Advertising Campaign to Bring "Mickey" Prominently Before Everybody Everywhere

W. H. PRODUCTIONS COMPANY is launching an unusually large cooperative campaign on "Mickey," and in addition to trade paper advertising music dealers and five-and-ten-cent stores are exploiting the song and thus incidentally the film.

With piano rolls, dance records and song records to augment this Mack Sennet photoplay, and with vaudeville artists singing the song, W. H. Productions Company predicts a tremendous demand to witness the picture.

The Columbia Graphophone Company is making the dance record played by the Earle Fuller Jazz Band of Rectors, while the song record is being made by the Victor Talking Machine Company. The Vocalian Company is making a quartette song record and the Aeolian Company is turning out the piano roll. Harry Fox, well-known vaudeville artist, featured the song "Mickey" at the Tivoli in San Francisco with the chorus slide.

Window displays of the song will be promoted when the photoplay is in the town and every attempt will be made to make "Mickey" a household word.

A 24-page campaign book in colors is also being prepared on this production to cover every angle of the campaign on "Mickey," portions of which are devoted to the humor, the pathos, the adventure and the love, other portions to the advertising matter, posters, heralds, slides, press stories, newspaper advertisements, etc., and several pages to special exploitation for exhibitors.

Special service campaigns will also be run from time to time in the trade papers when the picture is released in the large first-run theatres throughout the country so that the exhibitors in every section may know how this production is being put over.

"This campaign was an entirely novel departure from the ordinary course of publicity for a big production," said an official of the W. H. Productions Company, "and the ordinary course of publicity for a big production is a rapid wave of publicity and advertising for several weeks, climaxed with the release of the picture—a sensational swirl, and the punch.

"'Mickey,' however, is, we feel, a universal picture that is destined to live as long as the classics, and this campaign is building the solid foundation on which it will stand.

"Unless it is a remarkably unusual production, it is a risky thing to give a feature a great deal of publicity for any great length of time prior to its release. Film men begin to ask why the picture is not being released, what is the matter with it? If the publicity of itself is not of the most thoughtful, or if the advertising has not the confident and genuine ring, the suspense is broken with distrust of the value of the picture altogether."

Gaumont Names Exchanges Handling Serial

CONTRACTS have been signed, Gaumont announces, which will insure that the new serial which the Gaumont Company is releasing, "The Hand of Vengeance," will be handled only by the best states-right distributors.

The exhibitors who have made inquiries are referred to the following independent exchanges, where they can now see the serial:

Globe Feature Film Corporation, Boston, Mass., New England States.

First National Exhibitors' Exchange, Pittsburgh, Pa., Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

Super-Film Attractions, Inc., Washington, D. C., Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and District of Columbia.

Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Chicago, Ill., Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and North and South Dakota.

All Star Features Distributors, Inc., San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal., California, Nevada and Arizona.

Hodupp-Towne Photoplay Co., St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo., Missouri and Kansas.

Specialty Film Co., Inc., Dallas, Tex., Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Josiah Pearce & Sons, New Orleans, La., Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, south of Montgomery, and western Florida.

Savini Films, Inc., Atlanta, Ga., Georgia, Tennessee, Northern Alabama, Eastern Florida and North and South Carolina.

Regal Films, Ltd., Toronto, Can., the Dominion of Canada.

W. H. Productions Company's Second Barriscale

W. H. Productions Co. announces the second Bessie Barriscale re-issue, entitled "The Straight Road," formerly entitled "The Painted Soul." Charles Ray is also featured. This is the second of five productions secured by this company, the first being "Satan's Pawn," re-issued several weeks ago, but with some territories still open.

"Ashes of Love" Early in September

With James K. Hackett, Effie Shannon and Mabel Julienne Scott in the leading roles, and Ruby de Remer, Paula Shay, Hugh Thompson, William Davidson, Dora Mills Adams, Theas Talbot and William Bechtel as associate players, "Ashes of Love," the new Ivan Abramson production, made for the Graphic Film Corporation, is scheduled for release early in September.

Affiliated Distributors Selecting First Film

Executives of the Affiliated Distributors' Corporation have been conferring daily during the past week preparatory to putting into physical operation the co-operative booking plan inaugurated by them, and a production which has been many months in the making and which is regarded as one of the motion picture plums of the year, and said to be one that most of the largest distributing and releasing companies have been bidding for, may be acquired.

The acquisition of this feature by the Affiliated should be indicative of the buying strength of the organization, and also of their intentions to make good their promises to the exhibitors who have allied themselves on a co-operative basis with the Affiliated Distributors' Corporation.

The coming week may mark the actual advent of the Affiliated in the field as a motion picture releasing organization and the National Directors from the various Affiliated Units who attended the conferences report that the deck is all clear for action.

Carleton Productions Lays Its Plans

"Mother, I Need You" has been announced as the first production of Lloyd Carleton Productions, a Los Angeles company which promises at least one other production before New Year's and has plans for a busy 1919. The picture is founded, the announcement says, upon a story by Wycliffe Hill which deals with the heritage of Eve and sounding a clarion call to mothers who, overburdened by war, welfare and household work, may have been blind to daughters' needs.

Enid Markey has the star role, supported by Edward Coxen and a strong company of players cast to type. Lloyd Carleton himself edited every foot of the film to insure a picture of perfect tempo and the producers claim in "Mother, I Need You" a master work in film craft that will win a world audience.

Baird Campaign Brings Good Results

The combined campaign which was conducted by Miss Leah Baird and Sidney Garrett, president of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., regarding the title of the serial photoplay in which she is being starred, produced many answers, it is said.

In fact, scores of letters from all over the world are still arriving daily. As many are in foreign languages the task of Miss Baird is assuming herculean proportions. In order not to slight any of the faraway contributors to the contest who likewise make many other inquiries concerning the star Mr. Garrett has engaged Senor Ch. Ramirez to read and act as interpreter of all missives received in strange languages. Senor Ramirez is proficient in reading and writing seven different languages and can make himself understood in as many more different dialects. With his assistance Miss Baird is answering every communication received.

"Ford Weekly" to Help in Propaganda Campaign

After circulating thoroughly in American theatres the Ford Weekly will donate certain essential scenes of each reel to the United States Government Committee on Public Information for propaganda work in foreign countries, according to Simeon B. Greiver of the Greiver Distributing Corporation, New York City, who has control of the national distribution.

To expedite circulation, this Company is arranging for distribution of the Ford Weekly through independent exchanges throughout the country. The Weekly is furnished gratis to the exhibitor, who is only expected to pay the express charges to and from the exchanges.

Mitchell "Autos" for Rest

Editor Pell Mitchell, of the Gaumont News and Graphic, is taking his first vacation in nearly two years and is "autoing" through New England.

United Opens Cleveland Office

During the week another branch office of United Picture Theatres of America was opened in Cleveland, Ohio. C. A. Meade is to be in charge.

Ira Aronson, who had already made an enviable record with United during the period of its organization, took charge of the Pittsburgh office during the week.

Theodore A. Liebler, Jr., head of United's department of advertising and publicity left Friday to join the colors. His successor had not been appointed at the moment of going to press.

Rolfe Signs Edna Britton as Vamp

When B. A. Rolfe, president of the Rolfe Productions, Inc., was casting about for a new "vamp," he remembered Edna Britton, who formerly played in one of his many vaudeville attractions.

Contrary to all precedents set and established for "vamps," Miss Britton is a blonde. She has had an extended stage experience and Mr. Rolfe has given her an important part in his Great Houdini Serial.

Betty Howe Undergoes an Operation

Betty Howe, former Vitagraph and International Film star, was operated on last week at Alston's Private Hospital, following a sudden illness during the final scenes of a picture being made by the Western Photoplay Company with Miss Howe as star. It is said that Miss Howe will not be able to resume her motion picture work for several weeks.

Kenyon Chooses Cast for New Film

Doris Kenyon is now selecting the cast for her third production, "Wild Honey," which will be produced by her own company, De Luxe Pictures, Inc. Work on the new feature will be started next week.

"Wild Honey" was picturized by Louis Joseph Vance from the original story by Vingie E. Roe.

Rifkin Buys "Who's Afraid of the Hun?"

In addition to the buyers who have purchased the two-reel Exclusive Features, Inc., picture, "Who's Afraid of the Hun?" the company has closed with H. Rifkin, of the Eastern Feature Film Company, Boston, for the New England States, and with Frank Gerson of New York City for Northern New Jersey.

Beban Uses Christie Stage

George Beban has been using one of the stages at the Christie studio for the making of a propaganda picture. Mr. Christie loaned Ethel Lynne to Mr. Beban, when for the first time the opportunity of playing an Italian girl was the lot of Miss Lynne.

Suggestions on Famous Players-Lasky Reissues for September--Mary Pickford in "Eagle's Mate," Marguerite Clark in "Wildflower," "The Girl of the Golden West," Pauline Frederick in "Zaza," and Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen."

BEGINNING September first and released for the weeks starting with each of the five Sundays in September, Famous Players-Lasky announces the initial five of its group of fifty-two Success Pictures which will be shown during the season of 1918-1919.

These fifty-two pictures have been selected as representing the very best product since the start of feature picture production and the exhibitors who show these pictures are urged to exploit them as the hundred per cent product of the industry. This means that you are to put the great stress on the fact that these are re-issues and that they have been re-issued to meet the demands of those who failed to see them and those who want to see them again on account of the great appeal that they carried with their orginal release.

According to the arrangements made by Famous Players-Lasky the exhibitor can book these pictures as an entire series of fifty-two, or through the groups of star re-issues, with the special forming a separate class. From a survey of the bookings received Famous Players-Lasky reports that over 60 per cent of those taking these pictures have booked the entire series, or one a week for the entire year. For that reason the suggestion for the exploitation of the pictures will follow that general line.

The pictures which will be released during September are:

Sept. 1—Mary Pickford in "The Eagle's Mate."
Sept. 8—Marguerite Clark in "Wildflower."
Sept. 15—"The Girl of the Golden West" (Special).
Sept. 22—Pauline Frederick in "Zaza."
Sept. 29—Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen."

Each one of these pictures has a special and a strong appeal to put before the public, but on account of the booking arrangements and on account of the special manner in which they should be exploited some of the principles suggested here in the issue of June 29 should be recalled. And whether the exhibitor has booked merely the re-issues made by a single star or the entire series an effort should be made to couple up all of the pictures that are booked and to put them over on their own merits, and each one carrying the pulling power of the succeeding picture, as the real SUCCESSES.

There isn't the slightest doubt that Famous Players-Lasky has set about the selection of these fifty-two pictures as representing the best of its product of the past. Many of these productions are household words wherever the motion picture is known. Thousands saw them when they were first released and these thousands will not only be boosters for your general patronage but a great share of these thousands will want to see them again. And there are hundreds of thousands that have become motion picture patrons when these productions were apparently "past and gone" and these are the ones to whom you want to make your strongest appeal.

With many exhibitors the temptation is going to be strong to present these productons as new pictures. Possibly in some cases the showman may be led into the policy of booking these as opposition to current releases of the same stars. Such a policy will prove mighty bad business, for the exhibitor will be ignoring the chief selling argument that he has. There has never been a chance for franker, more straight-forward and truer exploitation than is offered here. You don't need exaggeration, and deception will be your own robber. We believe in truth in all exploitation, but here is a case when truth is made a necessity, because it is going to bring you more money than any possible form of camouflage.

When the original announcement of the Success Series appeared one of the recommendations that we made to you was to advertise the fact that you had booked this series of pictures. Naturally the form that your announcement will take will depend on the question whether you have contracted for the entire fifty-two or whether you have merely selected the works of certain stars of the Special list. But, in any case, and even with the time being short, we strongly recommend devoting at least one of your newspaper advertisements, and a liberal one, to calling attention that there has been a great demand to see these classics of the screen and that you have arranged to show them to give those who saw them before a chance for another treat and to supply those who failed to see them with a thus far missed opportunity.

We would recommend that this display contain the name of the stars and the title of each one of these Success Pictures that you have booked, and that your general selling argument should be that you are presenting a review of the best in past photoplay art whose appeal is emphasized by the developed desire of today. After this original announcement devote certain days of the week or month to the time that you will present these Success Pictures and keep the announcements properly displayed in your lobby, always being sure that the current Success Picture and the next one that you will show are doubled up, through announcements in your newspaper advertising, in your program and on the screen.

Right here is a point that may be profitably borne in mind. Too many exhibitors are constantly yielding to the temptation or the suggestion to announce each new release of the various stars as the "greatest" production in his or her career. In this case you merely have to refer to the charm of the production and tell of the demand for its presentation again on the part of those who once saw it and those who have heard others tell how they enjoyed it. The point that makes this form of exploitation so easy and so sure of success is that either all of the stars are known to your every patron or that in case of the Specials, the plays or the books from which they were taken are literally household words.

Base your sales argument on the appeal of the picture, but this is a point that should be made incidental to the fact that it is one of the greatest pictures that has been made. In one of its advertisements appearing in this issue Famous Players-Paramount suggests as one of its sales lines: "A Picture That You Have Never Seen is as New as Any Book that You Have Never Read." All of which is very true, but in this connection you want to create the same desire to see the picture that any one who has never read a famous novel feels until that book has been read. And certainly, you as a bookseller would not advertise copies of "Ivanhoe" in the same spirit as one of the untried novels of the day.

Keep this SUCCESS appeal strongly behind every one of your productions and never let the thought be lost. Never count on your public remembering that the picture is one of the group, but drive the fact home with each production. Yes, there are special sales talks on each picture and these we are going to point out to you, but there should be no reason why the basic idea should ever be sacrificed.

In the advertising pages that are reproduced here Famous Players-Lasky has prepared sales arguments on each picture for you to use to the exhibitor. In case of the star pictures we would advise that the picture of the star be always played up, using a stock cut if special half tones are too expensive for you. In case of the specials the name of the picture itself is the thing to make the most prominent in your advertising.

In addition to this suggested advertising appearing here and complete plan books on each production, Famous Players-Lasky supplies the following:

PAPER:—One 1-sheet; one 3-sheet; one 6-sheet.
PHOTOS:—Set of black and white (8 in set); sepia photos 11 x 14 (8 in set); sepia photos 22 x 28 (1).
PUB. PHOTOS:—Cuts and mats of production, 1 single-column, 1 double-column, 1 triple-column. Stock cuts and mats of stills (always in exchange)—5 single-column, three double-column, two triple-column. Rotogravure—1-sheet (1). Ad layouts and mats—One single-column and one double-column; (1) slide; (1) music cues.

A Paramount Picture

A Picture You Have Never Seen Is As New As Any Book You Have Never Read

WHEN you go into a phonograph store to buy a record by Caruso you don't always ask for a recent one. You want one you never heard. It's Caruso's name that counts.

Or when you buy a volume of Mark Twain. You forget that the book was written years ago. It's Mark Twain's work, and you have never read it. That's enough!

"The Eagle's Mate" is a masterpiece.

It's a Mary Pickford picture—one of the pictures that made her the wonderful star she is today—and thousands of people have never seen it. Are you one? Then see it now!

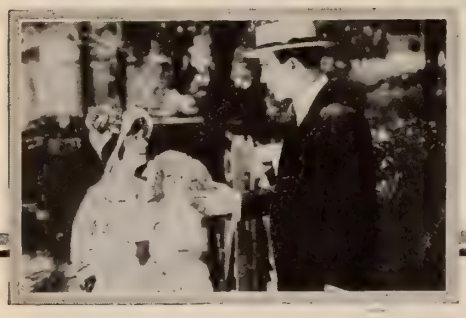
Next Success Picture, The Hundred Per Cent Production—September 29—Geraldine Farrar in "Carmen."

Here are illustrated two advertisements on two of the Success Pictures that are to be released during September, one being two columns and the other single and both eight inches deep.

These displays show that the very best of advertising can be done without going to a great deal of expense. But it also shows that you have to get into the spirit of the picture to make this advertising of value to you.

Now in constructing these displays only the single column star cuts which are furnished by Famous Players-Lasky have been used, and the same cuts can be employed again when the other of the series of Success Pictures with the same stars are advertised. Paramount trade-marks are used in the corners and only type that can be found in any newspaper office is employed.



They are simplicity in itself, but there is a selling argument in each one of these and there is a similar selling argument for every one of this Success Series. Study these and then read the remarks about each of the five pictures released in September which follow.

Success of the Past Is Big Thing to Keep Prominent

ON another page we have suggested a general form of advertising to be followed in connection with advertising the star pictures of the Success Series. We believe very strongly that the picture of the star should be featured in the display and that along side of this should appear the selling argument for the particular picture—the reason why this particular production has been again presented as a Success Picture—the reason why those who have not seen it should make up for lost time.

We do not stress here the point that those who have once seen the production should go again, for if you bring out clearly enough the spirit of the picture itself the memory of its charm is pretty sure to be strong enough to bring back its one time admirers—and to bring their friends with them.

In case of other pictures than the Success Series it may be desirable that you use either scenes from the production or striking half-tones showing the star in the very role that she is interpreting, but here is one point where these pictures are going to be all the easier for you to put over for the ordinary stock cuts supplied by the Famous Players-Lasky exchanges will in themselves orer you the opportunity if you cannot acord the more elaborate advertising.

Now on all of these Success Pictures, let us urge that you advertise just as strongly as you would if the picture were the star's latest issue, but one of the strong points of this display should be that this is one of the Success Series. Inasmuch as Mary Pickford in "The Eagle's Mate" is the first one of these pictures to be released, this fact should be dwalt upon a little more elaborately here. If you have not preceded the showing of the series by the announcement of having booked them. it would be a good idea for you to devote a part of the original advertisement to outlining this telling point. And be sure to make a reference incidentally to your next Success Picture, with the name of the star and the date on which you will show it.

Tell Why You Booked Them

With this in view Famous Players-Lasky is offering you a good selling argument with the advertisement that is appearing in this issue. It will be made all the stronger if it has been preceded by your own general announcement. It would be mighty well to refer at some length to the reason that you have booked this series of pictures in several of your first announcements—and then never let up on making it clear that each one of the releases is one of the Success Series.

When you lay out your advertising campaign on this picture do not devote less space to it than you would to a new production with the same star. In suggestions about advertising the Mot'on Picrure News has told you that the popularity of the star is the greater reason why you should advertise the more heavily and thereby get a greater dividend on your investment. Wherever that plan has been tried it has proven true and many of the larger theatres are regularly devoting more space to the stars that they know to always be sure of big business than they do to experiments..

And certainly if this is true of the players themselves, this policy of advertising on pictures of KNOWN MERIT is all the safer.

As a general form for this advertising, on the star pictures, we suggest that a good plan would be to use a single column cut of the player in the upper left hand corner of the two column spaces and at the top of single column spaces. Where larger space is used there can be employed a two-column cut similarly displayed. After the cut the two things to display prominently are the names of the star and the title of the production, but here you do not have to make these the dominant things as you would do in the case of current offerings. Especially in the double column, we would suggest that the sales argument of the picture should appear alongside of the cut and then the name of the star and the title should drop into the double-column space directly under this.

One of the First of the Series

Remembering that this is the first of the series of Success Pictures, we suggest that a good selling argument would be something like this:

"Mary Pickford is one of the household words of today. She is known wherever the screen is known. Here is one of the pictures that gave her fame. If you have not seen it you will not know the full reason for her success. If you have, you will come again and renew one of the happiest of your memories."

A PLACE FOR NO EXCUSES

Know All About These Pictures and Then Advertise Them With Understanding

ONE of the things that we have tried to impress upon you in all the talks in the Exhibitors Service Bureau is to know all about the picture before you start to advertise them.

Exhibitors have an excuse in the case of some of the first run new releases because of the fact that the productions have not been seen by the men who have been forced to write the exploitation matter in advance. There is no such excuse here.

Famous Players-Lasky has selected each one of the fifty-two Success Pictures because of the record that they made when they were first issued and because there has been such a demand on the part of the public generally to see them again.

Now you might as well conclude that when you book these pictures your patrons who have not seen them are going to be greatly interested and that many of them are going to ask you a lot of questions on what they are about—of what sort of a role that this or that player has, the character of the production, etc.

Now you are booking these pictures because you are assured that they are Hundred Per Cent Productions. But that does not mean that you should sit down and merely wait for the box-office returns to come in. Exploitations of these pictures is going to be easier for you than have been nearly any pictures that you have shown.

But you just as surely have to KNOW. Get the synopses in advance and study them so that you will be able to talk to your patrons—and with enthusiasm.

Then follow with the sales talk on the picture itself. Here is one suggestion:

"A little mountain girl is rescued from the 'cave man' who carries her away, but she rewards her rescurer with scorn, but her love finally brings her to defy the law that she may become the eagle's made." Or

"Born of the mountains but reared in the peaceful valley, this little girl hears the calls of the wilderness again when it comes with the refrain of love."

If you do not like the phrase in your advertising an effective method in this picture and, in fact, in all others of the series would be simply to outline the character of the role that the star takes.

But before you quit writing your advertisement, be sure to refer again to the fact that it is a Success Picture. Then you can use your Paramount trademark or refer to the fact that it is a Paramount Picture.

In announcing this first of the Mary Pickford subjects we would refer to the fact that we were going to show seven other of her greatest successes. These are "Caprice," "Hulda From Holland," "Hearts Adrift," "Behind the Scenes," "The Dawn of a Tomorrow," "Rags" and "Esmeralda." One reason for this is not only to call attention to the fact that you will have these other great pictures, but to take advantage of the fact that here are probably some among your patrons who have seen one or more of the list and therefore you will tend to increase the desire to see the current production and the entire series.

Near the bottom of your display use in small type that the next Success Picture that you will show will be Marguerite Clark in "Wildflower." Give the date.

There are two other selling points in this production. One of them is that James Kirkwood, now a noted director, appears as the hero and another that Jack, brother of Mary and now a sailor in the American Navy, is in the cast with her.

A Photoplay That Set a New Mark in Moving Pictures

"WHAT a wonderful picture 'The Girl of the Golden West' was!" you've heard the motion picture fans say.

Sorry you missed it, aren't you?

Well, here's your chance. The masterpiece is back again by popular demand.

Theodore Roberts, House Peters, Mabel Van Buren, Anita King, Raymond Hatton—what a splendid cast! And Cecil B. De Mille directed this David Belasco story.

Don't miss it, this time!

"Wildflower" Basis for Clark Campaign

"WILDFLOWER" was the first picture that Marguerite Clark ever made, and it is not entering into the realms of the review department here to say that it is one of the very best that she has ever made.

That fact immdiately suggests a selling argument to you, and a simple recital of the facts should get every Marguerite Clark admirer into the theatre. We would use a phrase on this order:

"This was Miss Clark's first photoplay. In 'Wildflower' she won a popularity that has ever kept her in the front rank of the stars of the silent stage. Her wonderful success, probably more than any other one thing, was responsible for the number of stars of the speaking stage who came to the screen."

Now one of the strong points in the exploitation of all of the Success Pictures should rest in your lobby displays. You will find one of the most attractive features that you could offer would be reproductions of the way that Miss Clark appeared in the various roles which she has had. From the stills that are supplied with the Success Series you will be able to get these for the six pictures in which she will reappear and you can undoubtedly get photos of herself in other prominent characters from Famous Players-Lasky. One of the strong points behind such a recommendation as this is that you will be able to use the same lobby display with each of the productions so that you will not be making any considerable investment for a single showing.

Following the same idea along, it would be a mighty good plan to assemble your list of Marguerite Clark fans and to send to each of these a letter stating that you have booked this first picture of hers for such and such a date, because of the great demand to see this wonderful production. In the same letter you should announce her other five productions in the same series.

As a matter of fact we believe that this form of a letter will be found business getting for each one of the star series in this list. And through this you will be able to get into your house not only the followers of the particular stars, but all of those who want to see these great pictures of the past. By hinging the entire letter on one picture, you get a specific point to put over instead of mere generalities.

The Marguerite Clark, the Pickford or any of the other of the star series furnishes you an excellent opportunity for contests and this can be based simply on which is the greatest picture in which the star has appeared. You should open the list in all cases to every picture which she has made, but you should call attention to the fact that you are showing this series of her older pictures because many believe these to be among her best. This is going to arouse a great deal of discussion in your theatre.

Most of us are familiar with the expression that so many are wont to use to the effect that it was never like this "in the good old days." You will hear that expression some times around your theatre and here you have an opportunity to test it. Certainly you are doing this on safe grounds and without exaggeration for there are many who believe that a number of these productions have never been surpassed by the particular players.

A valuable asset in your exploitation will come from your ability to locate people who saw this production or any of the others when they were originally released and you can quote these local people in your house program or the newspaper. You will find that this sort of advertising comes close home. But do not fake on this; quote people who are worth while and who are telling their real opinions.

Aside from the fact that this is the first and one of the greatest of the Marguerite Clark pictures there is a strong selling argument in the fact that Harold Lockwood is the leading man opposite her. A line like this will attract attention:

"Did you know that Harold Lockwood made love to Marguerite Clark in motion pictures before he became a star in his own right? You will see him claim her as his screen bride in 'Wildflower.'"

Jack Pickford is also in the cast, another selling line that will get you many patrons and the other principal characters are taken by James Cooley and E. L. Davenport.

Here is a suggestion for a selling talk:

"A little girl of nature falls a victim to a scapegrace from the city until she is rescued by his brother and finally blooms happily in the garden of his faithful love."

Or here is one that ought to interest every Clark fan:

"In this production the star portrays every mood from the clinging love of the unsophisticated country girl to the hot temper of the vixen aroused, but the generosity and sympathy of her nature conquer and win her love and happiness."

YOU DON'T NEED STUNTS

Appeal of the Players and the Productions Are Your Great Points in These Pictures

STRAIGHT and frank exploitation is the best method for getting the most possible business for the Success Series. "Stunt" exploitation should be avoided, because it is not only unnecessary, but it serves to work against the very fact that you ought to be trying to impress upon your patrons—that this is one of the series of greatest pictures that have been made.

The stunt is valuable enough when you have to use some method other than the appeal of the star and the production to get your people into your theatre. But here your strongest point is the fact that this is one of the offerings that lives. When you begin to try the so-called "unique" methods of exploitation you are encouraging your patrons to doubt the strongest argument that you can put forward—that this picture is brought back to them so that they will not have missed one of the classics of the screen.

Its Title Will Sell "Girl of the Golden West"

THIRD of the Success Series to be released, "The Girl of the Golden West," suggests a plan to be followed in advertising all of the eleven "specials" and that is by making the name of the picture the main point.

In writing the advertising for "The Girl of the Golden West" we would suggest that the name of the production be placed at the top of the advertisement in two lines of large type. Let the border that you use break up to the type just at the point where the two lines separate, but do not let it continue through them. In this way you will make the name of the picture stand out as THE thing in your display.

There is one mighty good reason for this suggestion. Pictures of this class are so well known by name that you hardly have to tell people more about them, but there is a still stronger reason. There are scores of people in your community who are probably not classed as regular motion picture fans who will want to see these offerings and you have an opportunity not only to get the patronage for the particular production, but to win a permanent patron.

That is one of the points that you should bear in mind in regard to the publicity on all of the Success Series and why you should never be led into exaggeration or cheap methods of exploitation. You are assured by Famous Players-Lasky that these are the best pictures that they have made in the past and if you put them frankly before the public on that basis, it is very likely that you will make regular patrons out of persons who have been unfortunate enough to see poor productions on the few occasions that they came to your theatre, or who have some other prejudice against the photoplay. And in these war times the development of all possible patronage is something worth working hard for.

We would feature strongly in the display that this was one of the greatest pictures that David Belasco ever presented on the speaking stage and then you can call attention to the exceptional cast, including Theodore Roberts, House Peters, Anita King, display you have sufficient sales talk to put this picture over in any community. For instance this:

"This was David Belasco's triumph when he jroduced it on the speaking stage. Thousands saw it in New York and through the country. Then it was immortalized in motion picture films and it is now brought back that you may once more thrill with the adventures of "The Girl," that you may fight with her with the sheriff's gambler, Jack Rance, and that you may rejoice with her when she wins happiness in the mountains of her glorious west."

We would certainly not overlook the opportunity to make this a particularly strong appeal to every legitimate theatre patron in your city. If you can get such a list send these people letters and invite them to come and see how the screen surpasses the stage in recording one of the most dramatic stories ever written. If you have people in your section who are constantly declaring that the motion picture is a weak imitation of the drama, get them in to see this picture.

Many Selling Agreements

There isn't any picture that we know of offering more dramatic lines for selling the production than "The Girl of the Golden West," but because it is so rich in these don't ignore the real reason that you are showing the picture, that it is one of the great successes.

Here are a few selling arguments:

"A girl orphan keeps a saloon in the mountains of California in the days of the '49 gold rush and her honesty and fearlessness command the respect of all the "boys." Her courage wins her everything until her lover is about to be hanged, when she wins his liberty in a game of cards."

"The only time she ever cheated was when the life of the man she loved was at stake in a card game, and she won it from the gambler-sheriff who sought her."

"The gold of the west is dross to the girl when she comes to love the road agent with a price upon his head, and saves him to take him to the mountains to begin a new life."

"Life and love, romance and the wrath of man are pictured faithfully in this classic of the Golden West, and all the beauty of the production is immortalized on the screen."

GET THE FULL STAR APPEAL

You Have Not Only Their Popularity, but the Reason for It to Induce Patronage

IN these pictures of the Success Series the star's popularity value to you is augmented, by the fact that you not only have the present popularity of the player, but you have an opportunity to show the reason for the vogue. It is not like taking the work of some former famous person, no matter how good they may have been then. You have the present day standing to back you up.

That is one of the reasons why you do not need a large number of adjectives and why you can ignore the superlative. You have the performances to back you up, and don't forget that even if your patrons have not seen these particular productions, it's a mighty safe bet that they have heard a good deal about them.

Take advantage of that fact and build your exploitation in sympathy.

"Zaza," the Play to be Featured very Prominently

PROBABLY among modern plays there is not a story that has attracted more attention the country over than "Zaza." It was originally played in this country by Mrs. Leslie Carter, who was also seen in various tours of the country. Then other players took the role and finally the production went into local stock companies. Then it dropped from sight, but the fact that it has dropped is going to make it all the more valuable to you if you handle this picture intelligently.

There are two things to be featured about equally in the advertising, the name of the star and the title of the picture. It was one of the first of the Pauline Frederick features and many of them saw in her work in this picture the fact that she would become a great star of the screen. She had just come to the Famous Players Company from the speaking stage where her remarkable beauty had attracted great attention. You can say almost anything about her in this role that comes to your mind and it will be true.

Title Thing to Play Up

"Zaza" is a particularly attractive title, suggestive of romance and action. This used prominently and with a few lines telling about the character of the production will bring the curiosity seekers in, but you should strive to go further than this and further than getting all the admirers of the star. Here is an excellent chance to talk about the stage production and the success that it scored all over the amusement world. It is a story that lends itself admirably to the motion picture, especially with such an artist as Miss Frederick in the name role, for the emotions are remarkably clear without the spoken word.

Certainly, after you have properly featured Miss Frederick along the lines that we have suggested for the other stars, you will be making new business by using a selling talk something like this:

"In producing 'Zaza,' one of the most powerful French plays ever written, the motion picture has done what the stage never could do; it has preserved a masterpiece for all time."

Here are some other lines that suggest themselves:

"Many motion picture followers claim that they discovered Pauline Frederick in 'Zaza.' If you are one of them you will want to renew the acquaintance by seeing her again in that powerful role. If you are not you have an opportunity to live with her in one of the greatest stories of modern times."

"Pauline Frederick, who has been called one of the screen's greatest emotional stars, has a role that fits her in this story of the French actress, who for the first time in her life finds what she believes to be true love, only to discover that her suitor is already married. Her plan to avenge herself and her renunciation have stirred thousands of theatregoers and will always live among the most dramatic scenes in the spoken drama."

"She loved him so much that she gave him back to his own wife, after she had found her first true love when she believed that he had come to her as an unfettered lover. She plans to throw herself at the wife's feet as his mistress, but the love of a little girl halts her and she makes a sacrifice that arrays her with the nobility of woman."

Don't Be Too Sensational

That is as far as you should go with this picture. Do not cut the sensational out too strong. It is a case where you could, if you desired, get a certain more or less smutty appeal out of the fact that this actress, Zaza, was the mistress of the man she loved, but there is a far bigger element in the self sacrifice that she showed.

It is always well to remember that for every person that you get into the theatre by usng something suggestive in your display you lose probably half a dozen in those that you keep away. And in such a big picture as this you have no right to take such a position. You owe it as your duty to your patrons to allow the hundreds of women who will cry and love and hate with Zaza see this wonderful picture that unquestionably has one of the noblest endings in all drama.

After you have made this exploitaton that we have suggested on the name of the picture and on the star, we suggest that you make this specific appeal to the women of your community. But with all these appeals we would couple the fact that this was one of the most successful of modern plays—a convincing argument that it is something well worth while.

"Carmen" a Picture to Bring in Many Elements

"CARMEN" is a picture where the name of the production should be featured strongly in your advertising because the opera is known to practically every one who can read. Geraldine Farrar and Wallace provide a triple-barrelled exploitation that certainly ought to bring business.

In the case of many operas that have been made into motion pictures the exhibitor is likely to find that he is talking over the heads of his public. The moment that you mention that such and such a picture is made from an opera there is a certain element that resents being uplifted. But in this case the objection does not apply because of the popular character of the story itself and of the music which is familiar to every one.

In the general advertising we would place the emphasis on the three things that we have suggested and then have a brief selling argument on the story itself. Exploiting it as an opera and as the first screen work of one of the greatest artists should be largely done through letters to the persons that you know are interested, women's clubs and musical organizations. This is certainly another opportunity to get new patronage for your house, but we strongly urge that you keep a margin between the two lines of publicity, one for the general public and the other for those you know will appreciate the artistry of the production, as taken from the opera.

A Very Lavish Production

One of the strong points that you can talk about is the lavishness of the picture. You don't need an array of adjectives, but a simple statement of fact that will be readily accepted.

You ought to be able to get the co-operation of every music store and especially that of the dealers in phonographs in putting over this picture. Miss Farrar has made a large number of popular records, and the music dealer will find an opportunity here to make business for himself by devoting his windows to a display on this picture. Ordinary suggestions about window displays are little more than worthless, because you cannot expect the merchant to be turning over his window to you every day when he can see no profit to himself. But here is a case where the net result to him is so apparent that you will get his co-operation the moment you tell him what you want him to do.

An attractive feature of the presentation of the picture itself can be arranged through the use of a phonograph in your theatre and rendering one or two of Miss Farrar's songs from this opera. Don't overdo this phase, for just a little touch is all that you will want. This will add to the value of the plan to the music dealers.

We suggest that you go a good deal further and get from the music dealers of your city the list of all the people in the section who have bought the Farrar records, and that you send them a special letter about this picture shortly before you are to show it. Even if you are running a neighborhood house, you have an opportunity to get people from all sections of the city, and if you are in a small town you have a chance to draw people from the surrouunding section. Make your letters neat and simple, and be satisfied with the statement that this is a lavish production of the great opera with Miss Farrar herself playing the leading role and Wallace Reid in her support.

Famous Players-Lasky suggests that you call attention to the fact that this is the picture that played to 24,211 persons in one day at the Strand theatre, New York. Such a simple statement is worth more to you than all the adjectives you could scrape together, for it convinces the public that the picture is worth seeing.

Stock Cut Will Suffice

If you can use a striking scene in your advertising, preferably that of Carmen in the arms of Don Jose, you will be able to work out an attractive display. If you are without facilities for doing this you will find the single column cut of Miss Farrar to be used along the lines already suggested will be very effective.

We would suggest the general sales talk along these lines, after you have featured Miss Farrar and Wallace Reid:

"'Carmen' is probably the best known opera ever written, because it is full of action, with startling turns and the greatest heart interest. It is the story of a wanton who played with men, only to meet her death at the hands of one of her victims."

The realistic bull fight is another one of the things that you want to feature in your general advertising. It will draw the men and the boy elements to your theatre.

In brief, you have in this picture appeals to every possible patron of your section, and careful advertising ought to get the greater share of the people in. You have a story of action that will attract all who want heart interest in a production. You have the person of the noted star. Then you have the adventurous appeal to the general public and then the specific appeal to the music lovers and the women's organization.

It is worth while striving to get all of these elements, but don't try it by one big slap-bang splash. Use the elements that you have suggested and you will find not only has your patronage on this picture been increased, but that you have added new popularity to your house.

REMEMBER THAT THIS IS JUST THE SAME

THESE first five pictures of the Success Series cover your first month, at the rate of one a week. According to the booking plans outlined by the Famous Players-Lasky you have either booked the entire series of fifty-two or have booked those of various stars or the Specials. In any case, you have not done with the exploitation; you have made only a good start.

If you failed to gather sufficient material in advance about the stars and the various members of the supporting companies. Keep your program filled with this gossipy information about them and see that your newspapers are encouraged to print as much as possible about them so that the continued interest will be aroused.

Remember that all of the information that you are gathering now can be used again on the later pictures of this series in which the same star appears. You are not going to the trouble of getting together matter to use a single time, but matter that will continue to be an asset to you.

And even if you have launched these Success pictures to a good star, don't let up on them for a moment. Keep talking to the public about how these pictures were enpoyed at the time they were produced, how they have lived after hundreds of others have been forgotten. Tell the people that you have booked them because you have heard the demand from those who saw them at their original showings and from those who were unfortunate enough to miss them.

Put your advertising on a high, intimate plane. Use the name of the star and the title in big type, but at the same time use your selling arguments on the basis that every one has either seen the particular picture or wants to see it. You don't need adjectives; picture the charm of the production and the fact that it has lived.

And above everything do not use "bunk" in your exploitation. When you do it, you kill a great bug, valuable thing that the distributor has handed you.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Fox Studio Doings

The William Farnum company, directed by Frank Lloyd, is composed of some speedy movers, for it developed this week that they worked in London, New York, and on a desert isle all in one day. These scenes are for the story written by Lloyd and at present titled "The Man of Power." In addition to the above-mentioned locals for the story many scenes will be made aboard ship, and for this the company is leaving the latter part of this week for San Francisco.

Considerable difficulty was experienced in securing a permit for the Farnum company to take a camera aboard ship. A pledge was made the Government officials that no scene would be taken that would show any guns aboard the boat or other protection measures, nor that the shore line would be seen in any of the pictures taken. All films as soon as developed and printed must be submitted to the Government before being used in the photoplay.

Louise Lovely, who starred in Bluebird photoplays, made by Universal, was this week engaged by the Fox organization as leading woman for Mr. Farnum, and she will play first in "The Man of Power." Charles Clary, Marc. Robbins and Beatrice Joy are in the cast and Billy Foster continues as cameraman.

Lynn Reynolds and the Tom Mix company are still working near Prescott, Ariz., on "The Two-Gun Man," from the Charles Alden Seltzer novel of the same name. Jane Novak is the leading woman, very excellent cowgirls and cowboys have and Reynolds writes that a number of been secured to take part in scenes.

The F.P.-Lasky Studio

The Famous Players-Lasky revival of "The Squaw Man," to be made under the direction of Cecil B. de Mille, promises to be one of, if not the big program production of the year. The cast at the studio is referred to as a superlative one, containing as it does a remarkable gathering of some of the most successful players of this big organization. Elliot Dexter, Ann Little, Kathrine MacDonald, Theodore Roberts, Raymond Hatton, Edwin Stevens, Jack Holt and others have been selected for the cast. While the interior scenes are being made at the studio now, a great number of workmen are busy on a mammoth ranch thirty miles south of Bakersfield, in a semi-desert country, erecting buildings, corrals and other settings necessary for the exteriors. Arrangements have been completed for the use of this ranch, which consists of thousands of acres and is the grazing place for thousands of cattle. Indians, cowboys and frontier men of a genuine type are being engaged and everyone is being selected to fit the type of part he is to play.

Wallace Reid has completed work in the adaptation from the Porter Emerson Brown story, "Someone and Somebody," and is now making a Government propaganda picture.

Bryant Washburn by the end of the week will have completed work in his first Paramount, "The Gypsy Trail," made by Walter Edwards, and Lila Lee has just been placed under the direction of G. Butler Clonebaugh.

The Famous Players-Lasky studio is busy with the making of a number of propaganda pictures, practically all of the stars at this studio working in subjects for Uncle Sam. Mary Pickford last week made a reel there which will be sent forward for the films division this week.

Fred Stone departed Tuesday for New York, where he will shortly appear in the Chicago revival of "Jack o' Lantern," which ran last season in New York.

About Metro Players

It became known this week that Maxwell Carder, general manager of production of Metro, is also to come West shortly to pay the producing studios in Hollywood a visit of several weeks at least. President Richard and Treasurer Joseph Engle are expected early in September, and Mr. Carder, it is now understood, will come a short time later.

The advance guard of the Metro producing forces coming West will be Mme. Nazimova, who, accompanied by her director, Albert Capellani, will arrive about September 1. Preparations are being made at the studio now for her first production.

Bert Lytell will have fifteen thrills at least in his next picture, "Making Good," which is being produced from his own story with Charles Swickard as director. He permits photographs to be shot out of his hand and did not flinch when the bullet came through a door a few inches above his head. The company for several days has been working in the vicinity of Beverly Hills oil fields, where an ideal Mexican atmosphere has been secured.

The Metro studio has engaged Herbert H. Hayes as leading man for May Allison in her next picture now known as "Kate of Kentucky," which is by Production Manager George D. Baker and Tom Geraghty. Production work on this has been placed in charge of Robert Thornby and it is now being produced.

With Pathe Players

All three companies of the Astra organization are at work after delays occasioned by various causes. Ruth Roland is able to be back at the studio and work a short time each day the first of the week since the accident two weeks ago when she was injured while horseback riding. Miss Roland has a new leading man in the person of George Larkin, who succeeded George Chesebro, drafted, in the "Hands Up!" serial.

Director George Fitzmaurice is now filming a revelation after the war story by Oudia Bergere titled "Our Better Selves." Louis Cody is the leading man and Robert Bolder is taking a principal part.

The Helen Chadwick company, recently organized, is at work on a comedy-drama laid in an East Coast fishing village which is titled "Open the Window, Mary." The filming of scenes for this is being rushed in order that it will be finished by August 26, the date that W. E. Lawrence, leading man for Miss Chadwick, leaves to take training for Tank Division service. Spottiswoode Aitken and Leonard Chapman are other principals and the direction is in charge of Ernie Traxler, who for several years served as assistant director to Robert Leonard.

The Frank Keenan Pathe company left this week for ten days of warm weather on the Mojave Desert, where the exterior scenes representing mine properties in Nevada will be filmed for "The Silver Girl" under the direction of Eliot Howe. This is a modern mining story, with the early scenes in the Nevada mining country, followed by action in New York. The story ends back in the Nevada locations used in the early part of the film.

Katherine Adams, Irene Rich, Herschel Mayall, George Hernandez, Donald Macdonald and Clifford Alexander make up the cast. The continuity for this was prepared by Jack Cunningham.

Vitagraph News Bits

William Duncan, Vitagraph serial director-actor, has brought his card index of thrillers out for active service, for he has now taken up the filming of another fifteen-part serial, "Man of Might," right on top of having finished one of the same fame, "The Fight for Millions," and making a propaganda picture for the Fourth Liberty Loan. Mr. Duncan, as in former serials made by him, will play the feature lead, and Edith Johnson and William Ryan, who have been with him in the last serial, are to continue as principal supporting players.

Heda Nova, who has appeared in numerous Vitagraph subjects, and more recently worked in serial, is to be featured in five-reel subjects which are to be made at the West Coast studios. The first of his series has not been selected, nor has a director been named for this producing unit.

Earle Williams is working on the final scenes for "My Country First," written by Bess Meredith, and upon completion of this will depart for New York for a short stay. Grace Darmond is playing opposite Williams and the production is being directed by David Smith. During the past week the company spent a number of days at Monterey, Cal., where scenes were made of specially staged polo games at the big polo field near that place.

Earl Montgomery is out of films for a few days, as the result of a fall with an 18-inch flag staff. Montgomery and Rock were working on top of a seven-story building in Los Angeles making a scene for "Roofs and Riots," a two-reel Vitagraph comedy being directed by Roy McCray. The stunt had been planned to that it could be carried out without danger, but the flag pole failed to break straight when the two players were on top of it, and so it twisted off sideways and they missed going through a skylight as had been planned. Montgomery's shoulder hit on the side and was dislocated.

Larry Seamon, with a company of big Vitagraph comedy players, is to leave in a day or two for Bear Valley, where a wild and wooly two-reel comedy will be staged.

Universal Newsettes

Universal City producing activities are to be given a once-over by President Carl Laemmle early in September, according to news received at the plant this week. It is expected that Mr. Laemmle will arrive about the first of the month and remain two or three weeks. In the meantime producing activities are continuing.

The continuity department is now busy with the script for the next story for Edith Roberts, to be directed by Tod Browning. This will be titled "The Romance of Roma," and cast will be named in a few days by Arthur Hoyt.

A number of companies are away from the studio this week, the absent list including that directed by R. S. Sturgeon, which has Monroe Salisbury and Marjorie Bennett as leads. They are still working at Bear Lake. Alan Holubar and Dorothy Phillips company, making a war picture, will go to Bear Valley in a few days to spend a week or more for Alpine scenes. Jack Ford, with Harry Carey, are making exteriors in the vicinity of Calabassas, the once famous gambling resort of Southern California hidden away in the hills near Tajone Pass. Director Robert Leonard, with Mae Murray and a company, are at Lake Tahoe for the Vermont Canadian border shepherd story, "Little Lady Bo-Peep," and J. P. McGowan, with the "Lure of the Circus" serial players, are still at Catalina Islands.

Director Paul Powell has begun the filming of "One Bright Idea," with Carmel Meyer, and Jack Dillon, with Priscilla Dean as his star, will in a day or two begin filming "Dealing with Daphne."

The final scenes for "The Brass Bullet" serial required more than 100 boys from the Strickland Home for Boys, who were taken to the studios by F. B. Silverwood, philanthropist of Los Angeles, who is sponsor for this school. The boys appeared in scenes showing Treasure Isle, where many crimes had been enacted, converted into a pleasure resort for boys by Jack Mulhall and Juanita Hansen, who are featured in this serial.

Here and There

The Christie Film Company has lost more men in comparison with the total number of their employes, which averages thirty-five, than any other West Coast studio, the Christie service flag now bearing eighteen stars, or more than half as many having entered the Government war service as the studio employed.

After a stay of almost three weeks at the studio at Santa Barbara, President S. S. Hutchinson of the American will leave the latter part of this week for his Chicago office. Aside from a material change in the scenario department, no other changes were made at the studio.

Steven Fox, formerly Jules Furthmann, who has been writing exclusively for William Russell productions, has been given a new contract to continue in this work at a material increase and has been lauded by President Hutchinson.

The Margarita Fisher company, with Jack Mower as leading man and Edward Sloman director, is spending the present week in Los Angeles taking the necessary scenes at one of the beaches for a subject at present titled "American Ann."

Charley Fuhr's in town.

Harry Aitken's gone East.

Sleeping under blankets every night.

Diando is not superstitious—the studio has a service flag with thirteen stars.

Many of our smart set are working for Uncle Sam these days—propagandish one would say.

Charley Gerrard has had the honor thrust upon him of being a director, and he never made a complaint about the error.

Herbert H. Hayes, May Allison's new leading man, dare not be an Englishman. Think what would happen to his name if he dropped the "h's."

Ivon, Edna Earle's Russian hound, ate too much this week and caused considerable consternation while mistress was paying a visit to the East.

Special: Up to the minute of going to press, no word as to the date Chaplin's "Shoulder Arms" would be ready for the waiting world had been tipped off.

Bert Lennon has not been heard from for a week, and so may be expected any day with gobs and gobs of copy, and promises of advertising, but HOOKUM'S pages are clean.

Harvey Gates is back from a vacation at Catalina without a fish story, and everybody thought until now, Harvey was original, creative, or a fictionist of the screen.

Between scenes for "A Regular Fellow," W. Christy Cabanne received a telegram and reading it he cried: "Ready, action camera, hurrah, it's a girl!" And then the scenes were shot.

Rivalry may be expected at the Triangle Western Studio between Big Roy Stewart and Bill Desmond, but no trouble is anticipated because Bill threatens to be a regular devilish Westerner, even if he is Irish.

If David Wark Griffith should hear the applause when his face appears on the screen in "The Great Love," it might cause the industry to be robbed of a great director, for he might insist on becoming an actor.

A U City actor told Colin Campbell, Bill Hart was making a greater hit than his brother, Brete, all of which indicates that "In the Carquinez Woods" which Campbell is making, would not pull one actor into the theatre.

Ham Beal, of U City Pub. department, is joking about titles again. His laugh contributions this week include "The Man who Wouldn't Shoot Harry Carey"; "In the Carquinez Woods with Marie Walcamp," and "Carmel Meyer's One Bright Idea."

A morning paper says Mildred Harris and Charlie Chaplin are engaged, and the evening paper carries a denial from both—the very week Mildred's Lois Weber picture, "For Husbands Only," is on at a downtown house, which may or may not be publicity.

Carmel Meyer has an invitation to go to Japan from Jazaburo Shiria, editor of the Yega Sekai of Tokio, but fearing she would not be able to pronounce the name of her friend, Carmel has postponed the trip until she takes a course in Jap lingo.

Gustave von Seyfertitz was prevailed upon by various members of the Famous Players-Lasky organization to change his name. After much persuasion he complied. The name is now, G. Butler Clonebaugh. Rumor has it a petition is being prepared to ask him to change back to the original.

Everybody smoked at U City this week, for Monday morning Finck (his real name is E. M. Finklestein) proudly advised there was a girl at his home. Finck's business is selling cigars, candy, etc., at U City cafe, but business just went to pieces and the cash register refused to work.

Taylor Holmes, following a training on Lake Michigan, took the Pacific by storm, and just refused to be seasick, even if all the other members of the company with the exception of Christy Cabanne laid to the rail, but it was necessary for Holmes to do this, for he was playing the title-role in "A regular Fellow."

Bill Farnum has lost all his love for his Director Frank Lloyd, and a serious break may be expected upon completion of Farnum's present subject, all of which will be the result of Lloyd writing an original story for Farnum, and inserting fights all through the film. Living up to the reputation of being the screen's greatest scrapper, is not to Bill's liking in these days of good fishing at Catalina.

Pete Gavertz is the first exhibitor to break into Hollywood HOOKUM. He is manager of the Burbank theatre in Los Angeles, and insists upon seeing every picture before booking it. Sometimes he goes to sleep while viewing these special presentations, but he did it once too often. For fear of damage suit, the name of the production is not mentioned by HOOKUM, but it is known that all in any way connected with the special viewing for Gavertz, walked out on him when he began to snore, stopping the machine and turning off the lights. His knap is said to have lasted until closing time for the exchange, and then the janitor woke him up by camouflaged action of the nature of business of sweeping out.

VACATION PRODUCTIONS

It is possible HOOKUM will be forced to move its office to Bear Valley, inasmuch as a very large percentage of producing directors have found it necessary to take their companies on a trip to this and other resort sections of filmdom for exteriors, now that the vacation season is upon us. The vacation producers of the present week are:

Rollin S. Sturgeon, Bear Valley.

Louise Glaum Company, Pine Crest.

Leonard-Mae Murray, Lake Tahoe.

Lloyd-Farnum, San Francisco by boat.

Earle Williams, Vitagraph, Monterey Polo grounds.

Bert Lytell, Beverly Hills.

Frank Keenan Pathe, Mojave.

Larry Semon, Vitagraph, Bear Valley.

Holubar-Dorothy Phillips, Bear Valley.

J. P. McGowan, "Lure of the Circus," Catalina Islands.

Lynn Reynolds-Mix, mountains of Arizona.

Carey-Ford-Universal, Calabassas.

Margarita Fisher - American, Venice beach.

To say nothing of S. S. Hutchinson rushing out to Santa Barbara; Carl Laemmle packing up for U City; Jesse Lasky off for a vacation in the Yosemite, and Harry Aitken hitting the rattler for his summer home.

Paramount-Artcraft in Three N. Y. Theatres

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has three of its productions running at the same time on Broadway this week. The Rivoli, the Rialto and the Strand are the theatres and "The Hun Within," "Till I Come Back to You" and "On the Quiet" are the pictures.

Chet Withey, the young director who comes from the D. W. Griffith school, is responsible for two of the current Broadway pictures and Cecil B. De Mille, the well-known producer of Artcraft successes, directed "Till I Come Back to You."

"The Hun Within" is the first of the Paramount-Artcraft Specials to be released during the coming year. In speaking of those responsible for the picture, the Evening Mail said: "Some one ought to present them with gold medals; they certainly deserve them." This paper starts its review with the statement that "The Hun Within" is one of the most remarkable pictures ever shown on a New York screen.

The New York Times said: "It is not often that spectators in a motion picture theatre are held as tensely and stirred as frequently to spontaneous applause as were those who witnessed 'The Hun Within,' a Paramount-Artcraft Special, at the Rialto yesterday afternoon."

The Evening Telegram said: "'Till I Come Back to You' is a play of the war, the scenes being laid in Belgium. It is so well acted and has so many strong scenes that it will be enjoyed by those who attend the Rivoli."

In contrast to the dramatic war pictures at the Rivoli and Rialto is Jack Barrymore's initial Paramount picture in years, "On the Quiet," at the Strand. "Yesterday's audience laughed almost continuously during the showing of 'On the Quiet,' and yesterday was not the sort of day to get excited about mediocre pictures. Mr. Barrymore and his associate players triumphed over the oppressive heat; in fact, they made the Strand audience forget all about such things as thermometers," said the Evening Mail.

The Tribune said: "Barrymore works so fast that he seems to be about three laps ahead of you most of the time, but after the picture is finished and you have time to sit down and catch your breath you know that you enjoyed it."

Sherry Service Swings Into Full Action

The William L. Sherry Service, according to an announcement from that company this week, is now releasing on regular schedule a continuous line of features. A great share of the credit for getting the company into a stride that promises to carry it into the foremost ranks in record time is accorded Mr. Sherry's associates, as follows: Norman J. Sennott, general manager; A. C. Novotny, auditor; Daniel J. Savage, general sales manager.

The four feminine stars thus far announced are Jewel Carmen, Catherine Calvert, Doris Kenyon and Vangie Valentine. In addition, the Burlingham Travel Pictures are scheduled on the Sherry list. The first male star to put his pictures through the Sherry Service is G. M. Anderson, whose first release will be "Red Blood and Yellow," on September 22.

Seven Fox Features Now in Work

Seven productions are now in work for the Fox Film Corporation. Two of these are being made in the West and the five others in the East. In the West, William Farnum is in his second week on "The Man of Power," the big picture which Frank Lloyd has written and is directing. Tom Mix is in his third week in the filming of "The Two-Gun Man."

In the East George Walsh is working under the direction of his brother, R. A. Walsh, on a rapid-fire comedy picture, entitled, "How Do You Get That Way?" Peggy Hyland, supported by a large cast, has been out on location for the last week working on "Marriages Are Made." Miss Hyland will spend the coming week at Asbury Park, combining a pleasure vacation with outdoor work of her play.

Richard Stanton and Kenean Buel, Fox directors, each has a large production in train, Mr. Buel being busy on the first Evelyn Nesbit picture. Arvid E. Gillstrom, who has just joined the Fox force of directors, is in the third week of the picture which Jane and Katherine Lee are filming, "Swat the Spy," and Virginia Pearson has finished work on "The Queen of Hearts."

Karger Engages Portrait Painter for Metro

Maxwell Karger, Metro's studio supervisor, has engaged the well-known portrait painter, D. Anthony Tauszky, whose art, it is expected will add further to the beauty and effectiveness of Metro pictures. D. Anthony Tauszky will provide by means of interpretative paintings, a further stimulus to the imagination of the spectators, giving a scope and breadth that can be happily combined with the more detailed action photographed by the camera.

A definite instance of this will shortly be seen in "The Silent Woman," a Metro feature starring Edith Storey. The scene is laid for the most part in the North Woods. Vivid action scenes, directed by Herbert Blache, carry the story along. In addition the spectator is given the impression of the greatness and dignity of the North country, the timber lands, the logging and the lumber industry, by means of the artist's introductory title-sheets.

Paramount-Artcraft Week at Hand

Much enthusiastic activity is being evidenced at the New York headquarters of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in connection with the forthcoming Paramount and Artcraft Week, and exhibitors everywhere are reported to be signing up for the presentation at their theatres of nothing but these pictures during the seven days commencing September 1.

Exploitation plans for Paramount and Artcraft Week are now completed and the carrying out of these plans are well under way. Newspapers throughout the country will play an important part, as will the billboards and other mediums of advertising, including the Saturday Evening Post.

A Letter That Tells Better Than Any "Ad" Why You Should Be In Chicago September 3-4-5-6-7 Read It!

Editor of the Motion Picture News:

The spirit that prompted you is fine.

However, when you place most of the responsibility of Organizing the Exhibitor on Shaefer and Rembusch you are somewhat in error.

In mentioning Messrs. Rothapfel, Sorerio, Crandall, Tom Moore, Hulsey, Boehringer, Richards, Katz, Barrett McCormick, Marcus Loew, Seivers, Roth, Brauman, Clemner Von Herberg, Turner and Dahnken, Harold Franklin, Frank Newman, Landau, McGee, Perry, Carpenter, Parrington, you are hitting 1000%.

Organization needs the "bell-wether exhibitors." A few have worked faithfully, but as you say, most of them are too busy and lack the patience it takes and patience is so necessary.

You say, "Your country wants you." Your Organization wants you.

¶ Now here comes opportunity. The Chicago Meeting, Hotel Sherman, Sept. 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7, is not a one-man meeting. It is a meeting of the entire Industry.

It is a National Motion Picture Meeting in which every one in the picture business is invited to participate.

"If you are in the picture business, this is your meeting."

There can be no politics because the first three days are taken up with a set program open to the entire industry. We believe the way to get together is to get together and come together.

Not only exhibitors but every branch of the industry is asked to participate and the "bell-wethers" of all kinds are hereby drafted.

No regrets accepted.

Messrs. Brady, Zukor, Irwin, Fox, Laemmle, Elliott, Powers, Friend Brulator, Earle, Selznick, Sheldon, Brink, Edwards, Smith, Goldfish, Berst, Hodkinson, Lasky, Kleine, Rowland, Cochrane, Rothacker, Williams, Schwalbe, Lynch, Bill Wright, Brunet, Cromelin, Griffith, Sherrill, Hallberg, Porter, Flynn and Gulick are asked to appear and give of their counsel and advice of how we may have a better motion picture and do our greatest to help win the war.

¶ The American Exhibitors' Association is not calling this meeting to sell pictures, trade journals, co-operative booking, or do panhandling. Our national directors want a business meeting and will do anything necessary to perfect an organization that will protect the industry as a whole. Our activities are confined to the best interests of all exhibitors. All who come to Chicago have an opportunity to amalgamate to their heart's content.

Personally, I am more interested in having a fine meeting than anything else. We want the best speakers, all the helpful entertainments it is possible to secure. If we have the right attendance and the right people come, everything will come out all right.

Mr. Rothacker caught the spirit of our meeting and has promised us a fine afternoon at his factory. Any one that has anything good to offer to make the program interesting, is invited to volunteer. It will be acceptable to the Committee.

The Committee will be glad to know who is coming so as to prepare. We like the idea of Mr. Rothacker of volunteering his services to our meeting. Who is next? Come on you "Bell-wethers." Take the lead and all the industry will follow. Our program is open to you.

FRANK REMBUSCH.

The Projection Department—Its Policy and Aims

THE proper projection of the motion picture ranks second to no other detail of successful exhibiting, and on the present occasion we would like to talk about that most important exhibitor help, the Projection Department, which should be carefully studied each week by all exhibitors, and to which many prominent exhibitors acknowledge their indebtedness for assistance and suggestions. Particularly at the present time, when skilled operators must leave their positions almost over night, and be replaced, in many instances, by others not so proficient, is the service rendered by the Projection Department a valuable one, which can be availed of by every operator and exhibitor.

A broad policy underlies the Projection Department of the NEWS, and it may prove useful to set down an outline of the policy and methods upon which this department is conducted. The Projection Department is not intended to reflect any particular personality, but aims to set forth the progress and recent achievements in all branches of science and technology which bear directly upon the successful projection of motion pictures, and in addition to supply first-aid to all operators and exhibitors who require assistance in remedying vexing conditions which have suddenly arisen.

To carry the first page of this plan into effect requires an exhaustive study of the work of all experimenters in the field of projection and allied industries, and the prompt publication of important articles and papers which shed new light on old and vexing problems, as well as introducing new and detailed explanations on matters important to the operator which have hitherto received incorrect or insufficient treatment. This aim is realized through feature articles, prepared sometimes by our Technical Editor, but in many instances contributed by authorities of reputation, while not a few are reprinted from recognized technical and scientific journals. Thus it can be taken that all of the leading workers on electricity, optical projection, mechanical design, etc., are collaborators in the preparation of the Projection Department. The feature articles are, moreover, selected with a definite viewpoint; all deal with subjects upon which large numbers of our readers have requested definite and extensive information. To carry the treatment of some important subjects further than has hitherto been undertaken in motion picture trade journals, requires sometimes, a more scientific consideration of the questions than has previously been accorded them, and while this rather formal method of discourse may cause dismay to some of the more elementary readers, we would point out that they have there the material for further study, and we find our justification in having provided complete and accurate explanations of the matters in which large numbers of readers have signified their interest.

In the matter of answers to the operators' and exhibitors' questions the Projection Department also pursues a definite course, which is primarily to see that every correspondent has his answer, and without charge or obligation of any sort. Moreover, should the correspondents' difficulty appear to warrant quick action, or require a confidential reply, this is at once supplied by mail, no fee or charge of any kind being demanded for our services.

In the main, of course, we prefer to publish our readers inquiries, and the answers thereto, in the Projection Department, where there are also of service to others who perchance might experience similar difficulties. The publication of these answers also sometimes leads to stimulating discussions in which further ideas on the same subject are advanced by other readers, whose views we are always glad to publish. No stone is ever left unturned to secure the information required by various readers of teh Projection Department, and to maintain it as the best medium of advice and assistance on projection now in existence we invite the suggestions of readers at any time, for it is by meeting the requirements of the exhibitor and the operator that the Projection Department will best fulfil its mission.

Illumination and Its Measurement

(Concluded from last week)

Foot-Candle Measurements

IT will be noted that in measuring the candle-power of light sources as previously discussed, we balance the illumination on opposite sides of a screen. Often, however, we are interested in the illumination itself, that is, the foot-candle intensity which is being supplied to any given area, while we care very little about the candle-power of the sources which supply the illumination. If we calculate the different foot-candle intensities to which one side of the screen of a photometer is illuminated when the distance between the screen and the standard lamp is varied, and then place the screen so that the illumination we wish to measure falls upon the opposite side of the screen, the balance of the photometer will give us a measurement of the foot-candle intensity. The difference between photometers used for measuring candle-power and those used for measuring foot-candles are chiefly ones of form and calibration.

Fig. 10—Foot-candle meter

An instrument called the foot-candle meter has recently been designed to measure foot-candle intensities quickly and with a fair degree of accuracy. It is very simple in operation, so light that it can be easily carried about, and so small that readings can be taken in very restricted spaces. The instrument is shown in Fig. 10. In operation, it is placed upon, or adjacent to, the surface on which a measurement of the foot-candle-intensity is desired. A lamp within the box illuminates the under side of the screen to a much higher intensity at one end than at the other. The illumination which it is desired to measure is, of course, practically uniform over the entire scale. Closely spaced translucent dots, which serve the same purpose as the grease spot in the simple bar photometer, line the scale from end to end. If the illumination falling on the scale from the outside comes within the measuring limits of the meter (0.5 to 25 foot-candles) the spots will appear brighter at one end of the scale than at the other, and at the point where the spots are neither brighter nor darker than the white paper scale the illuminations from within and from without are equal. The scale is accurately calibrated with the lamp within the box burning at a certain definite voltage. A voltmeter and rheostat permit the operator to adjust the lamp voltage to that at which the instrument was originally calibrated. The energy is supplied from small dry cells.

This instrument is proving very servicable for "checking up" installations, to insure, for example, that the illumination is ample when the lighting equipment is in first-class shape, and to see that it is not allowed to fall below a desirable value due to improper care and attention to the lighting system. Those who by reason of their experience are enabled to plan an illumination layout without direct reference to spacing tables, formulae, etc., should find this instrument of special value in securing data which can be applied in the designing of future installations.

The Candle-Power Distribution Curve

The candle-power distribution curve of a lamp or unit was at one time widely used in calculating illumination intensities but the greater simplicity and accuracy of the lumen method of computing illumination has resulted in the former method falling into disuse. Distribution curves are now used principally for comparing the suitability of reflectors for use in a given location, from the standpoints, particularly, of light distribution and light absorption.

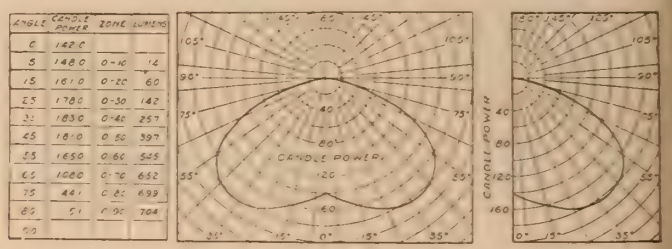

Fig 11—Three Methods of Recording Candle-Power Distribution Data

Fig. 11 presents three methods of showing the manner in which the candle-power of a unit measured at different angles can be recorded. The value at any angle represents the average candle-power of the source at that angle as the source rotates about its vertical axis. At the left of the figure the data are given in tabular form; at the center and the right they are plotted to polar co-ordinates. The distribution curves are used simply as a graphical method for presenting the data given in the table on the left. All have exactly the same meaning. A distribution curve is a graphical —not a pictorial—representation of the light distribution from a source, although its general shape might convey the wrong impression. It is simply a convenient engineering method of presenting tabulated data graphically.

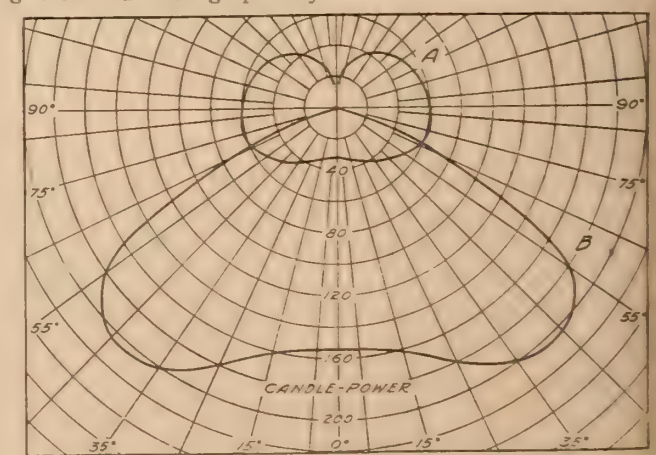

Fig. 12—The Area of a Distribution Curve is not a Criterion for Judging Light Output. These Two Curves Represent Equal Light Outputs

The area of a distribution curve is not a criterion of the total amount of light emitted by a source. In Fig. 12, both curves shown are taken from units giving exactly the same total lumens with different distributions of candle-power; although Curve I appears to represent much more light than A, the amount of light given off is the same in each case.

Another common error in regard to distribution curves is to assume that simply taking the arithmetical average of the candle-powers at different angles as shown on the distribution curve will give the mean spherical candle-power of the unit represented. To make the true relation clear, let us assume a May Pole set up at the middle of a hemispherical hollow, and that one girl carries a streamer making an angle of 45 degrees with the vertical and another carries one making an angle of 15 degrees with the vertical. Due to the contour of the ground about the pole, both ribbons will be of the same length. Now, keeping our candle-power distribution curves in mind, let us assume that the tip of the pole is the light source under consideration and that the length of each streamer represents the candle-power in its partculiar direction. It is obvious that in order to make one revolution about the pole, the girl holding the 45-degree streamer must travel a much greater distance than the other. In other words, she makes a bigger contribution to the general effect produced by the May Pole. In fact, because of the greater circle she must describe, she has to do 2.7 times as much work as the girl carrying the 15-degree streamer. In the erroneous use of a distribution curve just referred to, only the length of the ribbon is taken into consideration. From our analogy it is apparent that the zone of travel of the ribbon, or the complete zone in which the candle-power at a given angle is effective, must also be taken into account. Just as with our May Pole, the girl taking the 45-degree circle does 2.7 times as much work as the girl in the 15-degree circle, so the quantity of light necessary to maintain an intensity of one candle throughout the 45-degree zone contributes 2.7 times as much to the total light output of the lamp as the quantity of light required to maintain one candle throughout the 15-degree zone. In other words, the farther up from the vertical and toward the horizontal the candle-power shown on the distribution curve, the more weight it must be given as regards the contribution to the total quantity of light emitted by the source.

In calculating the flux of light in various zones, we usually find it convenient to calculate for zones of 10 degrees, and it is sufficiently accurate for most purposes to assume that the candle power value at the center of each 10-degree zone represents the average candle-power of the zone. The following are the factors by which such candle-power values should be multiplied to give the lumens in each 10-degree zone:

20°—30°	0.463
30°—40°	0.628
40°—50°	0.774
50°—60°	0.897
60°—70°	0.992
70°—80°	1.058

Above 90 degrees the factors are the same but in the reverse order.

To use these factors with the curve of any light unit, we take the candle-power at 5 degrees and multiply it by the 0-10 degree factor to obtain the lumens in the 0-10 degree zone; we take the candle-power at 15 degrees and multiply it by the 10-20 degree zone factor to obtain the lumens in the 10-20 degree zone, etc. The total lumens for any large zone is the sum of the lumens thus determined in all of the 10-degree sections of the zone.

Another method of determining the flux in any 10-degree zone is as follows: We first measure the horizontal distance between the vertical axis and the point where the candle-power curve crosses the center of the zone under consideration. We then lay off this distance on the candle-power scale to which the curve is plotted. By adding 10 per cent to this figure, we obtain a value which represents the lumens in that zone. Where it is desired to obtain the summation of the lumens in a number of 10-degree zones, for example, from 0 degrees to 60 degrees, it is convenient to mark off these horizontal distances (to the center of each 10 degree zone) successively on the edge of a sheet of paper. The value for the total lumens is then found by simply laying off the total length thus found on the candle-power scale and adding 10 per cent to the result. The results obtained by this method, neglecting possible errors or measurement, are accurate within 0.2 of one per cent.

New Wage Scale, Local 306

We regret to say that in a recent issue of the NEWS there were several errors in connection with the new wage scale of Local 306 which goes into effect September 24, 1918. We are therefore reprinting it in full with all corrections:

Erker's Accessory Catalogue Ready for Distribution

THE catalogue of motion picture apparatus, theatre equipment and projection accessories which, it was recently announced in these pages, has been in process of compilation by the Erker Bros. Optical Co. of 608 Olive Street, St. Louis, Mo., is now being mailed to exhibitors and customers of the firm.

The new catalogue is a convenient pocket-size booklet of some 144 pages and besides listing both portable and professional motion picture machines and a large assortment of theatre supplies, the catalogue gives prominence to the Erker line of announcement slides, all made from special designs.

PERFECTED PROJECTION

THE automatic self-adjustment of the DeVry Portable Motion Picture Projector is only one small feature of many which witness to its completeness. No detail has been overlooked in making the DeVry the strongest, the lightest, and the most compact self-contained projector on the market. It is without a single saparate part.

Adopted by the United States Government in all Departments where motion pictures are used, and by the American Red Cross, at home and abroad. Used also in all Y. M. C. A. work, on transports, at home and "over there."

FORM NO. 23

Flicker with A. C.

Mr. Thos. M. Jones, Sparta, Ga., writes as follows: "Am using new 6-B Powers, and have a strong flicker in picture. Have set shutter as per instructions from company, and titles are clear and steady but picture as a whole flickers. Am using a screen with no wrinkles in it coated with Muresco. Am working from A. C. with Compensarc, and special carbons. Kindly give me detailed instructions as to setting of shutter so as to correct this. After arc is lighted how far apart should carbons be kept, or fed? My operator is keeping them about ⅜ to ½ inch apart, with top carbon about one-eighth behind lower, with both upper and lower set at about 30 degree angle."

In reply: If the white letters of film titles show no streaming, or travel-ghost, at any position of the framing lever, the correspondent may be assured that he has faithfully carried out the maker's instructions in setting his shutter, and that the shutter is therefore in correct adjustment. The correctness of the shutter adjustment may be verified by turning the flywheel of the mechanism slowly by hand until the intermittent sprocket just barely commences to move and then noting if the cover-blade (bearing the trade-mark) of the shutter covers a litle more than half of the objective. A slight deviation, either backwards or forwards, from this position of the blade may be required to time the shutter perfectly for any given mechanism, but this, in general, is the condition which should prevail, and may be also taken as the rule for setting the shutter.

As the correspondent reports that titles are clearly projected with his present arrangement, it appears that another cause has to be sought for the severe flicker which becomes apparent in the scenes following, and although he has neglected to specify the type of shutter used, it is possible that he is using a three-winger, which will give a severe stroboscopic flicker with A. C., due to cut-off periods of the shutter becoming superimposed upon the positive periods of the current alternations. In this case severe flicker is almost unavoidable at all useful projecting speeds, but the trouble will disappear immediately upon the installation of a two-wing shutter, which should have its cut-off blade adjusted, or timed, as per the previous instructions.

Not knowing the amperage being secured at the arc by the correspondent we cannot, of course, advise precisely as to the proper distance apart for the carbons, but ⅜-inch to ½-inch is certainly too great a distance with most of the transformers now used in motion picture work. Although it generally makes a much more noisy arc, the carbons should be very close together to secure the steadiest and most intense light from A. C., and we recommend that the correspondent carry a shorter arc (distance between carbons), being careful, however, that the carbons are not frozen, i. e., in contact, as that results in very poor illumination, and in severe cases causes malformation of the craters and the extinction of the light.

Prominent Simplex Distributor Visits New York

TWO strong Simplex advocates were visitors in New York City last week.

Mark L. Swaab, son of Louis M. Swaab, and manager of his father's organization, made a flying trip on August 22 to New York from Philadelphia, the headquarters of the Simplex distributor for Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware and Southern New Jersey.

Mark L. Swaab, who has been in business with his father for eleven years, has gained such a thorough mastery of the supply line that there is not a detail but what he is familiar wtih. Part of his time is taken up with making installations in that territory, and although on the road a great deal, he is actively engaged in the management of the organization. Mr. Swaab is a member of Local No. 307 in Philadelphia, and is acknowledged to be one of the most expert projectionists among the younger operators.

A Portable Apparatus for the Development of Motion Picture Film at Normal and at High Temperatures

By J. I. Crabtree

Communication No. 74 from the Research Laboratory of the Eastman Kodak Company

ALTHOUGH motion picture film is usually developed in studio laboratories under conditions such that the temperature of the various solutions employed may be nicely regulated, occasions often arise when film must be developed under less favorable conditions and at temperatures approaching the melting point of the gelatine coating. Thus in the case of explorers traveling in tropical countries, negative films must be developed as soon as possible after exposure, otherwise inferior results are obtained. In such a case, development has to be conducted at night under existing conditions, and the softening of the film which usually results is no doubt responsible for much of the poor film obtained on such exploring expeditions Experiments were therefore made with motion picture film, developing according to the method recommended for the high temperature development of NC film (Communication No. 62, British Journal, 1917, p. 555).

Possible Methods of Development

1. In certain cases it is possible to develop at normal temperatures by preparing a quantity of cool water by a process of evaporation using a porous crock, and employing the cooled water for the preparation of the various solutions and for washing. However, the process of cooling the water requires time, so that this method would be impracticable unless it were possible to remain in the same spot for some considerable time, while if the temperature of the air were different from that of the developing solutions, the film would be apt to soften during drying.

2. Using the special developer T_8 (see Summary for formula) and the special fixing baths recommended and following the instructions as given for NC film, plates and film pack (Communication No. 62), motion picture negative film was developed at the temperatures indicated with satisfactory results:

Temperature.	Time of Development.	Fixing Bath.
75° F.	4½ min.	Chrome Alum—Hypo.
85° F.	3 min.	Chrome Alum—Hypo.
95° F.	1½ min.	Formalin—Hypo.

When developing for 1½ mins. at 95° F., however, little control is possible and uneven development is liable to be produced. Attempts were therefore made to prolong the time of development by th use of additional agents in the developer.

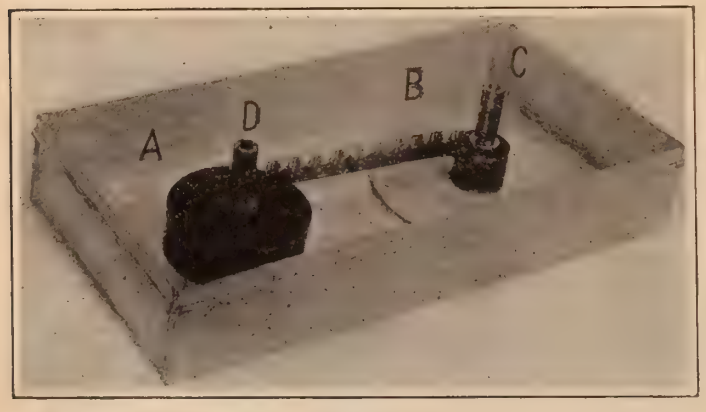

Fig. 1

Previous workers (Lumiere and Seywetz, B. J. 1911, p. 136; J. Bunel, B. J. 1910, p. 399; B. J. 1912, p. 599), have advised the addition of sodium and ammonium sulphate when developing at high temperatures, though the precise action of the addition agents was not investigated. Preliminary tests showed that at 95° F. the addition of ammonium sulphate to a developer containing carbonate resulted in the production of ammonia, which tended to accelerate development and produce dichroic fog, so that this compound was not considered further. Sodium sulphate proved, however, to be quite satisfactory and the following results were obtained with it:

Time of Development with Motion Picture Negative Film at 95° F.		Standard Developer T_8.	Developer + 10% Sodium Sulphate.	Developer + 20% Sodium Sulphate.
1½ min.	gamma.	1.66	.90	.70
	fog.	.21	.15	.06
	reticulation.	nil.	nil.	nil.
3 min.	gamma.	2.46	1.50	1.36
	fog.	.29	.26	.21
	reticulation.	nil.	nil.	nil.
4½ min.	gamma.	3.22	1.94	1.62
	fog.	.45	.27	.28
	reticulation.	slight.	slight.	slight.

From the above it is seen that by the addition of 100 grams per liter of sodium sulphate the time of development to secure a given contrast at 95° F. is increased roughly from 1½ to 3 mins., and to 4½ mins. by the addition of 200 grams per liter. In the latter case the sulphate has a tendency to crystallize out, so that a concentration of 10% to 15% is the maximum advisable. The contrast or "gamma" obtained by developing for the time stated is somewhat above the average, though when film is stored at a temperature of 95° F. for any considerable length of time after exposure and before development, the maximum contrast obtainable by development decreases. The above times of development should therefore be modified according to the age of the film and the particular quality of negative desired.

The following developing outfits are recommended as being readily portable and practical:

(1) A rack and tray outfit. The tray should be about 3 inches deep, while the rack may be either of the following types: (a) A spiral peg rack, the film being wound celluloid side against the pegs in the form of a spiral. (b) "The under and over rack," similar to the one for use in the vertical tank, but fitted with pegs on the under side so as to prevent the film from touching the bottom of the tray.

(2) A drum capable of being taken apart and a collapsible tank made of waterproof cloth; is economical in the use of solution but not so reliable as the outfit above.

(3) A developing aparatus consisting of two reels fitted inside a tank, whereby the film is passed to and fro from one reel to the other, is satisfactory when used at normal temperatures, but at higher temperatures the time of development is so short that it is not easy to use the machine without obtaining mottled results. Although by the use of addition agents to the developer, such as sodium sulphate or sodium sulphite, the rate of development may be retarded as above, the time of development with the developer T_6 cannot be conveniently extended beyond 6 mins. at 85° or 4½ mins. at 95° F., which time of development is entirely too short for such a machine.

The apparatus is shown in Fig. 1. It consists of a tank fitted with two reels, A and B, which may be revolved by means of an interchangeable handle, C, while an interchangeable brake, D, can be slipped over the spindle at A or B so as to prevent a too rapid unwinding of the film. In order to develop a reel of film, the tank is first filled with developer, and the film reeled off onto one of the spindles, the film being then reeled off onto the other and vice versa until development is complete.

On trial the apparatus worked fairly well with a dilute developer requiring 15 to 20 minutes development, though if the tension on either reel was at all uneven this produced uneven development, while the emulsion was apt to scrape away at the edges and form as a sludge in the developer and wash water.

Objections to methods 1 and 2 are as follows:

(a) Large tanks and racks are necessary, thus involving the use of a considerable quantity of solution for the development of 200 ft. rolls of film.

(b) Apart from the bulkiness of the same, even when made collapsible, the use of a formalin bath is impossible owing to the large surface of liquid exposed, especially when using the reel method of development.

In view of the above, the method of developing film by enclosing the same in an apron in a manner similar to that employed in the Kodak Film Tank was tried. Preliminary tests gave good results, and an apparatus was designed for reeling and developing film according to this method as follows:

The Reeling Apparatus

This is shown in Fig. 2, and consists of two brass nickel-plated reels, A and B, which are interchangeable and reversible, and the table, C, fitted with a spindle, D, so arranged that the spool of film from the camera magazine may be slipped over D, engaging with a pin at P. The celluloid apron of suitable width on reel A is hitched to the axle of B, as is likewise the exposed film from C, and both films are wound onto B by means of the handle H, which is interchangeable between A and B (See Fig. 3).

A detachable brake, K, may be fitted into spindles, S-1 and S-2, while the table C, is likewise fitted with a suitable brake. The function of the respective brakes is to keep the film in contact with the apron during winding. The detachable brake K may be eliminated if the rim of the reel is braked during winding. The reels are fitted with rings at R-1 and R-2 to enable the same to be lifted from one solution to another.

The film having been reeled onto B with the celluloid side in contact with the apron, a rubber band is placed around the same when it is ready for the developer. The reels A and B are also so arranged that the upper flange may be removed by unscrewing the collars X-1 and X-2 (see Fig. 2); the central collars P-1 and P-2 are likewise removable so that after the film is developed by removal of the upper flange as above, the apron may be removed bodily from the reel. When reeling the film, it is important that the film should be at least a foot or so shorter than the apron, while about a foot or more of film will usually be wasted due to contact of the emulsion with the apron. If wound correctly, the end of the film cannot slip back through more than one complete turn, and accordingly the amount of film wasted from this cause is negligible. If a leader of about two or three feet is attached to the end, no film whatever need be lost.

The film that first made motion pictures practical is easily identifiable by the words

"EASTMAN"
AND

on the film margin.

Musical Setting a La Camouflage

LAST Sunday, anxious to see D. W. Griffith's latest masterful production, "The Great Love," the editor of these columns attended the performance of the Strand theatre as this was the feature presented that week. The usual entertainment of the Strand's high standard was offered, until the feature was flashed on the screen. Then the editor began to feel very uncomfortable and realized that something was amiss. It seemed as though the orchestra did not maintain its usual excellent standard in either playing or following the picture. The entire synchronization of picture and music did not work as harmoniously as usual. After considerable thought and careful watching, it appeared that the trouble was due not to the orchestra, but to the musical setting which was played with the picture. After the performance I got in touch with some of the musicians of the orchestra and found out the cause of this. One thing especially attracted my attention and this was that the entire action of the orchestra was unusual and peculiar, and every few minutes he heard the musical director exclaim such terms as "Play No. 9, 15, 24, etc.," whereupon the musicians would hastily turn the pages to find the necessary music. After discussing the matter with the musicians, I learned that the score which had been especially prepared by supposedly capable musicians was being used.

The explanation of the musicians who blamed this amateurish action of the orchestra on the musical score was not sufficient. A glance through its pages was enough to convince me that the criticism was justified. The music score, although prepared by at least two so-called capable men in this industry, was far from being a real musical setting. No criticism can be made of the selections of music as this is merely a matter of taste. I, therefore, will not discuss the character of the musical selections, but wish to absolutely take exception to the assembling of the score in reference to the sequence of keys. Unnecessary attempts had been made at counterpointing and modulations with poor results. It is deplorable that the men responsible for the musical setting would be content to let such an effort go forth with their names affixed to same.

Curious to know what the management of the Strand theatre would do to surmount this difficulty, I again attended the Wednesday evening performance, and to my utter amazement, perceived that wonders had been done. Mr. Edel, Mr. Carl Edouarde, and the entire musical staff had worked consistently and earnestly in eliminating all unnecessary, inadequate and inappropriate parts of the score, and as a result, a very perfect harmonious musical setting was presented with the picture, not more than twenty-five per cent of the original score being used. As usual the management of the Strand immediately used its discretion in substituting a suitable musical accompaniment for this very excellent feature.

I hope that such theatres as the Strand will in the future, before using any score issued by any company, try it out and refuse to use it, if in any way unsuitable. Such action would automatically eliminate all men employed in this industry whose work is not only theoretically imperfect, but also unpleasant to the ear. Good music is forty per cent of any picture entertainment.

MUSICAL EDITOR.

Rosenbaum Writes March

Ed. Rosenbaum, Jr., who is doing the publicity work for the William Fox production of "Salome," has just written a march, entitled "The Police Reserves March." The piece is dedicated to the theatrical unit of the New York Police Reserves, of which Mr. Rosenbaum is a member.

Review of Latest Compositions

1—"Toreador Humoresque," by M. L. Lake—A Novel Fox Trot built on the well known Toreador Song (Carmen) with the original melody intact but cleverly worked against a complicated set of rag and countermelodies. The big dance hit of the year. (Carl Fischer, Cooper Sq., N. Y.)

2—"He's My Boy," the new patriotic Tipperary song; a natural overnight song hit; the title alone spells success. Now is the time to play it. A record smashing New York hit. (Chas. K. Harris, Columbia Theatre Building, New York.)

3—"Jealous Moon," fox-trot by Zamecnik. Certainly J. S. Zamecnik has never scored a bigger success than with this number. Bright and tuneful it is indeed a tinkling fox-trot. (Sam Fox Publishing Co., Cleveland, O.)

4—"My Paradise," waltz by Zamecnik. Here is a waltz which is encored time and again. Dance leaders are enthusiastic over it. A dreamy, bewitching melody which the crowd will always whistle. (Sam Fox. Publishing Co.)

5—"I'm Always Chasing Rainbows," fox-trot from the musical comedy, "Oh Look!" The musical sensation of the country. (McCarthy & Fisher, Inc., 148 W. 45th St., New York.)

6—"We Don't Want the Bacon," America's next big hit. This is the number that our boys in the training camps "over here" are clamoring for. It's going to be a bigger hit than "Long Boy" which is "THE" song with the "Yanks" in France. Some "Jazzy" one step by Carr, Russell & Havens. (Shapiro, Bernstein & Co., 228 W. 47th St., New York.)

7—"Oh! Frenchy." The sensational song hit of the country. It's a riot. Here's the one big dance hit of 1918. The greatest novelty song hit of the season. (Broadway Music Corp., 145 W. 45th St., New York.)

8—"Soul of the Rose," Edward G. Allanson's supreme inspiration. Have you heard a soul-stirring waltz recently which you simply could not forget? If so, you received an introduction to the sensational waltz that all up-to-the-minute orchestra leaders find indispensable. (The Allanson Pub Co., Chicago, Ill.)

9—"There's a Lump of Sugar Down in Dixie," fox-trot; featured by Al Jolson at the Winter Garden, New York City, also at Ziegfeld Follies. The two principal musical productions playing in New York. (J. H. Remick & Co., 217 W. 46th St., New York.)

10—"If He Can Fight Like He Can Love, Good-Night Germany!" One-step by Geo. W. Meyer. Another wild-fire hit. (Feist Edition.)

11—"To Victory March," two-step by Henry Hadley. Dedicated to the Mothers of Defenders of Democracy, this snappy, spirited 6/8 march is one of the big hits of 1918. (Carl Fischer.)

12—"When Taps Are Softly Blowing," by Harry L. Watson, author of the famous "Khaki Bill." It presents "ragtime" in "full-dress," delightfully refreshing and refined; a master stroke that instantaneously appeals to the lover of classics and the follower of lighter motifs as well. (C. L. Barnhouse, Oskaloosa, Iowa.)

13—"The Fighting Allies." Descriptive tone picture by M. L. Lake. A grand descriptive tone picture in symphonic form portraying the historical entry of the Allies into the world war. Published to meet a real demand for a number calculated to arouse the enthusiasm of an audience at patriotic rallies, etc. A special feature of this selection is the fact that the national anthem of all the various countries introduced can also be played as separate numbers whenever necessary. The selection follows each nation's entry into the war, beginning with Serbia, then Russia, France, Belgium, Great Britain, Italy, and works up to a grand finale with the Star Spangled Banner. A wonderfully effective number which is now specially featured by Sousa, G. Pares (Garde Republic Band) and a host of other recognized leaders. (Carl Fischer.)

14—"The Nation's Awakening," by Lucien Denni. A really great march and two-step. An unprecedented success played by all leading bands and orchestras. (J. W. Jenkins Sons Music Co., Kansas City, Mo.)

15—"Texas Fox Trot," by David Guoin. The number that's musically perfect, the talk of the universe—everybody's playing it; makes a great dance number and superb for your concert program. (Carl Fischer-Witmark Orchestra and Band Department.)

Motion Picture News, Inc.,
729 Seventh Av.,
New York City, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

While looking over a lot of correspondence and contracts extending over a period of about six months, I have discovered that your publication has been the direct cause of our securing a wonderful amount of business, which brings to my mind that there is hardly a day goes by that we do not receive orders directly traceable to our advertising in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

In this connection, it will interest you to know that we have secured a great deal of business from places that we have never circularized in any way, which is a proof positive that your paper amply fulfills your claim that it is "The Exhibitor's Working Book", and that they read your advertising pages as carefully as they do the text.

Some little time back we ran a half page ad, headed, "Every Dog Was Once A Pup", and we feel that it will be as gratifying to you as to ourselves to know that that ad not only brought in a volume of business, but made for us many regular customers, who even now allude to that particular heading when writing us.

Knowing from personal experience that a word of commendation where deserved makes one strive for even greater things, and having received such thorough co-operation from you, we feel that you are entitled to know the results of our campaign, hence this letter.

With best wishes, I am,

Sincerely yours,

BEE-HIVE EXCHANGE.

Orpheum, Chambersburg, Makes Good

AFTER the theatre had changed hands for seven times during four years and failure had been written up with all of the changes except the last, Orpheum theatre, Chambersburg, Pa., is now making good under the management of H. R. Weber.

It was no experiment for Mr. Weber for he had already shown that he did things. He started in Chambersburg with a motion picture house that had the enormous drawing power of seventy-two persons when all the seats were filled. Later he built a much larger house, this one taking care of 398, but it was afterwards enlarged to seat 750. Then, several years ago, he disposed of the other house and took charge of the Orpheum, which cares for road shows as well as motion pictures. It seats 800, and is one of the most modern houses in the country considering the size of the city, 12,192.

Swaab Boosts Simplex Machine Untiringly

LEWIS M. SWAAB, 1327 Vine street, Philadelphia, Pa., who is the exclusive distributor for Simplex machines in Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware and Southern New Jersey, is considered one of the most progressive supply men in the industry.

The importance of printed matter as a vital means to the growth of his business has been evident from the time Mr. Swaab entered the accessory field. He not only uses mediums of national circulation, although he sells within a limited territory, but he reaches his public through house organs, large quantities of envelope inserts and advertising in local publications.

Neither does he relax in the so-called dull spell of summer. He believes in keeping exhibitors informed of the fact that he is selling Simplex machines in large numbers during all seasons. He gets results by effective advertising copy.

"NEWMAN" BRASS FRAMES AND RAILS

DO YOU KNOW?

that 90% of all the brass frames used in the moving p cture houses throughout the country are "NEWMAN'S"?

WHY?

Because we steadily have refused to cheapen or lower the quality of our goods, even though others have sought to undermine our prestige by underselling with cheapened products. That is one of the reasons why nine out of every ten frames sold bear the name "NEWMAN." Insist on that name and save money.

You ought to have our latest catalogue. Write us today.

Directory of New Theatres

BRITISH COLUMBIA

Motion picture fans are looking forward to the opening of the new Province theatre in Winnipeg, which is to cost in the neighborhood of $40,000. Manager H. N. Jernberg is in charge of the work, and he promises something new in architectural structure along motion picture theatre lines.

CALIFORNIA

I. D. Stanford is erecting a new theatre at Chico, which, in all probability he will name "The Liberty."

President C. W. Pennoyer of the Pacific Lumber Company, Fortuna, is authority for the statement that among many new ventures in that neighborhood are to be the erection of a theatre and several stores. The theatre will be built at once and will be modern in every respect.

Two new theatres are to be opened, one at Camp Fremont and the other at Camp Kearney in the near future, both for military men. Charles Salisbury is to be the manager of both houses.

ILLINOIS

The new Midway theatre at Rockford was opened last Saturday to capacity business, over 5,000 people being in attendance.

INDIANA

The new theatre at Montpelier was opened Saturday last to capacity business. "Palace" was the name given it and J. R. Keefe is its manager.

MASSACHUSETTS

Architect Hardy A. Lewis of Wickford has now completed his plans for the erection of a motion picture theatre and social club hall to be erected at Shannock. The building will be of one story and basement, 84 by 40 feet, with shingle roof and walls covered with novelty effect. The hall is to be 55 by 40 feet, and the basement will contain club rooms, bowling alleys and other recreation apartments.

MISSOURI

Brent Peters, of Bunceton, who has conducted the picture show at this place for the past few months, prior to the extreme warm weather, has perfected plans for the erection of an Airdome on the vacant lot in the rear of the city hotel, which he expects to have in readiness for occupancy soon.

J. H. Wiser and John Ambrose have rented the factory building from the Home Investment Company, and will open a motion picture theatre in Russellville in the near future. They will show on Wednesday and Saturday nights and will probably start next Saturday night.

NEW JERSEY

The Eureka Theatre Company, organized at Trenton for the promotion of motion picture theatres and other amusements, was chartered by Secretary of State Martin, recently. The concern, with principal offices at Hackensack, is capitalized at $100,000. John J. Sheridan, New York; Jacob J. Haffen, Hasbrouck Heights; William D. Newman, Paul H. Sergel, Alfred Whittley, Michael M. Wygant and Louis R. Harris, Hackensack, are the incorporators.

The owners of the Fox Liberty theatre, formerly the Hippodrome theatre, at Elizabeth, have taken out a permit calling for $1,000 for changes to the building's interior.

OHIO

The new Murphy theatre at Wilmington was opened last week under most auspicious circumstances. The money from the raffling off of the boxes and the ticket sales amounted to $1,216.72 all of which went to the Red Cross. There were speeches by Charles Webb Murphy, who delighted with the occasion, and by Judge Clevenger, M. R. Denver, Judge West, C. Q. Hildebrant and others. The theater is said to be the finest in the state and has a stage second only in size to the Music Hall in Cincinnati. According to the State Fire Marshal, who examined the building, it replaces the Colonial of Dayton as the finest amusement house in the state and few theatres west of New York excel it. Wilmington truly has a theatre of which to be proud.

The Complete Plan Book

The Last Word

MOTION PICTURE NEWS presents herewith a new permanent feature—The Complete Plan Book.

In launching an original idea lengthy explanations are expected and fulsome adjectives accepted.

But to the exhibitor struggling with his daily booking, advertising and presentation problems we sincerely believe that the pages following this are self-explanatory and self-convincing.

And to the manufacturer—demanding more and more that the trade paper give him a direct, well-forged link to the exhibitor—we honestly feel that the pages of The Complete Plan Book are their own best advertisement.

So we will let the explanation be brief—the adjectives few.

IN addition to many additional features, The Complete Plan Book merges the following previously established departments of Motion Picture News: Exhibitor to Exhibitor Reviews, Screen Examinations, and Ready-Made Ad-Talks.

All reviews of productions will hereafter appear in the pages of The Complete Plan Book—each criticism on a page with all other information that an exhibitor could possibly want regarding the production.

The pictures will continue to be reviewed by P. S. Harrison and Peter Milne. But all reviews will be crisp and straight-to-the-point—the brief, common-sense appraisal that one exhibitor would give to another regarding a production.

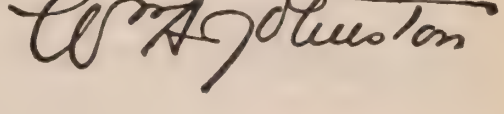
THEN, after the exhibitor has read the review of the picture—in every way except length similar to the previous Exhibitor to Exhibitor Reviews and Screen Examinations—he is no longer faced by an hour's hunt to get the other information he needs to successfully put on the picture.

He doesn't have to hunt for one back number of his trade paper for the Ad Talk; to another for a story, and so on. He doesn't have to skirmish through the waste-basket to see if the manufacturer's press book is still around the house. He doesn't have to order his accessories blindly.

Every fact that he needs regarding the picture is on the one page of The Complete Plan Book. A file of The Complete Plan Book gives him a ready index to the output of the picture world.

To the manufacturer The Complete Plan Book offerys assurance that he will be rewarded for every effort he has made to aid the exhibitor in successfully presenting his picture.

The worth-while press book is placed on record; the unusual poster is called to the exhibitor's attention; the complete accessory line is given its just attention.



We feel—candidly and honestly—that we have come close to the last word in giving the manufacturer 100% service by giving the exhibitor 100% service.

WE say "close" to the last word—for, naturally, we plan week to week improvement and expansion of The Complete Plan Book.

But the basic idea is before you. The future contemplates only a polishing of the rough edges; additions that will be suggested from time to time.

The Complete Plan Book makes its bow.

"THE PRUSSIAN CUR"—FOX

"A Sure Bet"—Says Harrison

THIS is a good production. It is a sure bet that it will please American audiences. The title of course indicates that it is a war picture, but it deals very little with actual warfare. Strictly speaking, it is the history of the war combined to a spy melodrama, presented in an intelligent way. The result is an interesting, thrilling and satisfying entertainment. There is only one point in it that may prove somewhat objectionable to some audiences, and that is the situation where the arch-spy wrongs the girl. It was rather unfortunate that the sex stuff was not left out of this feature entirely. Released September 1st—screen time, 1 hour, 45 minutes.—P. S. Harrison.

THE STORY

Beginning with the events leading to Germany's entrance into Belgium, the propaganda work in interest of Germany which the German Ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, affected in America, the sinking of the Lusitania and the activities of German U-boats, "The Prussian Cur" relates in pictures a detail account of the world war.

The big theme of the story is a true account, as furnished by Captain Horst von der Goltz, one of the Kaiser's chief henchmen, of the work of the German spy system which was instituted by Count von Bernstorff before diplomatic relations between America and Germany were severed. In this net work of treachery, Captain Goltz played an important part and his experiences as a spy in the employ of the Kaiser are given.

A replica of one of America's big industrial centers is shown. Here live Rosie O'Grady (Miriam Cooper), her father, mother, brother and sister. Rosie's sister is wed to "Otto, the Skunk," as Goltz was called. Captain Goltz is finally apprehended by an American soldier and the Prussian curs are brought to justice. Scenes of Potsdam Palace, the stronghold of the Kaiser, are shown. Many of this German demon's chief characteristics are brought to life by Walter M. Lawrence, who impersonates the Kaiser.

AD-TALK

One of the Kaiser's chief spies acting in a motion picture confession of his own dastardly work—that is the sensational creation you will see at the ———— theatre next ————. "The Prussian Cur" is the attraction, and in it William Fox has placed on the screen a comprehensive panorama of the world war and the Kaiser's far-flung net-work of trickery and deceit.

There have been war dramas of every magnitude, but none have treated the subject of the world war as has Director Roual Walsh in his production of "The Prussian Cur." Chapter after chapter dealing with the inhuman methods employed by the Kaiser and his armies, in his attempt to subjugate the world, are related. Captain Goltz, who appears in "The Prussian Cur," is known as "Otto, the Skunk," and was, before he exposed the treacherous net-work of German propaganda in this country, the Kaiser and Count von Bernstorff's chief henchman in Mexico, Canada and the United States.

In "The Prussian Cur" you will se striking likenesses of President Wilson, the important members of Congress, the Kaiser and his staff of inhuman agents and a marvelous detailed account of the world war, from its beginning to the present day.

It is not just a series of news weekly events—a stirring, dramatic story is told, with von der Goltz enacting his treacherous role of "Otto, the Skunk," chief henchman of the blood-thirsty Kaiser. Miriam Cooper is seen in the principal feminine role. Ralph Faulkner, noted for his facial resemblance to President Wilson, impersonates the President.

CATCH LINES

A comprehensive panorama of the world war, with the Kaiser, President Wilson and all other notables faithfully impersonated by screen artists, and the Kaiser's chief henchman, Captain Horst von der Goltz, himself, will be seen in "The Prussian Cur."

How the German youth are trained to follow out the blood-thirsty commands of their Kaiser.

Intimate scenes of the Kaiser as he looks when pacing the floor of Potsdam Palace—von Hindenburg, von Tirpitz, and all the other precursers of humanity, shown in perfect likenesses.

The only authentic expose of the "invisible Embassy," established by Count von Bernstorff before he left America, is seen in "The Prussian Cur," R. A. Walsh's marvelous war drama, with the Kaiser's chief spy appearing, himself.

The greed of "Kultur" is exhibited in all its infamy, rottenness and degradation in William Fox's big war drama, depicting every event of importance since the war began.

Captain von der Goltz, known as "Otto, the Skunk," the Kaiser's chief spy in America, appears in William Fox's "The Prussian Cur"—a vivid portrayal of the Kaiser's attempt to conquer the world.

The blood-thirsty, ravenous, death-dealing activities of "Kultur" in America and the Kaiser, the root of all evil, in his Berlin haunts, Potsdam Palace and environs.

SUGGESTIONS

"The Prussian Cur" is naturally a picture that lends itself to "stunt" advertising. The following references to scenes in the production are made to give the exhibitor suggestions along this line:

An exact replica of the interior of the House of Representatives in Washington, with President Wilson, Senators and Congressmen debating the war question.—The Kaiser's troops marching in "goose-step" time—some of the terrible atrocities committed by the German troops—President Wilson's famous "double," Ralph Faulkner—a true picture of von Bernstorff's "invisible Embassy" (headquarters of the German spy system after Bernstorff left America and Washington)—how the Prussian youth are educated to carry out the commands of their Kaiser—an exact replica of the interior of Potsdam Palace, the home of the Kaiser in Berlin—Captain Horst von der Goltz's expose of the German spy system—the vast army under the Star and Stripes and what they have done to the Kaiser—a complete resume of the events of the great world war.

Fox has prepared a most elaborate press book on this production. All the advertising aids are shown, there is a variety of advance stories, and pages of scenes are shown that might even lend themselves to advance lobby use. In addition, some good stunts are suggested, in particular one which might be used as a throw-away, being a "warning" set in German type, signed by Kaiser Wilhelm, and declaring in very formal language the terrible crime that the Blank theatre has committed by showing "The Prussian Cur," etc.

By all means, get the press book on this production. It is a really worth-while aid.

"If They Like Westerns They'll Like This"—Harrison

PICTURE goers who seek attractions of the Western sort will be pleased with this offering. It contains all the elements that go hand in hand with subjects of this nature, such as daredevil horse riding, shooting, killing and the hero's ability to get out of a tight fix by besting the villains. It culminates, of course, in the rescuing of the heroine and in her marriage to the hero.

The direction has been entrusted in good hands. Mr. Reynolds has proved his ability to handle such subjects intelligently. Released Oct. 20. Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

THE STORY

When William Burgess, president and owner of the only bank in the little Western town of Palo, died, "Big" Dave Dawley (George Nicholls) hit upon a clever plan, as he thought, of getting possession of the bank. Clay Burgess (Tom Mix), the son, was a wanderer and had been absent from his home several years and it was not until his father had been buried that he received news of his death.

"Big" Dave enlists the aid of Judge Quinn (C. McHugh), who was the only source of law Palo had. The judge did not favor "Big" Dave's plan but he was bullied into assisting in it. Dawley succeeds in bullying the judge but he is not so successful in getting Ben Davis (Jack Dill), in affixing his signature as a notary public. For refusing, Ben is driven from town by a threat of mal-treatment from Dawley's henchmen. Dawley gets information that Clay Burgess is due to arrive in Palo to take over his late father's bank, and he sends his henchmen to prevent his coming. They meet Clay just outside of the town but Clay bests the lot of them and rides to the nearest ranch house, where lives Della Bowen (Kathleen Connors) and Ben Davis, who works the ranch for her since his expulsion from Palo by Dawley's men. Davis had in his possession, the will of the late William Burgess, which provided that his son, Clay, should get all of his possessions, including the bank. After Clay's wounds have been nursed by Della, he departs for the lawless town in which lives William Cache and his band. He enlists their aid to assist him in wiping out Dawley and his gang. From this time on, there is enacted a series of adventures in which Clay Burgess is the hero. He eventually exterminates the Dawley gang, wins Kathleen and takes the office of president and owner of the Palo bank.

AD TALK

The first of William Fox's VICTORY PICTURES to be shown at the ——— theatre, "Fame and Fortune," stars the Western "stunt" man, Tom Mix, cowboy, and the most daring rider working before the camera. The other stars of Victory Pictures are Gladys Brockwell and George Walsh. Tom Mix in "Fame and Fortune" has been placed first on the list of Victory Pictures, for obvious reasons. First, the picture is a real thriller, showing Mr. Mix executing some of the most dare-devil stunts ever performed from the saddle of a broncho.

It is less than a year ago that this daring rider, finished actor and true sportsman, appeared in his first starring vehicle. In this short time he has "ridden" and "thrilled" his way to the hearts of millions of picture fans. These millions are going to get a real treat when they see their favorite in his latest work, "Fame and Fortune." You will never have experienced a real, hair-raising thrill until you see Tom Mix perform in this picture. A thrill from beginning to end—this is the only way in which his latest work before the Fox camera can be characterized in a few words. He does the impossible in the saddle and when he rides into town to avenge the kidnapping of the girl he loved, the whole town "sits up and takes notice"—and so will you when "Fame and Fortune" is projected on the screen of the ——— theatre.

A whirlwind of action with daring stunts by Tom Mix will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre ——— of ——— week. Kathleen Connors, the star's new leading woman, proves that she is entitled to be called Tom Mix's leading woman.

CATCH LINES

A man with real Western blood trickling through his veins; one capable of riding anything "with hair on it," as they say of an expert broncho-tamer in the West; a finished actor and the most popular "stunt" man working before the camera—Tom Mix in "Fame and Fortune."

One thrill after another with Tom Mix in the saddle and a Western drama that will make your "hair stand on ends"—the first of William Fox's Victory Pictures.

Snapping like the crack of a horse-trainer's whip, the action in Tom Mix's latest Fox Western drama, "Fame and Fortune," moves from introduction to finale, with thrill after thrill registered by the greatest of Western stunt men.

When his fortune is stolen, he laughs, but when they steal his girl, Oh! Boy!—Tom Mix in "Fame and Fortune."

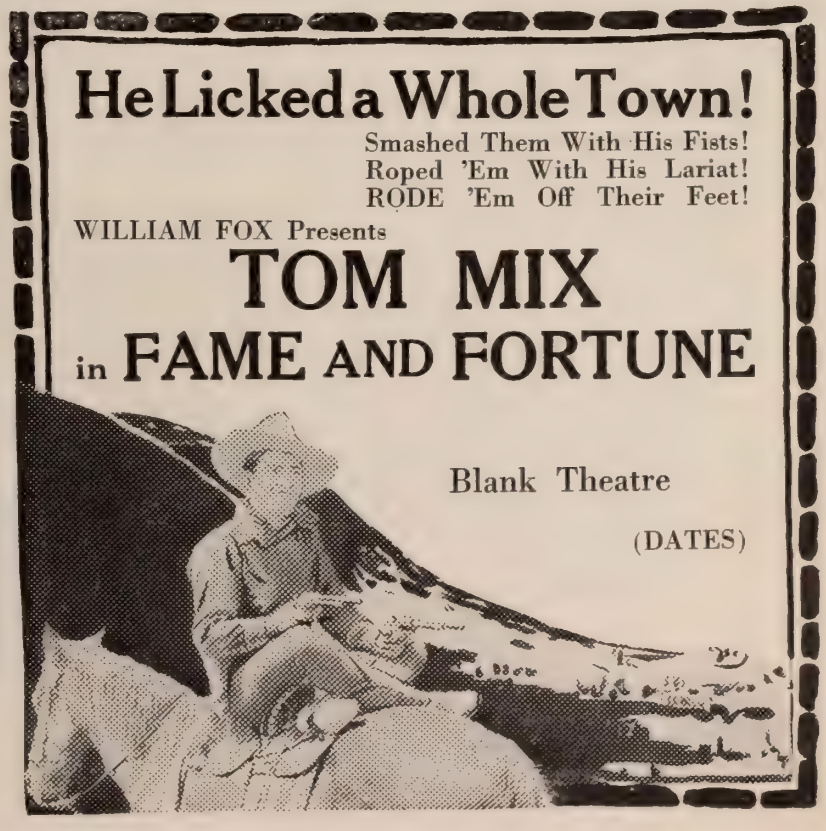
SUGGESTIONS



"Fame and Fortune" is a typical Western drama, with thrills from the introduction to the finale. Mix performs some real hair-raising stunts from the saddle.

The Fox Publicity and Advertising Bureaus, have prepared an excellent Press Book on "Fame and Fortune." It succeeds in giving the exhibitor all possible hints as to the manner in which he should advertise Tom Mix's latest picture.

Bring out the fact that "Fame and Fortune," starring Tom Mix, is the first of the series of William Fox's VICTORY PICTURES, twenty-six of which are to be released during the year. George Walsh and Gladys Brockwell are the other two Victory stars.

Tom Mix is the best living exponent of dare-devil riding. Bring this fact out in your advertising.

This is Kathleen Connors' first appearance as Tom Mix's leading woman.

"You Can Bank on Ethel Clayton"—Harrison

IF you are an exhibitor who has been running the Paramount program in the past and has or expects to sign up for it again, your interest undoubtedly is centered exclusively in the desire to know how these new stars compare with the old ones or what their possibilities for the future are. This department will do all in its power to give you as impartial a judgment as it is humanly possible. It will endeavor to keep you fully posted on the subject.

If Miss Clayton's first appearance under its banner can be taken as a criterion, it is a good sign for the future. She has a pleasant appearance. Also she can act and, given a decent story, she can deliver the goods.

"The Girl Who Came Back," an adaptation from "Leah Kleschna," is a crook play, well acted and directed. Besides possessing some situations with heart interest, it is full of action and suspense. It is clean and entertaining and should prove suitable for any kind of an audience. Released Sept. 8. Length, 5 reels.—P. S. HARRISON.

THE STORY

Lois Hartner (Ethel Clayton), is the daughter of Michael Hartner, a thief. Lois has been reared to practice her father's profession and to take pride in it. George Bayard (Elliott Dexter), rescues her from drowning and without learning his identity, Lois falls in love with him and from that time on, resolves to reform.

Her father has planned to steal the Bayard jewels, which it has been announced, were to be given to Bayard's fiancee, Dorothy Burton (Marcia Manon)), on their wedding day. Hartner enlists the services of Ralph Burton, son of Governor Burton, to locate the jewels in the Bayard home. Lois is sent to get the information from Ralph. She goes reluctantly. Lois and Ralph go to the Bayard home and while Lois talks with Bayard, who has caught her at the safe, Ralph gets the gems. Lois confesses to Bayard her mission.

After this experience, Lois determines to reform and goes to the home of a woman friend to live. Governor learns of his son's scrape, and insists that the girl, Lois, be arrested. Bayard protects her, believing her innocent. Dorothy misconstrues Bayard's intentions, and breaks the engagement. Lois leaves the city and goes West to live down her past. The girl's whereabouts are revealed to Bayard. He goes to her and they find happiness.

AD TALK

Ethel Clayton is now a Paramount star. Her first starring vehicle on the Paramount program, "The Girl Who Came Back," will be the attraction at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week. It is a society-crook drama and one of the best. Miss Clayton is an artist of the first class and her work in this, her first production on the Paramount program, merits all the confidence placed in her by this company.

"The Girl Who Came Back" is a screen version of C. M. S. McClellan's "Leah Keschna." Mr. McClellan will be remembered as the author of "The Belle of New York" and "The Pink Lady," two of the most successful musical comedies seen on the New York stage within the past decade. "Leah Keschna" scored a decided hit on the stage in 1905. Beulah Marie Dix, who has done the continuity for some of Paramount's biggest successes, scenarioized Mr. McClellan's work.

In the supporting cast with Miss Clayton are seen Elliott Dexter, one of the screen's most popular leading men; Theodore Roberts, known from coast to coast for his fine character work on stage or screen; James Neill, Charles West, Marcia Manon, Jack Brammall, Jane Wolff, John McKinnon and Pansy Perry.

A crook play, when properly staged, and with the artists of Miss Clayton's and supporting cast's ability in the principal roles, provides the most fascinating entertainment that is possible via screen. This one is no exception. The author has maintained suspense to the end and there is action every minute. It tells of a girl who has been reared to follow the profession of thievery and the fight she has to reform.

"The Girl Who Came Back" with Ethel Clayton in the featured role will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

SUGGESTIONS

"The Girl Who Came Back" is Ethel Clayton's first Paramount picture. This fact should be brought out with all prominence.

Her first Paramount picture is from the pen of G. M. S. McClellan, who wrote "The Belle of New York" and "The Pink Lady" and whose name is pretty well known in many sections. This fact should be given space in your newspaper advertising.

Call attention to the excellent cast which Paramount has gathered to support Miss Clayton.

Paramount has prepared a press book with all necessary helps for the exhibitor in the proper exploitation of this picture. Get it.

YOUR patrons, especially the women folks, will enjoy this attraction immensely. It is not big, but the pleasing personality of the star, coupled up with artistic handling and pleasing atmosphere, make it entertaining. The camera does better justice to Constance Talmadge's pretty looks in this than any other picture I have seen. She has brought those facial expressions of hers, especially that of ironical surprise, down to perfection. She is captivating when using the last named.

The authors, Geraldine Bonner and Hutcheson Boyd, introduce the heroine as a young wife with pretty looks, whose husband neglects her (a fool he was) for a designing widow, whose only stock in trade is her ability to flatter fools. The wife pits her wits against those of the widow and wins out in the end.

It is a clean picture suitable mostly for high class audiences. Length, 5 reels. Released last week in August.

THE STORY

John Constable (Harrison Ford), a popular writer of fiction, falls into the designing net laid by Mrs. Margaret Alloway (Vera Doria). John's young wife, Kitty (Constance Talmadge), realizes that she is losing her marital grip on John's love and she plans to end the struggle she is having to make John a true and loving hubby. There is a young man about town, Harry Travers (Harland Tucker), whose specialty it is to make love to neglected wives. He learns of the affair between John and the widow, and sets his net for Kitty.

At the last minute, John pleads a prior engagement as an excuse for not taking Kitty to the opera. He goes, instead, to the apartment of Mrs. Alloway. The man-about-town is right on the job and promptly tells Kitty that he will be glad to accompany her to the opera. After the opera he invites Kitty to supper in his apartment, which happens to be in the same building as that occupied by Mrs. Alloway. About this time, Teddy Sylvester (Lewis Willoughby), an admirer of the widow, who wants to marry her, calls. He goes, first, to Travers apart to make a call. But Travers is "out." Teddy climbs the fire-escape to Mrs. Alloway's apartment to learn the worst. Arriving home, John finds a note from Kitty, stating that she has gone to supper with Travers in his rooms. John hurries to Travers' apartment but finds Kitty alone, for Travers has climbed through the window on his approach. Mrs. Alloway sees Sylvester and thinks him a burglar. After the fun is over, John meekly goes to his wife's arms and forgets his fascinating widow.

AD TALK

Constance Talmadge invariably gets into some sort of marital mix-up, on the screen. If you remember her in "The Honeymoon" and "Good Night, Paul," you will remember that her marital troubles are the bane of her life. But there is always sunshine following a storm or vice versa and before Kitty Constable (Constance Talmadge) gets matters straightened out to her liking in her late picture, "Sauce for the Goose," she has a rousing good time at the expense of her hubby, John (Harrison Ford) and incidentally convinces him that she will make a much more agreeable and lovable wife than Mrs. Margaret Alloway, a designing widow who has captivated hubby. The brand of light, rippling comedy for which this little star is famous, is served in this late number on the Select program in good measure, and we doubt if the patrons of the ——— theatre will concede the same praise to another of Miss Talmadge's pictures that they will to this one after seeing it on the screen ——— of ——— week. It has the right swing to it and presents Miss Talmadge in a role that only she can interpret to the best advantage. "Sauce for the Goose" will drive away your troubles of the day and leave you refreshed for an equally refreshing night's rest. It will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

CATCH LINES

When light, rippling comedy-drama on the screen, be mentioned, there is one little star you always think of—Constance Talmadge.

The old proverb, "Sauce for the Goose," is the basic theme for Constance Talmadge's late Select picture of the same title—comedy that only Miss Talmadge can inspire.

Norma Talmadge's younger sister, Constance, in a comedy-drama that sparkles with wit inspired by the old proverb, "sauce for the goose."

Clean, wholesome comedy with the brightest star of the comedy field, Constance Talmadge, in the featured role.

"T'OTHER DEAR CHARMER"—WORLD

Harrison Declares Louise Huff's World Debut a Hit

WHEREVER Louise Huff goes cheerfulness and happiness go with her. She is a charming little thing, a regular sunbeam.

In "T'Other Dear Charmer" Miss Huff makes her initial appearance in World pictures. Barring "Inside the Lines," which is another kind of a subject, it is the best directed and most pleasing picture ever released by that concern. It will offer your patrons the kind of entertainment they have been demanding for a long time.

The story is of the romantic drama type, containing plenty of human element and light comedy situations of the high class kind. The star's acting is as good as any she has ever done. The cast is high class. The direction is of the highest standard. Mr. Earl has inserted several little human touches that will endear this offering to picture goers. The chase of the cat by the bulldog, for instance, and the latter's climbing on the ladder, will bring laughs. The photography is very artistic. The garden scenes are almost marvellous.

You owe it to your patrons to play this picture. Book it to follow some strong subject of a previous day. It is clean and will appeal to any audience, but the better element will appreciate it more. Released Sept. 16. Length, 5 reels.—P. S. HARRISON.

Directed by William P. S. Earle—Story by Charles Sarver—Scenarioized by Wallace C. Clifton

THE STORY

Betty Hallowell (Louise Huff), a wealthy young girl, is interested in Red Cross work. Anne Vanderhook (Valda Valkyrien) assists Betty at a benefit which is not as big a success as the girls hoped for. In order to make up the deficit, Betty decides to lease her beautiful summer home on Long Island. Her parents are dead and her grandfather, Captain Samuel Hallowell, has been sent on a voyage. Mrs. Wentworth, widow of a Western millionaire, sees the ad that Betty inserts in the papers, and negotiates for the estate. Her son, Tom, an American aviator, is invalided home and is recuperating in New York with his mother. Just before their departure for the summer home, the Wentworths' maid leaves them and they advertise for one. Betty gets an idea and answers the ad. She enlists her services as maid to Mrs. Wentworth in her own home. She and Tom fall in love and a scandal is raised because Tom is in love with his mother's maid. Then Tom meets Betty as her real self and he thinks that he has met a Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde character. After a series of escapades, Betty is placed in the right light and she and Tom are married.

AD TALK

There are few who visit the ——— theatre who do not remember the charming little actress who supported Jack Pickford in his Paramount successes. You all remember Louise Huff who was co-starred with Jack. Miss Huff is starred in her own right now and she is to appear on the screen of the ——— theatre ——— of ——— week in her first starring vehicle on the World program, "T'other Dear Charmer."

Supporting Miss Huff in her first World picture are John Bowers, Charles Dungan, Eugenie Woodward, Valda Valkyrien, Grace Stevens, Jack Raymond, Ezra Walck, Hurbert Barrington, Patrick Foy, Florence Billings and Ida Darling.

"T'other Dear Charmer," is brim full of romance—the kind that drives away the "blues" and makes you feel that you haven't gone to the "movies" in vain. It tells of a wealthy young girl who is working in the interest of the Red Cross and when she finds that a benefit that she has given has not realized the amount she expected, leases her Long Island estate to a wealthy woman from New York and disguises herself as a French maid. It is then that she runs head-long into romance, for the lessee's son, a young American aviator, comes home to recuperate from injuries at the front, and she and the young aviator fall madly in love.

CATCH LINES

Jack Pickford's former leading lady, Louise Huff, in her first World picture, as star, "T'other Dear Charmer."

A picture brim-full of romance with an American aviator and charming Louise Huff in the stellar roles.

When a wealthy young girl disguises herself as a French maid, meets a young aviator and falls in love, there is bound to be oodles of romance—there is in Louise Huff's first starring picture, "T'other Dear Charmer."

A photodramatic romance that is guaranteed to drive away the worst case of "Blues."

Louise Huff and strong World cast, are coming to the ——— theatre with a new brand of romance.

SUGGESTIONS

This is Louise Huff's first starring vehicle since she was seen opposite Jack Pickford. She is now a World Film star.

Her first picture has a touch of the war spirit, as it presents John Bowers, World leading man, in the role of an American aviator.

The main point to be advertised is the fact that it is Louise Huff's first starring vehicle on the World program.

William P. S. Earle, who directed "The Common Law," featuring Alice Joyce, directed Miss Huff's first World picture.

"LOVE'S LAW"—MUTUAL

Gail Kane's Good Work Handicapped

THERE is one thing a spectator will not excuse in pictures; the marriage of the heroine to the man who proposed to her once insultingly. The reformation of a murderer can be made convincing, but not that of a man with a vile mind. In such cases, first, he doesn't give any sympathy to such a villain-made hero, and secondly, he is inclined to take away whatever you may have bestowed on the heroine, and make him look down upon her. That is what happens in this picture.

The story is by Joseph Franklin Poland. Besides transforming the villain into a hero he has the hero, another man, become a villain towards the end.

There are two things you can do to improve this picture; cut out the opening scene showing a view of the factories, which is dupe, and destroys the suspense by giving away the story, and one towards the end, where the villain, formerly the hero, commits suicide, after the shooting, by jumping off the cliff.

Miss Kane does some fine acting in this contribution, but is handicapped with an ordinary story. It is an average program picture. Released Sept. 1st. Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

Story by Joseph Poland.

THE STORY

Sonia Sariloff (Gail Kane) is an American girl of Polish descent. Her father and mother were, before their death, famous musicians. Sonia's guardian, Ivan Sariloff, is a mill-hand in a manufacturing town. Ivan and his wife are in constant worry that the mill will close and look upon Sonia as a useless member of the household because she spends all her time practicing on the old violin which her father had left. Her ward learns that Andrew Hamilton, the mill-owner is contemplating a cut in wages and he, fearing that the problem of supporting his family will be too great, hits upon the idea of selling Sonia's violin. Hamilton, the mill owner, recognizes the violin as valuable, buys it for fifty dollars. Sonia, when she discovers the loss, hurries to Hamilton's home and demands her property. Hamilton is struck with her beauty, and asks her to play the violin to establish her ownership. She does so and he recognizes in her, rare ability. He suggests that she permit him to send her to Europe to study. Her debut comes and with it the realization that Hamilton wants her. She drops all the luxury with which Hamilton has surrounded her and returns to the mill town to work among the poor. Hamilton follows her into the slums and is struck with the terrible conditions of want and misery. Sonia falls ill with the epidemic that is prevalent and Hamilton nurses her back to health. He proves that he loves her and they are united.

AD TALK

Gail Kane's first production by her own company, Gail Kane Productions, distributed by Mutual, "Love's Law," will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week. Joseph Poland wrote the story and it was produced under the direction of Francis Grandon. Courtney Foote, who has been seen opposite many of the biggest stars on the screen, is Miss Kane's leading man. Others in the cast are Reed Hamilton, Frederick Jones, Augusta Perry, Walter Deming, Matilda Baring and Emil La Croix.

"Love's Law" gives a dramatic exposition of the courage of a poor girl, a gifted violinist, in forfeiting luxury and a brilliant career, to keep her name clean. It is a play of a girl with an idea and her struggle to live up to that idea; to win fame without sacrificing herself and to win the love and respect of a man.

It is Miss Kane's first production by her own company and represents a photodramatic subject, teeming with tense dramatic situations, and a story that holds from the first flash to the final fade-out. The supporting cast contains the names of some of our best artists working before the camera. "Love's Law," with Gail Kane in the featured role, will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

SUGGESTIONS

A plan book is available, giving suggestions for advertising and all necessary detail for the exploitation of "Love Law."

It is well to bring out the fact that "Love's Law" is Gail Kane's first independent production, distributed by Mutual. Courtney Foote, Miss Kane's leading man, is a popular screen artist. Give his name prominence. He supported Lina Cavalieri in "Love's Conquest."

The human-interest and heart appealing note is given prominence in this picture. There is a combination of romance, love, and adventure. There is an auto accident that affords the thrill of a serial production.

"ITALY'S FLAMING FRONT"—FIRST NATIONAL

Play It Right and You Have a Winner

YOU can play "Italy's Flaming Front" and merely satisfy your audiences, or, you can play it and make one of the hits of the season. It's up to you.

The picture is "there" in every sense of the word and it is certain to send them away satisfied even if they slapped their money down at the box-office without caring what picture they were going to see or if they merely expected a "war picture."

It's up to the exhibitor to show that he is "there." The big idea is—don't merely announce this as "another war picture," but play it up as the first complete exposition of what a battle really is. Tell the patron he will go away with a concrete idea of all the details that go to make up a battle—that for two hours he will feel like Commandissimo Foch planning every angle of an onslaught on the enemy.

There's little else that can be said in a review. For once we can write—everything is in the picture that producer says is there. As for the rest—don't be afraid of the exploitation material offered with the picture. It has an out of the ordinary idea back of it aimed at an out of the ordinary result.—ROBERT E. WELSH.

THE CAST

Italy's military strategists, General Diaz, Vice-Admiral Emmanuele Cutinelli-Rendina, Gabriele d'Annunzio; Italy's "Aces"; her daring troops and her fearless seamen—a more capable cast of characters could not grace the program of any dramatic subject, projected through the lens of a projection machine.

Filmed by the Cinematographic Division of the Royal Italian Army.

All American Rights Controlled by First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

THE STORY

"Italy's Flaming Front" is better than a story—it's an exposition of facts—an exposition of the daring feats, the fearless fighting and the grim determination, of Italy's sons, in their fight to drive the Austrian hordes from their door.

The great events of Italy's part in the world war have been caught by the Cinematographic Division of the Royal Italian Army, as they actually happened, not as some director staged them. The actuality is there in pictures. The hardy Alpini, are seen, sweeping down the icy slopes of the Alps, on skiis, to meet their hated enemies, the Austrians.

"Italy's Flaming Front" presents real facts—it's a story of facts.

AD TALK

The real battle picture that thrilled Broadway —"Italy's Flaming Front"—the picture that shows the type of soldier that marched behind Julius Caesar when he made his Roman conquests, the picture that presents Italy's sons in their fearless marches over the ice-clad Alps, in quest of the hated Austrians; their exploits in the air, on land and on sea—all is shown in this wonder of the art of cinematograph, "Italy's Flaming Front."

More fascinating, more stirring, more realistic than the greatest drama ever conceived by the brain of man, is this wonderful exposition of the actual events occurring on both sides of the Alps as Italy's brave and fearless sons, exact a terrible toll from their arch-enemy, Austria for disturbing their peace and the peace of the world democracies. The first authentic pictures of a mighty battle as it is waged according to the rules of modern warfare, by Italy's warriors, is represented in this, the greatest and most stirring of all war pictures, "Italy's Flaming Front."

Here is a partial list of the stirring events (as they actually happened), that you will see in "Italy's Flaming Front":

The marvelous feats performed by the Italian troops in ascending the Alps and swooping down on their arch-enemy, Austria; Italian artillery in action; close-ups of a dozen different types of big field guns; panorama of enemy trenches under fire; first complete air-battle ever photographed; Austrian bombing plane attacking Italian fleet; six Italian seaplanes giving chase; fighting on mountain peaks above the clouds; Italian soldiers advancing over icy-peaks on skiis; Italian torpedo boats in action and a daredevil tail dive to sea by an Italian hydroplane pilot. General Diaz who is directing Italy's offensive against the Austrian, on land; Vice-Admiral Emmamuele Cutinelli-Rendina, commanding Italy's navy and Italy's "ace," Gabriele d'Annunzio, are seen in action, and in intimate close-ups.

"Italy's Flaming Front," without exception the greatest war picture ever presented to the American public, will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

CATCH LINES

Your big chance to see real fighting, with the gruesome scenes eliminated—the first authentic picture showing the events of a complete battle as it was actually waged.

Official production made by the Cinematographic Section of the Royal Italian Army, on its first American tour under the sole direction of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Marvelous exposition of the daring feats performed by Italy's sons in crossing the icy-Alps to take revenge on the Austrians.

History is made before your eyes when "Italy's Flaming Front," official pictures showing the Italian troops in action.

Photographed under fire, this remarkable series of pictures showing the Italian troops, on land and sea, in action, presents the most stirring drama ever enacted before the camera.

Vast panorama of Italy's fighting arena in pictures.

The most marvelous feats ever accomplished by a nation's troops are seen performed in this most marvelous of pictures.

ADVERTISING AIDS

One of the most complete list of advertising accessories and aids, ever prepared by any producer, for the benefit of the exhibitor in exploiting a picture, has been prepared by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit on its big war picture, "Italy's Flaming Front." These aids can be obtained at the First National Exchange, and we advise each and every one who shows this picture to secure them and follow as nearly as practicable, the instructions given.

POSTERS:—Three-sheet in colors, showing explosion of warship with airplane hovering over. Below, announcement appears of title of picture with short list of some of the big scenes in production.

Two styles of 1-sheets—one showing large picture of General Diaz, with announcement appearing in large type at bottom; the other, showing Italian mortars, firing at plane in the air with announcement appearing at bottom.

One 6-sheet in colors, shows Italian troops moving across a gorge in the Alps, on carryalls running over cables stretched from peak to peak with a background in the form of a huge panorama of the Italian activities.

One 24-sheet with announcement extending over three-fourths of space and on the right, an Italian officer making observations.

NEWSPAPER CUTS:—A great variety of newspaper cuts are available, in one, two, three, four and full-page advertisements. The full-page specimen should be used, if practicable, by every exhibitor that shows this picture. It is a "knock-out" for drawing the crowds. It shows a huge panorama of an Italian battle centre with a detailed announcement in large and small type, telling of the big scenes in the production; a resume of the episodes, and a suggestion is made at the top and space left blank for the opinion of the mayor or other public official of your town or city. "You can now see a great battle" appears in extra large type across the top of the page underneath the space suggested for your mayor's opinion. This is a seven-column or full-page newspaper advertisement and it's a dandy.

Another excellent cut is offered in the four-column specimen for newspaper advertising. The one, two and three-column cuts for your newspaper show scenes from the production. By all means, get the First National's press book on this picture.

Music plot for "Italy's Flaming Battle Front" as prepared by Ernst Lux for First National Exhibitors' Circuit:

Three styles of heavy placards stock in colors, 22 x 28, are available, showing production of strategic sketch diagram made during action by a military observer. "Italy's Flaming Front" appears in large red type at top with inserts in top corners of Vice-Admiral Cutinelli-Rendina and S. E. Vice-Admiral Camillo Corsi. Below in either corner are scenes from production.

Throw-away and window display cards are available.

NOTE—In music plots each reel of film is divided into 10 units of time. Each unit denoted by one X representing about 1½ minutes. Consequently when a number is designated by XX it plays about 3 minutes, XXXX about 6 minutes, etc. When no X appears after musical description it means that the number is very short and does not play a minute or more. When cues to stop numbers are in quotation "——" it means that the cue is reading matter or sub-title. All other cues are action on the screen. All segues should be made quietly and clean. When quick segues or abrupt stops are necessary it will be mentioned in cues or notes. When the time of each 1,000 feet of film is less than 15 minutes there will appear less than 10 X's in each reel. To get the correct time of projection for each reel, multiply the number of X's appearing in each reel by 1½.

"THE HUN WITHIN"—PARAMOUNT

The Spy "Meller" Done in Usual Manner

THE chief objection to this picture, dealing with spies, is that it presents no new situations. Everyone of them almost has been done on the screen before, although in a different form. Don't get it into your head, however, that the picture is bad, for it is excellent. It creates the desired suspense that is required of good pictures: it is exciting, thrilling (it makes you sit on the edge of your seat) and holds the interest to the end. It also possesses some situations with heart interest.

There is another point that might prove rather detrimental from a propaganda angle. It is where the spy places the Thermo-bottle containing T. N. T. (Tri-Nitro-Toluol), the highest form of explosive known, in the hold of the ship carrying troops to France, adjusted with a clock-work mechanism to blow it up. Now, there are thousands of our boys that are transported over there every month. Millions of hearts of mothers, fathers, brothers, wives, children, sweethearts and friends are traveling with them, praying for their safety. Don't you think such scenes are unnecessarily agonizing to them? Producers may give this a thought.

You will satisfy your patrons with this clean entertainment, but I would suggest you book no spy subject at least two weeks before you play this one. It will freshen their minds and will prepare them to give it a better a better reception. Length, 5 reels. Released Sept. 8.—P. S. HARRISON.

THE STORY

Henry Wagner (George Fawcett), a German-American, but a true American citizen, lives in the suburbs of New York with his son Karl (Charles Gerard). Before America declares war on Germany Karl is in Berlin at college.

Near Wagner's home lives Beth (Dorothy Gish) with her invalid father. Prior to his death Beth's father asks Wagner to watch over Beth after his death. She and Karl become close friends. Frank Douglas (Douglas McLean), a schoolmate of Beth's, is in love with her.

Shortly after war is declared Douglas enters the secret service as an operative against German spies and propaganda. When Karl returns from Berlin he is a changed man. All his sympathies are with Germany and the Kaiser.

Karl plans with others to sink an American transport about to leave for France. He enlists the aid of a traitorous sailor, Krug. Krug takes a bomb concealed in a Thermos bottle to the transport and deposits it with a time fuse in the bottom of the ship. Beth while asleep in the home of Wagner, who had complied with her father's wishes and taken her in, hears Karl plotting to carry out this dastardly crime. Fearing that she will expose him, Karl takes her to the German spy headquarters and locks her in the cellar. Douglas, who is on the lookout for a spy, trails him to the den and there finds Beth, whom he rescues. They hurry to the docks and warn the captain of the ship of the danger from the bombs.

AD TALK

A striking exposition of the spy menace in America is revealed in Paramount-Artcraft's production of "The Hun Within" under the direction of Chet Withey. It carries a splendid patriotic appeal, interpreted by an exceptional cast of Paramount players, and gives a phase of the war that has hitherto been untouched by producers for the silent drama.

George Fawcett, one of our most popular character men, and Dorothy Gish, who was seen in "The Great Love" and "Hearts of the World," have the principal roles. Douglas McLean, whose rise to one of the screen's most talented juvenile actors was almost meteoric, has the leading juvenile role. Others in the cast are Charles Gerard, Bert Sutch, Max Davidson, Lillian Clarke, Robert Anderson, Eric von Stroheim, Adolph Lestina and Kate Bruce. A more competent and capable cast of characters has seldom been listed for any one screen drama than the one found in "The Hun Within."

This is a war drama without battle scenes and without the usual horrors of war as depicted in the average war drama. It has a powerful appeal to the patriotic, and from a sheer dramatic standpoint it has few equals in the list of screen dramas seen during the present year.

The story tells of a German-American true to the country of his adoption, the treachery of his son who swears allegiance to his Kaiser, the loyalty of a little girl, the wonderful services rendered his country by a young American and the terrible effects of German spy work in America.

"The Hun Within," a powerful war drama, with George Fawcett and Lillian Gish in the principal roles, will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

CATCH LINES

A war drama without battle scenes—without the usual horrors of war and with the dramatic element running to high tension—"The Hun Within," with George Fawcett and Dorothy Gish.

POSTERS:—Two 1-sheets; two 3-sheets; one 6-sheet and one 24-sheet stand.

These posters show dramatic incidents from the production, with an announcement appearing in a conspicuous place in large bold type.

All of them show Dorothy Gish and George Fawcett, the principal characters, with the exception of one 1-sheet which shows Miss Gish and the juvenile lead, Douglas McLean.

PHOTOS:—Eight 8 x 10 black and white; eight 11 x 14 sepia; one 22 x 28 sepia, and 8 x 10 photo of star.

ADVERTISING CUTS AND MATS FOR NEWSPAPERS:—Five 1-col, three 2-col. and two 3-col. All of these styles show Dorothy Gish with other members of the cast in scenes from production, with the exception of one 1-col. cut which shows the German spy looking at a portrait of the Kaiser. Paramount has also prepared some excellent newspaper cuts made with 55-line screen, enough to show detail, yet coarse enough to avoid filling with ink. There is one in particular which gives an artist's drawing of a German spy peering through field-glasses from a safe distance and watching the effects of a bomb on a ship as it blows up at sea. Below this drawing appear a short synopsis and blank space to fill in name of theatre. This is excellent advertising.

Stock cuts and mats are available in five 1-col, three 2-col. and two 3-col.

"A JAPANESE NIGHTINGALE"—PATHE

An Artistic Production of a Good Story

THE action and the suspense is well maintained throughout this picture, and as it contains also the element of heart appeal, it will furnish picture goers with satisfactory entertainment.

It is a Japanese story, by Wm. Young, in which the heroine becomes a Geisha girl to avoid a detestable marriage. She meets a young American whom she learns to love. Eventually they get married.

The production describes some of the strange customs of the Japanese people which are interesting. Some of the scenes show cherry trees in full bloom. This adds to the realism and makes it look extremely artistic.

This picture is clean and will have an appeal to all classes, especially to the better element. Released Sept. 22. Length, 5 reels.—P. S. HARRISON.

THE CAST

Yuki, the Nightingale.....Fannie Ward
John Bigelow.....W. E. Lawrence

THE STORY

Yuki, a Japanese girl of good family, must either enter a native church or become the bride of an ancient roue, according to the dictates of her stepmother. Yuki rebels at both these choices and one day escapes from the church with a companion and takes refuge in a pretty Japanese tea house where she dances and sings to amuse the guests. It is here that she meets John Bigelow, an American tourist. Bigelow had arrived in Japan, bearing letters of introduction to Yuki from her brother, with whom he attended the university, but due to her flight he was unable to locate her. Unaware that she is in reality the sister of his chum, Bigelow is strongly attracted by the beautiful Japanese girl.

But Yuki's stepmother and the villainous roue have found the girl's trail. Several attempts are made to kidnap her from the roadhouse but the stalwart Bigelow is too much for the conspirators. At length Bigelow himself runs away with the girl and before the roue can overtake them, marries her in the presence of the American consul. The roue still plots their separation. One of his henchmen steals the record of the marriage.

When Yuki's brother arrives, the roue tells him a false story, to the effect that his sister has been betrayed by the American. In anger, the brother confronts Bigelow with this accusation. The paper Bigelow believes to be the certificate is produced but it proves a piece of falsifying and damning evidence. The brother swears that he will kill Bigelow, providing Yuki does not leave him and enter the church before the next sunrise. So Yuki, anxious after Bigelow's welfare, makes ready to leave him. As she is about to take the vows, Bigelow dashes in with the real certificate which the villain's catspaw has returned to the American because of jealousy.

AD TALK

"A Japanese Nightingale" is Fannie Ward's latest picture and in many respects offers her in the most brilliant vehicle she has had during her long and extremely successful screen career. The story is laid in the land of the cherry blossom, but contrary to tradition, departs from the "Madame Butterfly" type of story on which line the majority of authors write. It ends happily with the American marrying the Japanese girl, and so exquisite is Miss Ward's performance that there is not the slightest offense in this breaking of the too conventional barrier of race.

George Fitzmaurice, chief producer of the Astra-Pathe forces, staged "A Japanese Nightingale" and has, as usual, done an unusually lavish piece of work. There are scenes in the Japanese gardens that are perfect riots of beauty and peopled with natives in proper costumes there is not a false note in the entire atmosphere. The settings were especially erected for the production and follow out the general scheme of things, in that they are lavish and perfect to the smallest degree.

Miss Ward again displays her remarkable ability to play the role usually taken by the actress that is an ingenue in years as well as looks. She, however, has the advantage of years of stage and screen training and as a result her performance is beautifully finished as well as youthfully refreshing. W. E. Lawrence, in the opposite role, gives a likable performance. Many of the roles were assumed by real Japanese. It is evident that Mr. Fitzmaurice must have secured the services of a real Japanese theatrical company or else he is a wizard at making the unskilled act, for seldom, if ever before, has a company of foreigners been selected that possesses such uniform skill and intelligence while facing the camera.

"A Japanese Nightingale" will be shown at the ——— theatre on ——— of ———.

CATCH LINES

The beauty of the Orient brought to the screen of the Occident.

The land of the cherry blossom transferred to the screen with such a degree of realism that the spectator almost breathes the fragrance of the flowers.

Fannie Ward's prettiest picture, and the most dramatic, from our point of view.

A wonderful picture presenting life in Japan, with Fannie Ward in the role of the heroine from the East and W. E. Lawrence as the dashing hero from the land of the West—the United States.

SUGGESTIONS

In "A Japanese Nightingale," the exhibitor has both Fannie Ward and a wonderful production to go the limit on. Miss Ward plays the young Japanese girl excellently and patrons who remember her former work will most assuredly welcome her in this, her latest effort.

George Fitzmaurice, who has gained fame for the lavishness of his productions, by no means loses his reputation with "A Japanese Nightingale." There are some wonderful scenes in a Japanese garden and the settings, both interior and exterior, are marvelous

It might also be mentioned that the story leaves an American and a Japanese girl happy together, thus departing from the usual line of Japanese story which follows along the path laid down in "Madame Butterfly."

" Will Play on Every Emotion," Says Harrison

BULLY! It is great! Your patrons will feel as if a cyclone has struck their emotions. They will go wild about this feature. It is one of the few times in the history of picture production where children have been utilized in a heavy drama and not have the production be taken as a child's picture. The clever utilization of the little nes enables Mr. De Mille to put in some human touches that could hardly be duplicated otherwise.

This contribution is excellent and will appeal to all picture goers without exception; first, because it is a subject hat concerns the entire allied world, Americans in particular. It is about Belgium. Secondly, because it concerns a oung American engineer and his saving of little Belgian children.

Wouldn't the sight of a ten year old Belgian patriot assuming the role of a protector over a score of little tots, escuing and delivering them to the American hero, move a pro-allied person? His king once told him to take care f his people. How could he be a coward? Wouldn't the intervention of the king, at the request of his little friend, aving the hero from being court martialed because he had let an American attack miscarry just to save the little nes from being blown heavenwards, touch the heartstrings of a picturegoer with pro-allied sentiments? These are nly a few of the heart appealing situations. There are innumerable others.

As to the humorous side of this attraction, the introduction at the beginning of the fowls and the animals, the ecoration of the goose, the placing of the steel helmet on the head of the pig making it look like a Prussian guard, he faithful dog shaking hands with its little master, all these scenes will bring hearty laughs even to a saddened eart.

This picture shows no actual battle scenes. It is clean. Boost it strong and give it an extended run. It will thrill s well as entertain. Released Aug. 26.—P. S. HARRISON.

Yvonne (Florence 'idor), a Belgium girl, is the wife of Karl von Krutz, presumably a merchant, but in reality orking in the interest of German propaganda. 'vonne's love for her husband is only on the urface. Secretly she despises him, but her mar- iage to him was a convenience and she was bliged to keep up appearances.

Yvonne lives with her brother, Jacques Georgie Stone), and her husband in a farm- ouse on the outskirts of the city. One morning he finds a roughly drawn map of Belgium on he table cloth. Her husband discovers her ex- mining the drawing and snatches it from her. he then suspects the truth.

The invasion of Belgium by the Germans omes. During the retreat of the Belgians, King lbert stops at the home of Yvonne. He finds 'vonne's little brother playing the game " Beat- ng the Hun " and the King tells him to wait till I come back to you." America enters the ar and Captain Jefferson Strong (Bryant Wash- urn) is detailed to duty in Belgium. By pre- nding to be an escaped German prisoner he ains entrance to the German lines and event- ally comes to the home of Yvonne. Von Krutz eturns and finds him there. After a series of dventures Captain Strong exposes German plans nd wins the heart of Yvonne after she has earned that her husband had been killed.

AD TALK

" Till I Come Back to You " is a Cecil B. De Mille production, it's an Artcraft and it presents Bryant Washburn in his first Paramount-Artcraft icture—these facts should mean something out f the ordinary to patrons of the ——— thea- re, where this attraction will show ——— of ——— week. Added to the above distinctive haracteristics is the element of war activities, orked into a powerful dramatic subject with elgium as the seat of action. In all, this Cecil . De Mille Artcraft production is worthy of pecial attention on the part of the ——— atrons. It's big and timely in theme, presents n all-star supporting cast, and has been given dramatic treatment that only a De Mille can give to a photodramatic offering.

A story of the war, told in a spirit of war and retribution and presented by screen artists—this is a short resume of the picture you will see when " Till I Come Back to You " is presented on the screen of the ——— theatre. Jeannie Macpherson, one of the screen's most talented writers, is responsible for the story, and in the cast supporting Bryant Washburn are seen Flor- ence Vidor, leading woman; G. Butler Clonbough, Winter Hall, Georgie Stone, Julia Faye, Lillian Leighton, Clarence Geldart, May Giracci, C. Ren- feld, W. J. Irving and F. Butterworth.

The story tells in dramatic episodes the stir- ring events in the life of a young Belgian girl, married to a German secret service agent, prior to the war, the work of rescue of an American officer and Belgium's revenge on a traitor.

CATCH LINES

A Cecil B. De Mille Artcraft special production, featuring Bryant Washburn in his first Para- mount-Artcraft picture.

A story of dramatic episodes in the struggle of Belgium to throw off her German invaders.

King Albert, of Belgium, in perfect likeness, an American officer and a beautiful Belgian girl, the central figures in Cecil B. De Mille's Art- craft production, " Till I Come Back to You."

The work of the engineers in " sapping " in the present world war is vividly described in Bryant Washburn's first starring vehicle on the Paramount-Artcraft program, " Till I Come Back to You."

SUGGESTIONS

This picture lends itself to big advertising.

It has back of it the genius of Cecil B. De Mille, director; it is Bryant Washburn's first Paramount-Artcraft picture; it is a war drama that has been given a new twist; it presents the pick of Paramount's screen artists—it has an all- star cast.

The glory of America's entrance in spirit as well as with her army of millions, the brave de- fense that the country of King Albert made to stay off the ravages of the Hun, the artistic treat- ment from a dramatic standpoint that Director De Mille has given this production—all these characteristics lend themselves to big advertising.

King Albert is presented by Winter Hall, an exact likeness.

Bryant Washburn is cast as an American officer.

The theme is a big one, it is a war-drama that is different. Play up the fact that it is a De Mille production, that it is an Artcraft, and that it is Bryant Washburn's first Paramount-Artcraft picture.

A press book containing a variety of exploita- tion suggestions has been prepared. It is obtain- able at Paramount exchanges.

An Ordinary Idea Handled in Fine Shape

YOU will admit with me that the basic idea in this picture has been done on the screen several times in th past, but it has seldom been handled so well. This offering, owing to intelligent direction, possesses severa of the elements, such as mystery, steady action and suspense that are so necessary to make a pictur entertaining.

The main pivot of the story is a little green god stolen from a Chinese Temple by the villain in promise of girl's hand. It is the cause of the thief's death and that of the love affair between the hero and the heroine.

The photography is sharp. It possesses fine definition. The interior scenes are lavish. It is a clean pictur and ought to prove a satisfactory entertainment. Released Sept. 2.—P. S. HARRISON.

THE STORY

Muriel Temple (Betty Blythe) is the daughter of Major Temple (Arthur Donaldson), a curio collector. Anxious to get possession of a certain Green God kept in the temple of Buddha, he barters his daughter for the curio. Robert Ashton (George Majeroni) is commissioned to get the god at any price, and also the hand of Temple's daughter in marriage.

Ashton arrives at the Morgan home with the god and, finding that Temple is overanxious for its possession, he demands in addition to his daughter a large sum of money. Temple refuses to give it to him and tells him that he shall not leave the house with the curio.

Owen Morgan (Harry Morey), an American artist, is present and is captivated by Muriel. In the morning Ashton is found dead and Muriel's handkerchief is found in his room. Lin Min, a Chinese, is seen attempting to take Morgan's bag from his room and is arrested. Morgan is lured to the Chinese temple, where in his bag is found the Green God. Morgan is arrested, but Lin Min clears the mystery by telling that Ashton was killed accidentally when he, Lin Min, surprised him in his room.

AD TALK

A mystery drama with an object of worship of the Buddhists in China, a Green God, as the objective of the man who lost his life in attempting to obtain its possession, and with a beautiful American girl entangled in the web of evidence, is the latest starring vehicle for Harry Morey and Betty Blythe, on the Vitagraph program. "The Green God" is the title and it will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

"The Green God" is one of the most fascinating mystery dramas that has ever been adapted for screen presentation. It was written by Frederick Arnold Kummer, playwright, and produced under the direction of Paul Scardon. In the supporting cast with the stars are seen Arthur Donaldson, George Majeroni, Bernard Siegel, Robert Gaillard and Joseph Burke.

Mr. Morey needs no introduction to the millions of picture fans. He is one of the most popular artists working before the camera and has been seen in some of the most entertaining dramas offered during the past seven or eight years. He is conceded to be one of the screen's most talented stars.

In his latest picture, "The Green God," he is given the role of an American artist, who becomes entangled in the web of mystery surrounding the strange death of a man who has been commissioned to obtain possession of a green god, an object of worship by the Buddhists.

CATCH LINES

"Just an Average Program Picture" the Verdict

THIS is just an average program picture. As it contains some good twists, it may get by, especially if your patrons are not overcritical. There is hardly any human appeal in it.

The story, by M. H. Stearns, is of the impossible kind. It deals with love, misguided Americans and "U" boats. Some of the situations in it border on the absurd.

Miss Starke's work is good, but she is at a disadvantage owing to a weak story.

THE STORY

Before the world and more particularly before e townsfolk of a little New England village, nthony Brenton is a crabbed, severe and un- iaritable old man. But in reality he is the soul generosity. His various benevolent acts are redited to Jimmy Shea, his friend who is af- cted with paralysis and unable to walk. Mrs. humnige, Brenton's housekeeper, is desirous of coming his wife in order to obtain his fortune. renton's daughter, Mary, has acted against her ther's wishes and has been away from home for ears. Eventually she writes announcing her ntemplated return. Mrs. Chumnige intercepts e letter and when Mary arrives with her daugh- r, Angele, she tells her that Brenton never ants to see her again. Despondent, Mary seeks home with a friend. Little Angele, disliking e housekeeper, determines to gain an entrance to the home, She is successful and shortly akes inroads to the old man's heart.

Then come the U-boat raids on the Atlantic oast. Many of the village folk are killed or aimed. And at this time comes Bob Fortney the Brenton home, introducing himself as a aturalist and gaining permission to roam the onfines of the Brenton estate. A strong attach- ent springs up between Bob and Angele which ngers Mrs. Chumnige as she is plotting to marry er son, Frank, to Angele in order to obtain the ortune. Mrs. Chumnige suspects Bob and even- ually gets the idea that he is a German spy. She elieves she sees him signaling to a U-boat off e coast. In reality it is her son that is the py. She writes to the Secret Service disclosing er discoveries and then Frank tells her the ruth.

Panic-stricken they plan to place the blame on oth Bob and Old Brenton. She incites the ownsfolk and as a result they plan to lynch the en suspected. They succeed in capturing them nd are about to string them up when Jimmy hea wheels his chair into the scene and bids hem stop. He tells them that Brenton is not the our old man he pretends to be—informs them hat he is the one who has donated so liberally o charities under his (Shea's) name. And at his point Bob breaks his silence disclosing him- elf as a Secret Service agent. Poetic justice is hus meted out to all—nor least to Mary and her laughter, Angele, who find a permanent home vith Brenton, while Bob wins for himself a wife esides the thanks of the nation.

AD TALK

Pauline Starke, the amazing young actress in Triangle pictures is to be seen again at the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week when 'Daughter Angele" is shown for the first time. Miss Starke's rise has been rapid. Ever since the inception of the Triangle company, that is previous to the time she was made a star, her work has been of a notable character. She is one of the youngest actresses on the screen to- day and at the same time one of the cleverest. Her face was meant for screen work, so it seems.

In "Daughter Angele,' Miss Starke, who plays the title part, has a role which provides her with many excellent opportunities. As the outcast granddaughter of Anthony Brenton she makes a pathetic little figure and the manner in which she warms the old man's heart is most effective in its simplicity.

"Daughter Angele" was written by M. H. Stearns and it is interesting to note that the author utilized the recent U-boat raids on the Atlantic coast fisher vilages as an important incident in the play. This gives it an atmosphere of up-to-dateness, in a manner of speaking, and it also supplies a most tense line of action on which the climax is builded.

There are no war scenes in "Daughter Angele." Some people dislike "acted" warfare and so do we—nearly always. This picture has to do, in part, with the U-boat raids off the Atlantic coast—a new angle of the war, the outgrowth of the latest German idea of what is fair.

In fact this five reeler which the ——— theatre offers its public combines all the ingredients of a successful modern photoplay. It has heart interest, a pretty love story, and a touch of a spy plot that lends it added intensity.

Walt Whitman, one of the best known character actors in the business, Philo McCullough and Lule Warrenton are among those who appear in Miss Starke's support.

CATCH LINES

The latest outrage of the Huns—the raiding of defenseless vilages and fishermen's boats off the Atlantic coast.

Pauline Starke, one of the youngest actresses on the screen—and one of the best—in her latest success, "Daughter Angele."

The recent U-boat raids off the Atlantic coast—the latest practice of the Germans—gave the author the nucleus of "Daughter Angele."

Old Anthony Brenton refused to subscribe to the Red Cross, the Liberty Loans or any of the many war charities. First he was considered merely a skinflint, but later the whisperings were that he was in sympathy with the country's enemies. It was a precarious predicament that old Anthony was found in, but see what sort of a fellow he was after all in "Daughter Angele."

The German spy is a crafty fellow, to tell the truth. The only trouble is that he forgets the United States Secret Service never sleeps. See "Daughter Angele."

Pauline Starke softens an old grouch's heart and she will soften the hearts of all who see her in "Daughter Angele."

SUGGESTIONS

"Daughter Angele" lends itself to advertising in two distinct ways. First there is the brilliant little actress, Pauline Starke, in the title role, and second the story is based, in part, on the recent submarine raids which the Germans instituted off the Atlantic coast.

This latter "strafing" of the Germans is still talked of throughout the land and where an exhibitor does big advertising on his every picture the submarine outrages should be referred to.

On the other hand Miss Starke is gaining in popularity with each successive release, and it is of advantage to play up her name. Not only is she termed a star, but she is a real star. She is a born little actress and her work in the title part of this release lays further emphasis on that statement. She can stand all the boosting the exhibitor chooses to give her.

Roy Stewart Puts Ordinary Story Over

MR. STEWART'S pleasing personality, and his good acting, lift this Western drama to a high level, but the story is too weak. There isn't much to it. The star is given the human part, however, and that counts a whole lot in disposing the mind of the spectator favorably towards it.

It is a Western story by Kenneth B. Clark, which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. Mr. Stewart performs in it his usual daredevil riding stunts.

Among the supporting cast, little May Giraci deserves special mention. Her acting is very appealing. She attracts a great deal of the sympathy.

The photography is good as usual.

It will offer satisfactory entertainment to the star's followers. Released September 1. Length, 5 reels.—P. S. HARRISON

Jim Jason.....Roy Stewart
Don Felipe.....H. N. Dudgeon
Carmelita.....May Giraci
Pancho.....Graham Pette
Prof. Allen.....H. C. Simmons
Ruth Allen.....Ethel Flemming
Mike.....John Lynce
Dolores.....Jimmy Weil

Director, Cliff Smith—Author, Kenneth B. Clark.

THE STORY

Jim Jason (Roy Stewart), part owner of a ranch, is forced to humor Felipe (H. N. Dudgeon), in order that he might save his ranch from ruin. Carmelita (May Giraci), a Spanish orphan, tells Jim that Felipe is scheming to have him, Jim, marry Dolores. But Jim is in love with Ruth Allen and Ruth is a friend of Carmelita. Jim's partner plans to gain complete control of the ranch. To this end he hires an assassin. The assassin makes a bungle of the job and is detected by Jim and given a good beating. Ruth refuses to allow Jim to explain and the two lovers quarrel.

Carmelita is stricken with typhoid fever. Jim is in constant attendance and nurses the little girl back to health. Ruth realizes that Jim is not the merciless man she thought him to be and they are reconciled. Another attempt at Jim's life is made by the Spaniard. Jim and his cowboys take up in pursuit after the would-be assassin. On reaching his stronghold in Mexico, Jim finds that Dolores has taken her revenge.

AD TALK

Roy Stewart, in one of his inimitable Western portrayals, is coming to the ——— theatre ——— of ——— week and the management of the ——— theatre promises his patrons a Western drama of the first order. "Untamed" is the title of Mr. Stewart's late picture. It was written by Kenneth B. Clark and produced for the Triangle program under the direction of Cliff Smith, the director who has been so successful in turning out virile, rousing Western productions with Mr. Stewart in the featured role.

In support of the star there are H. N. Dudgeon, May Giraci, Graham Pette, H. C. Simmons, Ethel Fleming, leading woman; John Lynce, Jimmy Weil and Eagle Eye. "Untamed" has for its settings, some of the most beautiful natural scenery to be found in the Western country. Most of the action is laid in the open, and Director Cliff Smith has chosen the beauty spots of the West as a background for his production.

The story presents Roy Stewart as part-owner of a ranch in the Southwest. His partner is a scheming Spaniard, who is constantly plotting to get control of the ranch. He carries his scheme so far as to attempt Jim's life, but after the second unsuccessful try he is given battle with his own weapons and gets a taste of the medicine he would force his partner, Jim, to take.

CATCH LINES

SUGGESTIONS

Roy Stewart is recognized as one of the screen's most likeable Western character actors. His pictures are always typically Western in theme "Untamed," his late offering, was written by Kenneth Clark, popular with readers of the Saturday Evening Post and author of "Until They Get Me," the Triangle play that made such a decided hit a few months ago.

In your advertising it is well to play up the author's name, the star and the fact that "Untamed" is a typical Roy Stewart Western drama.

Don't neglect to obtain the lobby display which the Triangle exchanges have on this production.

Morbid Stuff Hurts Strong Dramatic Picture

NO one will question the dramatic quality of this production. It will stir your emotional feelings without the least doubt, but will leave you in an unhappy mood. The first scene flashed before your eyes is a grave and then a close up of a tomb stone. But for one short scene showing the union of the hero and the heroine, the picture ends by showing death.

The story, from the novel by Myrtle Reed, is somewhat slow. It has been selected with the purpose of offering the players, especially the star, an opportunity to portray emotion. This end is accomplished successfully, and, as there are still a great number of picture goers that love the sad, it will undoubtedly please such kind. Others will consider it depressing. It is one of those subjects that, however well done, has not a universal appeal.

If you are in the habit of taking your patrons into your confidence you may explain to them the nature of the subject. There is one thing, however, that I would suggest you do to improve the picture; cut out the two scenes showing the grave and the tomb stone leaving the subtitle to explain the action. There is no use pouring ice water in the back of your patrons, between the back of the neck and the shirt collar, at the very beginning. Released Aug. 19. Length, 5 reels.—P. S. HARRISON.

AD TALK

Patrons of the ——— theatre will have the opportunity of seeing one of the greatest actresses on the screen in one of the most popular books ever written when "Flower of the Dusk" is cast on its screen next ———. Viola Dana, the well-known Metro star, is to be seen in this feature carrying a dual role. She appears as both mother and daughter, and whereas the first role carries her back to the romantic age of old lace and lavender the second presents her as a girl of today who is cheerful despite the fact that she is crippled.

"Flower of the Dusk" is an adaptation of Myrtle Reed's book of the same name, one of the "best sellers" of its time. It is laid in a little New England village and it is interesting to note that Director John Collins took the entire company to this very village to film the scenes and to secure the correct atmosphere. The results, we feel confident, will meet with the hearty endorsement and appreciation of the patrons of the ——— theatre. Mr. Collins has obtained many an artistic "shot," to use the technical term, and has introduced a number of masterly effects in picturing the workings of the mind of Ambrose North, the blind father.

"Flower of the Dusk" has been booked at the ——— theatre for ———. The management realized the great attraction that a picturization of this widely circulated book with such a popular and well-beloved star in the principal roles would mean. It is not often that such pictures, pictures that contain no flaws, certainly none visible to the naked eye, are placed upon the entertainment market. We feel sure that the patrons of the ——— theatre will agree with the management on their judgment in selecting this picture for their delectation.

THE STORY

In a New England village Ambrose North, a blind man, lives with his daughter, Barbara, a cripple. Barbara is cared for by her maiden aunt, Miriam, who loved North and whose affections were well returned before Barbara's mother, Constance, younger and prettier, put in her appearance. When Barbara was the age of two Constance committed suicide and ever since North has lived in the fear that his wife took her life because she was unhappy with him.

And this, indeed, is true. Barbara while reading with her friend Roger Austin from across the way discovers an old letter that tells of the love of Constance for Roger's father, Lawrence Austin. Constance had sought death rather than disgrace her husband's name, a name which she respected.

Constance has left a letter to be given to Barbara on her twentieth birthday telling the truth regarding her death. When Barbara reads this she has not the heart to tell her father and so she invents a letter saying that Constance loved North dearly. The blind man is immensely pleased at this.

Then comes a doctor to the town who cures Barbara of her lameness and who takes North under his care. He succeeds in restoring his sight. When he returns to his home he disregards the doctor's orders and tears the bandages from his eyes. He reads the letter from his wife and the shock to him is too severe. In the meantime Barbara has attired herself in her mother's wedding gown. Descending the stairs, North sees her and believes her his wife returned to greet him. He dies happily. Later Barbara and Roger are married, inheriting not their parents' unhappiness but their great love.

CATCH LINES

Myrtle Reed's delightful romance of New England, with Viola Dana interpreting its two important roles.

"Flower of the Dusk" is just as romantic a picture as the title implies—that is no small measure of romance.

The blind picture the world as a place of unbounden beauty, but sometimes their awakening is sad.

The supreme sacrifice came when Constance North killed herself because she loved Austin and found herself drifting away from her husband. Was this the only way out?

Although this picturization of Myrtle Reed's famous book is laid in a quiet New England town it smacks of something of the days of old "when knights were bold," etc. The heroine prefers death to a true but wrong love.

Constance North killed herself rather than violate her marriage vows when she discovered herself drifting away from her husband. Would you make such a sacrifice?

The pretty romance of a boy and a girl combined with the tragic romance of their parents.

SUGGESTIONS

"Flower of the Dusk" should be advertised with the author in view as well as the star. Miss Dana's admirers will immediately be attracted by the announcement that she is playing a dual role in the picture, but the fact that it is an adaptation of a widely-read novel by Myrtle Reed should serve to bring newcomers to the theatre. This is an opportunity that should not be overlooked, as the works of this author are exceedingly popular.

It might be well to suggest that "Flower of the Dusk" is absolutely divorced from the world war. So many pictures of the present are based upon the conflict or at least suggest it in some place or another that a picture which for once leaves the war out of the question should be seized upon with avidity.

Stress might be laid on the fact that Director John Collins took his company of players to a New England town in order to secure the proper atmosphere for the picturized version of the book. It was originally laid in such a village and the pains taken on the part of the producers to secure proper detail should be of interest to the readers of the local papers.

A glance over the cast might open possibilities. There are a number of regular "old timers" among those present which some of your patrons may remember. There are Guy Coombs, Bliss Milford and Charles Sutton prominent in the cast, all three players who appeared in some of the first pictures produced.

"ANGEL CHILD"—PLAZA-HODKINSON

Pleasing Light Entertainment in This

THOSE of you who have run "The Antics of Ann," Paramount, will be able to get a good idea as to the quality of this feature. "Angel Child" benefits by the pleasing screen personality of Kathleen Clifford.

It is a comedy drama in which Miss Clifford gets the opportunity of showing a mischievous nature such as turning the water hose on the guests and other laughable antics. She becomes the cause of consternation to her father by wrapping candy in an important document which was to furnish evidence in convicting a crooked business rival.

It is a clean picture and will furnish satisfactory entertainment to any kind of an audience. Released Sept. 16. Length, 5 reels.—P. S. HARRISON.

THE CAST

Glory Moore.....Kathleen Clifford
Her Father.....Leslie T. Peacocke
Her Mother.....Rita Harlan
Richard.....Fred Church
Author.....Harl McInroy
Director.....Henry Otto
Cameraman.....Joseph Brotherton

THE STORY

Glory Moore is the trial of her parents, but even so she is her father's "Angel Child." Her pranks consist of turning the garden hose on the guests, teasing the servants, playing practical jokes on the whole household. Finally Glory is shipped off to boarding school despite violent protests on her part. But in the confines of the seminary she does not improve. In fact she keeps on with her tricks. The matron locks her in her room one day to think over her misdeeds and instead Glory effects an escape, aided and abetted by one Richard.

She returns home, her face and hands blacked with cork, to play the role of maid. She sees that her father is worried over the loss of an important letter. Glory remembers that she purloined this missive to use as a covering for candy and that subsequently it fell into the hands of her father's financial enemy. So once again she sallies forth, secrets herself in the financial enemy's home and finally by hook or by crook and by Richard's timely assistance she gets the letter.

And then? Does Glory go back to boarding school? No, she does not. Is it at all surprising that she marries the gallant and loving Richard?

AD TALK

"Angel Child!" To call Glory Moore this was something like calling a wild cat on the warpath a kitten. Still, so spake her father, even though her mother objected when she turned the garden hose on her afternoon tea guests, tied the maid's apron strings to the butler's buttons to the ultimate disaster of the strings, the buttons and the soup, and enjoyed herself by playing kindred pranks on the entire household. But still papa called her Angel Child!

However, Glory was moved from home one day and into the uninteresting confines of a seminary for young ladies—very prim and proper. If anyone expressed a hope that Glory would reform here that person was doomed to disappointment—she didn't. She ran away and returned home with her face blacked to play the part of a maid.

And so on and so forth. Glory played one fine prank after another until her father found himself in trouble. And then, presto! Glory earned her title of Angel Child in a thrilling, daring episode in which, besides thwarting the villain, she succeeds in winning a husband. What could be sweeter?

Kathleen Clifford is seen in this endearing, hoydenish role, a role to which she is ideally suited. It was produced by Henry Otto, a director who is nothing if not artistic, and the result is an A1 comedy, sprightly and high spirited, one that will keep the spectator in gales of laughter.

It will be shown at the ———— theatre on ———— of ———— week.

CATCH LINES

Kathleen Clifford as the tomboy-girl proves herself a heroine after all when the showdown comes.

A beautiful star in a role well suited for her.

A picture that makes one forget the troubles of the workaday world in the pleasing innocence of its comedy.

Did you ever turn the hose on your mother's guests? It was the Angel Child's favorite pastime.

You women-haters, come in and see a woman, and a young one at that, put it all over a man of the business world in "Angel Child."

SUGGESTIONS

Suggestions for advertising this release lie chiefly in the character of the picture itself. Its central figure is a tomboy-girl whose pranks are the torment of her parents' existence. In the end, however, she saves her father from financial ruin.

Kathleen Clifford is the star, known through her performance in the serial "Who Is Number One?"

Play up the light side of the feature, laying stress on the fact that it departs from the ordinary in its comedy and makes one forget petty troubles—even big ones.

Miss Clifford is a beautiful actress and deserves to be featured prominently, for she is far from being disappointing in this feature.

"THAT DEVIL BATEESE"—UNIVERSAL

Salisbury in a Typical Salisbury Offering

FROM a dramatic angle, "That Devil Bateese" is equally as strong and as well acted as "The Savage." The beautiful part of it, though, is that the story of this picture is clean and abounds in situations with heart interest. This makes it available to all theatres without distinction. Mr. Salisbury is given the human part. The star is shown as loving in a half primitive but pure-minded way. He loves a woman, takes her and marries her. He is supposed not to know, in the picture, the highly civilized methods of courtship.

Subjects dealing with Canadian woods, in which the chief character is a Frenchman, have always taken well whenever produced intelligently. The San Bernardino mountains, in California, with their wealth of forests and scenic beauty, with their lakes and rivers, well known to the public from several pictures showing them in the past, have furnished the necessary background. The director and cameraman have taken full advantage of this fact and given the picture realism. The long shot of the canoe in the river is remarkable, but the film editor has hardly given us enough to satisfy. It shows only a glimpse.

It is a clean picture. Play it. Released Sept. 2.—P. S. HARRISON.

THE CAST

Bateese Latour.....Monroe Salisbury
Kathleen.....Ada Gleason
Martin Stuart.....Lamar Johnstone
Louis Courteau.....Lon Chaney
Father Pierre.....Andrew Robson

Directed by William Wolbert
Written by Bess Meredith
Scenarioized by Bernard McConville

THE STORY

Bateese Latour (Monroe Salisbury), a lumberjack in the French Canadian district, arrives in the village of Montrouge, after a summer spent in the woods, plying his trade. Bateese is loved by all the neighborhood excepting when he imbibes in liquor, and then he is ungovernable.

Kathleen St. John (Ada Gleason), leaves Montreal for Montrouge to teach school. She has quarreled with her lover, Martin Stuart, and she wants to get away from her home. She arrives at the little station and loses her way to the settlement. Louis Courteau, the bully of the town, finds her and offers to take her to the settlement. About this time Bateese arrives. He meets Kathleen and Louis and sees Louis attempt to force his affections on her. He intercedes and gives Louis a beating.

Weeks afterwards, Bateese and Kathleen meet again while she is presiding over the little country school. He falls in love with her and promises to go with her to church and give up his drinking. Kathleen receives word that her lover, Stuart, is coming to take her back. Not wishing to marry him, she consents to become the wife of Bateese. Stuart arrives and Bateese, knowing that the girl does not love him (Bateese), he leaves and tells her to marry the man she loves. She has learned that Stuart is in love with another woman. She and Bateese are united.

AD TALK

Monroe Salisbury in a stirring drama of French Canada, "That Devil, Bateese," will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week. It is a story of French Canada—not the Canadian Northwest. The scenes are laid in a little French village and the story tells of incidents in the lives of the simple peasant people who live in this section. The central character is Bateese Latour (Monroe Salisbury), a lumberjack who is loved by his people excepting when he drinks, and then he is impossible. A pretty girl from Montreal comes to teach school in the little town and Bateese gets his first incentive to give up drink.

The story was written by Bess Meredith, well known writer for the screen and produced for Universal under the direction of William Wolbert. In the supporting cast with Mr. Salisbury are Ada Gleason, who has the leading woman's role; Lamar Johnstone, Lon Chaney and Andrew Robson.

Some of the most beautiful exteriors are seen in this production. Much of the action transpires in the open and the company of players went into the Rocky Mountain region to enact the scenes. It presents a strong, virile drama of life—life as it is lived in French Canada. Monroe Salisbury has one of his best roles and one that he interprets to perfection.

"That Devil, Bateese," will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ———

CATCH LINES

Monroe Salisbury in the character of a French-Canadian and in a drama that pulsates with human, touching incidents in the lives of the French Canadians.

A story of French Canada—not a drama of Canadian Northwest.

Famous character actor, Monroe Salisbury, in virile role of French Canadian.

A story that touches your heart, that rivets attention, that represents the reality—"That Devil, Bateese," with Monroe Salisbury.

French Canada with its simple, homely peasantry living the life that Longfellow so pathetically describes in his "Evangeline."

SUGGESTIONS

Monroe Salisbury has a large following among picture fans. His name should be given prominence in advertising this attraction.

The story tells of French Canada—not the Canadian Northwest. There have been countless stories on the screen of the Canadian Northwest, but few dealing with French Canada. This fact should be made known.

This picture is particularly appropriate at this season of the year. The action is laid in the open, with very few interior sets.

The nature of the story and the star's name should be the big talking points in this production.

"Brazen Beauty," with Priscilla Dean

(Bluebird—Sept. 9. Directed by Todd Browning. Five Reels)

ALL the high sounding words in a dictionary could not describe adequately the power with which this picture gets hold of the emotions. They could not even begin to do justice to it. You must see it with your own eyes in order to fully appreciate it.

It is a masterful combination of acting and directing of the highest state of development, based on a good story arranged into a scenario form with intelligence. It is a revelation of the possibilities that lie in the screen. IT IS REAL ART.

The plot is based on the story, "The Magnificent Jacula," from the pen of Louise Winter, published in the Parisien Magazine. It has been adapted for the screen by Wm. E. Wing. It shows how the heroine, a vivacious, fearless and unruly but kind at heart girl, brought up in semi-primitive environment but possessed of pure ideals, loved and hated at the same time. She meets the hero and loves him, but thinking he is a villain at heart, she conceals her feelings. She even scorns him, until it is by chance disclosed to her that she had made an error and that he is a brother to the woman and not her lover. It ends in their happy union.

You have read, I presume, in fiction, of the thin, medium height type of a heroine, her body flexible as a whip, her complexion dark, her hair curly, who loves with the impetuosity of an Oriental (no dirt), her black eyes spitting fire that would melt steel, with a will power that could crush rock. Have you not? That is Priscilla Dean. She is the incarnation of such a type. She is superb. The title of a star rightly belongs to her now.

The direction is perfect. Todd Browning has the right to feel proud. He is a credit to the motion picture art.

The supporting cast is excellent. One player among them deserves special mention—Thurston Hall. He is a fine specimen of manhood combining all the exacting qualities of the screen including personal magnetism.

This offering has done another thing which is very important, it has disproved the theory that dramatic art can only be found in salaciousness. It proves it an utter misconception. Art lies in the ability to affect the emotions, especially those of the noble kind. This picture does the trick. It is clean and suitable for any kind of an audience.

"Lafayette—We Come!"

With E. K. Lincoln and Dolores Cassinelli

(Perret Productions. Release Plans Will Be Announced Later. Directed by Leonce Perret. Screen Time 90 m.)

"LAFAYETTE—WE COME!" may be safely classed among the big features of the year, both as a production and as a drawing card. It has been produced with intelligence. It is full of heart interest.

The nature of the subject is timely and, as the title indicates, has a special appeal to the American public. It has been conceived especially for the purpose of showing that, as Americans, we have not forgotten our moral obligation to France, and that, in her hour of need, WE COME to her assistance, just as Lafayette came to ours. It is an expression of gratitude, the return of a debt. The title itself carries the heart appeal.

The author-director has interwoven the basic idea in a love story. The plot concerns a young American in love with a pretty girl. She disappears. Suspecting her as a German spy he enlists with the American army, goes to France, fights and is wounded.

While recuperating in a French resort he meets her. It develops, however, that she is in the secret service of the French Government. His joy is without bounds. They become united.

Every American mother's heart will fill with joy getting a glimpse of how her boy is treated over there. It shows that the home of every Frenchman is open to him and that every Frenchwoman is his mother, replacing temporarily the one back home. It is very touching. It will move the emotions of all Americans. Such pictures serve to bring the two nations still closer together.

You owe it to your patrons to play this attraction.

"Wives of Men"

With Florence Reed

(Pioneer Film Corp.—State Rights. Directed by John M. Stahl. Screen Time 90 m.)

PICTURES like "Wives of Men" raise the production end of the industry to an art. It is the kind that makes picture-goers. I defy anybody, whether taught from childhood to conceal their emotions or let them run wild, to come out with a dry eye after they see the picture. They are not tears caused by agonizing situations either, but from real emotional acting, a story with heart interest and sensible directing.

One scene has to be cut out, the fight in the barroom, or at least it must be reduced to almost nothing. If the producers don't, you can do it yourself. It is the only discordant note in the whole production. It is so amateurish people laughed at it at the premiere showing. The would-be ex-pugilist just raises his hands and everybody falls. One would also wish that the director had left the allegory in some of the subtitles out entirely. It would be more like real life.

Miss Reed's emotional work is almost unequalled. Frank Mills as the leading man is excellent, but close-up scenes look bad, as his eyes don't photograph well.

The picture could not be called altogether clean, since things in the house are fixed for two without the marriage license hanging on the wall, but it is very refined. It will not offend even the most particular of picturegoers. It is fit to show in any theatre.

Go to the limit in boosting it and give it an extended engagement. The longer you play it the more it will draw. It is the kind people talk about.

"Your Fighting Navy at Work and at Play"

(Educational Film Corporation)

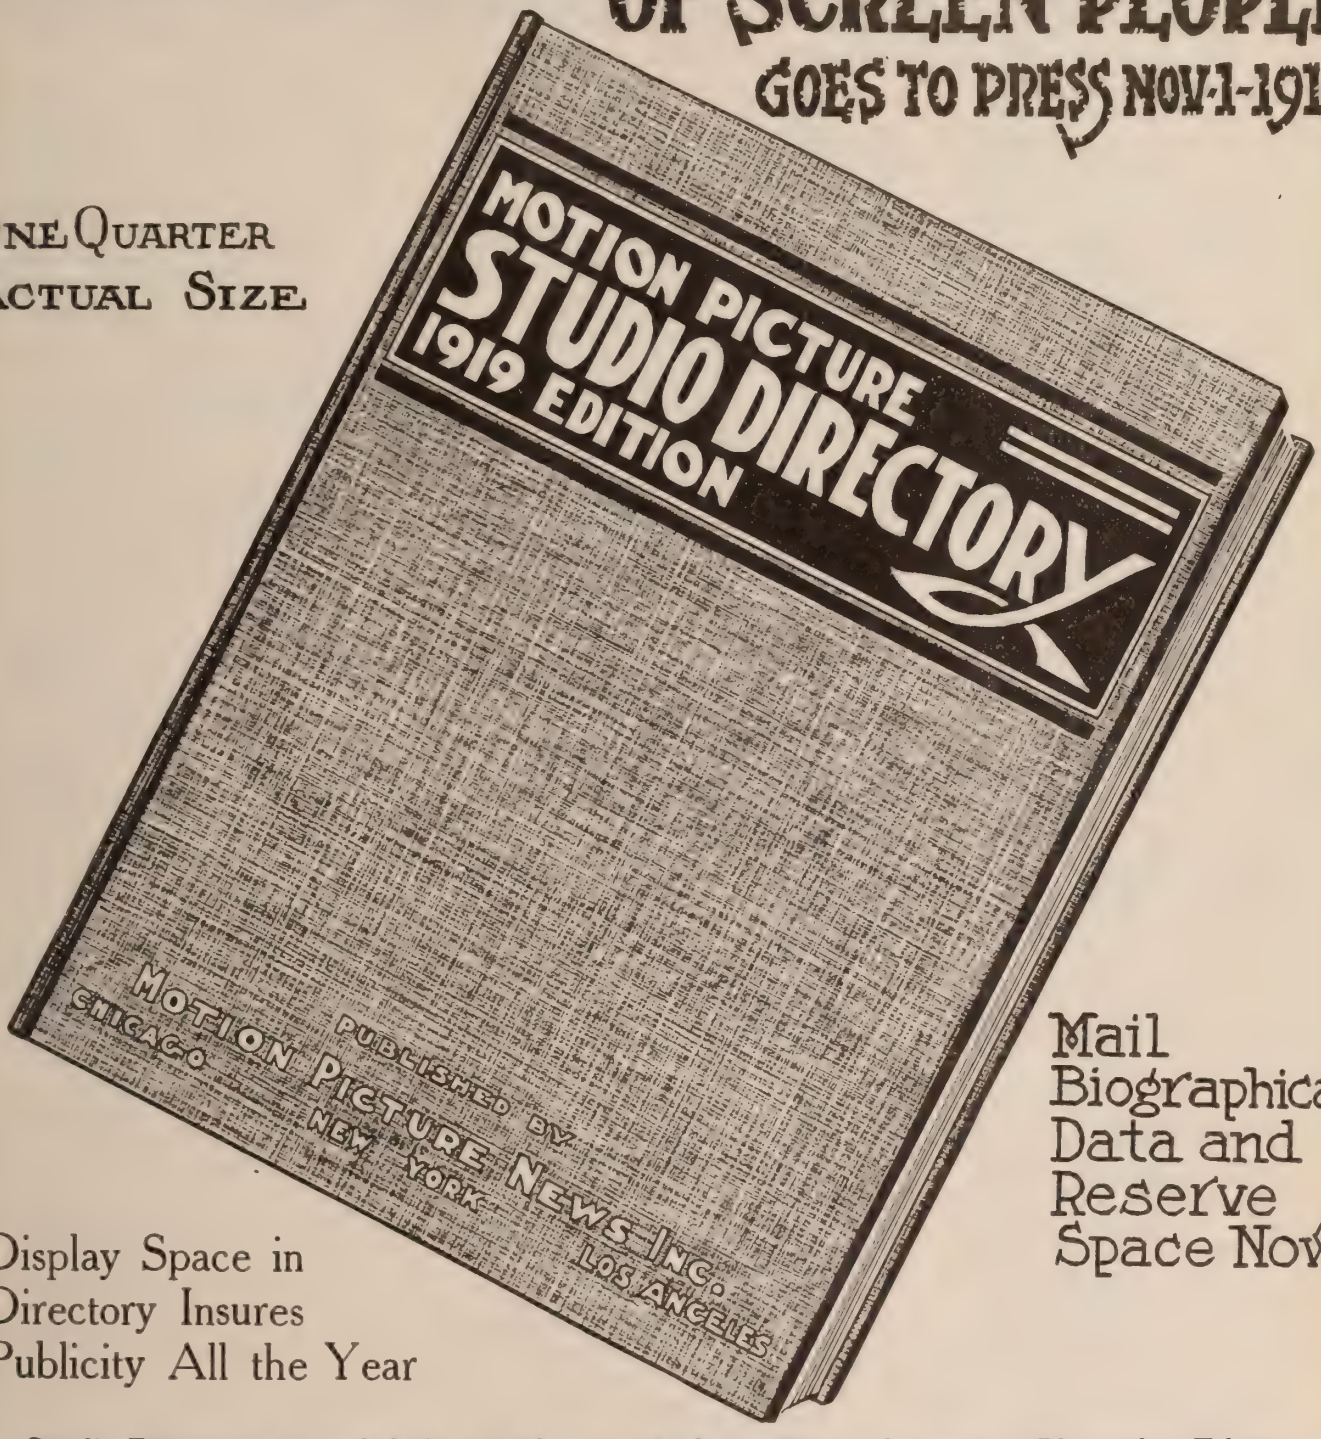
IF you were to judge this picture from its title you would naturally thing it is dry stuff and that you couldn't expect to please your patrons with this for an evening's entertainment. But here is where you could deceive yourself.

Although this picture was shown to the writer in a projection room alone and surrounded by cold walls with not a sound of music, I was actually enthused with it. Imagine what can happen if shown to an audience accompanied with the proper patriotic music and with the warm atmosphere of the theatre.

This offering can't help but prove interesting to all, as it brings before the eyes things that we have heard spoken of very often and have read in the newspapers at innumerable times since this world catastrophe has visited us. The curiosity of the great majority of us is so great that we would give anything to see, for instance, the depth bomb, the thing that has destroyed the submarine and made victory possible. This is one of the interest-arousing things. The Whitehead torpedo is another. A close view of it is shown, and then several of them discharged from the deck of a battleship. The volume of water a shell raises in striking the water is still another. The smoke screen, a similar of which has helped in the bottling of Zeebrugge and Ostend, is still another.

The above are only a few of the things shown. Space will not permit the enumeration of all. But the wonderful sight of the big battleships with their majestic appearance make a scene of great grandeur. It is inspiring.

Besides the above, this picture shows the human side of the sailors' life. It is not all serious, but humorous as well. For a subject of this nature the photography is unusually good. So is the tinting.



A good two-reel comedy and a cartoon added to these five reels should make a good bill.

Don't be afraid to book it, as, besides furnishing diversity of entertainment, it is pleasing as well.

Elgin Exhibitor Turns Nuisance into Big Success

A STUNT so successful that emulation by other Elgin managers is paying it flattering tribute, has been made an institution at the Star theatre by Manager Ralph W. Crocker, Elgin, Ill.

The idea grew out of the nuisance of small boys and their peanut shells and irrepressible impulse to clap and cheer as the villain "got his" and the hero rushed to save the "fayre layde." Concentration of attention on the juvenile patrons one night a week achieved the desired improvement. Friday night was chosen, that the time free from study for the morrow in school days, and the day before cleanup for Saturday performances might all lend their influence, and made particularly entertaining for the youngsters.

A bill of comedy—the lively sort where motor cars dash over the house tops and heroes walk the beams a hundred or two feet above the street, is chosen. With it is combined an episode in a thrilling serial—"The House of Hate" just now. Small boys and their peanut bags come stampeding in with opening of the doors and are permitted to stamp and clap and whistle and approve to their hearts' content.

Big boys soon found out about the fun, and there are any number of business men making the practice of dragging their wives away from Theadabarring and Pickfording at other show houses, to join the fun and see the thrillers and screams at the Star. The house is packed every night and threatens the possibility of another night of the sort in each week.

Old Lake Michigan Utilized as Screen

PROJECTING a motion picture on a screen of water at a distance of 1,600 feet from the audience is a novelty that Chicago is to witness September 2, the opening night of the United States Government's war exposition in Grant Park. The idea was worked out by John F. Cullerton, manager of fire department properties. He was called upon by Fire Chief O'Connor to perfect a screen of steam at the request of the exposition authorities. This steam idea proved impractical, and then Cullerton devised the water screen.

As an augmented Jacky band from the Great Lakes naval training station starts the strains of the national anthem, sixty streams of water will pour forth from the fire tug Graeme Stewart, and the Stars and Stripes will appear on the liquid curtain in colors. The water screen will be 100 feet high and 500 feet wide. Following the display of the flag, motion pictures, including the construction of ships and various war activities, will be shown. The screen of water is capable of displaying pictures projected from a distance of 250 feet.

Joseph L. Friedman Heads Foursquare Pictures in Chicago

THE interests of the Foursquare Pictures, Incorporated, will be administered by the Celebrated Players Film Corporation, of which Joseph L. Friedman is president, it has been announced.

George Backer, president of the Foursquare Pictures, Incorporated, and president of the Bacon-Backer Film Corporation, has been in Chicago the past few days, adjusting matters incident to turning over the Foursquare office to the Celebrated Players. Arrangements have also been made with Mr. Friedman, whereby he will handle the future productions of the Bacon-Backer Film Corporation and of the Harry Rapf Films, Incorporated.

Under this arrangement, the Celebrated Players Film Corporation will release during the coming year, not less than twelve features of the super-feature type. Mr. Friedman, in the course of an interview, stated that he had not decided yet whether he would release, under this arrangement, always a Bacon-Backer production, or "Sins of the Children," a Rapf production, first, but that an announcement regarding the name would be made by the time of our next issue.

Mr. Friedman states that much may be expected by exhibitors in this territory from the Bacon-Backer Features, for the reason that the Bacon- Backer new studio, situated at 230 W. 39th street, New York City, is considered to be quite the most efficient and thoroughly up-to-date studio in America.

Hayakawa Develops Subtle Humor in New Film

WHEN a picture can hold the attention with the thermometer over the hundred mark in a red hot exhibition room, it is certainly to use the vernacular of the street, "going some." Such, however, happened, and applies to the Sessue Hayakawa picture, "His Birthright," which is one of the best pictures reviewers can recall ever having seen the Japanese artist in. While it contains considerable pathos, Hayakawa displays a keener sense of humor at various stages.

The prologue of this picture is laid in Japan, and the claim that it was taken there is conclusively proven by all the scenery as well as a large supporting company of Japanese men, women and children.

If the remaining seven pictures that the Haworth Pictures Corporation are to put out featuring Sessue Hayakawa are anywhere near as good as the first, there seems to be no question but what they will prove popular to the general public and give Hayakawa's many admirers an opportunity of seeing a side of this actor's art heretofore allowed to lie dormant—subtle humor.

Geraldine Farrar Stops in Chicago on Her Way East

GERALDINE FARRAR, accompanied by her director, Reginald Barker, and leading men, Milton Sills and Tom Santschi, together with twenty others of her supporting company, stopped off at Chicago on her way to New York, having spent the past five weeks in Wyoming, where the entire production of "The Hell Cat," by William Mack, was completed.

Miss Farrar declares her visit to Cody, Wyo., and the work of producing this picture was the most strenuous undertaking of her entire career. Not only did practically every member of the company sustain some accident or meet with some mishap, but Miss Farrar herself narrowly escaped being permanently disfigured as a result of wounds and bruises which she received in the big fight scene of the story. However, the train journey, instead of fatiguing her, brought her to Chicago feeling very fit and eager to begin work on her third Goldwyn picture, the title of which is not yet announced.

Orpheum in Chicago Plays Big Ones

JONES, LINICK & SCHAEFER'S Orpheum theatre in Chicago announced an exceptionally interesting bill for the new week. On Sunday and Monday, Carlyle Blackwell in "By Hook or Crook," a brand new World picture, was shown exclusively at the Orpheum. Tuesday and Wednesday, Enid Bennett, in her latest Paramount feature, "The Marriage Ring." For the remainder of the week Geraldine Farrar occupied the Orpheum screen in her first big new Goldwyn feature, "The Turn of the Wheel." An excellent cast is supporting her in this picture, including Herbert Rawlinson, Hassard Short, Violet Heming, Maude Turner Gordon, Ernest Maupin and Clarence Handysides.

"Hearts of the World" Does Well in Springfield

AFTER getting away to a very poor start, "Hearts of the World" wound up its eight days' stay at the Chatterton in Springfield, Ill., to tremendous business. Capacity houses were the rule the last five days at both matinee and night shows, and everyone in the city was out boosting for the Griffith play. Manager W. D. Cave announces that it will be brought back later in the season, as many were unable to gain admission to the theatre after they found out how good the production was. Dorothy Gish, Robert Harron, Robert Anderson, Ben Alexander and Lillian Gish have made many thousands of new admirers in this city. A repeat engagement should prove a record-breaker in every respect.

Murray Theatre in Milwaukee Reopens

THE Murray theatre, Milwaukee, which has come under the management of Joe Zinkele, will shortly open. It is undergoing extensive repairs and redecorations. Joe is starting out with the right idea, and it is to be hoped that this theatre, which has so often "gone under," will take a smooth trip under his capable management.

Springfield Royal Sets Itself a Record

GUS KERASOTES' Royal theatre in Springfield, Ill., had the best list of plays it has ever offered in one week during the seven days commencing August 11. On Sunday the bill was "The Girl from Beyond," with Nell Shipman; Monday, "The Richest Girl," with Ann Murdock; Tuesday, Alice Brady in "Betsy Ross"; Wednesday, "Whims of Society"; Thursday, "The Flaming Omen"; Friday, June Caprice in "A Camouflage Kiss"; Saturday, a Paralta play.

"Unbeliever" Draws Well in Fond du Lac

THAT a good picture will draw good business in spite of a hot weather handicap was evidenced by the run which "The Unbeliever" had at the Bijou, Fond du Lac, Wis., Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 12, 13 and 14. The attendance at each show was gratifying to the management. What is more to the point, the picture went well with the audience.

Late News from La Crosse

"PERSHING'S CRUSADERS" played a "standing room only" engagement at the La Crosse theatre August 11-14. Gunner C. Van Raalti of the Canadian army was an added attraction, telling of his experiences during his nineteen months on the front line trenches in France.

THE La Crosse theatre has given up Sunday Vodvil for the balance of the season. Its place has been taken by high class motion pictures.

"TO HELL WITH THE KAISER" is booked for an early showing at the La Crosse theatre.

Additional La Crosse News

"BRITAIN'S BULWARKS" will be seen shortly at the Bijou.

EDITH STOREY in "The Demon" was the attraction at the Bijou August 14 and 15.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS in "The Lamb" and Wm. S. Hart in "The Aryan" played return engagements at the Bijou to splendid business.

"BEYOND THE SHADOWS" with William Desmond as the star proved a big drawing card at the Majestic, August 12 and 13.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN and his newly acquired wife, Beverly Bayne, scored a big hit at the Bijou in "Red, White and Blue Blood."

PEGGY PEARCE in "A Good Loser" proved most entertaining to Majestic audiences August 14 and 15. Miss Pearce, although a trifle new to La Crosse audiences, is fast winning her way to their hearts.

GLORIA SWANSON, in "Station Content" was the attraction for Sunday, August 11 at the Majestic.

"TYRANT FEAR" proved to be one of the strongest attractions of the midsummer season at the La Crosse theatre, August 15, 16, 17. Dorothy Dalton is an ever welcome visitor to La Crosse picture fans.

Elgin Items of Interest

ELGIN picture play fans have gone over the top and capitulated to the Allies' Official War Review. The week of August 11 the Grand presented the innovation and Elgin received it with a tremendous enthusiasm, making secure the feature's future. The review supplants the Burton Holmes travel picture series at the Grand.

WHILE wary of providing bigger feast than fans will relish in early fall, when the casualty lists begin to come in and there is question as to the mood of the people for entertainment, Elgin managers are occasionally booking an unusually interesting feature. The bulk of the bills, however, promise to be moderate in interest.

THE Grand has booked "Hearts of the World" and "Pershing's Crusaders" for September.

"OVER THERE" with Charles Richman and Anna Q. Nilsson and Gertrude Berkeley of whom Elgin's retained pleasant memories of her work as the mother in "War Brides," had its charge of war-picture popularity when shown at the Grand August 16. Elgin liked it immensely and Manager Newman received considerable compliment on the bill.

THE week of August 19 the Grand opened on Monday with Billie Burke in "Eve's Daughter." Enid Bennett in "Keys of the Righteous" came Wednesday and Thursday and on Friday and Saturday was shown Charles Ray in "The Family Skeleton."

"THE CABARET" with all star cast inclusive of June Elvidge, Carlyle Blackwell, Montague Love and John Bowers, led the bill at the Orpheum in the week of August 19. Other showings were Emily Stevens in "A Man's World," Constance Talmadge in "Scandal," June Elvidge, Carlyle Blackwell and Arthur Ashley in "The Social Leper" and Ethel Clayton in "The Man Hunt."

DESPITE extreme heat of the week of August 12, "Over the Top" went big at the Crystal, Dundee. Special matinee performances helped to take care of the rush. Other showings of that week were Franklin Farnum in "Anything Once," the Ford animated news weekly, the eleventh episode of "The Mystery Ship," the fifth episode of "The Lion's Claws," Robert Warwick in "The Argyle Case," "The Judgment House" and Margery Wilson in "Without Honor."

IRENE CASTLE pictures have taken a spurt in popularity since the death of her aviator husband, and the occasional one that comes to the Star theatre shows this to be so. Her late picture, "The First Law" was shown there August 21 and 22. Other pictures shown that week included Gladys Brockwell in "The Scarlet Road," Gladys Hulette and Creighton Gale in "Annexing Bill," Mary Anderson and Alfred Whitman in "The Flaming Woman," Earle Williams and Corinne Griffith in "The Stolen Treaty," Peggy Hyland in "Other Men's Daughters," Pearl White in "The House of Hate" and the special Friday night comedy bill.

week bill with the offering of a particularly strong bill on Mondays. In the week of August 19 he showed in one evening "The Preacher's Son" (a Judge Brown story), third episode of "The Bull's Eye," Fatty Arbuckle in "The Bouncer" and late current events. Other pictures of that week were Joe Bennett and Peggy Pearce in "Golden Fleece," William S. Hart in "A Square Deal Man," Louise Glaum in "Shackled," Ruth Clifford in the illustrated song, "Daddy Mine," "Alias Mary Brown" with Pauline Stark, Edith Roberts in "The Love Swindle," "Vod-a-Vil," Jack Livingston in "The Price of Applause" and Margarita Fisher in "Impossible Susan."

ELGIN moving picture managers lent a boost to another wartime effort the weeks of August 18 and 25 in advertising the sale of Smileage books to Elgin men in camp, on screens. The sale is being promoted by prominent town business men and the Donor club.

THERE WAS JOY in the local junction of Movieville in beginning the week of August 25 when government war heads ruled favorably for the motion picture industry as essential and useful occupation. Managers took heart and promise good things in the fall that might otherwise have been risked.

ELGIN DOTES ON Charlie Ray, and his appearances in "The Family Skeleton" on August 23 and 24 were received with increased patronage of the Grand. Other showings of days following were Pauline Frederick in "La Tosca," Ann Pennington in "Sunshine Nan" and "The Bar Sinister." The fourth chapter of the Allied Official War Pictures was shown. Also the Pathe weekly.

IN THAT WEEK the Star offered the following: Peggy Hyland in "Other Men's Daughters," Alice Joyce in "Find the Woman," Milton Sills in "Married in Name Only," Toto, the clown, in "Fire the Cook," Tyrone Power in "A Modern Lorelei," Harold Lloyd in "His Romance," Jewel Carmen in "The Bride of Hate," Earle Williams and Grace Darmond in "The Girl in His House."

THE ORPHEUM in that week included the following: Ethel Clayton in "The Man Hunt," Alice Brady in "Her Silent Sacrifice" and June Elvidge and John Bowers in "A Woman of Redemption."

Gathered in Green Bay

"OVER THE TOP," the Vitagraph production of Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey's book, played to capacity houses at the Grand theatre on the nights of Aug. 19-20-21. The demand for seats at the evening showings was so great that a large number of people could not be accommodated. Business at the afternoon presentations was heavy. This war picture proved to be the best drawing card booked by Henry Goldman, owner of the Grand theatre, this season.

LEW FIELDS, of the World film house, made his initial appearance in Green Bay at the Royal theatre Aug. 19. He played in "The Corner Grocery" and the comedy pleased the audience.

"PATRIOTISM," with Bessie Barriscale in the leading role, was the attraction at the Colonial theatre Aug. 21-22, and it proved highly satisfactory. The film is a General.

MADGE KENNEDY played in "Service Star" Aug. 16-17 at the Colonial theatre. The Goldwyn star is gaining friends with each appearance here.

ENID BENNETT was an attraction at the Orpheum theatre Aug. 17 in the Paramount picture "The Vamp." She pleased her audiences.

ALICE BRADY played at the Grand theatre in "The Whirlpool" Aug. 18.

"THE DECIDING KISS," featuring Edith Roberts, Bluebird star, was shown Aug. 17 at the Royal theatre.

MAE MURRAY was seen in "Face Value," a Bluebird offering, at the Royal theatre Aug. 21.

ALICE JOYCE appeared Aug. 18 at the Colonial theatre in the Vitagraph production, "Song of the Soul."

JACK PICKFORD played "Tom Sawyer," a Paramount offering, at the Orpheum theatre Aug 18. Fatty Arbuckle was seen during the same program in the Paramount-Arbuckle comedy, "Good Night Nurse." The combination proved a drawing card.

ROY STEWART was seen in "The Boss of the Lazy Y," a Triangle film, Aug. 22 at the Royal theatre.

BILLIE BURKE pleased a large number of Orpheum patrons Aug. 21-22 in the Paramount production, "The Land of Promise."

CONSTANCE TALMADGE played in "The Studio Girl" at the Grand theatre Aug. 22-23-24.

"GLORY," a Westcott film, was shown Aug. 19-20 at the Colonial theatre.

"THE VORTEX," a Triangle film, was presented at the Royal theatre Aug. 20.

MARY PICKFORD played before large numbers at the Orpheum theatre Aug. 14-15 in "The Little Princess," a Paramount production.

Mentions from Milwaukee

"WE CAN'T HAVE EVERYTHING" had a full week's run at the Alhambra theatre last week. In addition was shown "The Last Raid of Zeppelin L 21," a picture which has drawn huge crowds to the Alhambra. On Sunday W. S. Hart will occupy the Screen in "Riddles Gawn."

JEWEL CARMEN had a successful run at the Princess theatre in "The Girl with the Champagne Eyes." On Sunday Douglas Fairbanks opened at this theatre in "The Habit of Happiness," and advance announcements told that on September 1st Theda Bara in "Cleopatra" would be the attraction.

AT the Butterfly theatre Dorothy Dalton was starring in "Green Eyes," a "husband and wife" story. Beginning Sunday Norma Talmadge, who is a great favorite with Butterfly audiences, had a four-day run in "Her Only Way."

WINSOME Anna Nillson was presented in a thrilling drama of every-day life at the Merrill theatre. In this picture, "In Judgment Of," she is supported by Herbert Standing and Franklyn Farnum.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS and Wallace Reid were at the Toy theatre in "Big Timber," and at the Strand was Bessie Love in "A Little Sister of Everybody."

THE fiftieth performance of Griffith's "Hearts of the World" was on Monday, August 26th. This picture, which has kept the public in line a block long waiting for a chance to buy tickets, is said to be the best Griffith film that has been seen in Milwaukee.

THE Alhambra theatre will be the next theatre to show one of Griffith's pictures, and it has announced that in the near future they will show the latest of his pictures, "The Great Love," in which many members of the English nobility make their appearance.

THE Milwaukee branch of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit is getting ready to move into larger quarters. They will move from the fifth floor to the fourth into the old quarters of the American Feature Film Company, and they will move into quarters on the sixth floor.

WHEN the Majestic theatre opened the week of August 26th the part of the program which is always occupied by motion pictures was held by "The Fourth of July in Paris." This picture made a stir recently in one of the downtown houses where it was having its first run.

MANY Milwaukee exhibitors will go to Chicago to attend the annual convention of the American Exhibitors' Association, which will be held in that city September 3rd. Charles C. Perry, who was formerly the manager of the Strand theatre and who is now connected with the Liberty theatre, will make an address. Mr. Perry is at present home on leave from Camp Upton, Long Island.

GRACE VALENTINE opened at the Strand theatre on Sunday in a film version of "The Unchastened Woman."

ALBERT TANZER, of the Milwaukee Exhibitors' Club, made a hurried trip to Chicago on Wednesday. While there he signed the first contract on the Gaumont serial, "The Hand of Vengeance." Mr. Tanzer saw the picture on the screen in Chicago and speaks very highly of it.

Fond du Lac News Notes

FOND DU LAC moving picture houses had one thing in common during the week of August 18 to 24. It was a slump in business caused by the weather man. The heat wave struck Fond Du Lac in full force and exacted a heavy toll at the box office.

WAR time service was resumed by the moving picture houses in Fond Du Lac on Monday, August 19, when a place was made on their programs for the four-minute speakers, who spoke on the Salvation Army Drive sponsored by the Elks. This educational campaign helped put Fond Du Lac County over the top.

THE Henry Boyle theatre was turned over Friday night, August 23, to war-time service. Films furnished by the United States Government were run for the purpose of promoting fuel conservation. In addition to this films showing the exploits of the American troops in France were run. The entertainment was sponsored by the Soo Line, a show being put on for railroad men at 7.30, while another program was put on for the general public at 8.15.

THE contracts received by Manager O. J. Vollert of the Henry Boyle theatre on Thursday, August 22, fixes the date of Griffith's new picture, "The Hearts of the World," for Fond Du Lac Thanskgiving week. Griffith's pictures have always gone big at the Henry Boyle and "Hearts of the World" it is believed will set a new record.

MANAGER AINSWORTH of the Orpheum has booked a strong program for Labor Day week. The program for the first three days, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 2, 3 and 4, will feature Norma Talmadge in "By Right of Purchase." On Thursday, Friday and Saturday, September 5, 6 and 7, William S. Hart will be seen in "Blue Blazes Rawden."

COMMUNITY singing has "arrived" at the Fond Du Lac moving picture theatres. The Orpheum set the pace on Wednesday, August 21, when Manager W. E. Ainsworth made a contract with Miss Mabel Harney, of Milwaukee, to lead the community singing at both afternoon and evening shows three days in the week, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, for an indefinite period. Miss Harney was formerly supervisor of music in the Fond Du Lac public schools, a fact which has added to her drawing power as a community singing leader. The venture was marked with success from the very start, the audience joining with genuine spirit in the singing of patriotic songs, old war ballads and southern songs. One of the war songs which made a special hit was "Way Back in Dear Old America," written by Mrs. Rathbone, a sister of Miss Harney. "Marching Through Germany," sung to the tune of "Marching Through Georgia," and "K-K-Katy" struck a popular chord.

In Springfield Theatres

THE Gaiety and Vaudette theatres have again contracted for Paramount-Artcraft service. The Vaudette will use all the Paramount pictures, and Gaiety all the Artcraft and special productions. The new contracts also call for the Burton Holmes Travel pictures, Fatty Arbuckle comedies, Bray Pictographs and James Montgomery Flagg comedies.

THE Lyric had a fair week with the Lee children in "Doing Their Bit;" Emmy Wehlen in "The House of Gold," and Theda Bara in "The Soul of Buddha." Theda Bara no longer draws here like she formerly did. Time was when the theatre that had "the vampire" had the crowds, but the rule seems to be working the other way now.

THE Gaiety with Douglas Fairbanks in "Bound in Morocco" and "The Geezer of Berlin" had a whale of a day Sunday, August 18. A slight raise in admission was necessary to pay for both pictures, and the public was anxious to pay it. The bill is booked for four days, and will be followed by Madge Kennedy in "Friend Husband," the star's newest Goldwyn play.

CHARLES RAY drew them to the Vaudette on Sunday, August 18, with "A Nine O'Clock Town." Manager Watts also had on a new Screen Telegram and a "Fatty" Arbuckle and Mabel Normand comedy, "He Did and He Didn't," which made a wonderful bill.

PAULINE FREDERICK in "Fedora" was the offering at the Vaudette on August 22, 23 and 24. A Strand comedy and Screen Telegram were shown with it. For the next week Manager Watts has Billie Burke in "The Pursuit of Polly," and Mae Marsh in her newest Goldwyn play.

"BIG BILL" HART came to the Gaiety on Sunday, August 25, for four days in "Riddle Gawne."

"THE PASSING OF THE OKLAHOMA OUTLAWS" came to the Capitol for one day, August 21. Manager Maisel has shown the last chapter of "The House of Hate" and has started the newest Pathe serial, "Hands Up." Business is great on Washington street these days.

THE Allied War Review and Gaumont Weekly have made a hit with patrons of the Majestic. The Majestic is repeating the War Review on the Princess.

"FOR HUSBANDS ONLY," a Jewel play with Mildred Harris is coming to the Princess shortly. Manager Kunz had it screened and says it is "a bear."

ALL of of the five cent houses are going along nicely under the ten cent prices, so it looks as though all of the managers will stick to the raise. The public will pay ten cents to see a good picture any time.

THE Empress continues to do big business under the new management. Dr. B. L. Renfro is continuing the policies of Dick Diamond, former owner.

THE Princess had a fine week, August 11-17. Sunday, Monday and Tuesday the attraction was John Mason and Alma Hanlon in "Moral Suicide;" Wednesday and Thursday, Barbara Castleton in "Heredity;" Friday and Saturday, Louise Glaum in "Wedlock." In addition there was also shown the usual War Weeklies, Pathe comedies and Allied War Review.

HARRY LOPER, manager of the Lyric, has returned from a three weeks' vacation trip, which included a motor run to Chillicothe, Ohio, where Lieut. Russell Loper is stationed. Looks good, and says he had a good time. Mrs. Loper went with him.

THE Princess had a special attraction on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, August 18, 19, 20, with Barbara Castleton, entitled "Mothers of Liberty." Did not draw very well, as it had some war stuff in it, and folks were not in the mood for battle scenes. Carlyle Blackwell follows in "The Beloved Blackmailer" on Wednesday and Thursday, August 21 and 22.

VIRGINIA PEARSON in "The Liar" did well at the Lyric on August 18 and 19. Emily Stevens in "A Man's World," a Universal Weekly and comedy, were the attractions on August 20 and 21. "Cecelia of the Pink Roses" comes August 22, 23 and 24.

THE SAVOY, Royal, Capitol and Amuse-U have finally raised their admission prices to five and ten cents, after running along for five cents for a long time. The new prices will be tried out during State Fair week, and for two weeks following, and if the public does not do too much clamoring, they will be in effect always hereafter. The houses named have been doing big business, one reason being that no war tax was collected on the nickel admission. The Royal has been running at ten cents for some time, and Manager Kerasotes has made repeated efforts to have the others come to his figure. It is hoped for the good of all concerned that there will be no going back to the old prices.

THE SAVOY announced the following pictures as the attractions for the week of August 11-17: Sunday, Helen Gibson in "The Payroll Express," a comedy, "The Clean Sweep," and Universal Weekly; Monday, Earle Williams in "A Mother's Sin"; Tuesday, Broncho Billy, "The Courage of the Commonplace," with Leslie Austin and Mildred Stevens, and another drama; Wednesday, last episode of "The Woman in the Web," Universal Weekly and Lyons-Moran comedy; Thursday, "Midnight Madness," with Ruth Clifford, and a new comedy; Friday, Marie Walcamp in "The Lions' Claws," a two-reel drama and a new comedy; Saturday, Harry Carey in "Hell Bent," and a comedy.

THE PRINCESS had three good days with "Moral Suicide" on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, August 11, 12 and 13; Barbara Castleton followed on the 14th and 15th in "Heredity," her newest World Film feature.

W. K. SINES, publicity man for the Princess, has returned from two weeks' vacation in the wilds around Litchfield.

MISS BESSIE WARE is again cashier at the Majestic.

DICK DIAMOND has sold the Empress theatre, 11th and South Grand avenues, to Dr. B. L. Renfro, a local dentist. Diamond made a wonderful success of the theatre, taking it over from the Marshalls. Dick will continue to live in this city, having a fine business with his "Sugar Bowl," a high-class confectionery. Dr. Renfro announces that he will continue the same policy of Mr. Diamond.

THE PRINCESS announces the following productions as coming to the theatre during the next two weeks: "Blue Blood," with Howard Hickman and Rhea Mitchell; "For Husbands Only," a Jewel play with Mildred Harris; "Mothers of Liberty," a special feature production; "Wedlock," a Paralta play with Louise Glaum, and "The Mortgaged Wife," a Bluebird special.

THE MAJESTIC opened the season here on August 11. The Official Allied War Review and Gaumont Weekly are being used. It is understood that "A Fight for Millions," the newest Vitagraph serial with William Duncan, will come to the Majestic shortly.

THE PRINCESS is using Pathe News, Official Allied War Weekly and Pathe comedies now; also State Register Travel Picture.

HARRY LOPER, manager of the Lyric theatre, still continues to spend his vacation away from the city. In the meantime the show house is going along nicely, under the guidance of Herbert Walter.

RECENT pictures shown at the Lyric were Gladys Brockwell in "The Bird of Prey," Emmy Wehlen in "The House of Gold," and Theda Bara in "The Soul of Buddha."

Brief Bits from Chicago

EMMA COHAN, the only woman managing a Loop theatre in the city of Chicago, reports that her business with the "Geeser of Berlin" for the past two weeks has been the largest in the history of the house. The picture was shown at 25 cents.

Additional Chicago News

FRANK VANSTON, of Elgin, Ill., has sold the Temple theatre.

HARRY WILSON, of Marengo, Ill., has been drafted. His mother will have charge of the Royal theatre until his return.

THE Opera House at Paw Paw, Ill., will open with pictures on August 29th, and will have a daily change.

SAMUEL LUDWIG, president of the State Film Company and Victor Film Company of Detroit, has been in Chicago for the past few days making arrangements for some feature pictures. He has acquired the State right of Charlotte's picture, "Frozen Warning," for Michigan, the same picture that has been meeting with big success all over the country. He has already booked "Frozen Warning" over the Fitzpatrick & Mackelroy circuit in Michigan.

HARRY WILLARD, Fox Chicago office, is so busy signing contracts for Standard and Victory pictures that he has to have his lunch served in the office.

S. E. GREENBAUM, of Davenport, Ia., has just contracted for all of the Fox productions.

A. H. BLANK, representing the First National Exhibitors' Circuit in Iowa, is spending a few days in Chicago.

THE Boston, Alcazar and Rose theatres have signed contracts for the Fox, Standard and Victory pictures for week runs.

DeKALB, ILL., is to have a new theatre, which will be built by S. W. Reynolds. The Princess has proven too small to take care of the ever-increasing number of picture fans in this up-to-date little city.

ISADORE BERNSTEIN, manager of the two theatres in Lincoln, Ill., is about to retire from business and announces his theatres for sale.

STEVE BENIS, of Lincoln, Ill., has a brand new one: you can get an ice-cream soda and see the movies while eating it at the same price.

W. J. BEYNON, manager of the Opera House at Divernon, Ill., spent last week at the State Fair at Springfield.

JOE FRIEDMAN is spending all of his week-ends at Charlevoix, Mich.

Dubuque News and Views

DUBUQUE moving picture theatres have had a rushing business the past nine days. On Saturday, August 10, the street car men decided to go on a strike, and as the Dubuque Electric Company's franchise does not compel them to operate cars two of Dubuque's most popular summer amusement places, Union Park and Eagle Point Beach, are not accessible to people not having autos, so naturally everyone turns to the moving pictures for diversion. All week long business has been booming, and on Sunday, August 18, every theatre was crowded to its capacity. The Princess and the Family had the largest crowds.

VIOLA DANA'S versatility was more pronounced than ever in "The Only Road," presented at the Grand Friday, August 16. The Allies Official War Review was the Saturday program.

MILTON SILLS, the star of "The Honor System," and Ruth Roland, of serial fame, co-starred at the Dreamland theatre Friday and Saturday, August 16 and 17, in "The Fringe of Society."

"WILD PRIMROSE," a five-part Blue Ribbon feature just released August 12, and starring Gladys Leslie, Vitagraph's girl with the "million-dollar smile," was the attraction at the Majestic theatre Friday and Saturday, August 16 and 17. Richard Barthlemess, so often seen with Marguerite Clark and Nazimova, was the leading man.

"DOUG" FAIRBANKS laughed and leaped his way into the hearts of more Dubuque fans by his cyclonic characterization of the up-to-date D'Artagnan in "A Modern Musketeer" at the Princess Friday and Saturday, August 16 and 17. Little Marjorie Daw, his leading lady, is developing into a real actress.

ETHEL BARRYMORE played at the Family theatre last Friday in "The Eternal Mother." It was pronounced one of her greatest photoplays.

"SUNSHINE" MARY ANDERSON and Alfred Whitman shared the honors of the day at the Family theatre Wednesday, August 14, in that thrilling Vitagraph production, "Sunlight's Last Raid."

"HER HOUR," a World feature starring Kitty Gordon, was presented at the Liberty theatre Wednesday, August 14. Manager Wilbur has fine crowds, notwithstanding the very hot weather.

HENRY WALTHALL had a remarkable opportunity to display his talents in "His Robe of Honor" and he certainly made good use of it. The picture was put on at the Grand for two days, Monday and Tuesday, August 19 and 20, and it proved a record breaker.

Lewis Goes to 'Frisco for Famous Players

M. H. LEWIS has returned to the management of the San Francisco Famous Players-Lasky exchange after a stay of six weeks in Los Angeles. Mr. Lewis came to the southern exchange because former Manager Halstead entered the Liberty Army, and he remained here and aided in lining up the 1918-1919 contracts for the two hundred and eight releases through this exchange. The subjects will be played at the five leading theatres in Los Angeles, one during every week program at Grauman's throughout the year, and a majority of the programs at Clune's Auditorium, Clune's Broadway, the new California theatre and the Kinema, besides second-run at the Palace, a 15-20-30 cent down-town theatre. The Famous Players-Lasky Los Angeles office is now under the management of Harry G. Ballance, who for two years has been manager of the Los Angeles Metro exchange, following several years' experience as state right exchange man.

Wright Organizes Company to Film Novels

HAROLD BELL WRIGHT, the author, is organizing a company for the production of several of his novels which have been classed as best sellers. The first to be filmed will be "The Shepherd of the Hills," and after that "The Calling of Dan Mathews." Louis Gotschalk, who has been associated with several West Coast producing organizations and recently with the Famous Players-Lasky and D. W. Griffith companies, following a number of years in the show world as composer and orchestra leader, as well as musical comedy producer, has been engaged as co-director by Mr. Wright. George McDaniels will be the leading man. He has been seen in Lasky and Fox subjects and previously was leading man for Victor Herbert Opera Company.

Work Begins on Billie Rhodes Subject

WORK on the first Billie Rhodes five-reel subject was started by the National's newly organized producing unit, Sunday morning at Bellows Camp in the San Gabriel canyon. The company, including William Louis Chaudet, director; Frank McQuarrie, Ben Suslow, Jack MacDonald and Lamar Johnstone, together with Leo Pearson, who was engaged for the juvenile lead, went to the mountain location. Walter Griffin is in charge of photography. The first subject to be made is an adaptation from the Wilbur Nesbit stage success. "The Girl of My Dreams." This was picturized by Milton Sineberg and Director Chaudet.

Portland Faces Operator and Musician Problem

THE theatrical world of Portland, Ore., is confronted with an additional financial burden in the shape of a new wage and working scale of the 500 members of the Theatrical Federation, to become operative on September 1. So film exhibitors have more to think of than merely the additional war tax the Government will impose on theatre admissions.

Operators and musicians are the only members of the Federation whose requests will affect the houses devoted exclusively to the showing of motion pictures. The Strand, which shows pictures and vaudeville, and the Hippodrome, which shows vaudeville and pictures, are hit by the stage hands, and, because they use orchestras against organists for the picture houses, are naturally affected more by the raise of the musicians.

The big feature of the new scale is the request of stage hands for a six-day week, with more than the pay of seven, which will inaugurate the relief shift regime in theatres. Musicians have asked for increases ranging from 35 to 45 per cent., while operators ask for from $7.50 to $12.50 more than the present scale.

The members of the Theatrical Federation also include stationary engineers, bill posters and lithographers.

Exhibitor Lays Success to Being Blind

HENRY B. HURST, of Deadwood and Lead, South Dakota, who is one of the most prominent exhibitors within the Black Hills circuit and who is also one of the organizers in the South Dakota Exhibitors' League, has left for home after several weeks' vacation spent in Wyoming and in Denver.

Mr. Hurst says that he owes his success as an exhibitor to the fact that he lost his eyesight and has never seen a screen picture in his life.

"Had I been able to see," he said to a MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative a few days ago, "I might, like many other exhibitors, have followed my own judgment too much. As it is, I rely upon the judgment of the public. I am always present when a new picture is run, and I listen to the comments of the audience as I move around in various parts of the house. Then, too, I ask the opinion of a great many people on each picture. The box-office receipts also tell me what my patrons like most."

Mr. Hurst lost his sight when a boy. While catching in a ball game, a pitched ball struck him between the eyes with such force that total blindness followed the accident.

Theatre Owners Investigate Lighting Conditions

PLANS were made by members of the Theatre Owners Association at their bi-weekly luncheon August 21st to investigate local lighting conditions, with the view of inducing the government officials to change the ruling with respect to lighting in fronts of stores being turned out on Monday and Tuesday evening, and also the promised ruling which becomes effective October 1, and provides that no display lights shall be used on any evening except Saturday and Sunday.

The action of the Los Angeles and Southern California exhibitors cannot be looked upon as an unpatriotic one, or that the theatre men are not trying to aid the government in the matter of fuel conservation, because it has been found that practically all of the electricity for lighting on the evening in this section is created by water power, and adding all display lights to the load would not in any way conserve fuel. This matter will be taken up with the local Fuel Administrator, and if he does not have authority to act in the matter, it will later be referred to the higher officials of the district or nation, as the case may be.

A feature of the meeting Wednesday was a thirty minute talk by Joseph Scott, Secretary of the Knights of Columbus of Los Angeles, who had just returned from several months service in the Knights of Columbus relief and canteen work on the western front.

Charles Christie, of the Christie Film Company, was present, and accepted an invitation of President F. A. McDonald and members of the association for all members of the Christie organization to be present at the next meeting, which will be "Ladies Day."

Denny Plans to Reopen Signal Laboratories

ORRIN DENNY, formerly superintendent of laboratory for the Signal Film Corporation, following a number of years' experience in laboratory work for Universal and other large studios for the West Coast, is making plans for the reopening of the Signal Laboratories, located at 4560 Pasadena avenue, Los Angeles, and will conduct them on a commercial basis. The laboratories have not been in use for the past several months or since the closing of activities of the Signal Company, almost a year ago. The equipment has been kept intact and will be augmented by new up-to-the-minute machinery and equipment of all kinds. Mr. Denny formerly did Lois Weber productions, Signal, and the laboratory work of several other producing firms at the Signal Laboratory.

Vacation Period Calls West Coast Exhibitors

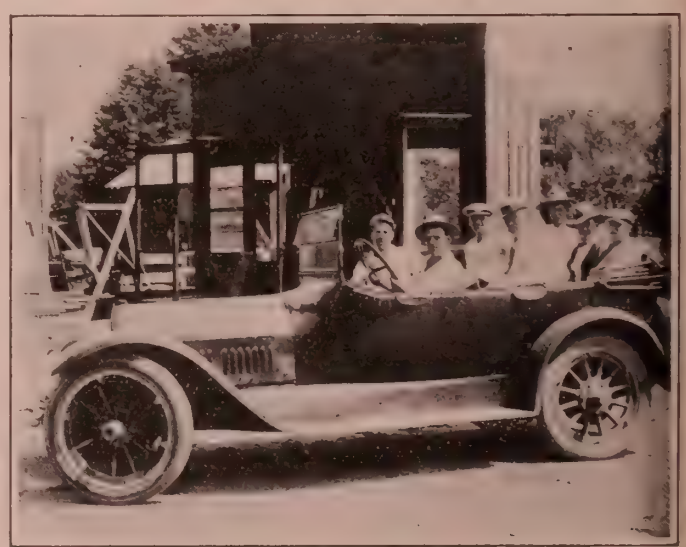
AUGUST was the vacation season with Los Angeles exhibitors and all fortunate enough to arrange their business to permit a little recreation among the many alluring spots of California, were consulting vacation guides or telling their friends of the great time that "was had by all" on that big trip from which they have just returned.

Dr. H. B. Breckwedel, manager of the Palace theatre, with H. McIntyre, manager of the Peerless Film Service, has returned from a week's trip to Shaver Lake and the Yosemite Valley. The first stop was made at Shaver Lake where it was intended to put in several days fishing. The fish declined the invitation of the film men to be caught and after a day of disappointment it was decided to go to the Yosemite. In all the little jaunt covered 900 miles and concluded on Saturday August 17.

Chris Glymm, manager of the Garrick, left Monday, August 19, for a two weeks' fishing trip. Several noted fishing spots in Southern California are to be visited by Mr. Glymm.

Seymour Tally, of Tally's Broadway theatre, will spend a week at Bear Lake, to fish if the finny tribe is so disposed, but to enjoy seven great days in the open at all odds.

Bourke Succeeds Hudson in Butte



THE management of the Universal exchange in Butte has just undergone a change, George Bourke, a well-known film man of Denver, taking charge this week, succeeding to R. C. Hudson. Mr. Hudson, who made a good record here, goes to Denver as a special representative of the Universal in that territory.

Mr. Bourke was with the Universal exchange in Denver for two years and is well known in the silent drama circles of the West. He started in the business in Seattle ten years ago.

He plans getting a ground floor location in Butte and will install a screen room in the basement.

Harry Jacobs Dies in Los Angeles

HARRY JACOBS, who has been identified with the promotion work of a number of motion picture companies for the past two years in Los Angeles, following similar amusement promotion work in the East, dropped dead on the streets of Los Angeles, August 19. Burial was held Wednesday, August 21. Jacobs was past fifty years of age.

Short Notes of the Studios

EDDIE LYONS AND LEE MORAN have a decidedly novel opening for their comedy, "Guilty, Your Honor," just filmed. This shows a court room where the defendants are jubilant in the opening scenes because the jury finds them guilty.

HARRY HILLIARD, well-known leading man, was engaged by Universal this week, but no decision has been reached as to who he will play with first.

EDDIE GRANEY, world famous fight referee, paid Universal City a visit this week, and before the camera gave imitations of Sullivan, Dempsey Fitzsimmons and Corbet, whom he claims are the four greatest fighters the world has known. Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran appeared with Graney in the films which were directed by William E. Wing.

ROSEMARY THEBY, who was most recently seen in D. W. Griffith's productions, has been engaged by Triangle, and will be featured in "Out of Western Seas," now in production under the direction of E. Mason Hopper. The cast selected to support Miss Theby includes Pete Morrison, Alberta Lee, Lillian West, William Dale, Harvey Clark, Larry Sears and William Bainbridge.

WILLIAM CHRISTIE CABANNE is making the final scenes for the first Triangle Taylor Holmes' subject, "A Regular Fellow" this week, and Holmes is to return under the direction of Lawrence Windom. Windom has just filmed "The Gray Parasol," featuring Wellington Cross and Claire Anderson.

THE Theda Bara subject now in production has been titled, "The Siren's Song." This is from the pen of Charles Kenyon, and, like previous productions starring Miss Bara, is being directed by J. Gordon Edwards. Practically all of the scenes are laid in Europe—a portion being in a fishing village, and others in Paris and Nice. Announcement is made that Miss Bara will return East upon the completion of this film.

GLADYS BROCKWELL, having completed work in "The Strange Woman," under the direction of E. J. Le Saint, has been granted a short vacation while the scenario department prepares her next story.

What Exchanges and Theatres Are Doing

W. H. Whitson, proprietor of the Plaza theatre, San Diego, Cal. spent several days in Los Angeles the week of August 19 for the purpose of arranging his bookings for the early fall.

GEORGE MAUK, of Phoenix, Ariz., who controls a chain of theatres in Phoenix, Ray, Hayden and Superior, has been visiting his friends in the film exchanges of Los Angeles.

P. D. GOMEZ, proprietor of the Orpheum theatre of Santa Rita, New Mexico, has attracted attention among the exchange men of Los Angeles by the way he went after business for the Jane and Katherine Lee (Fox Kiddies) picture, "Doing Their Bit" on Tuesday, August 20. Mr. Gomez did not take any chances of the foreign element missing the pictures and caught them by a circular printed in Spanish. A circular in English was also distributed among all prospective patrons.

GEORGE J. EKRE, of Portland, Ore., has been selected to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation several weeks ago of Walter F. Cree as manager of the General Film Exchange of Los Angeles. Mr. Gree has enlisted in the Navy. Mr. Ekre is in Los Angeles most any day, as his appointment has been approved by the New York office, and he is now only awaiting advice as to the time he is to take up the duties of the Los Angeles office. For the past two weeks the managerial chair at the General has been occupied, temporarily by W. S. Rand. Mr. Rand was formerly of the Denver office of the orginzation, but was appointed division manager for San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland and Denver, about four weeks ago. He has determined to make his headquarters in Los Angeles. He will take up the work of his office as soon as Mr. Ekre arrives.

THE Rex Beach series under the Goldwyn banner has been booked by Ben Fish, of the Goldwyn Los Angeles Exchange, to Emil Kehrleine, manager of the Kinema theatre. The first of the series will be "Laughing Bill Hyde" which is scheduled for its initial showing at the Kinema the week of September 30. The first Pauline Frederick picture by Goldwyn entitled "The Poverty of Money" is scheduled for the Kinema the early part of October.

Arrangements are being made by Mr. Fish for private showing of "The Turn of the Wheel," the first Geraldine Farrar production for Goldwyn. The showing will probably begin August 22.

PRELIMINARY showings of "The Japanese Nightingale," the latest Fanny Ward photoplay, are being arranged by E. D. Tate of the Pathe Exchange. The picture is scheduled for release on September 22.

Exchanges and Theatres

WALTER S. RAND, division manager of the General Film Company, has booked the first of the Oakdale series in Talley's Broadway theatre for the week of September 9. The first picture will be "The Locked Heart," starring Gloria Joy. Other Joy productions will follow in a few weeks after the first presentation.

W. H. WALSH of the Los Angeles William Fox Exchange has booked the Fox Standard pictures in the Kinema. The first William Farnum in "Riders of the Purple Sage" will open at the Kinema on Saturday, August 24. It will run for a week. Mr. Walsh has also booked "Cleopatra," Theda Bara's noted vehicle, in Miller's theatre for an eight-day run, beginning Saturday, August 24.

JAMES COOK, of the Palace theatre, El Centro, Cal., who has been spending the summer in Los Angeles, left today for home for the purpose of arranging some business and also to register for the fall election. He will return to Los Angeles in about three weeks, where he will remain until February.

"THE SAVAGE WOMAN," Clara Kimball Young's second California-made production, opened for a week's engagement at Tally's Broadway theatre on Monday, August 19. Miss Young's first California production, "The Reason Why," was very well received on the Pacific Coast.

EXHIBITING rights for "The Clansman" of "The Birth of a Nation" have been purchased for Southern California by M. & R. Feature Film Exchange of Los Angeles. The privilege was bought from W. H. Clune. This picture, which recorded unprecedented runs in all parts of the country, broke all records in Los Angeles in 1915 when Clune's Auditorium gave a consecutive showing for 22 weeks.

E. H. EMMICK, owner of the Peerless Film Service, returned to his home in San Francisco on Tuesday, August 20, after having spent ten days at the Los Angeles branch of the concern.

SEVERAL changes in office forces of the George Kleine System and the Mutual Film Exchange were made necessary by the resignation of E. T. Wakefield, assistant manager of the Kleine organization. C. H. Fitzgerald, booker for the Mutual, was selected by Manager E. H. Silcock as his assistant. Mr. Wakefield has not as yet announced his new line of business.

To fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Fitzgerald going with Kleine, Manager A. R. Patten, of the Mutual Exchange, promoted J. A. Ruger, cashier, to the position of booker. Miss Ethel Simpson of the office force, has been made cashier.

J. N. GAWNE, made his debut into the motion picture industry this week, having been selected by W. H. Hepburn, manager of the Vitagraph Exchange, to cover the Southern California territory. Mr. Gawne, before entering the motion picture business, was connected with a large mercantile concern. He will start upon his first trip in a few days.

D. S. MITCHELL, who handles the Arizona territory for Vitagraph, will start Wednesday upon his fall roundup.

THE INITIAL presentation of "To Hell With the Kaiser" at San Diego, occurred on Monday, August 19. A. B. Lamb, manager of the Los Angeles Metro Exchange, having booked the production at the Pickwick theatre for an indefinite run. The picture had its first showing in Los Angeles on Saturday, August 10, at Quinn's Rialto. The first week's business proved entirely satisfactory and the production has now entered upon its second week with exceedingly bright prospects for a third week's run.

BOOKINGS of the William L. Sherry Service through the Los Angeles exchange, amount to eighty-five nights on the three first releases, the titles of which are "A Romance of the Underworld," "Street of Seven Stars," and "Out of the Night."

What Butte Is Doing

W. A. COUGHLIN, who is now a special representative of the American Film Corporation in the Northwest, with his head office in Spokane, was in Butte last week on his way from New York to the far West. He was in the picture game in Gotham the past three months. Mr. Coughlin has spent some 12 years in the film business in the West, and so is glad to get back again. His Spokane office will be with Pathe. He will book "Flying A" productions in this territory.

AL FINKELSTEIN, De Luxe representative on the road, was in Butte. Al, who is a live wire, is booking "Hearts of the World" in Montana at this time. He has headquarters in Seattle.

W. B. HARTWIG, the Dillon showman, visited in Butte last week. He reports business picking up.

G. M. COLLODAY, Vitagraph road man, out of Salt Lake, is visiting Butte and Montana exhibitors in the interests of his firm. He reports business good in the big towns but rather quiet in the small ones.

BIG BILL HART, in "Shark Monroe", went over like a thunder-clap at the American the past week. Advertising Manager Raleigh helped with some attractive lobby displays and the use of printer's ink.

THE ORPHEUM made a feature of "Polly of the Circus" the past week. An appropriate "circus" lobby served to attract passersby.

THE EXHIBITION of "Doing Their Bit," a new Fox feature, is awaited with interest in Montana, as a former Montana girl, Beth Ivins, will make her initial appearance in this production. She is the niece of Editor E. G. Ivins of Lewistown, one of the well-known newspaper men of the Northwest.

JOHNNY GRIFFIN, of the Orpheum theatre, Chinook, was visiting in Butte this week, calling on local exchanges.

WILL STEEGE, former manager of the Grand Opera House at Great Falls, on September 1 took charge of the Sexton theatre in that city. He is one of Montana's best-known showmen. Mr. Steege will use the Paramount-Artcraft program 100 per cent, having arranged with Mel S. Wilson for the service.

DAVE SCHAYER, head booker and assistant manager of the Salt Lake branch of Famous Players-Lasky, is in Butte for two weeks, installing a new booking system at the local exchange, which is expected to put the service up to the highest possible degree of efficiency. He is also co-operating with Manager Wilson to bring the service up to the top standard throughout Montana.

MANAGER RUFFNER, of the Rialto, has just signed contracts with Manager Mel S. Wilson, of the Butte exchange of Famous Players-Lasky, whereby he will use the entire output during the season 1918-1919. The contract is one of the biggest, if not the biggest, ever signed in Montana by an exhibitor. The Rialto is the Jensen and Von Herberg house in Butte. Mr. Wilson is just back from Missoula, Great Falls and other larger cities of the state. He reports every town booking Paramount-Artcraft 100 per cent.

In Portland and Vicinity

F. A. TIPTON has been placed in charge of the Portland territory for the Parex Film Corporation, Seattle, and will establish an office for the Wm. L. Sherry service in Portland. Manager L. A. Todd and Mr. Tipton were in Portland recently with "The Romance of the Underworld," which was booked to Walter Armstrong of the Strand theatre, and several other productions.

SEVERAL instances of film bicycling—shooting of a film from one theatre to another for two exhibitions at the price of one—have been discovered in the Portland suburbs, but quick action of the exchange men has eradicated the evil.

E. J. MYRICK, manager of the Liberty theatre, is back from a vacation which took him to San Francisco. He's primed for a lot of new stunts to pull on his patrons during the Fall months.

J. J. PARKER, owner of the Majestic theatre, has been hobnobbing with the boys on Seattle's film row for the past week.

"HEARTS OF THE WORLD" opened big in Portland. It will run for two weeks, jump to Astoria for four days to make way for a road show at the Heilig theatre, and then return to that house for a run of two more weeks.

"PERSHING'S CRUSADERS," shown at the Heilig, the "legit" house, "knocked 'em dead." Full page ads and a double-page spread in The Oregonian were paid for by patriotic merchants.

E. C. SMITH, of the American and Liberty theatres, Dayton, Wash., has taken over the Empire at Waitesburg, Wash.

G. T. HOLTZCLAW, of the Circle theatre, Portland, Ore., is going to show all Paramount-Artcraft pictures, or a selection of them, during the coming season. He's going to boost the admission price for former five-cent houses to 15 cents on nights and Sundays, with ten cents for matinees. For the showing of "Cleopatra" he broke all price records and charged 20 cents. The Circle is a downtown theatre.

CLYDE GAGE will open a theatre at Coquille, Ore., about September 1. The former Coquille theatre was burned down some months ago.

THE JEFFERSON THEATRE, at Jefferson, Ore., has been reopened with Paramount-Artcraft pictures.

HERMAN WOBBER, Western manager for Famous Players-Lasky, and D. K. Shank, auditor, were in Portland recently visiting C. M. Hill, the local manager.

MR. HILL has booked all Paramount-Artcraft subjects for the following season, the People's, Liberty, Columbia and Star getting all of the product. The Peoples Amusement Company operates the People's and Star theatres, while Jensen and Von Herberg operate the Liberty and Columbia.

H. H. HURN, Triangle manager in Seattle, and Manager Hill of Goldwyn, have been recent Portland visitors.

W. A. STONE, of the Service Film Company, recently made a round-trip motor tour from Portland to San Francisco.

CLIFF WORK, Spokane Orpheum vaudeville manager, is spending his vacation putting "Boy Scouts to the Rescue" in Oregon theatres.

BERT LATZ, the Jewel genius in the Washington territory, dropped into the Portland office the other day to talk things over with District Manager Sol Baum.

ELSIE BRINN in very active in the management of the Gem theatre, St. Helens, Ore. Her dad, A. M. Brinn, is the big chief at least in name.

BEVERLY GRIFFITH, former Universal official, is now a sergeant-major in the aviation branch of the Signal Corps. He underwent an operation at Vancouver, Wash., recently, but is now fit for service and will be stationed at Seattle.

D. F. MARKOWITZ, brother of M. L. Markowitz, manager of the Universal Exchanges, San Francisco, was a visitor in Portland last week. He's up in the Northwest putting over a couple of private picture deals.

F. P. WITTENBERG, manager of the Grant and Brooklyn theatres, Portland, has closed the Grant to have it remodelled. He will spend $3000 and increase the seating capacity to 500.

N. E. LEIGH of Parma, Idaho, has almost completed his new house in Parma, and also his theatre in Nyssa. He is also having his Wilder house remodelled.

E. J. REYNOLDS has bought the Liberty theatre, Pasco, Wash.

THE KAM THEATRE at Ephrata, Wash., is closed.

N. B. PETERSON is opening a theatre at Ukiah, Ore.

JULIAN BYRD has taken over the Liberty theatre at Burns, Ore., formerly managed by C. B. Smith.

E. T. SCHULER is the new boss of the People's theatre, Joseph, Ore. The house was formerly operated by C. C. Ghormley, manager of the People's at Enterprise.

W. J. WHITE, manager of the Arcade theatre, Cottage Grove, Ore., and Mrs. White were Portland visitors recently.

ALEX. TAGG, manager of the Sunset, Astoria, spent a day or two in Portland recently.

F. A. SHERWOOD, of the Primrose theatre, Sultan, Wash., has enlisted in the Naval band, and Dick and Frank Hasty of Coupeville, Wash., are in charge of the house.

GUST BERGSTROM has succeeded C. M. Dunn in the management of the Mason, Wash., theatre.

CHRIS CAMPEN has closed his Herron, Wash., theatre and has moved to Iowa.

C. W. SHOWALTER has succeeded E. Struxell in the management of the Othello theatre, Othello, Wash.

THE ORPHEUM THEATRE, Seaside, Ore., is open for the Summer.

MIKE LYONS, formerly of the Palace theatre, Seattle, was in Portland recently en route to California on a motoring trip. His car broke down near Central, but he bought a new one.

WALTER ARMSTRONG, manager of the Strand theatre, is now piloting a new Oldsmobile Six. Sure he's the owner.

E. E. COLESTOCK, manager of the Cloverdale, Ore., film theatre, has closed the theatre for the Summer and is enjoying a vacation motoring with his family.

E. R. SAUNDERS, manager of the new theatre at Ilwaco, Wash., is doing a big summer business.

R. G. PERKINS, son of C. F. Perkins, who owns the Silver Star theatre at Freewater, Ore., spent a day in Portland not long ago.

E. S. BAIR, well known and successful exhibitor, has opened the Royal theatre at Newport, Ore.

THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE of Oregon has moved its Portland headquarters to the Commonwealth Bldg., Sixth and Burnside streets.

Short News of Spokane

SPOKANE photoplay houses will feature big films during the Interstate Fair week, September 1 to 7. For fair week, the Clemmer will present D. W. Griffith's big production, "The Great Love," and on Wednesday, September 4, the Clemmer will present "The Geezer of Berlin," said to be a burlesque on "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin."

MANAGER C. E. STILWELL of the Casino has completed arrangements to show the latest Metro war special, "To Hell with the Kaiser," for fair week, beginning Saturday, August 31. The Casino has also booked "The Prussian Cur." Theda Bara in her spectacular production "Salome" is an early fall booking at the Casino. Manager Charles W. York of the Auditorium theatre has booked the second U. S. Government official war film, "America's Answer," to be shown here early in October.

TWO WELL KNOWN Spokane young women figure in the supporting company with William Farnum in "Rough and Ready," a Fox production at the Majestic. Violet Palmer, the leading woman, in private life is Pearl Palmer, an orchestra leader in Spokane until two years ago. Jessie Arnold, who plays the part of the adventuress, was the leading woman most of the season with the last stock company to play at the American theatre in Spokane.

"EVE'S DAUGHTER," featuring Billie Burke, played to big business the first of the week at the Liberty.

THE CASINO played to capacity houses with that typical Western photodrama, "Hell Bent," featuring Harry Carey. Fatty Arbuckle and Charley Chaplin work together in a comedy film at the Casino.

"THE BRAVEST WAY," with at least five Japanese screen actors playing important roles, including Sessue Hayakawa, was the Lasky offering at the Clemmer.

SCOTLAND YARD, the English detective organization, furnishes the punch for "High Stakes," a Triangle production at the Class A.

CHARLES RAY in "The Hired Man" headed the program at the Lyric, the film having its second run in Spokane.

In and Around Denver

W. C. RICORD, formerly in charge of the Ford theatre at Lead, S. D., is now permanently located in Denver.

F. W. NORMAND, the popular Fox road salesman, was in last week from a trip covering western Nebraska and Wyoming and has returned again to the same territory.

R. J. CHURCHILL has returned from a farewell visit with relatives at Hastings, Neb., and will leave here for a training camp in about ten days.

G. K. NERNES, owner of the Grand theatre in Deming, is in Denver arranging fall service.

JAMES STRATTON, until recently booking clerk for Paramount, has accepted a position as booker for Metro.

N. M. KRAVATZ has just returned from a Big Circle trip and reports having placed "To Hell With the Kaiser" in every town between Denver and Grand Junction, as well as in the towns on the Big Circle.

J. H. CUDDY of Lewin & Cuddy, owners of the Newell theatre at Newell, S. D., is in Denver looking for a better location in this territory.

CHARLES R. GILMORE of Select has returned from a trip covering southern Colorado and New Mexico and reports a 100 per cent business.

EARL RADCLIFFE, also of Select, who recently enlisted in the aviation service, expects to be called for training very shortly.

W. L. GULLETT, former proprietor of the Paris theatre in Santa Fe, has accepted a position as road salesman for Goldwyn.

H. E. TOMPKINS of the Liberty at Colorado Springs was a visitor on Film Row this week.

E. C. KIRKPATRICK, until recently with Pathe in Chicago, and H. L. Hartman, formerly with the World in Minneapolis and also former exhibitor at Mandan, N. D., have accepted positions as salesmen for Fox in Denver territory.

JULIUS FRANKEL, president of Supreme Photo Plays Corporation, has practically recovered from a recent illness and is spending a few days at Manitou Springs.

EARL P. BRIGGS, formerly connected with the local World headquarters, recently tendered his resignation and has accepted a position as manager for the American Film Company, with Denver headquarters at the local Pathe office. Briggs is already off to a good start by closing on a star series contract with both the America and Strand in Denver. He is now meeting the exhibitors in northern Colorado.

What Seattle Exhibitors Say

THE PARK THEATRE, McKinley, New Mexico, has been taken over by Garrett & Garrett, to be run in connection with the Rex. The Empress has been closed.

THOMAS BURCY of the Lyric, Sterling, Col., has gone for a month's fishing trip.

MAX SCOFIELD, manager of the Film theatre, Vollmer, Idaho, has been drafted. It is not ascertained as yet who will take charge of his house.

THE JEFFERSON THEATRE, Jefferson, Ore., is reopening.

A. E. SPARKS plans leasing the Family theatre in Estacada, Ore., and having it reopened.

"SALOME," the great Fox production, has so pleased the people of Seattle that Managing-Director Levy of the Levy's Million Dollar Orpheum has put it on for a second week.

D. W. GRIFFITH'S production, "The Great Love," went over the top at the Strand. In fact it brought in more receipts than the management had seen for a long time.

FRANK STEFFEY, manager of the Coliseum, was almost compelled to call out the police force to keep the crowds away from this theatre while Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables" was being played on the screen. Steffey did it with the right kind of advertising and management.

CONSTANCE TALMADGE in "A Pair of Silk Stockings" brought down more than one house at the Strand. This play also did much better than the house expected.

J. CLEMMER is continuing to add popularity to his Clemmer theatre with his Pathe current events and his comedies. He recently made a wonderful success with "The Million Dollar Sisters."

GENERAL picture conditions in and around Seattle are reported good, especially for the summer months.

L. A. SAMUELSON, for the past four years with the Seattle Pathe office, has joined the U. S. merchant marine and is now on his way to the Philippine Islands, from where he will go to Europe. With him is W. W. Kofeldt, formerly manager of the Majestic, Portland, Ore., and before that manager of the Seattle Pathe office.

ASHLEY McGRAW, formerly booker at the Seattle Vitagraph office, will succeed Mr. Samuelson as Pathe booker.

ED. HUDSON, who for the past three years has been shipper with Pathe, has enlisted in the navy. He will be succeeded by W. H. Fletcher, formerly connected with the Puget Sound Electric Company.

ED. BARNHARDT, JR., employed as salesman for Pathe, has been given all the territory west of the Columbia River, that has its source in Canada, then flows down through the eastern counties of the State of Washington and enters into the Pacific Ocean in the states of the southwest section.

W. H. HILBOURN has closed his Twilight theatre at Sheeny, Wash.

MAX SCOFIELD of Vollmar, Idaho, has been drafted into the army.

P. A. GAUL of Cottonwood, Idaho, has taken over Scofield's theatre and has decided to run Paramount service in it.

H. G. ROSENBAUM, manager of the Seattle Paramount and Artcraft offices, has gone to Spokane for a short trip, and G. Endert, the assistant manager, has gone in the woods for his vacation. In the absence of these men Guy Navarre, one of the company's best salesmen, has been placed in charge of affairs. As soon as Guy gets a chance to take a vacation he is going to Sea View and come back all tanned up.

AMONG the recent strollers along Film Row were Frank Stannard, owner of the Gem and Wenatchee theatres in Wenatchee, Wash.; Ed. Dolan of Aberdeen, and H. Newman of Hoquiam, Wash.

Will you send a package of home cheer to a lonely American boy in France?

HE doesn't want to come back home till his job is done—he doesn't mind the hardships and the danger—all he asks is that once in a while a "bit of cheer" be sent to him to ease his lonely vigils on the rim of "No Man's Land."

Tens of thousands of American Lads are today fighting our battles in France. Soon there will be millions. They will want letters from home—they will want "smokes" from home. Tobacco eases the shell strain. It comforts the wounded. It is a "first aid" to the surgeons and Red Cross nurses.

If you knew what comfort and pleasure and satisfaction the tobacco bought with your dollar or your five dollars (go as high as you like) gives to American boys in the trenches, you'd forget the money, or the little sacrifice, or anything else.

25c buys 45c worth of "smokes."

$1.00 buys a month's supply of tobacco

$5.00 buys enough to keep 5 men in tobacco for a month.

And remember: Every package of tobacco sent to our boys in France contains a return postcard, addressed to you, which he'll mail to you if he can possibly do so. That's a war souvenir worth having. Dig down—deep and quick!

"LET THE Simplex TWINS COMMAND YOUR FILMS"

Your Films are your Soldiers in the war for success.

And your Projectors are their Officers, who should command them effectively.

Now, we've nothing to suggest about the picking of your Soldiers. You know your public, its tastes and preferences.

But we do say this: It's a losing fight you are waging if you pick the wrong Officers, and let your Soldiers run amuck on the screen.

But put the Simplex Twins at the head of your troops and you will win one important battle after another until victory is yours.

It will be the well earned victory that comes from presenting presentable subjects the Simplex way—the COME-AGAIN way.

Don't lead good films to failure. The Simplex Twins will lead them to success

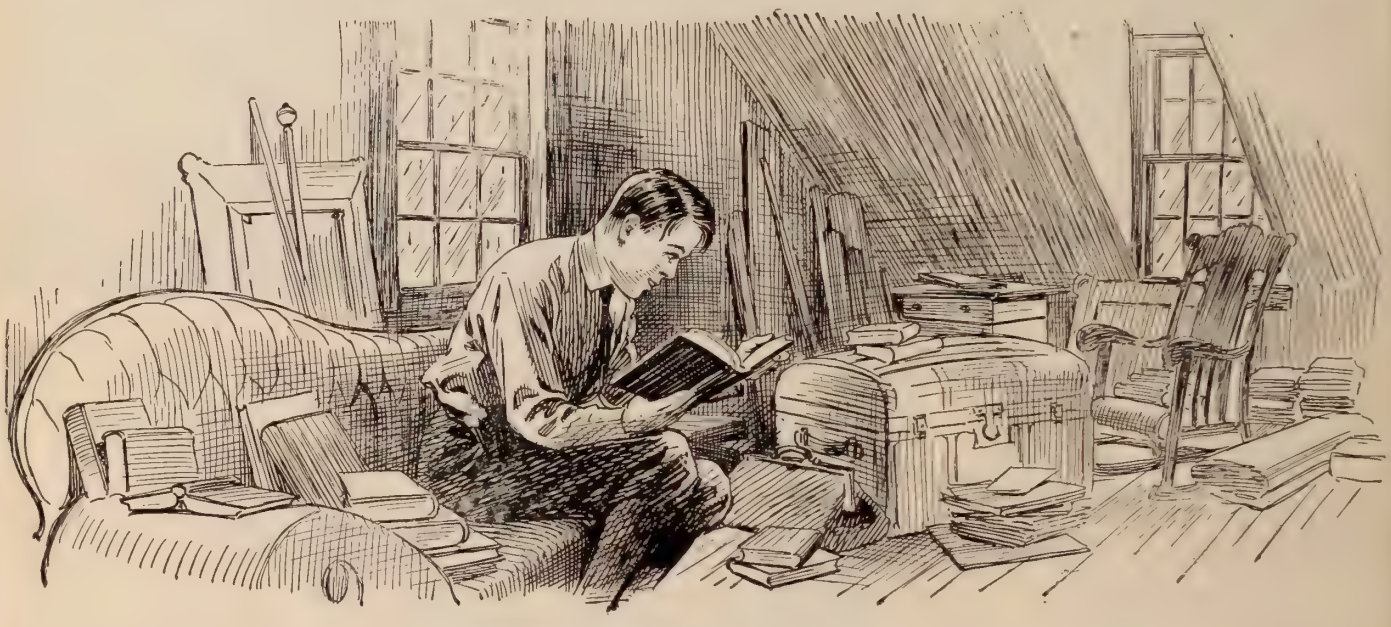
When We Say "It's a Special" We Speak Webster's Language

"THE HUN WITHIN," the first Paramount-Artcraft Special, has been received with tremendous acclaim at its first pre-release showing, at the Rialto Theatre in New York City. It is one of a series of nine specials and is a sample of all nine.

When we use the word "special" we mean just what Webster's New International Dictionary means, namely: "Distinguished by some unusual quality; uncommon, extraordinary; especially distinguished by superior excellence, importance, power or the like."

That describes Paramount-Artcraft Specials.



Each Paramount-Artcraft Special fills snugly the places in his schedule that the wise exhibitor has reserved for "something unusually big."

Here's the Way to Advertise "THE SUCCESS SERIES!"

Up in the Attic on a Rainy Afternoon

REMEMBER those days? When you used to climb the stairs and rummage for magazines and books among the old furniture and the empty boxes that grandmother wouldn't think of throwing away, for they might come in handy some day.

Great times, weren't they?

You dug up some bully stories—only a year or so old—and they beat anything you had read in a long time. You went up right after dinner—you had it at noon, remember?—and it didn't seem but a minute before Mother was calling you to supper.

Those were the happy days!

How'd you like to do that again?

You can! Once a week. In our theatre.

The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has gone into its vaults and has brought out the very best of the motion pictures produced in the last few years.

They've polished up these pictures until they're even better than they were when they were first shown. And we're going to show them once a week.

One night a week you'll have all the joy of discovering a bully picture you've never seen—just as you used to find a bully story you'd never read.

They're all Paramount Pictures and all masterpieces—motion pictures that you've often wished you'd seen. Here's your opportunity. Don't let it get away.

The first five we will show will be:

Mary Pickford in " The Eagle's Mate." Marguerite Clark in " Wildflower."

All Star Cast in " The Girl of the Golden West."

Pauline Frederick in " Zaza." Geraldine Farrar in " Carmen."

Gentlemen:

Wish to congratulate you on your wonderful serial, "A Fight for Millions." I am running the sixth episode this Wednesday, and am looking for some extra help, as this wonderful serial has boosted my Wednesday business 100%. It has action, and thrills in every foot—I find that's what the public wants. It's very hard to keep the audience quiet when "A Fight For Millions" is flashed on the screen. I'm waiting for the next Vitagraph serial.

Very truly yours,
A. S. CRYSTAL,

VITAGRAPH

(Use this as Program Copy)

Shanghaied—forced to work his passage aboard an old-fashioned sailing ship on a long tedious voyage—and a few hours before he had been Derrick Van Beeckman, millionaire New York clubman! Spite and a disappointed love had been the forces back of it all. Van Beeckman did not care for the girl he was to marry, "by arrangement". But there was a man who did, and he had seen that his rival was spirited away.

And in those waters of romance, the South Seas, Derrick Van Beeckman found a new existence—in Truda, the island queen, he met the woman of his dreams. But could he marry Truda? What would his friends, the friends who had made up his very life, say when he brought this South Seas damsel back to his Knickerbocker mansion?

But it is in this twist of the story that Cyrus Townsend Brady inserts his powerful "punch". And the subsequent events of this most unusual story make it one of the most entertaining ever released on the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon program.

Constance

CONSTANCE TALMADGE'S great success in the pictures of her First Select Series was one of the notable screen happenings of the season just closed. Have your patrons seen her in these great attractions, in which she is presented by Lewis J. Selznick?

"SCANDAL"

Cosmo Hamilton's story of the girl who claimed for a husband a man to whom she was not married.

"THE HONEYMOON"

in which the star hits the comedy curves at high speed in a screen drama of surpassing beauty. A honeymoon with a chorus girl hang-over! Do you get the idea?

"THE STUDIO GIRL"

"There are at least two miracles in this story," wrote the Moving Picture World when it was first presented. Your patrons will enjoy watching them come to pass.

"THE SHUTTLE"

The famous story by the author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" in which Constance Talmadge impersonates the live end of an Anglo-American alliance.

"UP THE ROAD WITH SALLIE"

Clean as a whistle and swift as a wink!—is this story of a young adventurer who sought romance, with a bankroll, and found it!

"THE LESSON"

Here the star scores again in a laughter-plus-drama photoplay in which scenes of city life are delightfully intermingled with small town comedy.

"GOOD NIGHT, PAUL!"

A determined uncle from Canada, a scapegrace of a nephew caught in a big fib, an alarmed partner, and Constance Talmadge as his cleverly obliging wife—mix this and you have the swiftest of screen farces!

"A PAIR OF SILK STOCKINGS"

The last and perhaps the greatest of Constance Talmadge's First Series. A stage hit in England, a riot here—and perfect upon the screen.

Talmadge in "Sauce for the Goose"

presented by LEWIS J. SELZNICK

When your patrons see Constance Talmadge in this, the first of her Second Select Series, they will at once agree that the sauce is the best part of any dish. (Note—C. T. serves the sauce!)

Scenario by Julia Crawford Ivers
Directed by Walter Edwards

From the stage success by Geraldine Bonner and Hutcheson Boyd.

An Apology

NO—I have lost no faith in the distributing machinery of the film business.

That I am offering—on behalf of this corporation—the first Triangle Special (The Mayor of Filbert) to independent purchasers of district rights and prints in a hundred districts at once is because the picture, for political, social and business reasons—must have instant country-wide release.

It isn't fair to ask that State Rights buyers disarrange their plans to put it out NOW—and there isn't a day to spare.

Yes—we would likely make some money—and save a good deal by going about this in the usual way—for Newspaper Advertising in hundreds of cities costs money.

But it gets Action.

State Rights buyers welcome, just the same—especially if they have time to put in on a big, quick job—

With a big, quick profit.

More especially if they know how to handle local committees and get the benefit of a live question.

Of course it's a great picture; 8 reels. Most people know the book—everybody knows the subject—"Wet vs. Dry."

The whole trade knows the Director, Christie Cabanné—famous for "The Lamb" and other big pictures.

OFFICIAL WAR REVIEW #10

Upon a German officer captured during the latest drive by the Allies in France, was discovered an order commanding the Hun armies to "destroy everything."

In Official War Review #10 is shown how thoroughly this damnable order was followed. Scenes of wanton destruction and murder are shown that would shame a tribe of head-hunters.

Official war pictures of the British, French, Italian and American Governments, issued one reel a week.

"BURLINGHAM!"

Little Talks with Foreign Buyers
No. 17

By

President.

The name stands for the best in adventure films, the sort of stuff only a red-blooded man would dare produce. Frederick Burlingham risked his life not once, but several times to secure these pictures. And then just to vary the interest—to make a setting for the thrills—he intersperses them with unusual travel "takes" that are shot from unusual angles and heights, all tending to make the series something you have never seen before. It is in a sense a travel serial, and should be so advertised, for a serial spells punch and pep to an audience. Taken for the most part atop the Alps, the Burlingham pictures are a novelty of the most positive sort and exhibitors will book them with zest. That makes them the dandy proposition they are for foreign purchase, and we trust you will write us immediately for fuller particulars than this "Talk" can give.

Congratulations!—All Around!

CHICAGO, September 5th.—The only editorial comment that can be written on this week in Chicago can be covered in one word: "Congratulations!" Congratulations all around!

Congratulations to the old exhibitor organizations and the new exhibitor organization; congratulations to Frank Rembusch and his associates on the Chicago gathering; congratulations to Peter J. Schaefer on his fine spirit; and, above all, congratulations to William A. Brady.

To William A. Brady, the exhibitor and the nation owe a big debt. To William A. Brady is due the credit for the fact that the exhibitors of the nation can now work for Uncle Sam as a united organization; that they can now discuss their problems with Uncle Sam as a united organization.

Chicago offered the opportunity. The leading exhibitors of both factions were present—and present in a harmonious, open-minded spirit. Only the services of an "energetic harmonizer" were needed—and William A. Brady is that.

So, for once, we may return home from an exhibitor convention with satisfied smiles and renewed hope.

Let Chicago be the beginning of "above the table" exhibitor politics—or, rather, the end of all politics and the beginning of mutually beneficial exhibitor organization.

Now's Your Chance—"Big Fellows"

THERE'S a postscript to the Chicago convention that deserves a bit of attention here.

Once in every blue moon we hear the complaint that the big exhibitors—theatre men of the First National type, let us say—do not show any interest in exhibitor organization.

The "big fellows" have heretofore needed no other reply to the accusation than the state of disruption existing among the organized exhibitors.

But there's no excuse now—"big fellows!" Chicago has given us a single, solid exhibitor organization. That organization will undoubtedly set on foot an immediate "100% Membership" campaign. It's up to you to respond, nay, to do more—to hurry up and climb aboard the band wagon now!

The organization needs you—and you need the organization. With every day of war and war's problems you will need it more.

Writing Up To the Screen

THE New York Times' critic took a severe rap at the dramatic pictures shown recently at the Strand and Rivoli, featuring Ethel Barrymore and Elsie Ferguson.

Critical reviews of each week's new attractions have, by the way, become an accepted feature of the New York dailies. But on this occasion the Times critic says:

"When two of the theatre's leading actresses . . . appear in pictured versions of old plays that are only the padded skeletons of the originals . . . one feels impotent before those who charge that the manufacture of motion pictures is not an art, but an industry to which producers, authors and actors turn to make money."

All of which gives rise to two contentions.

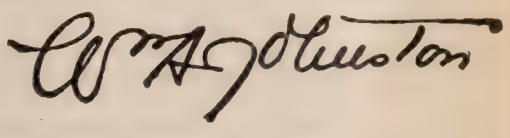
One is that stage people—critics, actors and directors of immediate stage affiliations, are chronically inclined to look down upon pictures.

The critic would rather rap than praise. The actor and director do not give their best, their thoughts being concentrated on the pay envelope (Beg pardon, we mean the check!)

The other contention is that pictures are not made carefully enough to suit intelligent people; that if we are simply going to make pictures for the unexacting masses, all well and good: but if we are basing our industrial figures on a potential audience of at least fifty millions of people then pictures must be made up to intelligence and not down.

Our own thought is that the fault lies largely in the selection of vehicles. The stage will make a ghastlier failure of a photoplay success than the picture makes of those stage triumphs which are suited only to the stage.

We need screen stars for the screen—fresh creations for the individual art of the screen.



We are not making enough of these. Hence we rely upon stage and book stories which bring the screen into criticism unfairly because these vehicles were never written for photoplay presentation.

* * * * * *

The Screen Replies

AS if in answer to the New York Times critic, the screen, the following week, gave him three acceptable photoplays: "The Hun Within," "Till I Come Back to You" and "Wives of Men"—all written for the screen, not for the stage.

Also he was shown in "On the Quiet," that some stage plays lend themselves successfully to picturization.

Serving It with Speed and Ginger

BOY! Howdy! Didn't the Complete Plan Book go over with a bang! Didn't it set them talking up and down Times Square and even out to the Sherman House!

And wasn't there some midnight oil burned during the last seven days devising means of catching up!

Say—The Complete Plan Book caused more talk than any trade paper innovation we can remember. Even more than used to be created by the starting of a new trade paper—before that became monotonous.

Comment came so quick and often that before we knew it the event had developed into a real news story, and as such you will find it on Page 1675. And as we took up enough of your time and thought on this page last week with modest words on The Complete Plan Book, we'll let that page tell you what happened since then.

* * * *

Herbert Brenon seems to be running a little war of his own over there in England. First a fire destroyed considerable negative from his propaganda picture and then—last week—Herb broke into the New York dailies with a cabled story of a near-drowning when he attempted to rescue the bee-yu-ti-ful leading lady.

* * * *

SO harmony is with us—and peace is in our midst. It all happened out in Chicago. We have a new exhibitor organization and two old ones dying or dead. The new one, we are assured, is going to be very much alive.

They say that William A. Brady trained the peace dove and grew the olive branch.

And we're glad to hear them say it. William A. gets his share of criticism—mayhaps we indulge in our own share of his share, too—but every time we think it all over, weigh things up and down, we decide that William A. has handled a pretty tough job pretty well. Pr-ee-tt-y tough and pr-ee-tt-y well.

If William A. ever gets a real, solid exhibitor organization of the nation behind him, and gets enough cash in the National Association treasury to make a respectable showing and render the spending of time on side-shows unnecessary, we'll wager that he will make the accomplishments his energy has chalked up in the past take on peanut proportions.

He has surely marked up some ten-strikes since the Boston meeting that re-elected him to the presidency of the Association. First the securing of essential classification from the Priorities Board, and now the organization of a a united exhibitors' branch of the National Association.

Go to it—William A.

* * * *

Just after William A. Lochren, the Minneapolis film man, sends the boss an enthusiastic letter saying that this modest little page is the greatest thing there is in the trade field and urging him to "keep our car filled with gasoline," he follows with a membership card in the Anti-Bellyache Society. What does he mean?

The object of said society being "To Discourage War-time Bellyaching." No Dues; No Officers; No Annual Banquet. Emblem: Peppermint. Cure-all: Michelob."

* * * *

WHILE praising William A. Brady we don't want to forget Peter Schaefer and Frank Rembusch.

As the newly elected president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League Pete Schaefer could have stood on his dignity and done much to hamper the harmony drive at Chicago. But Pete measured up to the good words that everybody showered on him after the Boston convention and proved of big caliber all the way through the recent gathering.

With Peter Schaefer at its head the new exhibitor branch of the National Association holds out bright promise.

And as for Frank Rembusch—well, boy, bring up a large wad of credit for Frank on the faith he had through all the dark days that the Chicago gathering if put over right would clear up the exhibitor mess.

And if there is any of that credit still around hand a share to Louis Frank, Alfred S. Black, John Mannheimer, Ernest Horstmann and—oh, any number of others.

* * * *

You can't beat that fellow Rothacker. New York had a one-day barber strike recently and next morning we read in The New York American: "One shave that was started at noon at the Biltmore will be finished today in Chicago. After waiting three-quarters of an hour for a favorite barber, Watterson R. Rothacker, of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, Chicago, got in the chair just as the strike whistle blew. Mr. Rothacker tried to shave himself but gave up the job in despair and rushed for his train."

Some press agent, boy!

IT looks as though the next drive to engage our attention and trade paper space will be the tax situation at Washington.

The new revenue bill has reached the Senate—there to be pulled and torn and harried about. Public hearings will most likely be granted the various industries, but there is a threatening note in the fact that haste is sorely needed if the legislation is to reach the statute books before the Liberty Loan drive.

We hate to think of the howl that is going up within the industry if the tax schedule goes through as now planned. A tax of ten per cent. on the rental price for the big first run exhibitors will cause a noise like Vesuvius in eruption.

The seat tax is not causing much worry, but for the small exhibitor the doubling of the admission tax will surely have widespread effects. While prosperity has been felt by most large city exhibitors in recent months, and good news naturally gets the preference in trade conversations and publications, it is a fact that the smaller community house has already suffered severely through the drain on patronage by war service.

It isn't pleasant to think of.

* * * *

Personal Note: J. B. Clarke: Remember all that kidding you got last week in "What Kind of a Fellow is—Clarke?" We'll bet you accused W. A. J. of it.

Well, we'll let you in on a secret.. We are not quite sure but we think Arthur James and Richard Rowland—yes, none other—got together and cooked up that story. We imagine that when they got through W. A. J. was loathe to spoil any of the fun they were having and he just let Arthur write the whole thing.

Dick is some kidder, too, isn't he?

* * * *

DID you know that screen stories are real scarce? That a famine threatens unless some one digs up a new source for worth while adaptations or a new crop of writers?

We never suspected that the day would come. But if the conversations we hear at odd moments around Film Square are true—the day is here now. Maybe it's the war; maybe producers are more particular about quality; the reason is beyond us.

We recall that we felt a real interest in learning that a new DeMille version of "The Squaw Man" is under way.

It seems to us like a good idea to make entirely new productions along 1918 methods of the stories that were staged for the screen some four and five years ago when the flash-back was an experiment and the five-reeler an event.

The plan, from all accounts, seems to have got over well in the new version of "Pierre of the Plains," originally made by All-Star with Edgar Selwyn in the lead of his own story; "Leah Kleschna" and others. And surely the strength and fame of the play justifies it in the case of that other All-Star production, "Paid in Full."

Now, with DeMille behind the gun, we'll go a mile out of our way and give up two hours of our time to see a new "Squaw Man."

Rival Exhibitor Bodies Amalgamate

"National Association of the Motion Picture Industry-Exhibitor Branch" the New Organization—Brady Heals the Breach —Schaefer Remains President—New By-Laws, etc.

CHICAGO (Special).—It's all over but the shouting, boys—and you can shout as long and as loudly as you want. For out of this week in Chicago has come a brand new exhibitor organization—The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry—Exhibitors' Branch.

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League is no more. The American Exhibitors' Association is no more. Peter Schaefer is now president of the new organization; Ernest Horstmann, of Boston, is treasurer, the same job he held in the M. P. E. L. Frank Rembusch is chairman of the new body's executive committee—which will include in its membership the members of the former M. P. E. L. executive committee and ten new men named by the A. E. A. as its last act. At the same time the A. E. A. names the secretary of the new organization—Louis Frank—and four vice-presidents to rank in the new organization with the vice-presidents chosen by the M. P. E. L. in Boston.

Thus is summarized the industry's first "Open Meeting" convention. The attendance of film executives was unusually representative during the sessions of the past week, and the leading spirits in both the A. E. A. and the League were on hand.

Brady the Healer

William A. Brady is given ungrudging credit by all present for his work in bringing about the amalgamation and formation of a united exhibitor organization.

The agreement to amalgamate and the terms of the union were reached shortly after midnight Wednesday morning, Mr. Brady and J. Stuart Blackton being the witnesses to the agreement. The papers were signed with all the formality of a European peace pact—and there is no danger of their becoming a "scrap of paper," for the president of the National Association has also been named as a court of appeal for any disagreements that might arise in the committee framing the new by-laws and constitution.

The resolution providing for this committee calls for a body of six, three members to be appointed from each of the former exhibitor organizations.

The convention opened Tuesday at the Sherman House, with Sam Atkinson, of Evanston, as chairman. Sam, who has fought many vigorous battles in the past against official censorship, was right on the job as chairman.

He sounded the keynote of harmony early in the session by reading a lengthy telegram from David W. Griffith, in which the master producer expressed his sympathy with the proposal to amalgamate so that the work of the motion picture theatre in propaganda ways could be furthered.

William A. Brady was then called to the platform. Mr. Brady took occasion to eulogize the work of the National Association, of which he is president. His challenge to any exhibitor to show that the Association was not the exhibitor's friend was met by opponents of the fifteen cent reel tax in the person of Maurice Choynski, and Herman Brown of Chicago, and the veteran Sam Bullock, of Cleveland. Mr. Brady countered with an explanation that such matters were not the fault of the Association.

Brady then sailed into a ringing speech on behalf of the amalgamation of both bodies and the fulfillment of constitutional affiliation with the National Association. He declared in no uncertain terms that only selfish motives could prevent complete harmony and if they did such motives should be exposed. "We must have an open, and non-political conference between the two organizations," he shouted. "Patriotism and the industry's best interests both demand amalgamation. Why don't you form one big new organization out of all your State and local bodies. Form them into one big national body with each theatre paying dues of a dollar a week—it's little enough—and then you will know what power is, then you will be able to do the exhibitor's share in 'building that bridge to France.'"

Peter Schaefer led the League members present. Others in the list included Lee Ochs, Lou Blumenthal, Alfred S. Black, Ernest Horstmann, Harry Brown, Tom Furness, Alfred Hamburger, and Hector Paszemoglu.

HE'S RIGHT!

This Exhibitor Admits He Would Be Lost Without NEWS

THE following letter speaks for itself more loudly and plainly than we could do for it, so we print it here just as it came to us. We get lots of letters like this:

"MOTION PICTURE NEWS has become a part of my theatre, and without it I would be lost. Your projection department is of great value and interest to me, and I look forward to its coming each week.

"I am, with all good wishes,
W. H. NEEDHAM,
Box 69 Courtland, Cal."

Aside from William A. Brady, the New York film men present included Hiram Abrams, Lewis J. Selznick, William Wright, Edgar Lewis, Frank Powell, John Shurtleff, J. D. Williams and Harry Schwalbe headed a First National delegation in town from all sections for a meeting of that organization at the Congress Hotel.

William Wright, of the Kalem Company, played a share in the amalgamation by a vigorous speech backing up Brady's plea on Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Wright, who was the only speaker in addition to Brady that afternoon, put harmony and affiliation with the National Association up to the exhibitors squarely as a debt owed the Government for the co-operation it has extended the industry.

"It is solely due to the National Association, ably backed by George Creel," he declared, "that Mr. Brady was able to secure recognition for the industry as an essential from the War Trade Board last week. The Committee on Public Information has steadfastly stood by the industry, worked for it and protected it—now, it's up to you. If you don't get together and work with the National Association then the industry is not going to be able to pay its debt to the Committee on Public Information."

Speakers at the Wednesday session included Medill McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, and back from the war front in officer's khaki, and Mayor William Hale Thompson, of Chicago. Numerous other picture magnates, including Frank Tichenor, of General Film, and Lewis J. Selznick were also on the card.

Real News Happenings

One of the big news events of the week occurred Wednesday morning at the College Inn following the signing of the peace pact. Real wine was opened! Poverty-stricken film magnates present declared that it was the first real wine they had seen since war was declared and since "them good old days passed."

But it was real! Pete Schaefer, president of the exhibitor organization, after laboring unceasingly for harmony since his election as league head at Boston, was so tickled when the deed was finally done that he popped the cork.

The joy over the healing of the exhibitor breach and the prospects for the future organization was apparent from the moment the representatives of both factions reached an agreement. It accentuated the spirit of the entire week's gathering. Patriotism was the keynote of every session and speech, and the exhibitors of both factions present seemed ready to bury all personal considerations to secure harmony. Booking systems received a cold shoulder as far as playing any part in the convention deliberations or steps toward amalgamation.

Fox Uses Both Coasts Alike

Aims to Produce in East and West in Same Proportion as Formerly—No Exodus from East Expected

FOLLOWING the statement from various companies to MOTION PICTURE NEWS of their producing intentions as regards the East and West Coast during the winter, William Fox has made public his intentions. They intimate clearly that all reports that the majority of producers aim to favor the Coast is wrong, and that the old stand-by, New York, will hold many companies and players during the cold weather.

In regard to his plans, William Fox said: "Fox Film Corporation expects to produce pictures both in the East and the West during the coming season. No definite announcement is available at this time regarding the exact number of productions that will be made on the two coasts, but it is probable that approximately the ratio of last year will prevail."

During the 1917-18 season, Mr. Fox released 105 productions, of which thirty-nine were made in the East and sixty-six in the West. William Farnum, Theda Bara, and other stars worked on both coasts, and it is likely that they will repeat this program in 1918-1919. The sixty-six pictures made in the West included all of comedies, most of the Standard Pictures and some of the "Special Features."

At the present time, Miss Bara is at Hollywood working under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards; and Mr. Farnum is making a picture with Frank Lloyd. The others now at Hollywood are Tom Mix and Gladys Brockwell. In the East are George Walsh, Virginia Pearson, Peggy Hyland, Evelyn Nesbit, Miriam Cooper and Jane and Katherine Lee. In addition Richard Stanton is working at the Eclair Studio at Fort Lee. There is no present intention so far as William Fox plans have been outlined to transfer any of these companies from the East to the West, or from the West to the East.

The Fox organization at the present time is using the Blackton Studio in Brooklyn; the Victor Studio on Manhattan; the Eclair and Wiliett Studios at Fort Lee. At Hollywood, Mr. Fox has a tract of twenty acres equipped with six large stages, and employing regularly from 500 to 1,000 persons.

Of the stages three are of the open-air type; one is enclosed; one is partly, and another completely covered with glass.

The number of pictures which William Fox anticipates releasing during the coming season is about 160, these including 26 Standard Pictures; 26 Victory Pictures; 26 Excel Pictures; 26 Sunshine Comedies; 52 Mutt and Jeff, and a number of big timely Pictures.

Carroll to Direct Plays for Soldier Boys

Richard Field Carroll will sever his connections with the Harry McRae Webster Productions, Inc., to take up work as dramatic director at Camp Sevier, S. C., having been appointed to this position by Franklin H. Sargent, chairman of the Department of Dramatic Activities among the Soldiers.

"Dick" Carroll, as his many friends call him, has had a widely various career as actor-author-producer and moving picture scenarioist and director, and is elated over his appointment, being eager to "do his bitterest." He claims to be the original Pooh-Bah of the Harry MacRae Webster Productions, of which he has been a valued member since its inception.

Besides having supplied the story of "Reclaimed," he wrote the continuity and sub-titles, cast the play in every character to the very "atmosphere," directed all the exterior scenes of the same, assisted in the assembling and cutting of the film, acted as office manager and took charge of the entire press department.

John Zanft Made Captain N. Y. Police Reserves

John Zanft, managing director of the William Fox Circuit of Theatres, has been made captain of the theatrical unit of the New York Police Reserves.

Nearly everybody in the office of the Fox Film Corporation, in West Forty-sixth street, has joined the unit, with headquarters in the Amsterdam Opera House.

World Actors Will Help War Industries Board

Actors regularly employed at the World Studio formed an organization to work in sympathy with the War Industries Board in conserving film and reducing wastage. The organization came about through the desire of the World actors to show their appreciation of the board's action in declaring motion pictures essential and to do their bit in complying with the board's demand that all wasteful methods be eliminated.

A system of fines was agreed upon, the fines to go to the Red Cross. Where retakes are necessary the footage is to be estimated by a committee and a fine of four cents a foot is to be assessed against the guilty party.

The agreement has been signed by all actors and actresses who are regularly employed by the World, including Montagu Love, Carlyle Blackwell, Evelyn Greeley, Louise Huff, Barbara Castleton, June Elvidge, Madge Evans, Johnny Hines, Frank Mayo, John Bowers, Muriel Ostriche, George MacQuarrie and Jack Drumier.

Farnum Company Migrates to the East

William Farnum is scheduled to leave the West Coast for the East on September 10, where his future production for William Fox will be made. The reason given for the transfer is the illness of Mrs. Farnum, who remained in the East. It is said that Director Frank Lloyd may remain on the Coast to make several subjects.

Honor Roll

Harry Hunter, assistant manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Exchange in Portland, left San Francisco on September 3 for Camp Bowie, Tex.

W. W. Kofeldt, manager of the Majestic Theatre, Portland, Ore., and former Northwest manager for the Pathe, and L. A. Samuelson, Pathe broker in Seattle, have enlisted in the merchant marine and are on the U. S. S. S. Dumaru.

Forest McManus, shipping clerk of the Metro Exchange, left for Liberty Army service at Camp Kearny September 3. Irving Lesser has been called to San Francisco to report for duty at the naval reserve training station near that city.

Walter R. Liebmann, manager of the Parex Film's Cleveland office, received information this week that his brother, Lieut. Col. M. N. Liebmann, fell in action on the 8th of August.

E. J. Drucker, former manager at General Film Company's St. Louis exchange, is now at Camp Greenleaf, Chickamauga Park, Ga., having been inducted into the Medical Corps since his recent entrance into army life. His station is in Detention Camp, Bn. 15, No. 10.

Tom Colby, who was city salesman for Universal, is now with Company B, 6th Ammunition Train, American Expeditionary Forces, in France.

A. Jules Benedict, salesman for the Fox Exchange at Dallas, has enlisted in the Texas Infantry Machine Gun Corps, with headquarters at San Antonio.

Theodore J. Liebler, of the publicity department of United Pictures Theatres of America, has joined the colors and left for camp last week.

Al Friedland, of the Unity Photoplays Company of Chicago, and formerly with Pathe and Fox Exchanges, has joined the Signal Corps.

Raymond Morris, head broker at the Famous Players Film Service Exchange, Cleveland, has received word to report for military duty.

John S. Bowen, traveling auditor for General Film Company, has resigned to enter the National Army. He has been with General Film Company for four or five years.

Victor Sutherland, leading man for Fox with Virginia Pearson, joins the army upon completion of his current picture.

Herman Bollak, formerly treasurer of the Cinema Exhibitors' Association of Bronx County, Inc., is now in the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Army, and has been reported at Washington, D. C.

Crandall of Washington is on Fuel Committee

Washington, D. C.—Harry Crandall, president of the Crandall Amusement Company, which controls seven picture theatres in the Capital City, has been appointed by the Fuel Administration to look after all questions concerning fuel for the motion picture theatres, as well as all related questions that may arise in motion picture circles.

This will mean the apportioning and conservation of coal, electric lights, practical temperature for the theatres and hours of opeing and closing of shows where fuel conservation may be involved. It will be Mr. Crandall's duty to settle questions regarding unnecessary display of electric lights and all wastes of any nature will come under his jurisdiction. Mr. Crandall has pledged close co-operation with Fuel Administrator Garfield and the men of all fields of the motion picture industry have promised co-operation.

The appointment of Mr. Crandall to this post is but the logical outcome of his efficient assistance given the Fuel Administration last winter during the coal famine. By actual figures he convinced officials that by keeping the picture houses open in the evening fuel in the homes was saved, and that Tuesday was a more practical closing day for such an amusement.

He Wants Their Photograph

From Brazil Motion Picture News has received a letter in which the writer expresses a desire to secure photographs of some of the leading American stars.

P. Tellaetius, P. O. Box 81, Santos, Brazil, writes: "I am a great admirer of American artists, and I wanted to have their portraits, but cannot get them here. The ones I desire are those of Hele Chadwick, Pearl White, June Caprice, Tom Mix, George Walsh, Elsie Ferguson, Grace Darmond, Carol Holloway, Alice Brady, Grace Valentine and Mollie King."

Strike Fails to Affect Coast Plants

It was reported by wire from Los Angeles September 4 that the walk-out of union mechanics, carpenters, electricians, grips and property men has not affected production work at the studios to any noticeable extent. The matter, it is reported, has been brought to the attention of the Federal Labor Commissioner, Cornell, and a joint conference of labor leaders and members of the Producers' Association was called for September 6. It is said the working men continue at all studios except Lasky, Vitagraph, Triangle and Christie. The strikers have been temporarily replaced in all instances.

Following this, it was reported that managers of all Los Angeles theatres employing union operators have signed agreements, with but one exception, conforming to the demands of the operators, and providing that women operators will not be employed nor that theatres will support the school being conducted in Los Angeles to teach women to operate machines.

Industry to Aid in New Draft Registration

The National Association of the Motion Picture Industry has received a request from the United States Chamber of Commerce, of which it is a member, to aid in the distribution of all necessary publicity relative to the rules and regulations of the new Selective Service Law calling for the registration of all men between the ages of 18 and 45 on September 12.

This request was made as the result of a letter sent by Provost Marshal General Crowder to Harry A. Wheeler, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in which he said: "The success of securing 100 per cent registration will depend largely on the vigor of our efforts to carry the news of this duty into every community and every group of citizens. For this purpose it is inevitable that I must rely upon the co-operation of every public agency having a nation-wide organization.

In pursuance with this request of the Provost Marshal General, the United States Chamber of Commerce has requested its members to call meetings of their organizations not later than five days before registration day for the purpose of arranging for ample publicity through the individual members of their respective concerns; that each individual concern employ such concrete measures of publicity for its own employes and customers such as posting in prominent places in his establishment a reminder of registration day; and that each individual member arrange to give all his employes the necessary time for registering.

The Committee on Public Information is preparing several posters giving full information relative to the draft regulations and these posters will be distributed to all of the members of the United States Chamber of Commerce for redistribution among their members. As soon as these posters are received by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry they will be sent to all members.

Kleine Announces Move of Cincinnati Exchange

George Kleine System, Cincinnati Exchange, moves to larger quarters, on the entire second floor at 112-114 East Sixth Street, which will be furnished with a large reception room for exhiibtors and will give the Kleine System every convenience in the handling of shipments.

F. H. Schotenburg, former shipping clerk for Paramount's Cincinnati branch, has joined the George Kleine System, succeeding Mr. C. J. Callahan, who has been promoted to Cincinnati city salesman.

Metro Plans to Take Companies West

It was reported from Los Angeles September 4 that Richard Rowland and Joe Engle, of Metro, arrived there September 1 to complete plans for enlarging the Metro producing activities in Hollywood. The plans provide for transferring eight or nine companies from New York to Hollywood, and the studio will have to be tripled in capacity to handle them.

"Gasless Sundays" Helps Motion Pictures

That the "Gasless Sundays" will be a great help in bringing a larger attendance to the motion picture theatres is the firm belief of W. A. Bach, the Hodkinson representative in the General Film Exchange at Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Bach even went so far as to write to all the daily newspapers in that city urging them to encourage a larger attendance at the motion picture theatres, so that while gasoline is being conserved at the request of the United States Government, the people can be pleasantly entertained by films.

"I think it behooves all of us to be on the alert and try and build up as large a following of motion picture fans as is possible," declared Mr. Bach.

"We, who are interested, directly or indirectly, in the Motion Picture Industry, should welcome this 'gasless Sunday' move on the part of the Government, due to the fact that the Government has ruled that the Motion Picture Industry is an essential and has asked that all of us cooperate with the Government in spreading propaganda, etc. I believe the Government realizes, as we all should realize, the motion picture theatres as a whole throughout the United States make a wonderful vehicle for bringing before the American people educational points as well as enlightening the people on just what the Government is trying to accomplish in winning the war."

Liberty Theatres Report Many Entertainments

The Picture Division of the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities is going to assist headquarters at Camp Halabard, Baltimore, Md., in securing equipment and films for their auditorium. Porter J. Johnston, formerly manager of the Paramount Exchange at Cincinnati, will relieve Henry Schoenstadt as Southern picture representative.

"Hearts of the World" played to big business at Camp Merritt last week. "Crashing Through to Berlin" and all big Jewel productions will play the Liberty Theatre circuit on a patriotic cost of delivery basis. E. L. Hyman, director of the Picture Division, is assisted at Atlanta by Division Director Matt Whitham.

First National Claims Mary Pickford

(Special to Motion Picture News)

Los Angeles, Cal.—Manager Tally, of the First National Exchange in Los Angeles, claimed on September 4 that Mary Pickford had signed a contract with First National Exhibitors' Circuit, but attempts to verify the claim proved unsuccessful. Rumor also has it that Douglas Fairbanks has closed with First National. He has yet two pictures to make for Artcraft, it is said. Mary Pickford has opened offices in Hollywood, and it is expected that she will issue an announcement through her attorney when he arrives in New York.

"America's Answer" in October

The Second Official Government Feature Will Be Released to the Regular Motion Picture Theatres Early in October

DENNIS J. SULLIVAN, manager of Domestic Distribution for the war pictures of the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, makes an announcement that "America's Answer," the second of the "Following the Flag to France" series, will be ready for distribution to the picture houses early in October, and that it is to be released under conditions that will permit the public to see this important war film at regular motion picture theatre prices, and at the same time give the exhibitors a fair profit without raising their admission fees. Only theatres that agree not to raise their prices will be given the privilege of booking the Government's feature film.

"One thing must constantly be borne in mind by all concerned," says Mr. Sullivan. "The Government pictures are not issued as a money-making proposition. It is, of course, necessary that they should produce at least sufficient income to meet the heavy expense entailed in their production. The real purpose of the war film is to stir up interest in the war, and by showing what is being accomplished by our armies on the other side, to stimulate war production and a generally helpful interest in all the Government's war activities.

"To accomplish this it is not only necessary to secure the largest possible public for the pictures, but also to obviate any possibility of ill-feeling growing out of apparent overcharges. The aim of the Government picture is defeated when picture houses raise their prices, during the showing of the official war films, above their regular and recognized schedule. Naturally, if the exhibitor is compelled to pay a high price for the picture, he is going to pass the cost up to the public. And that is just what the Division of Films wants to prevent.

"It is proposed that 'America's Answer' shall have practically a 100 per cent showing in the motion picture houses of the United States, and to ensure that the price to the exhibitor will be based on a figure that will permit him to make a profit and at the same time show the picture at his regular prices.

"The Government will not permit profiteering in its official pictures through any over-ambitious efforts of exchange managers, and 'America's Answer' contracts will be made in such a way that the Government and the public as well as the exhibitors will be protected. The details for the new plan of handling the official war films are now being worked out and will be announced shortly."

Pasadena Theatre Helps Tobacco Fund

"My Lady Nicotine," Strand Comedy, released by Mutual, established a unique record at the Strand theatre, Pasadena, California. A total of $226.05 was subscribed by patrons of the Strand for "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund" as a result of showing "My Lady Nicotine" two days.

The management of the theatre wrote: "We played Billie Rhodes in 'My Lady Nicotine' and had two young ladies in the lobby, who did not solicit funds, however, as my patrons knew what was expected of them. The amount in the two days was $226.05, which, as per your request, was sent to Bert Ennis, publicity manager for that fund in New York. Think this is pretty good for a town of this size in the summer time, when I am practically doing nothing at all. Anyway, would like to see some of the other managers in this section do as well or better, for it is a good cause, even if I do not use tobacco myself. I know the boys need it."

"My Lady Nicotine" contained an appeal to the American man to cut down on his 'smokes' and contribute to the tobacco fund for our boys in France, and has proved a most effective appeal for this worthy cause.

Red Cross Thanks Association Through Brady

That the American Red Cross fully appreciates the aid which has been rendered to it by the motion picture industry is shown in a letter which has just been received by President William A. Brady of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry from Henry P. Davison, chairman of the War Council of the American Red Cross.

The letter is as follows:

My Dear Mr. Brady:

I have seen the resolution passed by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry on the occasion of its conference with Mr. Johnson, Director of Publicity of the Red Cross.

I wish to thank you for this additional proof of your sympathy with and faith in the Red Cross. A tremendous responsibility has been placed upon us, and it is of the utmost importance that you aid us in making a proper accounting to the people of America, who have given to the Red Cross without stint.

It is our hope, at the same time, to lay no burdens upon the motion picture industry, but rather to lighten them by furnishing film which it will be glad to exhibit.

Please convey to your association our deep appreciation of its pledge of support and assistance.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) H. P. DAVISON,
Chairman of the War Council.

Hepworth of London, Eng., Produces "Tares"

The Hepworth Manufacturing Company, of London, England, has been very busy producing "Film Tags" for the British Government, but in addition to releasing "The Hanging Judge" they have also produced "Tares," written by Temple Thurston.

"Tares" is a war film and Alma Taylor, with Henry Edwards, plays the leads. This is the company that produced the Hepworth Royal Command picture, "Comin' Thro' the Rye."

Walker Buys Hayakawa Films for England

The British and Australian rights to the pictures in which Sessue Hayakawa is to be featured during the ensuing year have been sold. This announcement was made this week at the office of the Haworth Pictures Corporation in Los Angeles.

The rights to the Hayakawa productions in the British Isles have been sold to J. K. Walker, of London, and the rights to Australia have been sold to J. Williamson.

Both deals include the entire eight productions which Hayakawa will make for the Haworth Pictures Corporation. Negotiations are now pending and nearly closed for the disposal of the Japanese star's new photodramas in South America, and deals are also in progress for the rights to the pictures in Hayakawa's native land.

War Workers Entertained

Washington, D. C.—The using of the National Sylvan Theatre for the exhibition of motion pictures has been a great boon to the overcrowded population of the Capital City. The performance begins with mass singing under the direction of Prof. Dykama, of the Training Camps Service Commission, for about half an hour, after which follows a free picture show for an hour.

Thousands are thus given a pleasure three times a week on the grand expanse of the monument grounds. In this manner a great proportion of the war workers of Washington are entertained, elevated, educated and inspired with patriotic singing and home memories. The strangers are feeling less strange and a spirit of fellowship is being created, according to report.

Liberty Theatres to Show New Jewel Production

"Crashing Through to Berlin" is taking part in the entertainment provided for soldiers at the various camps before they leave for France. H. M. Berman, head of Jewel Porductions, Inc., has arranged with the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities to show the big film at all the Liberty Theatres.

"Jewel Productions, Inc., can feel justly proud," writes Mr. Hyman, director of the picture division of the commission, "for being able to present to the men its superpicture, 'Crashing Through to Berlin,' as an inspiration just befor they are leaving the country to go over and drive out the Hun."

Christie Releases One Hundredth Picture

The Christie film plant has just released the 100th picture directed by Al Christie in as many consecutive weeks at the film plant in Hollywood where Christie comedies are made. "Does Your Sweetheart Flirt?" is the title bestowed by Al Christie upon his 100th offspring. And, to quote Al Christie, "it's a bear." Exchange managers already having received this particular comedy are said to agree with Al Christie as to this. Wires of congratulation were received by the company.

"Service" Discussion in Full Swing

Stir Created Among Film Company Executives and Publicity Directors by Inauguration of "The Complete Plan Book" —Loud in Praise of NEWS Service

FEW news happenings of recent months have created the widespread discussion in film circles that was aroused this week by the initial issue of the radical MOTION PICTURE NEWS service—The Complete Plan Book.

Heads of producing and distributing companies, advertising managers and publicity directors speedily found the innovation a factor to be taken into important consideration in all future plans for service to exhibitors in their productions. By telephone, letters and personal calls the NEWS office heard their words of praise for The Complete Plan Book and the value its service on each picture released will prove to all exhibitors.

One company—the First National Exhibitors' Circuit—came to bat quickly with concrete evidence of its recognition of The Complete Plan Book's merits through a request for ten thousand reprints of the page on "Italy's Flaming Front." These reprints—which the MOTION PICTURE NEWS gladly supplies at cost—will be placed in the hands of every exhibitor booking the picture as an aid in his exploitation.

Fox First Under the Wire

A remarkable point about the exhibition service discussion set in motion by The Complete Plan Book was that the NEWS idea was sprung without advance trumpeting in last week's issue. Yet the response was almost instantaneous. Copies of the issue had barely time to reach the various film company offices when J. E. McBride, formerly New York's Civil Service Commissioner, and now of the William Fox organization, phoned.

"Mr. Sheehan and I have just been looking over The Complete Plan Book," he declared. "To put it mildly—we think it's great. If there's a stray exhibitor who isn't on your subscription books now you'll get him surely when he hears of this new service.

"From the standpoint of the producer it is infinitely more valuable than paid advertising, because the readers of your paper will know that it represents the best judgment of impartial experts.

"From the standpoint of the exhibitor it is the most valuable feature I have yet seen in a motion picture publication. The exhibitor not only gets, in the review at the top of the page, what he knows is an impartial judgment on the picture, but in handy form right on the same page he gets invaluable suggestions on how to put over the picture and increase his profits."

'Crystallizes Your Service"—Hodkinson

"The Complete Plan Book is another step thoroughly in line with the progressive policy of the NEWS," summed up the comment of W. W. Hodkinson. "I feel that it should be a very valuable aid to exhibitors."

Later, W. A. Bach, Assistant General Sales Manager of the Hodkinson Corporation, declared:

"I have just been discussing The Complete Plan Book with Mr. Hodkinson. Our opinion here is that you have crystallized the work of your very efficient Exhibitor Service Bureau into a most practical and convenient form that will be of immense value to the exhibitor. Not only because it gives him the material he wants on each picture that he will run, but also it gives it to him in such form that he can file it and have it ready at a moment's notice.

"The advertising department of this corporation will take great pleasure in filing this section of your book separately as an addition to our Exhibitors' Aid Department."

JUST A FEW

These congratulations and expressions are but a small portion of those received.

Still coming in as we go to press.

Paramount Likes It

"I think the new Complete Plan Book service in connection with the important features is by far the most important step in motion picture trade journalism that has come to my notice," wrote John C. Flinn, Director of Publicity and Advertising, for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, to William A. Johnston. "I congratulate your foresight and courage."

"It's a wonderful idea," declared Jerome Beatty, advertising manager of the same organization. "The Complete Plan Book is just the thing for the exhibitor—it helps solve the big question that exhibitors are asking about every production—'How should I advertise it?'"

Cochrane Enthusiastic

R. H. Cochrane, vice president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, was enthusiastic in his appraisal of the new exhibitor service.

"You've done a corking good thing in adding The Complete Plan Book to the NEWS," he said. "The managers and advertising men of picture houses will find it a wonderful help."

The speedy response from the First National Exhibtiors' Circuit came in the following letter from C. L. Yearsley, advertising manager:

"We wish to congratulate you upon The Complete Plan Book, your latest department for exhibitors' service.

"Enclosed herewith is our order for 10,000 reprints of the pages on 'Italy's Flaming Front.' We intend to place one of these pages in the hands of every exhibitor who shows the film, as we believe that it will be of decided help in showing how the film should be handled. In our opinion the exhibitor needs, not only to be told how to advertise the release, but also the reassurance of responsible, disinterested parties that, if properly handled, it will prove profitable.

"The Complete Plan Book accomplishes both of these very desirable results so far as worth-while releases are concerned."

From World Film came a declaration by Ricord Gradwell, president of that corporation, that "This new permanent feature ought to be eagerly welcomed by every exhibitor in the country as a permanent and constructive asset."

Lee Kugel, publicity director for World Film, wrote, "Will you permit me to add my congratulations to the large number you no doubt will receive on the new department you have created—The Complete Plan Book.

"Its value to the exhibitor is apparent. It provides him with the very best tools in building a bigger business. It enables him to see at a glance just what kind of a picture he is getting and just how to put it over.

"It is a compendium of knowledge boiled down into the smallest possible space without losing any of its worth. To the producer it should be most welcome."

"Liberty Theatres" at Camps Getting Big Productions

"Hearts of the World," the Griffith spectacle, opened big at Camp Sherman last week. Special orders from headquarters were issued to Camp Jackson to the manager of the Liberty theatre to secure "To Hell with the Kaiser" for showing in the Liberty theatre there.

The Chicago representative of the Picture Division will be named early next week. E. L. Hyman, Director of Pictures of the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities, announces that arrangements are being made to play in the Liberty theatres "The Prussian Cur," "Why America Will Win" and "Crashing Through to Berlin."

The Picture Division is anxious to have all film concerns who wish to render patriotic service notify E. L. Hyman, 1520 Broadway, New York. "The Beast of Berlin" played three successful days at Camp Devens last week, with Marguerite Clark in "Rich Man, Poor Man," to follow.

Vanderlip Endorses Ray Plan

War Savings Stamp Campaign Linked with Craze for Picture Players' Photographs—Famous Players Promises to Help Out

THROUGH its chairman, Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank, of New York City, the National War Savings Committee has approved a scheme to utilize in raising money to lick the Kaiser the latest craze, which is the collection of photographs of "picture pets," which is slang for stars in photoplays.

The plan was originated by Charles Ray, the screen actor, and Thomas H. Ince, producer of Paramount and Artcraft photoplays. Mr. Ray receives several hundred requests a week for his autographed photo. The aggregate of such requests to all picture play stars is estimated at 10,000 a week. Messrs. Ray and Ince agreed that if these photo collectors were as zealous in buying Thrift Stamps as in hunting free photographs the Government would profit materially. So they proposed that hereafter no motion picture stars should give their photos unless the applicant enclosed a Thrift Card with four Thrift Stamps attached to show that he was lending the Government his savings. The Thrift Cards were to be returned with the photo requested. That is, stars were to offer their autographed photographs as prizes to Thrift Stamp buyers.

The only thing lacking to make the plan 100 per cent. effective was some way for the public to get in touch with the stars whose photographs are wanted. This lack was supplied by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which not only undertook to enlist the interest of all its stars, but has also offered to forward all letters to stars, whether under its management or not, that may be addressed in care of its main office, 485 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Mr. Vanderlip was so pleased with the plan that he wrote the following letters to Messrs. Ray and Ince:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT
WASHINGTON

National War Savings Committee
July 31, 1918.

Mr. Charles Ray,
Care Paramount Pictures,
Famous Players-Lasky Corporation,
485 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Ray:

May I congratulate you upon your unique plan for furthering the distribution of Thrift Stamps? I am sure that any one requesting one of your photographs will feel it is a privilege to accompany such a request with a card showing four Thrift Stamps, and that the result of your idea will be a very real factor in helping the Government to reach the goal it has set. In fact, I feel that you are performing a noteworthy patriotic service, which I shall be glad to commend to other photoplay folk. For myself, and in behalf of the National War Savings Committee I thank you for your co-operation.

I enclose a card with four Thrift Stamps, and I shall be happy if you will be good enough to send me an autographed photograph of yourself.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) FRANK A. VANDERLIP,
Chairman National War Savings Committee.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT
WASHINGTON

National War Savings Committee
July 31, 1918.

Mr. Thomas H. Ince,
Care Famous Players-Lasky Corporation,
485 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

My Dear Mr. Ince:

I have learned of the ingenious plan which has been conceived by Mr. Charles Ray and you to assist in the wider distribution of Thrift Stamps through having requests for photographs of Mr. Ray honored only when they are accompanied by a card showing four Thrift Stamps, which shall be returned with the photographs. It seems to me that any of the photoplay folk who adopt this plan will be rendering a really patriotic service, and I am glad, indeed, to commend it. For myself, and in behalf of the National War Savings Committee I thank you for your co-operation.

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) FRANK A. VANDERLIP,
Chairman National War Savings Committee.

Strand Musicians Play at New York Camp

Through the co-operation of Harold Edel, managing director of the Strand theatre, New York City, it has been made possible to secure the Strand's soloists at the camp near New York when pictures are being played.

The following artists have offered their services gratis: Grace Hoffman, coloratura soprano; Rosa Lind, dramatic soprano, formerly with the Grand Opera Company of Brussels, Belgium; Alys Michot, coloratura soprano; Herbert Waterous, basso, formerly with the Metropolitan Opera Company; Cora Tracy, contralto; Mary Zentazy, violinist.

Contracts for "Hearts of the World" have been signed for Camps Upton, Custer, Lee and Meade, and confirmation for the camps in the Southeast is expected to be received any day.

"To Hell with the Kaiser" has been meeting with success at all the Liberty theatres. Official orders were issued by General French at Camp Jackson to the War Department, Commission on Training Camp Activities, to secure this picture for free showing to the men.

"Pershing's Crusaders" has been the big hit in the following camps: Grant, Custer, Pike, Travis, and will be played on the entire Liberty theatre picture circuit.

Douglas Fairbanks in "Say, Young Fellow," opened recently at Camp Upton (Buffalo) theatre as a picture feature on the vaudeville bill. William Hart in "Shark Monroe" will play the last half of the week.

"Crashing Through" Shows Heroes and Villains

Universal declared this week that never before in the history of motion pictures has there been so great a collection of international figures shown in a single motion picture as those revealed in the seven-reel war drama, "Crashing Through to Berlin." All the rulers of all the countries on both sides of the world conflict are said to be included. Also there are shown most of the generals, admirals, diplomatists and government leaders.

Rochester Shows Friendship for Film Salesman

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—Film salesmen are not always popular with moving-picture men of Rochester, N. Y. Many of them are not encouraged to visit the Rochester territory any oftener than necessary. One big exception to that rule has been "Bill" Allen, who was the Vitagraph salesman for the Buffalo to Syracuse territory until the call of Uncle Sam became too strong for him to resist and he threw up his traveling job to get in shape for a German hunting license. For the last six months he has been in training at Camp Devons, Mass.

Two weeks ago there was a gathering of Bill's best Rochester friends in the Hotel Hayward. The old gang got to talking about various friends and then somebody wondered what had become of old Bill Allen. "Gee, I'd sure like to see old Bill," said he.

With that somebody else suggested a novel stunt. It was to take up a collection and raise a fund sufficient to pay Bill's fare back home to Rochester and all his hotel bills and other expenses and leave enough to give him a glorious time while he was here. The rest of the gang fell into the idea immediately and before the meeting broke up enough spot cash was in the hat to put the scheme into execution. They wrote a letter to Bill and told him that they were pining for a sight of his happy face again and had arranged to bring him back home for a lark. Bill was mighty tickled and lost no time in getting a furlough long enough for him to make the trip back to Rochester, enjoy everything that his old friends could do for him there and recover from the effects of it all. Everybody vowed the stunt was the best ever pulled off in Rochester, but Bill really believed it, judging from the letter of gratitude that came back to Rochester a few days later.

Cleveland Gives Party to Leon D. Netter

CLEVELAND, O.—One of the biggest film parties ever arranged in Cleveland took place at the Winton Hotel last Saturday and was given in honor of Leon D. Netter, manager of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, who left town Monday of this week for San Francisco, to join the U. S. Navy. There were fifty film men present, all prominent in the releasing and exhibiting branches of the industry. After an elaborate dinner, the guest of honor was presented with a beautiful wrist watch as a memento of the many friends he has left behind him.

Cleveland Exchange Passes Tax Along

CLEVELAND, O.—After championing the exhibitors of Ohio for a year, the Standard Film Service of Cleveland was finally forced to make the announcement that it will no longer be able to carry the 15 cent per foot per reel tax. This tax will have to be borne by the exhibitor on and after the first of September, and includes all unexpired contracts as well as new contracts.

West Coast Plans Loan Campaign

Committees Representing Every Walk in Film Colony Get Plans Under Way for Whirlwind Drive—Central Park to Be Center of Activity

DEFINITE plans for making the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign in the West Coast film colony successful have been adopted, it was announced from Los Angeles this week, and the committees in each studio, film exchange and in the theatres have been named to carry on the work to insure that film people will go over the top in fine shape on a $5,000,000 basis, or quota.

J. C. Jessen, West Coast representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, is a prime mover in the campaign, and is leaving no stone unturned to accomplish his share of the work. All film people will take part.

Tank Called "Victory"

The big open-air stage on which is to be placed a mammoth tank named "Victory," has been designed by Wilfred Buckland, head of the art department of the Famous Players-Lasky Studio, and contract for the erection of this in Central Park, Los Angeles, has been let. The stage will be of sufficient size to accommodate a big orchestra on a special platform, with sufficient room on the tank and lower platform for 100 people.

Elevated runway five feet wide will extend far out into the audience section. Ten other speaking platforms on the outer edge of the open-air ampitheatre, so that it will be possible to conduct eleven meetings at one time. All propaganda films prepared for the Government by various film stars will be projected on a mammoth screen, which will drop in front of the stage. Projection booth will be furnished by J. Slipper & Co., of Los Angeles.

The Liberty Bond drive is to be extended to the theatres each evening except Saturday and Sunday, when players and directors will make sales talks of four minutes each in the theatres, following the four-minute man's speech. Later they will sell bonds in the lobbies of the theatres as the people pass out.

The receipt will be a work of art, and with it will go autographed photographs of all screen celebrities whose signature appears on the receipt. The photographs and receipt will be made into book form, handsomely bound. Bids for the recipt are to be accepted from people at the opening meeting, or by telegram or letter, the latter to contain certified check for 5 per cent. of the amount, and telegrams to be in the form of check endorsed by bidder's local bank. Bids should be addressed to J. C. Jessen, 429 South Figueroa street, Los Angeles. The unveiling, or dedication meeting, will be held at 2 o'clock September 28.

D. W. Griffith, president of the Motion Picture Directors' Association, has been invited to pull the unveiling rope, and Lois Weber, vice president of the association, will christen the good tank "Victory." Women of the War Service Association will conduct the only concessions in the park during the drive, when they will sell refreshments of all kinds, the net proceeds to go for the various war activities being carried on.

The first night meeting has been placed in charge of the Motion Picture Directors' Association. There will be at least seventy-five of the directors present, many bringing players from their respective producing units. Victor Hermann, former Sennett director, now in the naval reserve at San Pedro training station, has arranged for the Submarine Base Band of forty pieces to furnish the music on this occasion.

Up to this time a greater portion of the committee necessary to carry on the campaign have been named by Charles H. Christie and J. C. Jessen.

Orchestras Retained in Buffalo

Break Had Been Threatened; Exhibitors and Musicians at Buffalo Finally Reach a Compromise Agreement Through Arbitration Board

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Buffalo's large motion picture houses will retain their big orchestras. At a meeting of representatives of the local Musicians' Union and the Exhibitors' Association in Shea's Hippodrome, a compromise agreement was reached whereby the musicians get their increase in pay, which amounts to five dollars a man and the exhibitors get an arbitration board, which in the future will decide how many men a theatre shall carry in its orchestra. Heretofore managers had to employ as many men as the union decided should be employed making it almost impossible for the exhibitors to cut down their orchestras.

On this arbitration board are representatives from both the union and the exhibitors' association. Now that the exhibitors have consented to boost the pay of the musicians, the new contracts will be renewed September 2 at the scale submitted by Local 43 and printed last week in Motion Picture News. One of the leading exhibitors in discussing the proposition admitted that the musicians were entitled to an increase to meet the rising cost of living. All other professions are getting higher wages and according to this manager it is no more than fair that the pay of the music makers be raised.

At Shea's Hippodrome the increase will mean an increase in the payroll of $150 per week, four men having been added to the twenty-six employed at this big house. Other houses will have to come across with good sums. To meet this added expense, Shea's Hippodrome has led the way for the local exhibitors by increasing prices of admission and the first week with thousands of patrons attending, only a few complained of the boost. All seemed to think that the show given was worth it. So far none of the local houses have boosted their admissions but it seems it will have to come.

Harold B. Franklin has been appointed manager of the Features Bureau for the next Liberty Loan campaign in Western New York. This appointment comes as a recognition of Mr. Franklin's ability in putting over original ideas in recent patriotic movements in Buffalo. Shea's Hippodrome has always been the center of interest in previous campaigns.

The Strand theatre had the "Fighting Mechanics" training at Technical High School as its guests Friday evening when the boys saw themselves as screen stars in the News-Strand Local Events. Earl L. Crabb, manager of the Strand "shot" some excellent views of the mechanics at work and play and over 1,000 feet were incorporated in the Local Events. Other local activities pictured was the big Smokes' Rally at Lafayette square, the Raising of the Service Flag at Police Headquarters, the Motor Corps girls and Alfred Leroy, the armless and legless man, who was in Buffalo on the way to the coast with a motorcycle.

The Teck theatre has repeated its capacity record made with "Cleopatra," by presenting Theda Bara in "Salome." This big legitimate house was crowded at all performances during the week, the "best people" in town being noted in the audiences. The Teck is one of the big theatres of the country that thinks it good policy to present a big photoplay feature now and then and Manager John R. Oishei always seems to pick a winner.

A. C. Winegar, manager of the Central Park and Premier theatres is a busy man these days organizing entertainments for the departing draft boys. A program is given in the Central Park for every detachment leaving for camp, when in addition to the entertainment, gifts are distributed to the future soldiers.

Manager Arthur S. Hopkins of the local Universal branch has started the Yellow Dog campaign in Buffalo. He has linked up with the Buffalo Courier to take care of the publicity. So far several clubs have been formed.

The Lyric theatre reopened on Labor Day, under the management of Charles Bowe, with pictures and vaudeville. The Academy theatre, which has been offering pictures and musical comedy stock during the summer, will continue this policy into the fall and winter season and also add vaudeville acts, according to an announcement by Manager J. H. Michael. On Sundays a big bill of film features only will be offered. The Academy is showing the Pathe serial, "Hands Up," in Buffalo first run.

"Hearts of the World" closed a successful three week's run at the Majestic theatre Saturday evening, August 31, the longest showing of any film feature ever presented in Buffalo. Buffalonians gladly paid the big prices to see this Griffith masterpiece, and were it not for the coming of Otis Skinner in "Humpty Dumpty," it is probable that the picture would have been held another week.

Christie Day at Meeting

It was Christie Day at the meeting of the Exhibitors' Association in Los Angeles September 4, at a luncheon held at Hamburger's at which the acting and executive members of the Christie Company were present. The occasion was also made Ladies' Day, and each exhibitor and exchange man was invited to bring a feminine friend.

Griffith Film Arouses Interest in Dayton

Dayton, Ohio.—D. W. Griffith's "The Great Love" had a week's run at the Strand Theatre beginning September 1. Clay Brehm, the manager, planned special advertising and fitting music for the production. "The Great Love" was run at usual Strand prices.

Elsie Ferguson, featured in "The Danger Mark," was the main attraction at the Strand the first four days of last week, supported by "Fatty" Arbuckle in "His Canine Friend."

The New Dayton Theatre had one of the largest Sundays, if not the largest, in their history, last Sunday, when a line a block long both ways on Main street waited to see "The Still Alarm," featuring Thomas Sanchi. Special music was arranged by H. H. Thomas, the conductor. Mr. Mark Gates announces that he has also "Cleopatra" and "Les Miserables" booked. Special advertising and stage settings will be used for the showing of these productions.

John Seifert, at the Ideal Theatre, has been doing very good the last few weeks. This week "Merely Players," with Kitty Gordon and Irving Cummings, is showing to a capacity every performance. Mr. Seifert is planning great things in the way of advertising for the big "Bill" Hart picture, "The Hell Hounds of Alaska," which will see a week's run beginning September 1. William S. Hart and Charley Chaplin hold the record for drawing power at the Ideal. Mr. Lou Baum, from the Universal office in Cincinnati, was through Dayton the other day. He probably did some good at the suburban houses. "Innocent Eyes" was booked for the Dayton Theatre for the last three days of this week.

Work on the Auditorium is in full swing now, and from the looks of things now they will have some house by Christmas. "Gil" Burrows will manage the new house.

William Farnum, in "The Plunderer," is running at the Alhambra to a good business. Bert Fiala, the manager of the suburban house, is running the Fox specials at the rate of one a week.

Virginia A. E. A. Meeting Indefinitely Postponed

Richmond, Va.—For several reasons the adjourned meeting of the American Exhibitors' Association of Virginia, which was to have been held at Ocean View, has been indefinitely postponed, according to Secretary Harry Bernstein, who announced that it would be almost a matter of impossibility to secure a gathering of the Virginia picture men at present, due to the unsettled conditions that are not only existing in this State, but everywhere.

Many important questions which were laid over from the annual convention held in Richmond in June were scheduled to come up at the adjourned meeting. There is a probability that this meeting will be held later in the year.

Madison Square Garden Show Arranged

Arrangements are completed to hold the National Motion Picture Exposition at Madison Square Garden October 5th to 13th, inclusive. As soon as it was definitely decided that the Palace was not available Frederick H. Elliott, general manager of the exposition, obtained an option for the use of Madison Square Garden for the same dates.

Nearly $30,000 worth of space has already been disposed of to a majority of the largest companies in the business, and additional inquiries are coming in every day, according to report.

When William A. Brady, president of tre National Association, was informed that the lease for Madison Square Garden had been signed, he became wildly enthusiastic and stated that he would actively supervise all arrangements and make this the biggest show in the history of the industry.

In addition to the companies in the motion picture business, who naturally would subscribe for space, a large part of the main auditorium of the Garden will be taken up by the exhibits of the various administrative departments of the United States Government. For this reason this exposition will be in reality a war service exposition of the motion picture industry, as every attempt will be made to show every detail of the work of the motion picture in the war and the importance it has in the winning of the war.

One of the largest exhibits in the whole exposition will be that of the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information. The material for this exhibit consists of three carloads of war relics that have been captured from the Germans on the battlefields of France. There are two or three battle-scarred aeroplanes and a wealth of other relics.

Any profits that may accrue from this exposition will be equally divided between the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

Cleveland May Increase Admission Prices

Cleveland, Ohio.—While other cities have already demonstrated the impracticability of operating motion picture theatres at prices that prevailed under the normal conditions existing before the war, the exhibitors of Cleveland have continued to run their shows with the average admission price ranging about fifteen cents. Every effort has been put forth to keep the prices down.

It is now conceded, however, that a first-run motion picture theatre cannot be run profitably at this time at the old prices. Nothing definite has been done as yet to raise the prices in Cleveland. The exhibitors, however, have had several meetings at which the matter was discussed, and it was agreed that some increase would have to be made by the 1st of September.

As soon as it is announced what the Government tax will be on the motion picture theatres, the exhibitors will determine upon an equitable price at which they will be able to operate their houses and make a legitimate profit, according to report.

Liberty Pictures Materialize

Various Stars and Companies Complete Reels to Help Boost Sales of Bonds—Some Unique and Some Novel

THE crop of Liberty Loan films, to help boost the sale of the new Liberty Loan bonds which will soon be passed out to fortunate Americans, is growing steadily, and latest reports are that every company and nearly every star has made, or is making, a Liberty Loan picture. These are described as both novel and unique, among the latter being one made by Essanay with animated dolls as the characters.

This picture is entitled "Two Bits for Uncle Sam." It is the first of a series of ten animated doll pictures, created by Howard S. Moss. Director Moss has been working on this series at the Essanay studios for many months and the entire number now are completed.

Goldwyn's all-star contribution to the thousand-foot motion pictures being made throughout the industry to stimulate interest in the Fourth Liberty Loan, holds unusual appeal for everyone. Not only does the cast boast of a startling aggregation of stars, but the novelty of the story and its significance to the great work about to be begun cannot fail to be appreciated by audiences everywhere.

Geraldine Farrar has been invited by the United States Treasury Department to make a picture to stimulate interest in the Fourth Liberty Loan and is meeting the emergency with her accustomed zest.

William S. Hart, Artcraft star, has been requested to tour three important districts of the East in behalf of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign. The request came from the three chairmen of New York, Boston and Philadelphia districts, through the Liberty Loan Committee. These chairman are: Joseph Hartigan, New York; Philip Dalton, Boston; Harry Hodge, Philadelphia. Mr. Hart immediately agreed to accede to the request early in October.

In making his special Liberty Loan picture, which will be shown during the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, William Farnum was obliged to produce the picture 100 feet of film at a time. The work on the special Liberty Loan production, which is of a striking patriotic nature, was sandwiched in between Mr. Farnum's work on "The Man of Power," the great feature film which he is making for William Fox at Hollywood.

The special Loan picture is now nearly completed, but it would not have been had not Mr. Farnum given up his vacation.

World Comments on New Draft

The Possible and Probable Effects of the New 18 to 45 Draft as Touching the Motion Picture Theatres Is Outlined by World Film

THE one condition that is giving theatrical managers more concern today than anything else is the effect of the "18 to 45" draft. It should be cause for great uneasiness among those who produce for the legitimate theatres, but the motion picture exhibitor will find that he will come through the ordeal practically unscathed say the officials of World Pictures.

"The advantage of the motion picture theatre lies in the fact that fully 75 per cent of these places of amusement are what might be termed neighborhood theatres and, being so, it is not necessary for women to call upon the male members of their families to act as escorts. On the other hand the legitimate theatres, located generally in a central section, draft their patronage from all parts of the city.

"No lady is keen to come and go at night without having the services of a male escort. The tremendous inroads made on those of military age by the new ruling, renders it difficult for our women to call on men either to pay for the tickets or to go along with them. The picture house, with its cheaper price of admission, makes slight demands on one's purse, and this being true the exhibitor will see but little effect of the 18 to 45 ruling.

"The American people are, by reason of disposition, education and temperament, an amusement loving class and, living as we do at high pressure, the motion picture theatre provides an ideal safety valve to relieve our surcharged energy. After a strenuous day of mental activity it has been found that a few hours spent watching interesting scenes and situations disclosed on the screen, alleviates the tension and starts us off on the next day ready for whatever comes.

"When the first draft came the croakers saw all sorts of dire things happening to the screen drama. These things did not come to pass for the very reasons that apply to the new condition of affairs created by the 13,000,000 army requisitioned by Uncle Sam for the world war.

"Business as usual will be the slogan of the exhibitor and the public will continue to support the motion picture industry because it is an essential and necessary medium for keeping our spirits at a high degree of optimism. Motion picture amusement is utilized, unconsciously perhaps, to create a mental condition that makes for a better mental balance.

Pioneer Film Is Host

By special arrangement with the Mayor's Committee, the Pioneer Film Corporation will act as host four nights of next week at the Casino Theatre, New York city, to the boys in uniform, Allied visitors and Red Cross.

The attraction is "Wives of Men," with Florence Reed, a dramatic epic that has received excellent press notices. Tuesday night will be given over to the army, Wednesday night to the navy, Allied visitors, Thursday, and Friday nights have been allotted to the Red Cross.

Answering David Belasco : : : : By Dick Willis

IN the April number of Munsey's Magazine David Belasco discusses entertainingly of the movies. He writes many sensible things, he refuses to recognize the pictures as a deadly rival, and says that as long as good plays are presented the public will go to see them, that the pictures and the spoken drama are arts apart, both staple products of the amusement world, in all of which most of us agree.

It is when Mr. Belasco tells what he would do if he directed a motion picture drama that he shows he is out of his element. His theories are excellent, but they are neither commercially sound nor practical.

He writes, "I would insist that the scenes should be photographed consecutively and in the order of their development." He gives good reasons for this, the main one being that the artists would feel and live in their characterizations and be able to register their emotions more naturally. He would also "continue rehearsals until the actors were able to go through their roles without prompting or directing of any kind."

These things might be possible with highly trained artists and with an unlimited amount of money allowed for every picture produced; even then it would only be possible with the simplest of stories, with a minimum of locations and perfect atmospheric conditions.

Even a simple, straightforward story will generally call for scenes which must be taken at a distance from the studio; these scenes will occur at different times during the unfolding of the photoplay, and if Mr. Belasco's methods were adopted a number of persons and properties would have to make the trip between the studio and the location, which would entail a large expenditure of both time and money.

That is why scenes are not taken consecutively. A company, comprising the director, technical staff, cameraman, artists and extras will travel to a given spot and take all the scenes called for at that location at one time. Some of the scenes may occur at the beginning of the story, some in the middle and some at the end, according to the needs of the script.

Interior scenes running through the photoplay would have to be left standing, furniture and properties to be left iu place, because the camera will tell tales if anything is altered or misplaced. The stage space covered by these sets could not be used by other companies and their work would be sadly interfered with, and it is commercially necessary for more than one company to work in a studio in order to curtail the big overhead expenses entailed.

Most of the furniture is hired in order that the right periods may be used or that appropriate tables and chairs and so forth may be selected. It would be needless waste of money to purchase every item of furniture required and storage space would not permit it in any case. The rentals would run up enormously if Mr. Belasco's ideas held sway.

If any other method was adopted thousands of dollars would soon be added to the picture, and the commercial limitations, the cost of marketing and distribution and so forth would not permit this.

Again, it would be almost impossible to rehearse a five-reel photoplay and then film it without prompting or direction. This is possible with a stage play because it is presented to the public the moment it is ready. In the case of a motion picture anywhere from three weeks to two months may be consumed in the making, and the artists could never retain all the details, no matter how carefully rehearsed.

A stage play is rehearsed and presented within walls. Photography is more or less dependent on the elements and the presence of the sun. The work may be interfered with for a week, or even more, if the sun is shy, the atmospheric conditions not favorable, or during rains, and if the company continued rehearsals over too long a period their work would be mechanical, stagy and unnatural.

Then, again, on the stage there is a given space for the performers to cover, certain entrances and exits, everything which makes for precision and which can be adhered to. In pictures there must be far more license, and the camera work plays an equally important part with the story, direction and acting. A scene may be turned around or rebuilt to take advantage of some particularly beautiful vista or lighting effect, an added piece of business may suggest itself on locations which will materially add to the story value. Locations and spots cannot always be accurately determined beforehand, directors and cameramen must be permitted some license as long as their alterations of locale and little added artistic touches do not interfere with the author's work.

In his article Mr. Belasco evidently takes it for granted that the artists know nothing of the photoplay or the action until the scene is rehearsed. This is true in some cases, but not as a rule. Every capable and conscientious actor will study the script carefully so that he may get into the spirit of his part and also select his wardrobe. Some companies rehearse the story first and also rehearse each scene before the cameraman turns the crank, and this is the best method to adopt. It gets the principals into their characterizations and enables them to play their parts with more conviction.

The art of motion picture making is young and any number of improvements may be made, and are being made. Criticism is not to be derided and always serves a useful purpose and should be invited by all those who have the industry most at heart, and Mr. Belasco's article contains many truisms.

I am afraid that Mr. Belasco would have to be his own angel if he made pictures after his own ideals. I do not think he would make more than one or two; they would be artistic and beautiful, but surely they would hardly be commercially successful.

David Belasco is right in one thing. Although the art of the stage and that of the screen are closely allied, they are yet arts apart; each calls for its own methods and technique, each holds its own important place in the amusement world. The one cannot hurt the other.

What Kind of a Fellow Is—Patch?

Being a Glance at the Real Human Side of the Big Men of the Picture Game Caught in Action

SOME few months ago William Moore Patch broke into the Times Square section of "fillum sassiety" with the first Official Italian Battlefront Pictures.

Previous to that time the name always brought to the minds of trade paper readers a picture of Pittsburgh, and tales of unusual stunts in presenting pictures. He was an "exhibitor"—though the word seems out of place in describing a showman of William Moore Patch's type.

For William Moore Patch is one of the few men in America who early succeeded in elevating pictures to a plane level with that of the legitimate theatre. David Griffith did it—and still does it—by supplying the ammunition for showmen like Mr. Patch. George Kleine did it with "Quo Vadis."

But Mr. Patch was about the first theatre manager we can recall who got the idea that a real big picture presented in a real big way is just as big an attraction as any legitimate play—and he clung to his idea season in and season out.

And he clung to it successfully—despite the knockers who always expected him to change face with the next attraction.

For three years he operated the Pitt theatre in Pittsburgh as a high-class picture house, with two performances daily only, and admission prices ranging from 50 cents to $2.00. Many pictures that played for ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents, played to capacity business in the Pitt theatre at $2.00.

He is the most untheatrical-looking man in America. He wears no diamonds, dresses in dark blue or black entirely and is most unassuming and matter-of-fact.

Mr. Patch has never had his picture in a newspaper or magazine, and swears that he never will. THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS succeeded in getting the first sketch that has ever been made of Mr. Patch.

He is, at one time, one of the most serious and most humorous of men. He illustrates practically everything by a story, a striking phrase or a quotation from some well known author or philosopher sending his meaning home in no uncertain way.

He speaks three languages and is a book-fiend of the first order.

His personality is what one might call dynamatic.

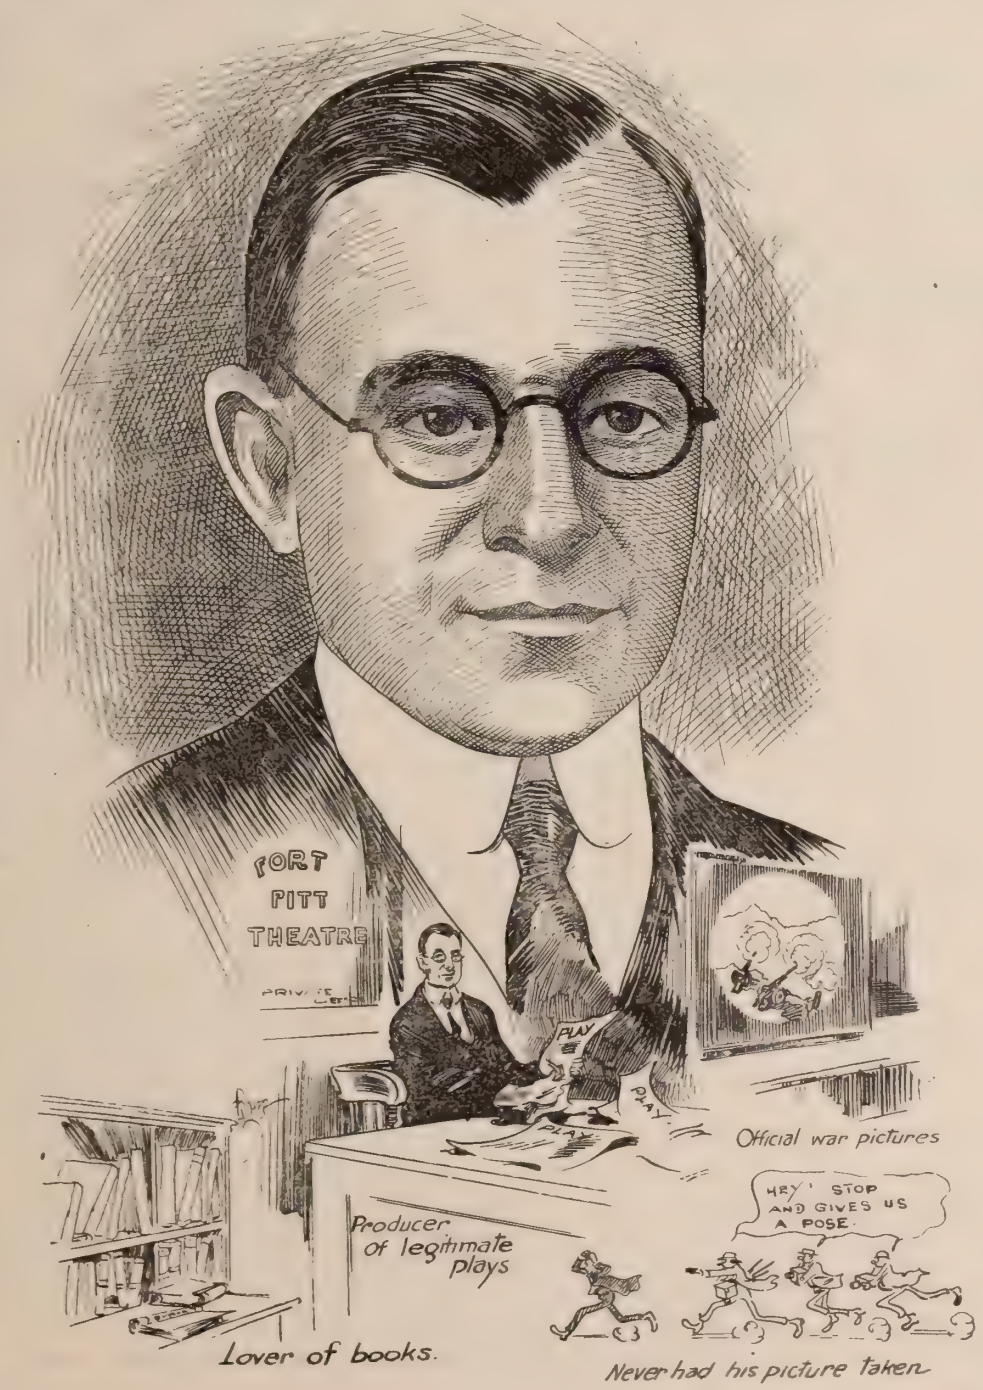
He can work harder and longer than any one in New York: and never even becomes fatigued.

Unfortunately, Mr. Patch is very deaf and often has to use an ear trumpet. But he does not seem to mind this in the least—in fact has a great deal of fun out of it. He claims that he keeps his deaf ears for scandal and his ear trumpet for business.

He comes of an army family, his father and three brothers having graduated from the Military Academy at West Point. His brothers are all in France with General Pershing.

He is probably the youngest prominent producer and exhibitor in America—only being twenty-nine years of age.

Aside from these points, one of the most outstanding factors about William Moore Patch is the fact that he is a Roosevelt fan. He'll talk Roosevelt to you morning, noon and night—if you will let him. And if he is not talking David Griffith and big pictures.



Mr. Patch is of the opinion that we ought to have a hundred odd Griffiths in this business—beg pardon, art.

He believes that too many broad-visioned creators are frittering their time away on the ten, twenty, thirty style of entertainment when they could be producing classics that would live in history.

And that would — incidentally — provide showmen with more attractions that could be blazoned "Two Dollar Top."

But truth to tell: Friend Patch is so anxious for more "Two Dollar Top" attractions that we strongly suspect one of these days will find him out on a studio lot staging a spectacle of his own.

And why not?

Exhibitors Box Office Reports

LAST MINUTE REPORTS

The Following Individual Reports Came in as Motion Picture News Was Going to Press

"The Great Love" (Griffith-Paramount)—"A 100 per cent picture, timely, well balanced; splendid cast; fine acting; great all around."

"Waifs" (Astra-Pathe)—"Clean comedy-drama."

"The Prussian Cur" (Fox)—"Admission increased from 25 to 50 cents; turned them away afternoons and evenings."

"Flower of the Dusk" (Dana-Metro)—"Average picture."

"Bread" (MacLaren-Universal)—"Went very big."

"Romance of the Underworld" (Calvert-Sherry)—"Made a good start."

"Maid of the Storm" (Barriscale-Paralta)—"Good; pleased them all."

"Beloved Blackmailers" (Blackwell-World)—"Average story and average business."

Editor's Note: The Box Office Report chart includes all pictures released since June 1 on which a sufficient number of exhibitor reports have been received to base a verdict. In the column "Average of Exhibitors' Reports" the term "Extra Big" indicates a picture which far surpassed expectation; "Big" means a picture doing better than the usual business for that day under average conditions; "Average" is the grading given the production on which business held up to normal; "Poor" indicates the picture falling below normal in box office and entertainment value.

The comments given are no indication of the number of reports received, as many exhibitors merely check off the grading without comment.

"Heart of Erra Greer" (F. Warde-Pathe)—"An average picture."
"The Barrier" (Rex Beach)—"Went extra big."
"Up the Road With Sallie" (Select)—"Pleased Immensely."
"Soul For Sale" (Jewel)—"Audience openly ridiculed this so-called picture."
"Madam Who" (Paralta)—"Average picture."
"Judgment House" (Paramount)—"Poor. Did not get much. Business dropped off."
"The Knife" (Select)—"One of the best this star ever made."
"Keys of the Righteous, The" (Paramount)—"Went over very nicely."
"Tempered Steel" (Petrova-First National)—"Average."
"Carmen of the Klondike" (Clara Williams-State Rights)—"A perfectly corking picture with a good star. Best fight in it since 'The Spoilers.' Good business for three nights but lightless night naturally showed decrease."
"Over There" (Select Special)—"Another war picture, but along little different lines, and, being a 'Select,' it went big. If 'Select' should decide to produce 'A Mother Was Chasing Her Boy 'Round the Room,' which is the same refrain for stanzas, they would, no doubt, put it over big. Next to Artcraft and Paramount, it has them all beaten to a standstill."
"By Right of Purchase" (Select)—"Norma Talmadge makes good money for us."
"Blue Bird, The" (Lasky-Artcraft)—"Very poor as a program picture."
"Redemption" (Thaw-State Rights)—"Second run, good picture, average business."
"A Rich Man's Darling" (Bluebird)—"Poor story and acting."
"The Trouble Buster." (Paramount)—"Fair satisfaction."

Exhibitor Service Bureau

Problem of Small Space Ads

Punch Display During the Week Highly Important—How a Little Spent For Cuts Will Really Save

BECAUSE of a series of inquiries about smaller space newspaper advertising, we pause for a moment this week in the discussion of what the newspapers of various cities are doing in the way of co-operation with the motion picture theatres to offer a few suggestions as to how the theatre can get the most possible benefit out of the least possible space.

As we have said here many times we are mighty firm believers in the use of liberal advertising. And just as firmly do we believe that the exhibitor should keep eternally at advertising, not for one day of the week, but every day. Some exhibitors claim that they find that the two policies will not work together and that if they do big advertising they must confine it to one day a week.

But as a matter of fact these inquiries about smaller space advertising come largely from the principal cities, points where there are a large number of newspapers to be used and where the rates are high. We may volunteer the information here that the reason we have not discussed advertising in the New York newspapers is that conditions that attain here are applicable to hardly any other city in the country and that recommendations that would be made to New York theatres might be misleading to the rest of the country.

Writes one exhibitor: "The chief fault that I have to find with the material that the companies send out is that they prepare very fine advertisements so you can use eight or ten inches two or three columns, but it is ridiculous to expect me or any other showman to use such large material every day. When it comes down to the smaller advertising it appears careless and the designers seem to be of the opinion that because the exhibitor is using only a few lines it doesn't matter what he puts in them. In my opinion the smaller the advertisement the more attractive it has to be.

"Now if you come to preparing your own advertising you generally find that the smallest cut matter available is single column, though a few do provide thumbnail cuts (the majority of which are absolutely hopeless after they are reproduced). As a matter of fact, the engraving cost is one of the smallest items, for cases where a cut would cost me sixty cents and I could have as many mats made from it as I desired, the space that it would occupy in a single newspaper would cost me $6. The chief point is that the material is not available for the smaller displays. That it is impossible simply to reduce the larger advertising in the engraving process is shown in the reproductions you publish in 'Your Idea and Ours,' where you will see that by the time that many of the displays are reproduced down to what would be a newspaper column, most of the reading matter can scarcely be read."

Because of the fact that in big city advertising there are likely to be a large number of other theatres also using small space, it is all the more essential that the advertising be more carefully prepared and that they be made to stand out all the more by contrast. Obviously the way to do this is to have a series of drawings made for the different days of the week on each production and there isn't the slightest doubt that in cases where space is the expensive thing this is economy in the long run. An excellent example of this has just been afforded by the advertising on "The Geezer of Berlin" for the Casino theatre and "For Husbands Only" at the Bandbox, both in Chicago. Here the largest space used was slightly less than five inches single column, yet the designer succeeded in making each of these as distinctive as if a page had been used.

Two of these displays are reproduced in their actual size on the page opposite. It will be noted that the drawing of the winking girl was used in both of these, and that in the larger one there was the line "As tantalizing as a wink." It was proper to leave this out in the smaller display because it would have been in such small type that it would hardly have been legible. Omitting the background also adds to the attractiveness of the smaller display. Yet this latter proves that where you do have an attractive design as the main thing to catch the eye, you can then use smaller type and GET IT READ. We believe that the average reader of the Chicago newspapers, after once he got a glimpse of the girl's head went ahead to read the excerpts from the opinions of the two Chicago critics who are quoted. In other words, the theatre benefited practically as much from the small display as he would from a big one, but because he had the advantage of the attractive drawing that first caught the eye—the big thing to achieve.

Most of the large theatres in the bigger cities are content with having their special advertising drawn for the Saturday or Sunday issue and then resorting to the mere card system during the week. In our opinion the manager who is doing this is not getting the most out of his productions and a change in policy which would result in advertising the picture every day and advertising it differently would bring more than enough business to justify the expense. S. Barret McCormick of the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, rarely ever uses the same advertisement twice. Numerous accounts of his campaigns have appeared in these columns, and his experience has been that the increased patronage is well worth the trouble and the expense. But Mr. McCormick does not confine himself to small space advertising in these daily exploitations, the immediate subject of this discussion.

Casino theatre, Chicago, has just completed a campaign on "The Geezer of Berlin." Most of this advertising was 2¾ inches single column and all of these were different. They were combinations of line cuts and halftones with the illustration, the name of the theatre and the title of the picture made to stand out as the three things. Practically the only other reading matter was the statement that this picture is a travesty on "The Kaiser." In our opinion this was about a hundred per cent exploitation of this picture.

Now one must remember that the large advertisement in the Sunday issue generally has the result in convincing the reader that he does or does not want to see the picture, but especially in the large community where the pictures run for a week or longer and where there are lots of things happening that may make one forget good intention there has to be not only some reminder in the shape of the daily advertising, but this reminder has to breathe the same spirit as did the larger advertisement. This, too, adds to the cumulative effect, for one can well imagine a reader passing over the first display, but being convinced by the repeated daily and different ones that this is a picture that he cannot afford to miss.

For these reasons, in answering our inquirers, we strongly believe that it will pay theatres in the larger cities to have their advertising especially prepared for them with these objects in view—for the very reason that for every dollar they spend in engraving and artist's bills they will get back in the ten times more efficient exploitation than they secure in the smaller space.

In New York where some fifteen dailies, most of them with very high rates, must be used to cover the field the motion picture and legitimate theatre advertising comes down to the directory form. Yet even here specialized advertising with original designs has been used most effectively on large productions at some of the theatres.

The system of advertising followed in most of the larger cities generally results in the during the week advertising getting down to little more than an enlarged card. The name of the theatre is made the prominent thing and there is not much else used except the name of the star and the title of the production. It is valuable for the man who is using the newspaper to find a place to go, but it is not efficient in persuading people who otherwise would not come to visit your theatre.

Record Run of "To Hell With the Kaiser" Confirms Horater's Belief in Advertising

"EVERY dollar I spent was for advertising and I find that is the way to do it."

This briefly sums up the success of H. C. Horater, who has just put over "To Hell with the Kaiser" for an engagement of two weeks at the Alhambra, Toledo, O. Toledo has been long known for a city of effective motion picture advertising, but Mr. Horater went a step further during the engagement of this picture, as the box office records show.

Immediately after he had seen this picture Mr. Horater decided that it was something so entirely different that he would give it a thoroughly "different" exploitation and there isn't the slightest doubt that he did this. When a manager succeeds in getting ministers and others writing to the newspapers—without any sort of collusion—the publicity plan is going some. And that is just what happened in Toledo.

The first thing that Mr. Horater did was to secure hundreds of the buttons supplied by Metro bearing the words, "To Hell with the Kaiser," and on the day that they were received he was asked to make a speech before the seven hundred members of the Toledo Commerce Club. Before the meeting was ended every one present was wearing one of the buttons and not a single one of the wearers knew that he was boosting a motion picture. The next day he also addressed the members of the Patriotic League and of the Red Cross.

His next step was to have a streamer, 12 by 28 inches, printed bearing the words, and these were given to automobilists for use on their windshields. The first lot was quickly exhausted, so great was the demand, and then a second and finally third lots were printed and every one of them was put to use. It is related that there was so great a demand for these streamers and for the buttons, after the supply was entirely exhausted, that they were sold and are still selling at from fifty cents to a dollar each.

With this start the frank exploitation of the picture, as a picture, was started. More than 10,000 sheets of paper were used and window cards were placed everywhere and then thousands of tags were placed on automobiles. Newspaper advertising which used quarter pages and which employed many of the aids supplied by Metro as well as including original matter was started. The result was that on Sunday morning, the day of the opening, there was an immense crowd in front of the Alhambra at 8.30 a. m. While the doors never open until 11 o'clock, there was such an insistent demand from the crowds that Mr. Horater was compelled to start the first show an hour and a half ahead of the scheduled time.

The succeeding four days were the hottest that had ever been known in Toledo, but instead of the crowds falling off they increased, and so insistent was the demand for the picture that the manager decided to do something that had never been known before in Toledo—run the same picture for a second week. "On the last two days of the second week," says Mr. Horater, "the receipts were bigger than on any previous days.

"'To Hell with the Kaiser' requires no special musical setting. My musical director put this over without an orchestra, simply using our two organists and our pipe organ had all the necessary effects. This pleased our patrons and did not divert their attention for one moment from the picture.

"Neither did I use any special stage settings or decorations. Every dollar that was spent was for advertising and I find that this is the way to do it."

Saenger Company Issue Monthly House Organ

Saenger Amusement Company, New Orleans, controlling some fifty theatres in Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, Mississippi and Florida has just launched the publication of a house organ which is issued monthly. This is called the "Humdinger," and is edited by Gaston J. Dureau, Jr., manager of the booking department, assisted by representatives of the company in the varions cities where it is represented.

Two issues have so far been issued and one of these contains a sketch of E. J. Richards, Jr., the general manager, and the second tells "all about" W. H. Gueringer, the assistant general manager. There is a page of editorials, another of personals, and newsy gossip from the various towns. The Honor Roll of the company now bears 49 names.

Builds "Brass Bullet" on Theatre Auto

A. J. Laurie, publicity manager of the Midway theatre, Montreal, successfully exploited the Universal serial, "The Brass Bullet," by building on the theatre auto the reproduction of half of a bullet, many times enlarged. As the machine sailed through the streets it gave the appearance of a speeding bullet. On the sides it bore the name of the serial and the date on which the first episode would be shown.

Woman Designs Campaign on "To Hell with Kaiser" for Los Angeles

QUINN'S Rialto Theatre, Los Angeles, has just completed a twenty-day campaign on "To Hell With the Kaiser." The picture ran for three weeks and the exploitation campaigns were so well handled by Miss Eleanor Germo, who is director of advertising for one of the large Los Angeles banks, that she has now been engaged to take charge of all of the advertising for the Kinema Theatre.

In all of the copy Miss Germo employed large black and white drawings and little reading matter. This was all lettered much in the same style as was followed by Metro in the ready-made advertising that is supplied to exhibitors. In fact, the Los Angeles campaign was largely an elaboration of the same idea. The partnership of the Hun ruler and Satan was kept the dominant thing through all of the displays. The campaign cost $2,000, and one of the results was a three-weeks' run of the picture.

All five of the Los Angeles papers were used, the large displays being carried on alternating days in the various papers, so that some of the big displays would appear every day, and during the remainder of the time the smaller advertisements in the regular amusement advertising were used.

Lyceum, Orange, Added to Theatre Chain

Lyceum theatre, Orange, N. J., has just been taken over by the management of the Palace and Colonial of the same place and reopened on Labor Day with Nazimova in "The Toys of Fate." The bill will be changed every two days, there being no Sunday showings in Orange. Two performances will be given in the afternoons and two in the evenings.

Appreciation, More Service, More Plans

IN the first place here is a letter. It comes from A. C. H. Chamberlin who runs a theatre in Madera, Cal., a town of 2,404. It is all the more gratifying that an exhibitor in one of the smaller cities should find the Exhibitors' Service Bureau and the MOTION PICTURE NEWS in general absolutely essential to his success.

Within the past two weeks we have printed a number of letters that came to us after the annnouncement of our first birthday. One of the most successful managers in the country declared that he got his inspiration and education in exploiting pictures from this department. Another declared that the Bureau is "as essential to exploitation as the lens to projection."

A third told us that he likes it especially because "this department is unique because it eliminates all the 'bunk' literature—stuff that wastes valuable space and does no one any good." And another one, and one of the leaders of the country has this to say:

"It is a well recognized fact that there has been an almost inconceivable advancement in the production and presentation of motion pictures and I certainly have no hesitancy in saying that I attribute the most of this advancement to the Exhibitors' Service Bureau of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS."

AS we have said Mr. Chamberlin discusses other things than the department itself and we present this as a representative opinion of what the NEWS has been trying to do of late:

I have before me now two copies of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, August 24, 1918, and August 25, 1917 (always keep a year's issue on hand in the office), and have been drawing comparisons in general, especially the Exhibitors' Bureau department which, of course, is the most interesting to me.

"A Year of a Pledge—Kept," and may I add, WELL KEPT! for surely you have given the exhibitors an unlimited amount of SERVICE along these lines. "SERVICE with a capital S"—quoting yours of August 25, 1917—SERVICE that really DOES mean dollars and cents to every exhibitor who conducts a motion picture theatre (of course he or she reads the MOTION PICTURE NEWS or they would not be CONDUCTING a theatre.

I cannot help but notice the many additions you have made to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS during the past year. It is remarkable indeed. You have added the Exhibitors' SERVICE Bureau, "The Reader Has His Say," the Equipment SERVICE, "Exhibitor to Exhibitor Review SERVICE," "Exhibitors' Box-Office Reports"—here is a service that should be a big help to the small town exhibitor—over 90 per cent of the reports printed on the different productions compare almost identical with the pictures we have shown that appear in the list. This is an excellent SERVICE and every exhibitor should profit by using it.

Then you added the "Pink 'Un," the Pacific Coast edition which is, of course, interesting to the Pacific Coast exhibitors. Would like to see a little more about the San Francisco territory. San Francisco will be a big motion picture producing center in the near future, in my estimation.

You have added so many different helps for the exhibitor that it will take a good many pages to talk about each one. I take my hat off to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS and congratulate you upon the success of the paper in general and especially the success of the Exhibitors' SERVICE Bureau at its first anniversary. Let us all hope to see many more successful years of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. We simply can't get along successfully without it.

I also wish to add that I more than enjoy reading the editorials written by Mr. Johnston.

WITH last week's issue there appeared a new SERVICE, and this the Complete Plan Book. It consists in gathering together intelligently the available material about each picture and presenting them so that the exhibitor may find what he wants to know at a glance and so that he can preserve this material for use when he begins to exploit the picture. It should be a most valuable department to everyone, and especially to the smaller exhibitor who cannot afford the office force and the equipment of the larger houses.

This department gives you the advance matter, gathers it for you and places it before you in a convenient form. It does not attempt to lay out definite policies but rather to show you the material that is available and the plans for the pictures that readily present themselves. In other words, it is an advance catalogue of the picture.

But that is not all that we offer to do. This department is very glad to give any exhibitor any where additional and personal details about the exploitation of any picture that he desires. This will come direct to the exhibitor by mail on his requesting it. Especially do we want to put the brains and the resources of this Bureau at the command of the smaller exhibitors—the men who cannot afford to employ others to do this work for them.

ONE of the most important phases of this work is in recording here what others have done with pictures—in setting new achievements. We are devoting pages to this each week, and we want to have more of these accounts from more exhibitors.

Especially do we want to hear from the smaller cities and to be able to print here representative experiences of all classes of exhibitors with productions. It is not only for your benefit, but your duty to aid others with the recital of the things that you have done.

SERVICE does not consist in mere promises, easy chair theories, or in praise of things done in the past. It consists in being up to the minute, in the fullest co-operation, in doing for each other.

Help us to help you and the other exhibitors the more.

Your Idea and Ours

HERE is a case where an added column of white space on the sides makes what would have been an ordinary advertisement an excellent one. And it is one of the best arguments why the theatre should use ample space if it wants to get the most out of advertising.

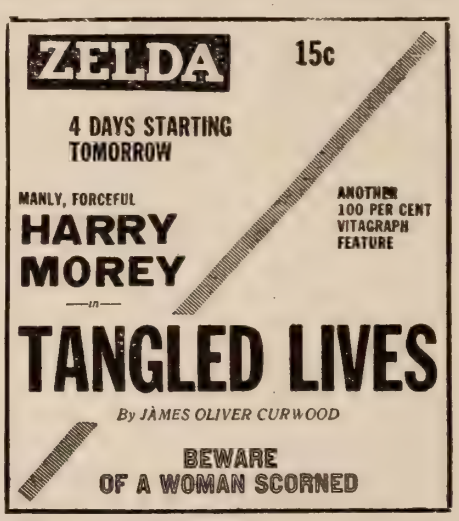
We have already told you that the newspapers of Louisville, Ky., give two rates for motion picture advertising, the amusement rate which carries with it the reading notices and illustrations, and the commercial rate where the theatre pays for the space that it uses and gets nothing additional. This display, nine and one-quarter inches across four columns, was inserted at the commercial rate, which meant that the advertiser had to put his whole selling argument into that space, and it has been done so well that no reading notice is needed.

Another display in the dramatic advertising carries the same cut of the girl drinking a cocktail, but there is no explanation of what the illustration means and therefore the advertising is not good.

No use to have energy unless the public can see the meter that records it.

LOCALIZING the punch is quite an important element in advertising motion pictures because you are always sure that the public is going to "get" it.

Here is an excellent case of accomplishing that and it comes from the Grand theatre, Cincinnati. It is a specially drawn display, five inches, three columns, and the proof reproduced was made before the mortise at the bottom was filled in with the additional matter. Now the space used was not large, but the display was so balanced that everything worth while was gotten in and without producing a crowded event.



Now, of course, the greatest news of the day was the successful fighting of our boys in France, and this was one of the important things to link up with the pictures. Another important local event was the visit of the British aviation squadron to Cincinnati during the week. Note how the writer has brought both of those points into action. It's what we consider mighty good advertising.

Mighty good thing to have an honorable past, but we'd worry more about having a successful today and a glorious tomorrow.

THERE is one thing that may be said about this display and that is everything in it stands out. And, of course, that is one of the main things to accomplish in advertising. The Ben Day line across the center is something on the freakish order, but it accomplished its purpose excellently and anything freakish may be excused on that score.

As far as the display goes, therefore, we think that it is good advertising, but an essential point has been left out, and that is the selling talk on the picture. The "Beware of a woman scorned" line is so frayed from use as to be meaningless. If the writer had devoted a couple of paragraphs in smaller type to telling what this picture was about he would have done well. He has a good point in the "hundred per cent" matter, and with Harry Morey, but he should have gone further and have given the public the reason why it ought to see the production. In other words the designer of this display got the eyes of his readers, but after he had done that he failed to tell them what they wanted to know. The display is five inches double column.

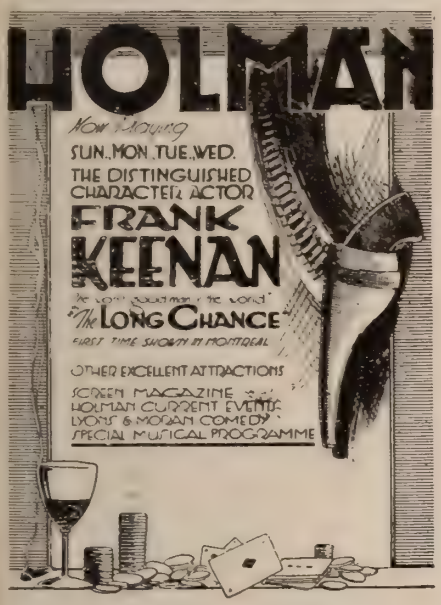
THIS advertisement, by W. S. McLaren of the Colonial theatre, Jackson, Mich., is pure breeze and a mighty good one for the summer season—and as simple as it could be. He uses a cut of the star in a bathing suit and then addresses himself to the public in her name. There isn't a thing told about the picture, and in this case there is none needed, for it is simply a case of arousing the curiosity so that the public will want to know why Mabel dons the bloomers.



You will immediately get from this display that the picture is something that is going to please you especially by appealing to your funny side. It puts that over with more wallop than if volumes of reading matter had been employed. And this display simply goes to prove that there is nothing to set rules in advertising, and that the essential thing is to get into the spirit of a production and transmit it along to the public. The display in ten inches, three columns.

You who pass over these service pages, need not wonder why people pass by your theatre.

LAST week we commented on the use of a sketch of a drunken man in advertising and we repeat the warning to keep distasteful things like that and murder out of your displays. There isn't the slightest doubt in our minds that such displays keep more people out of a theatre than they bring in unless it is a pretty rank sort of a community.

Now this two-column six-inch specially drawn display of the Holman theatre, Montreal, has that same failing. Now it would have been all right to have retained the cartridge belt and holster in the display, but the addition of the cards, the poker chips and the half-drained glass and the cigar stub immediately gives one the impression that this is not a picture for women and children to see. It is the sort of a display that gives the few remaining enemies of the motion picture a basis on which to work. Now had the holster been retained and had there been a sales talk this impression would have been avoided and the production made attractive to every one. As it is the whole meaning that it has is that of a sordid offering.

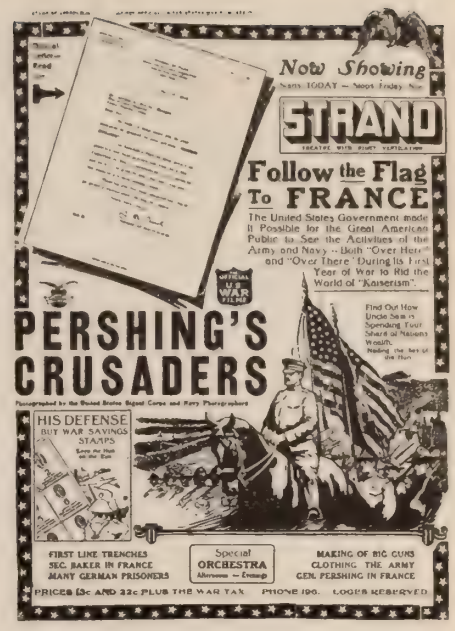
Do your moaning and sighing early—before you come to your theatre. The patrons will enjoy it a lot more.

THIS is a discussion of legs—but as they apply to motion picture advertising.

There isn't the slightest doubt that there is an appeal to the attractive human body, and that this can be put over without offense, providing attention is not called to the obvious. In other words "Don't rub it in."

Just to illustrate this we reproduce the advertisements of the Princess and the Palace theatres, Wichita, Kan., which are under the same management. It is another coincidence that the star in each of these pictures was one of the Talmadge girls. Now you get the appeal from both advertisements from the cuts and you expect some "pep" in the productions, but you don't need to have your attention called to it and there is where the writer made a misstep in the Constance Talmadge display with the two reasons for seeing her. Where the dash is used under the first reading, he might as well have gone ahead and sent it for the temptation that comes to the mind is apparent. If you want to get this real spirit in your advertising use the cuts all you want to, but don't then call attention to the point and then make it obvious.

The beaten path is easier, but it is well billboarded with old ideas.



FOR probably the first time in motion picture history a page advertisement in which the producers and the exhibitors have united in advertising a serial Vitagraph's "A Fight for Millions" is the chaptered story in question, and the display appeared in the Chicago Herald and Examiner. Nineteen theatres were represented in this tie-up including a number of the largest houses of the city.

Vitagraph, in the handling of its serials, has made one of its chief features a comprehensive plan book, containing voluminous press matter, advertising cuts, star cuts, stunt suggestions, etc. In its promotion ideas it urges exhibitors in large centers to combine their newspaper advertising in order to get a maximum display at minimum cost. The Chicago exhibitors followed this suggestion. The newspaper co-operated and not only gave them a very attractive display by using the ad cuts provided in the campaign book supplied by Vitagraph, but also included some clever pen and ink drawings by its own artists, which brought the high lights of the serial before the public in attractive fashion.

Courtesy is the yeast of the motion picture exhibitor; it brings up the dough.

WE have just returned from a vacation during which we get the news from a daily paper published in a city close by. One of the coming attractions at the largest theatre was "Pershing's Crusaders." The exhibitor in question believed that he had a picture of unusual appeal, for he did something out of the ordinary in advertising it in advance. But he confined his efforts largely to superlatives and so far as we noted he never used a cut. Now with some pictures cuts are not needed, but here is a picture where the pulling power depends largely on the way that it is linked up as "official." This cut of Gen. Pershing at the head of his army was used by S. Barret McCormick, of the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, and by others. It gets the official, genuine spirit into the picture, and Arthur G. Stolte, manager of the Strand, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, has gone still further with the idea by reproducing a letter from Mr. Beret. It's good advertising and convincing. There's not an adjective in it. Plain recital of what a picture contains is often the best selling argument—when you can deliver the goods.

NO MARKS

Keep Them Off Your Copy You Want Them Reproduced

RECENTLY we called attention to the fact that many of the specimens of advertising sent us for comment bore marks, evidently meant to call our attention to them, but that they prevented their reproduction here. Any sort of a mark except that of an ordinary lead pencil will reproduce and in the reduction that is necessary the result is often confusing.

We have had to discard ten specimens sent in during the past week for that reason. If there are ads from more than one theatre on the page, simply pin on your card and we'll get the right one.

Seeing Rialto and Rivoli with Rothapfel

ONCE more the motion picture shows the big, essential part that it is playing in fighting this war—not only in fighting it, but in seeing that it continues until the Hun thing is forever unable to raise its head to strike a peaceful people. Already there has been a fear expressed that the chief of them and his six uninjured sons may start a peace drive and that there may be some falsely led in this country who will ask for peace on the ground that "we should forgive our enemies." But there isn't going to be any kiss and make-up to it so long as the motion picture is able to put over the appeal as it wallops across at the Rivoli this week.

We have commented many times on the original methods that Mr. Rothapfel has given to the treatments of various issues of the Animated at these two houses, but this one is probably the most unique of all and as effective as any could be. It consists almost entirely of the Official War Review and the music, also, is most unusual in that there is only one war-time selection used, and then only the chorus of that. "The Trail of the Retreating Hun" is the main title of the showing the vast damage that the barbarians of the north have done in their retreats through France and Belgium. Now this is shown to crashing music, the "First" and "Fifth Symphonies" being used according to a special arrangement. Now there was a peculiar study of audiences supplied right here. First we had seen terrible instances of the destruction and then there came on the scene, walking through the ruins, some soldiers. Most people in the audience when we witnessed the presentation weren't sure whether these might not be Huns and there were only a few handclaps through the house, and then a few more when it appeared certain that they were Allies. But it is true that a great reason for this uncertainty is the music, for there were no patriotic bars brought in, as the people are accustomed to expect.

Now that effect is just the one sought after. For then we have views of the men at work immediately behind the battle line, clearing out the ruins, and some of these were evidently made so soon after the fighting had ceased that there come across the screen frequently groups of stretcher bearers with the wounded. There follows a very fine close-up of one of the Hun "traps" exploding near the advancing men and finally pictures of the ruined churches and of the hospital that was bombed by the Germans, also showing the huge Red Cross that they could not have failed to see. Now the terror of all of this is further brought home by showing the funeral of the English nurses and wounded who were killed in the raid. The audiences sit spellbound but stirred.

A moment later they are given an opportunity to break into applause with splendid shots of advance of the tanks in a large group, and finally a close-up of one charging down an embankment directly at the camera. Now, one who is familiar with the Animated weeklies would expect other war scenes or other pictures to follow, but as the orchestra turns into the chorus of "Over There" appears a cartoon showing Bill and his son being swept in a raft over the falls of oblivion, and then there appears the appealing lines, "Steel your hearts against the whines of peace from the Hun," etc. The audience certainly gets the punch as quickly as any has ever been put over, and there is a riot of enthusiasm on the part of those that a few moments before were witnessing pictures showing how the Hun fights, and why he wants peace of he can leave all this behind him and return to his unchastened country.

Now the whole of the bill at the Rivoli is essentially "happy," and this punch of the Animated stands out all the more on account of that fact. Although everyone goes away from the theatre delighted with life because of the pleasantness of everything, but the one thing and with laughter—but there is in every heart an unforgetable thing, a thing that all who visit the theatre during the week will remember when the pacifists begin to peddle their plaints.

"Dance of the Hours," from "La Gioconda," almost sets a record for applause for an overture, and then comes one of the prettiest of scenics that has ever been shown, "When Nature Smiles," a Post-Pathe made by Van Scoy. As was the case last week, the titles are all taken from well known poems, including a fishing scene with Isaac Walton verse. There is unusual lighting effect for this scenic, especially during the first half, when all are tinted in blue. The center dome is in blue and the inner proscenium arch in red, with the side panels in green. The red lights die out as the blue tints leave the picture. There are some striking shots of the pines at night, of the lake and of mountain streams. "Whispering Flowers" is the opening musical selection and it follows through "At the Brook" and "Woodland Whispers."

There is a striking setting for Helena Morrill's rendition of the title song from Victor Herbert's "Sweethearts." As the curtains part the girl is revealed seated on a rustic bench with a huge half circular opening showing the blue sky and stars, and immediately behind her is a large moon, this being the only lighting of the stage. Her figure is silhouetted here and she remains seated until the curtains close again.

Then comes the Animated, of which we have already told you, and then Greek Evans sings "Laddie in Khaki." The whole house is bathed in blue and the only decorations of the stage are the red inner curtains and an evergreen on either side of the stage. As the last notes of this die away, and with the tune still being played by the orchestra, the title of the feature picture comes on the screen.

Lila Lee makes her debut as a screen star this week and we agree with Mr. Rothapfel that, judging from her first picture, she is going to be a success, for she has one of the most distinctly pleasing personalities that we have seen, and the girlish charm to a great degree. The story is frankly impossible, but it is delightful, humorous and always interesting, while Raymond Hatton again contributes greatly to the delight. And the musical setting has no little share in the enjoyment of the audiences. "Sunbonnet Sue" is the theme and this is introduced, with chorus only, when she takes in her hand the cup that had held her savings, followed by "Who Is Who?" and then the theme again. "On a Summer Night" is used for the introduction of the hero, and as he appears on "The Make Believe" and salutes her we have the theme played once through, followed by "Pierrot" and "I Lost My Heart." "First Love" is played during the scene at the table d'hote restaurant with the theme again as the girl returns to her home. This next comes back when she is having the time of her life at the hero's country estate, and then we have a clever touch with the use of "Hot Time," while the father and his guests dining, played very softly during the time that the girl is present.

The organ then carries the music until the scene where the lovers are shown together at sunset, and then we have the theme, followed by "Dream Kisses" on the arrival of the Crane family, then with "Song d'Ete," "Volga," and finally at the end the theme, played slowly with one

THE BIG IDEA

Making Them Know that You Have a Good Show, No Matter What It Is

SUNDAY we overslept and we were so late getting into the subway that we failed to get a morning paper to read on the way down. So we found ourselves listening to what others said.

"Where are you going?" asked one man to another.

"Rialto."

"What's the show there?"

"I don't know," after a little hesitation.

"Then why are you going?" came back

"To enjoy myself. There is always a good show there."

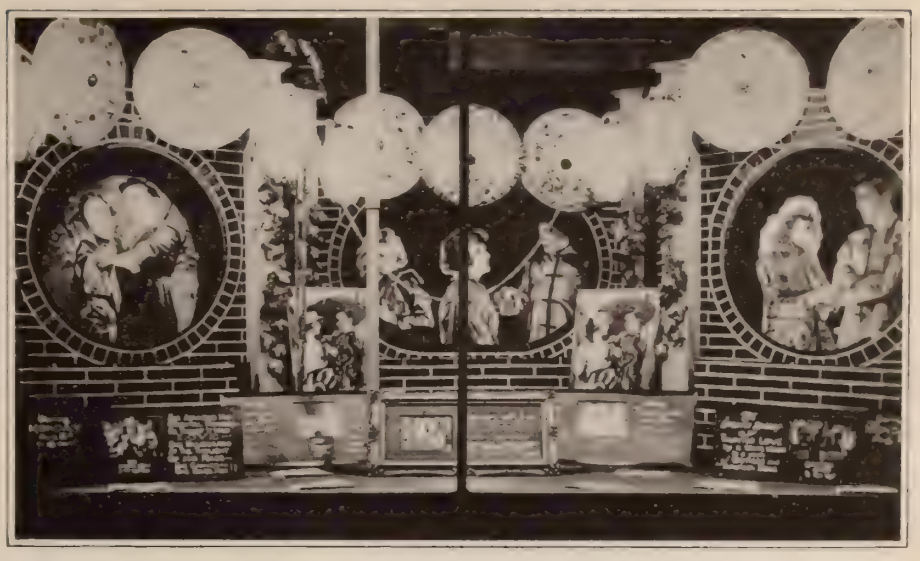
And Mr. Rothapfel's publicity department couldn't have written as good an advertisement. It's because the big thing always in view at the Rothapfel theatres is in making the theatre the thing.

What does that mean to your house?

Rialto and Rivoli

verse and two choruses. It adds much to the reception that the picture is given.

The sunny atmosphere is retained when the orchestra plays selections from "Miss Springtime," and after that Rothapfel heaps up our fest of joy by giving us another one of those unsurpassable two-reel "features," O. Henry-General film. This one is "A Bird of Bagdad," and it is full of comedy with the delightful human interest, commonplace touches that get close home. An oriental selection is used for the opening and then "Sidewalks of New York," changing to "Good Morning, Zip," as we are taken to the bookkeeper's office. "Lure of the Night" is used for the introduction of the girl and then the chorus of the theme, "Magic of Your Eyes," as she runs back to her sweetheart. Then we have "Free and Easy" and "Syncopated Tune," without introduction, and then "Rooster," played twice through with the hero's search for the answer to the riddle. The theme is brought in as the girl is seen on the bridge in the park, then "Love Flies Everywhere" and "Keep Your Eye," the chorus played twice, is used for the solution of the riddle, with the chorus of the theme played slowly at the end. You ought to hear the applause that this picture gets.



And every one goes from the theatre feeling a better human being, feeling happy with life, but bearing close in the heart the passion that the Hun thing must be wrecked before all is well in the world again.

There's a whole lot more pleasure in going to the Rialto this week, for Dr. Riesenfeld is back from his vacation and it means a lot to have Hugo leading the splendid orchestra again, for he is in a class by himself. "Francesca da Rimini" is the overture and this is played with the dome red, lined with blue, while the inside of the proscenium is in red with the orchestra in gold.

Then comes one of the Mexico pictures, released by Educational Films, showing the historic and architectural sides, including the Pyramid of the Sun and other relics of the Aztecs. This picture is a little marred by the bunch of sightseers going through the scenes. One of these men thinks he is hilariously funny and gives evidence of the fact several times, but the pictures are so interesting that one forgets this, especially with the delightful music. With horns and a crash of cymbals "Il Guarany" overture is played, then "Moorish Serenade," "Moriana," with a portion of it repeated, and finally "Jota Navarra."

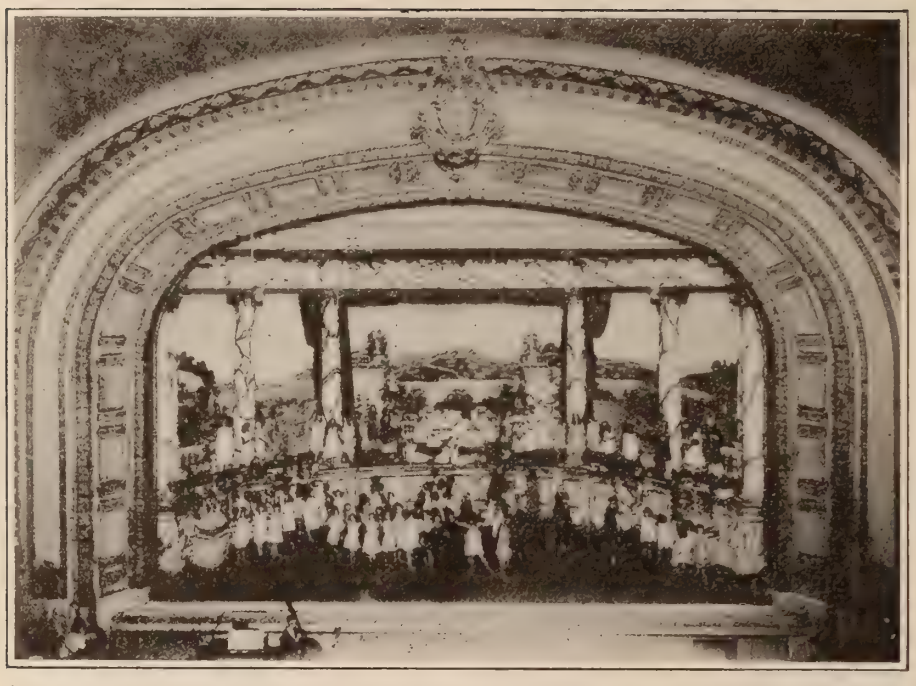
Screen Telegram opens the Animated with pictures of sailors in training, for which "'Jack Tar" is used, and then comes from the same source views of Colonel Roosevelt speaking at a town celebration, and here "Hail to the Chief" is used. Gaumont pictures the million dollar blaze at Revere Beach with a fire agitato used, and under the same brand are pictures of the launching of the "Miss Detroit III" with "Electric Galop."

Window display of Central Park theatre, Chicago, on "City of Dim Faces"

Now we get into the real war portion of the Animated, with all of its punches. Screen Telegraph shows pictures of the captured Hun guns brought here for the Liberty Loan campaign, and the music is first "Semper Fidelis" up to the point where the gun bearing the name of its captors is shown, then the tune swings into "Marine Hymn," with full orchestra effect—and it is needed to drown the great applause. "Entrance of the Guards" is played for the New York policemen at the reserve benefit, this bringing in views of a visit by forty war planes, and here the music changes to "Air Queen," and continues through Screen Telegram pictures of flying in the "sausage balloons" at Omaha.

Hearst-Pathe's "With the Stars and Stripes in France" starts out with the Americans and the French joining in a tribute for the Lufbery funeral and here the organ takes the impressive music, with the muffled drums and the sounding of "taps" on the bugles. Following this are pictures of Lufbery before he met his end and during this shot the orchestra remains silent, coming back with the decoration of American aviators when "Sambre et Meuse" counterpointed with a few bars of "Marseillaise" opens, and this continues through pictures of General Humbert, who captured Noyon. The final tribute is paid to the troops of Belgium, and here the music turned to "La Brabacombe," and at the title "His Last Reward" from the back of the stage Desere La Salle is heard singing it, and again the music changes with the silhouette views of the marching Belgian troops, which Pathe has used a number of times now, and the thrilling music of "The Watch on the Yser," leaving the audience full of enthusiasm at the end.



After Desere La Salle, baritone, sings the aria from Massenet's "King of Lahore" we have the feature. This picture was mighty, mighty frothy and gets by in hot weather largely due to the setting that it is given. "Flames and Fancies" is the opening number, followed by a barcarolle, and then "Bluebird," "Shadowland" fox-trot, the introduction from "Balkan Queen." From thence on we have a line of essentially energetic tunes, including serenades, popular numbers and action music that results in a lot of increased laughs from the film.

Selections from "Very Good Eddie," played by the orchestra, with all the lights in gold, follows, and then comes the comedy, "Mutt and Jeff at the Front." While Jeff is disguised as a pig and goes to lure the Huns back so that Mutt may shoot them, the latter goes to sleep and Jeff is captured, but he awakes from the respite just in time to bring in a bunch of prisoners. The music opens with "Hunting the Hun," followed by "Bugle Call Rag," "The Bee," for the stinging scene, and "The Kaiser Does the Goose Step."

Almost as successfully as does the bill at the Rivoli, the Rialto offering seeks to get the most possible amusement out of the week's offering. As a matter of fact those of you who have been watching the programs of these two houses of late have noted that pleasantness is one of the chief things sought.

Most of the producers are now trying to get away from anything of the morbid sort in their offerings, for they realize the great influence of the war on the public taste. But be the feature what it may, a great deal can be done in giving the tone to the bill by the matter with which you surround it.

More and more, in our opinion, the theatre managers are going to have to supply this sort of entertainment. It doesn't mean that the public shuns war pictures, for it doesn't, and it doesn't mean that your audiences are unwilling to help with propaganda if you put it over without the obvious and in good taste. But it does mean that the jarring notes have to be taken out of the presentation and a smoothness substituted that will have the effect of leaving every one "pleased."

Stage of the Chateau theatre, Chicago, during one of the children's dance pageants which are now being given regularly and which have scored a great success

Dance Pageants Prove Splendid Success at Chicago Neighborhood Picture Theatre

RECENTLY one of the most successful of the big theatre managers of the country and a man who is building now a magnificent new house, told members of the staff of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS that he believed that every really big theatre in the cities would find it good business to develop the side lines, or the settings of the picture, just as S. L. Rothapfel has been the pioneer in doing at the Rialto and Rivoli theatres.

That there are many developments yet to be made is apparent and one interesting one now comes from Ascher's Chateau theatre, Chicago, where the manager, Harry F. Beaumont, is accomplishing great things through the co-operation that is being afforded him by Mrs. Jean Van Vlissingen and her Dance Pageant club. While this is being carried out on an elaborate scale at the Chicago theatre there is no reason why a modified adoption of it could not be found valuable to many theatres all over the country.

Mr. Beaumont has heretofore opposed special children's programs of music and films because it has been his experience that they aroused little interest among the children and practically none among the parents. Now when Mr. Beaumont first discussed the question at her studios in The Lessing, Mrs. Van Vlissingen says that she doesn't believe that he had any idea that this work would get into his heart. But further conferences established the interest and the result was that the first pageant of dances was given at the Chateau, which is located at Broadway and Grace street, on July 20th, and from the first it has grown in favor until they are now regular Saturday features of the theatre, when the pageants are given between the two regular shows. More than 200 children from all parts of the city of Chicago are now taking part.

Here are some of the ideas of Mrs. Van Vlissingen, who is giving her services because of her interest in developing the children: "My children gave the first pageant of dances on Saturday, July 20th. The following Saturday as many of the neighborhood children as could be used were incorporated in the pageant. As the children grow and develop in the work they will be used in a fairy story pageant. After further work they will be taken into the park and a motion picture will be made of them, to be shown at all the theatres.

"In this way we hope to teach the children a new interest—a new love for all beautiful things. As a child becomes interested in the meaning of how they move, why they move, what the result of motion is, and feel the joy of success in their efforts, the child's education will be an easy process. Give the little ones something to be a part of, and they are alive to their finger-tips. Their minds are wonderfully fertile ground in which to plant the seeds of beauty of thought and a big love for rhythm. Music, color, form—the story—must get into the imagination. I allow the child all the freedom of expression it will take; then mould it to the desire of truth in Art. These beautiful young people are an ever repeating happiness to work with. I hope to reach the older young set through this work—and get them interested in everything we are doing in self-expression.

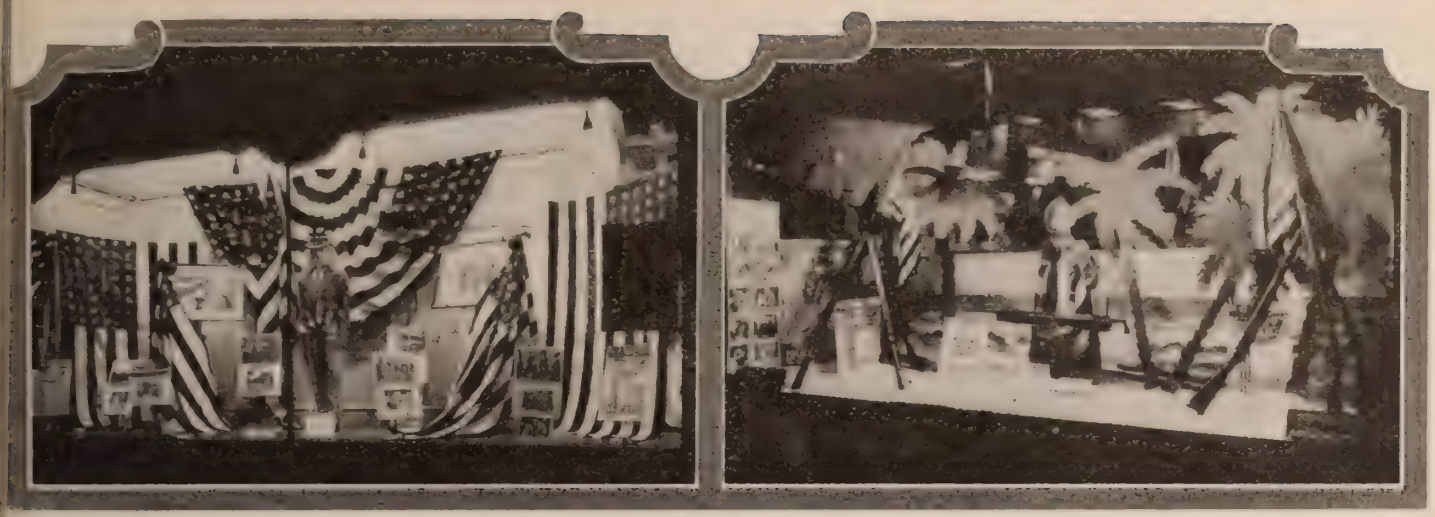
"I hope to get these young people into being 'fit' in every way—every girl should be physically perfect. I hope this work will find its place in every theatre in the country. The conservation of health in our youth is a great preparedness plan. This training, besides being a great enjoyment for all concerned, will build up the physical endurance of any one—man, woman or child. I wonder if the American mother has ever stopped to think of the suffering her children endure in being left behind in the race of life. No human being can afford to not go into training for perfecting the body for self-expression. The resentment—humiliation—that a child is allowed to suffer in stumbling along untrained in every muscle of its body—is never known outside of that child's mind."

The methods used by this teacher are very simple. She doesn't believe in the "Don't" method of instruction, but in encouraging the little ones to think of beautiful things, things that are constructive, and to make them part of themselves. In taking up a story to be put into a dance she tells the children the story and then they listen to the music. Then she selects individual children to help her interpret it and fills in the smaller parts.

These pageants have already attracted a great deal of attention in Chicago and both Mrs. Von Vlissingen and Mr. Beaumont are sure that they are only at their beginning. The teacher is now giving the members three lessons a week and after school has been resumed there will probably be only one pageant a month, but these will be on a bigger scale than anything that has been attempted.

A result so far as the theatre is concerned is that the Saturday receipts of the Chateau have been quadrupled and that great interest has been aroused among the children and their parents. The dances are the rage in the neighborhood and there is competition from all parts of the city for places in the pageant.

Mr. Beaumont believes very strongly that this will be a great idea for the smaller city managers who can generally secure the services of a local dancing teacher who would welcome the chance for the publicity. Probably the dances could not be given at such short intervals, but they would be all the greater events in the community life for that reason. Their application to neighborhood theatres in the larger cities is very apparent, and the idea is likely to spread rapidly.



The dance is simply another of the things that can be develped along with the motion picture.

Community Singing Scores Hit in New Jersey

Manager D. J. Shepherd, of the Palace theatre, Orange, N. J., has just launched a program of community singing that is making a great hit at that theatre. On certain evenings the words of popular songs are thrown on the screen and the singing is under the direction of a local chorus director. Such selections as "There's a Long, Long Trail," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," "Over There," "Pack Up Your Troubles" and "The Star Spangled Banner" have been used.

Children's performances which have been conducted so successfully during the fall and winter months for the past three years will be resumed on September 14.

The fellow who says that advertising doesn't pay is in the same class with those who cried "They can't lick Germany." Both are traitors to their own interests.

Window displays of two of the leading stores in Seattle for "My Own United States" during showing at Majestic theatre

Former Exchange Manager Makes Fine Record in Exploiting Portland Theatre

ALTHOUGH W. W. ("Stunt") Kofeldt, former Northwest Pathe Exchange manager, was an exhibitor for but a few weeks, he bolstered up his reputation as a stunt man by staging a series of surprises that have had a most healthful effect upon the box office of the Majestic theatre, Portland, Ore., and are making J. J. Parker's photoplayhouse very much talked about in the Rose City.

Perhaps his biggest feat was the putting over "My Own United States." Not that the successful exhibition of this patriotic production is in itself a feat, but Kofeldt linked his theatre up with the Multnomah Guard, played the picture on a fifty-fifty basis of net profits, had more than 14,000 tickets, at 25 cents each, sold before the picture was publicly shown, and played to 25,000 people during the seven days' engagement.

Fifteen striking window displays greeted the public at prominent corners of the downtown district, ticket selling booths were installed at two of the largest department stores, men in uniform placed 1,000 window cards about town, 150 street cars bore 24 x 24 cards, department store delivery wagons and the automobiles of 200 members of the Guard sported banners, a bannered street car travelled business and residence section daily with drum and bugle corps, band concerts from a 100-piece squad were nightly features from 8 to 8:30 o'clock outside the theatre, and the showing was opened on Saturday with a parade participated in by 1,200 men in uniform. Traffic was ordered stopped by the mayor for the paraders and the city's chief executive and county commissioners headed the parade, and then stopped in front of the theatre to review the troops and deliver speeches calling upon citizens to aid the Guard by patronizing the patriotic picture.

Only the normal amount of newspaper advertising, which in Portland is always large, was carried for the show, with but twenty-four 8-sheets, thirty 4-sheets and seven 24-sheets, but receipts climbed far above the average good showing of the successful Majestic.

W. W. Kofeldt

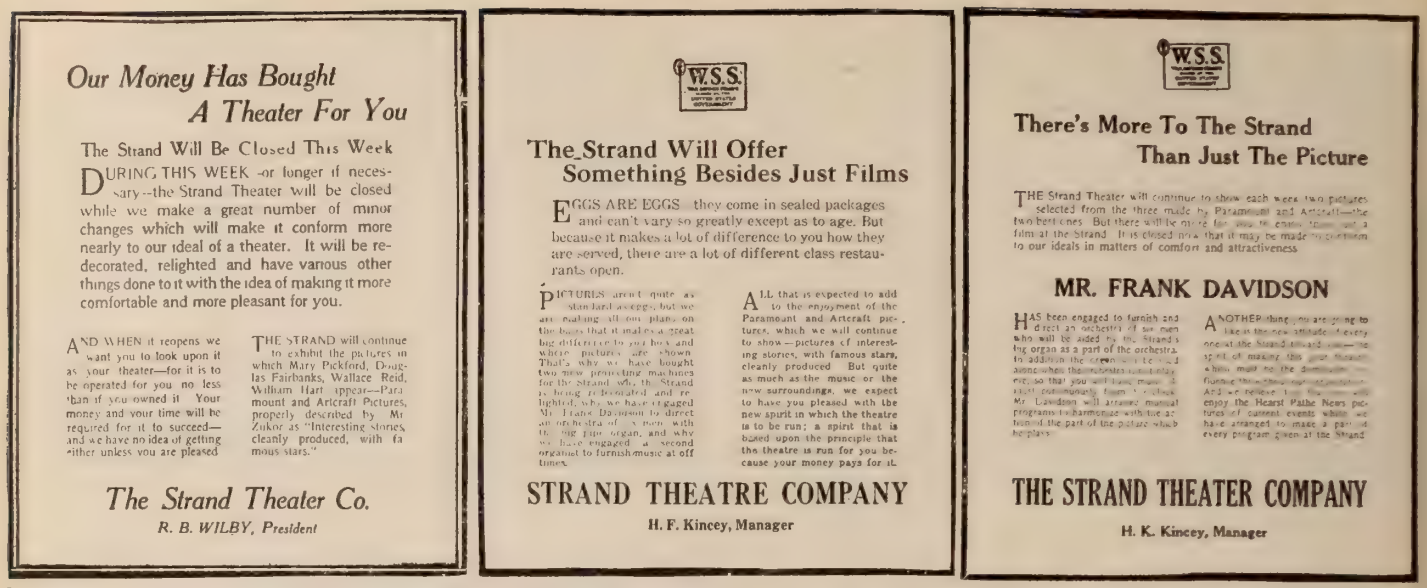
Another stunt that attracted much attention was the engagement of the Foundation Shipyards Quartet for a one-week singing of popular songs. The boys appeared in working clothes, and this, together with their choice of song numbers, caused the innovation to go over big. The Foundation Company employs nearly 7,000 men in Portland and nearly 60 per cent of them visited the Majestic to hear their warblers in action. Incidentally, in a city where the total shipyards workers are estimated at 40,000, such a stunt was certain to strike the popular fancy.

"Stunt" Kofeldt seized upon the annual Bathing Girl's Parade, at Columbia Beach, to grab off some more publicity for the Majestic. He designed a nifty costume involving the Colors, placed shapely Dottie Probst in the outfit under the entry title, "Liberty," and copped off first prize in a field of forty entrants.

On July 14, French Independence Day, Kofeldt again proved himself a live wire by having soldiers in uniform on hand to pin the French colors on his patrons. It was a pleasant and much-talked-of surprise to his patrons.

FOR UNCLE SAM

Kofeldt Quits Theatre to Join Merchant Marine Service



BARELY had the account of the success of W. W. Kofeldt as manager of the Majestic theatre, Seattle, been written than came an announcement that he had left that post to join the United States merchant marine service for the duration of the war.

Mr. Kofeldt started life in the hotel business and so now he is chief steward on the U. S. S. Dumaru. A rather peculiar thing about it is that at the same time L. A. Samuelson, who was associated with Mr. Kofeldt during the time that the latter was a Pathe exchange manager, is also on the same boat, in the capacity of an oiler.

Tombstone Is Erected in Cleveland Lobby

Graves for the Hun ruler are getting to be numerous through the country. The latest one was used by the Mall theatre, Cleveland, O., in conection with the showing of "To Hell with the Kaiser." There was a tombstone decorated with a skull and crossbones in the lobby and the whole thing fenced off with white plank.

Manager Tom Carroll reports that he has never played a picture that bronght greater enthusiasm from the audiences. "It's a mob picture," says Mr. Carroll. "All of the situations are played up so that they will excite the crowds. Its appeal is elemental and the result is a contagious expression of enthusiasm.

Our Money Has Bought A Theater For You

The Strand Will Be Closed This Week

DURING THIS WEEK -or longer if necessary--the Strand Theater will be closed while we make a great number of minor changes which will make it conform more nearly to our ideal of a theater. It will be redecorated, relighted and have various other things done to it with the idea of making it more comfortable and more pleasant for you.

AND WHEN it reopens we want you to look upon it as your theater—for it is to be operated for you no less than if you owned it. Your money and your time will be required for it to succeed—and we have no idea of getting either unless you are pleased.

THE STRAND will continue to exhibit the pictures in which Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Wallace Reid, William Hart appear—Paramount and Artcraft Pictures, properly described by Mr. Zukor as "Interesting stories cleanly produced, with famous stars."

The Strand Will Offer Something Besides Just Films

EGGS ARE EGGS—they come in sealed packages and can't vary so greatly except as to age. But because it makes a lot of difference to you how they are served, there are a lot of different class restaurants open.

PICTURES aren't quite as standard as eggs, but we are making all our plans on the basis that it makes a great big difference to you how and where pictures are shown. That's why we have bought two new projecting machines for the Strand, why the Strand is being redecorated and relighted, why we have engaged Mr. Frank Davidson to direct an orchestra of six men with the big pipe organ, and why we have engaged a second organist to furnish music at off times.

ALL that is expected to add to the enjoyment of the Paramount and Artcraft pictures, which we will continue to show—pictures of interesting stories, with famous stars, cleanly produced. But quite as much as the music or the new surroundings, we expect to have you pleased with the new spirit in which the theatre is to be run; a spirit that is based upon the principle that the theatre is run for you because your money pays for it.

STRAND THEATRE COMPANY

There's More To The Strand Than Just The Picture

THE Strand Theater will continue to show each week two pictures selected from the three made by Paramount and Artcraft—the two best ones. But there will be more than just a film at the Strand. It is closed now that it may be made conform to our ideals in matters of comfort and attractiveness.

MR. FRANK DAVIDSON

HAS been engaged to furnish and direct an orchestra of six men who will be added to the Strand's big organ as a part of the orchestra. In addition the organist is to lead audiences when the pictures call only for so that you will have music at each performance from 1 o'clock. Mr. Davidson will arrange musical programs to harmonize with the action of the picture which he plays.

ANOTHER thing you are going to like is the new attitude of every one at the Strand toward you—the spirit of making this your theater, who must be the dominating influence there. You are to enjoy the Hearst Pathe News pictures of current events which we have arranged to make a part of every program given at the Strand.

THE STRAND THEATER COMPANY
H. K. Kincey, Manager

Here are the three first advertisements used by the Strand theatre, Birmingham, Ala., telling of the change of management of the house, with the intimate talks on the future policies of the theatre

Intimate Newspaper Appeals to the Public Bring Regeneration of Birmingham Theatre

ONE of the cleverest and most successful advertising campaigns that has been recorded has just been completed by R. B. Wilby, president, and H. F. Kincey, manager of the Strand Amusement Company, Birmingham, making the taking over of the management of the Strand theatre in the Alabama city in addition to the other motion picture interests.

A series of advertisements, usually three columns by seven inches with some slightly larger, were used in the Birmingham papers for talks about the theatre. The whole atmosphere of this advertising was to establish in the public mind that everything about the theatre was to be changed and that a higher grade of amusement supplied. But very properly Messrs. Wilby and Kincey did not allow them to be led away from the intimate style of talking to the public. Here is a case where any attempt to have been too dignified would have weakened the appeal.

First of these displays was headed "Our Money Has Bought a Theatre For You," and then it went ahead to tell of the change in management and the fact that the house would be closed for a week so as to bring the house up to the scale that the new owners sought to reach in catering to the people of Birmingham. The second one carried the caption "The Strand Will Offer Something Beside Just Films," and then it went ahead to tell about the engagement of Frank Davidson to lead the orchestra of six. A third display was devoted to Mr. Davidson.

A fourth display referred to the new prices that would prevail at the house, but this was put a different way from merely lowering the admission and offering "more for the money." And here is the way that it was phrased: "It will be necessary that 1,142 more people come at these prices for our kind of a show than was the case before and at former prices. We believe that Birmingham wants and will patronize our kind of performance in numbers great enough to justify the reduction." The opening of the theatre was delayed a day and another advertisement appeared, but the striking thing about this one was the way that it appealed to the public confidence. Referring to the bill for the opening day the theatre said: "Maybe Fairbanks—Maybe not," and then it told about the picture that was booked but added that the Atlanta exchange has reported that the film was not in hand and that it might be necessary to substitute another picture. As it turned out it was necessary, but that didn't interfere with the success of the opening in the slightest. But the advance frankness was the reason therefore.

The Strand Has Opened

And Our Success Depends Solely On Your Pleasure

The Strand Theatre has been purchased by us for only one purpose—to make a profit on the operation of it during the next eight years. But in order to do this over such a period of time it must please you. That must, in fact, precede our profit or there will be no profit.

THE STRAND

is operated primarily for your pleasure. Anything you enjoy has its place as a part of the Strand's program. Nothing that mars the pleasure of your visit there should belong to it. And so we ask of you in all earnestness to complain to the doorman or to the manager of anything you do not like. He will not growl back at you, nor argue with you. He will be grateful to you for having called his attention to it—and if he can do it he will correct the matter then.

Maybe you don't believe theatres are run like that. Try it some time, you'll find that we are serious in our desire to make this a theatre

W.S.S. W.S.S.

This display appeared on the day of the opening of the Strand and on the following day another told of the crowds

On the day of the opening there appeared a display headed "The Strand Has Opened" and then it went on to say:

"The Strand theatre has been purchased by us for only one purpose—to make a profit on the operation of it during the next eight years. But in order to do this over such a period of time it must please you. That must, in fact, precede our profit or there will be no profit.

"Maybe you don't believe theatres are run like that. Try it some time, you'll find that we are serious in our desire to make this a theatre."

On the following day there appeared a "proof" advertisement. It told that the belief of the management that Birmingham wanted such a theatre had been justified and referred to the fact that 2,762 people came to the theatre and went away pleased, and it added:

"They liked the fact that we seemed glad they came—they can never know just how glad we were!—that there was some one to see that they got seats as near where they wished as the crowds would permit, that the theatre in its new dress was attractive and comfortable, that there was real music with the film, and we believe you'll like these things too."

No, this is not a big city idea. It is a plan and at the same time a spirit that can be applied to any theatre. We hear every day that "such and such a theatre can never be made to pay because it has such a bad name." The answer to that is to take the public into your confidence, to tell the people what you are going to do, to be frank and intimate and honest. This sort of advertising will prove a panacea for many a failure of the past.

If electricity did all of their work, some people would not have energy enough to punch the button.

Two of the special scenes in the anniversary setting at the Circle, I ndianapolis. The scene at the left represents the vaudeville theatre, and at the right the Circle brings every element to the screen

McCormick Pays Tribute to Whole Stage in Celebrating Anniversary of the Circle

By Davis Hampton

WITH the house bathed in a soft blue glow and muffled chimes echoing from the organ loft as though to call Thespius' devotees to his shrine the curtain of the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, rose on the second anniversary celebration performance to disclose the huge stage, graced with a setting of mammoth proportions and classic beauty. In the center, four huge square columns of stone seemed to pierce the sky as they reared their lofty heights into the flies and towered out of sight. Between them on a mammoth curtain rod rich draperies in lavender hung in graceful folds, while at the base of the temple shrine stood a massive stone seat, filling half the stage. In a semicircle from arch to arch a low stone wall extended around the setting. Against the deep blue of the great cyclorama the giant columns and walls, mellowed by the soft blue lights, appeared like a dreamer's image of a shrine of art, and such was it intended, and named "The Temple of Amusement."

Before the draperies, robed in purple and with a cowl over his head, stood the high priest and satirist of the "Temple of Amusement." With dignified tread he advanced to the footlights, and with hands extended spoke:

"From Nowhere I come, the prologue to
to this play,
To speak me lines—and move away.
'Tis true that all the worlds a stage,
And all the men and women players,
So needs be someone speak these lines,
So friends, Behold 'The Drama.'"

With orchestral accompaniment of selections from the opera the draperies parted and the audience beheld a picturesque scene and tableau of "Romeo and Juliet," and on the drop was painted the words, "English's, The Drama." For be it known that English's is one of the important dramatic theatres of Indianapolis and S. Barret McCormick, managing director of the Circle, chose his anniversary week not only for the aggrandizement of the photoplay but for the glorification of all the branches of the theatre.

The draperies closed, and Prologue stepping again to the footlights, paused in thought, then with diabolical cunning said:

"Wives', Wives', oft upon a stormy night you've wondered why lodges meet so frequently —and sick friends never flounder.
Hist', Old Prologue will tell a tale of terrible deception,
'tis not the lodge nor illness, wives
—but the Burlesque of a nation."

and with music of the Jazz vintage the draperies parted to disclose a typical scene from burlesque, with its colorful scenery, and girls in the most approved of front row costumes, and the drop bore the magic legend, "Majestic, Burlesque," so that any uninformed male in the audience who liked the sample could find the source of supply.

Vaudeville was the next, and Keith's theatre received its share of applause and appreciation after Prologue had had his say, which ran thus:

"Realm of the dog and pony show
and the 'Allar' acrobat,
—the song and dance, oh, not by chance,
the monologist.
Home and shrine of the old Ford joke
and Eva Tanguay's haven
—they'll never go—they're with us still,
'Amber Spot in One'—in Vaudeville."

At the Murat theatre, another legitimate house, the Winter Garden Show, "Doing Our Bit," was the attraction and Prologue's comments, no doubt, aided the advance sale:

"Now friends, remember the annual event,
a thing of no small moment,
with its old runway—and its girl at play,
—and Jim Corbett, he's a wonder.
A sight for the eyes, is the Bridge of THIGHS,
where Mr. T. B. M. must meander.
—need I mention names? Why, 'The Winter Garden.'"

The tableau and setting for this was a rich oriental stage picture with beautifully gowned show girls and the kind of "broilers" the press agent likes to write about.

Then came the climax to the magni-

ANNIVERSARIES

They Mean a Lot When They Mark Milestones of New Successes

IN this issue appear accounts of the observation of the anniversaries of two of the most successful theatres in the country, the second of the Circle in Indianapolis and the fourth of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo.

They mean a great deal more than mere accounts of how the celebration was put on. They mean that these two big theatres have been growing with each week of their existence—that they have been doing more and more to raise the standard of the silent drama, with its embellishments of music and art.

What does your anniversary mean to you? Does it mean new accomplishments, a higher standard for the past twelve months? If it doesn't you should resolve that it will mean a new inspiration for the future.

You don't have to have a million-dollar theatre to entertain ambition.

How burlesque, the legitimate stage and musical comedy were represented in the Circle anniversary spectacle

Getting the Punch Into Smaller Space Advertising Problem of Many Theatres

vertising that may be used during the week and which has the recommendation of being available for use over and over again. Two-inch, single column advertisements were prepared for the stars that are regularly played at the theatre and each one of these carried as large a head of the player as could be used, the name and then the title of the picture. This title could be routed out when the same player came along in a new production and so the cost of engraving would be reduced.

Naturally the criticism against this form of advertising is that the same advertisement with the same face of Chaplin, for instance, used every day in the week would come not to have a much greater appeal than the mere card system. But the hint that this method supplies is that the theatre which will equip itself for exploitation is going to have a big advantage in saving money for newspaper space. At first blush it would look rather foolish to suggest to an exhibitor that he should have several hundred dollars' worth of engraving done and then put the cuts away for future use. But that is not at all necessary. There is no reason why he could not have the small cut of the player that he is using today made, a slightly different one of the same player for tomorrow, etc. That would increase his expense on that particular picture, but practically every one of these would be available for use again.

Equipment and a system of filing where your material will be always available seems to us the chief suggestion for improving small size advertising in the larger cities. And though these references have been made to cities where pictures are playing week runs, the same suggestion could be applied, relatively, to the smaller cities and to the daily change houses.

A year or so ago there were mighty few theatres that were paying much attention to featuring the name of the house. Few were using name plates or anything distinctive. They allowed the newspaper to set the name of the theatre in any old type that came to hand and in many cases sacrificed the house appeal entirely to the picture or to some trade mark. There has been a wonderful improvement in this, and in some cases houses have gone to the opposite extreme and have made the name of the house the whole thing in their during-the-week advertising.

Now we have reproduced advertising of three of the Cleveland, O., neighborhood theatres here with the name of the theatre featured. These are neighborhood houses and we believe in that plan as applied to the daily change neighborhood theatre, because the first thing that the reader is looking for is the name of the theatre—the first thing that he wants to know is what picture is showing at a specific house. If he is satisfied he will go; if not he will look further until he finds a picture that he wants to see.

But the larger Cleveland theatres pursue the same policy. They use a larger space, but with the name of the house similarly brought out and all the rest devoted practically to the name of the star and the title. That is all right if you have the people wanting to come to your specific theatre, provided the bill is satisfactory, but that form of advertising passes up the opportunity of making them want to come. We do not believe that in any city of 100,000 or more a manager is getting the maximum business with that plan.

Naturally the solution of the small space advertising is going to come when the manufacturers do supply the material. We agree with the exhibitor we have quoted when he says that it appears that they seem to put forward all their efforts on big space matter and forget the smaller ones. In fact, a careful inspection of advertising from most distributors would leave the impression that the designer expects the exhibitor to advertise only on Sundays or to invest his whole receipts in newspaper space. In our opinion this is going to be one of the places where there is going to be a decided reform in exploitation methods and it won't be long before there will be various sizes of advertising supplied, and enough varieties to run over a week's time without duplication.

We do earnestly believe that this day after day advertising is highly important and we believe that most exhibitors could afford special designs on unusual pictures and also that practically every one should follow the policy of accumulating cuts and other material on the stars that they use regularly. With such material on hand and after they have followed the suggestions given by the producers and in the Complete Plan Book in the Motion Picture News they will be able to design small space displays that will really mean something.

Space is not the whole thing, but thought is just as important in a two-inch space as in a double page.

McCormick Pays a Tribute to Whole Stage on Circle Anniversary

ficent set of tableaux. A gorgeous pageant of the screen, with fifteen people typical of every element that enters into drama, led by three muses, art, music, dance, in soft clinging Greek robes, holding aloft a miniature screen on which was projected The Circle's announcement, winding their way around a spiral path that encircled a huge globe on the top of which stood a cameraman in "location" dress, grinding industriously at the passing pageant of life, while Prologue spoke his tribute to the cinema:

"Omar, said of Life,
'tis nothing, but a magic shadow show,
play'd in a box whose candle is the Sun,
'round which we phantom figures, come and go.
—Thus, friends, has the camera conquered all,
the worlds, its stage, its players—everything.'"

Shea's Hippodrome Celebrates Anniversary by Increasing Scale of Its Presentations

SHEA'S HIPPODROME, Buffalo, to which attention has so often been called in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS as one of the model motion picture palaces of the country, has just celebrated its fourth anniversary, during which Manager Harold B. Franklin arranged a program that brought capacity houses to every presentation.

Two changes on the anniversary consisted in augmenting the orchestra to thirty, making it one of the largest in the country, and the other in presenting a new and magnificent stage setting which Mr. Franklin has been planning for several months. And when it is said that this surpasses all the efforts of this man who has done so much in stage displays, the result can be imagined.

The setting is entitled, "The Spirit of America," and is in three parts. One panel represents the Niagara Falls, another the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, and the center shows the United States battle fleet steaming out from the Battery, New York, to sea. Massive onyx pillars support the dome which is made of transparent material, representing colored glass which, when illuminated from behind, presents a striking effect. Thick, red velvet curtains cover the three openings. The orchestra of 30 is enclosed with a low railing, with flower clusters every few yards. When fully illuminated, this stage setting is one of the most striking ever presented in a theatre. At every performance it was met with enthusiastic applause.

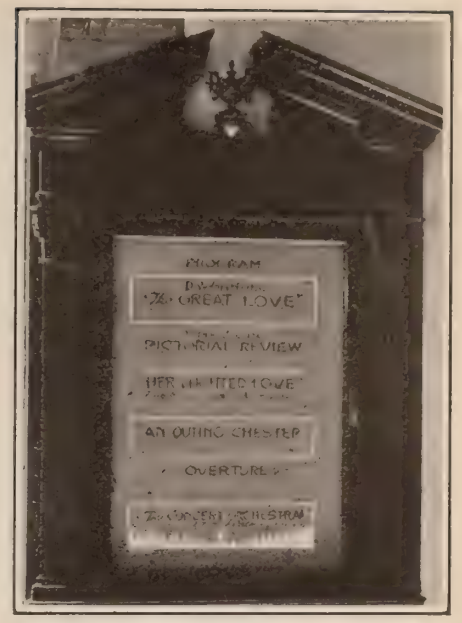
In the orchestra are some of the best musicians in Western New York. Alfred Fahlbusch, who acts as concertmaster, is former first violinist of the Buffalo and Rochester Symphony orchestras. Adam Federlein, first violin, is a former director of the big Star theatre orchestra; F. Duge, first trombone, is a former conductor of the Teck theatre orchestra of Buffalo Park band; Ferdinand Asmus, the new first tympanist, comes from Shea's Vaudeville theatre, he is also a former drummer of the 74th Infantry band and the Buffalo Park band. The conductor, Alfred Moulton, has been at Shea's Hippodrome for over a year now.

At the first showing of the new stage setting, the overture was "American Fantasie," by Victor Herbert, and the "B" number, "A Waltz Dream," by Oscar Straus. Enthusiasm was at a high pitch after the unveiling of the scenes showing the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, and the Niagara Falls, and when as the orchestra began the opening bars of the "Star Spangled Banner," at the end of the selection, and the center panel was presented, showing the U. S. battle fleet steaming out from the Battery to sea, the applause was deafening. This was true of every performance during the week, and audiences grew and grew until when Thursday came around, it was found necessary to stop the sale of tickets on several occasions.



The program included Douglas Fairbanks in "Bound in Morocco"; a new Mack Sennett comedy, "She Loved Him Plenty"; an Outing-Chester travel picture, "Pines Up and Palms Down"; the Hippodrome Pictorial Review, for which a new title sketch was conceived by Mr. Franklin; and the Pictograph. For the last half of the week, commencing Thursday, Clara Kimball Young was starred in "The Savage Woman." Supplementary features were a Lonesome Luke comedy, the sixth part of "Pershing's Crusaders," the scenes of the American celebration of the Fourth of July in Paris, and the Hippodrome Pictorial Review.

It is interesting to note in connection with Anniversary week that prices were raised at Shea's Hippodrome, the boost amounting to five cents for balcony and orchestra seats, and ten cents for boxes. But with thousands attending the theatre, Mr. Franklin said that there were not over half dozen who complained of the increase. Others were so enthusiastic over the bill that they complimented the management.

It was the psychological moment to boost admission prices, because the program, big stage setting and augmented orchestra, were excellent arguments in favor of the rise, and patrons easily were convinced without an argument on the part of the management of the justice of the boost.

The stage setting now installed will be retained for several months, with Mr. Franklin's new ideas being produced in the middle panel. Here settings similar to those pictured in MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be shown weekly, and with the approach of the Fourth Liberty Loan it is expected that some stirring stage pictures will be produced, especially so as Mr. Franklin has been appointed manager of the Features Bureau of the local Liberty Loan committee.

Anniversary Week was a striking demonstration of the great advance made in the Fifth Estate since the Hippodrome first opened its doors four years ago.

Separate from the announcement of the feature, the entire bill is given in another mahogany frame at the Hippodrome

Small City Manager Scores Advertising Aids

Recently in the department "Your Idea and Ours," we criticized an advertisement on "The Unbeliever" which was sent in by H. R. Weber, manager of the Orpheum theatre, Chambersburg, Pa. One of the biggest faults we had to find that the only illustration that was used was one of a small boy, and we said that this certainly gave no idea of the character of the production.

Now Mr. Weber comes back telling why he used this cut and what he has to say should result in the distributors of big pictures seeing that the various exchanges are supplied wih the material for their exploitation. Certainly the small city exhibitor needs these more than any one else, and Mr. Weber says that just this thing is forcing him to reply on the future on program pictures. He writes:

I notice your criticism in the NEWS, and I am not a bit surprised. You do not understand why I use the cut of a small boy, and right here is the rub. You see pages of advice how to put the picture over, pages of boasting what the producer is doing to help the exhibitor, etc., and the exhibitor is getting pretty sick of promises.

The small boy is actually in "The Unbeliever," but he has no business in the ad, as it makes no impression. I ordered my advertising from George Kleine Philadelphia office, and ordered cuts as well, at the time to start the advertising. I received two cuts, and the small boy was one of them. In the country you cannot get cuts in a day, so in order to illustrate my ad I used the small boy cut.

Now, that is the kind of help we get right along from the exchanges. I wrote First National for cuts on "Pershing's Crusaders," and ordered two cuts in particular, four columns wide and eight inches deep. I got small cuts as follows: Double-column 1¼ inches deep, and a single-column cut of a soldier boy.

These are not the only exchanges that are helping the exhibitor that way, I find them all alike, I mean the exchanges that are marketing the special features. I am going to show more program stuff this season than ever, for the reason that you can't get the help that will put the special picture over big enough to pay the price these exchanges ask for them.

We repeat the small city manager needs these aids more than his larger brother, who can have his advertising especially designed, and the distributors who fail to provide the material are hurting themselves.

Live News from the Producers

Three Select Films This Month

There Will Be Three Select Star Releases for the Month of September, with Marion Davies, Alice Brady and Norma Talmadge

THREE releases for the month of September are announced by Select Pictures Corporation. These are Marion Davies in "The Burden of Proof," Alice Brady in "The Better Half" and Norma Talmadge in "The Forbidden City." The productions will be released in the manner named. "The Burden of Proof" will be the first release of the month. This will be followed by Alice Brady in "The Better Half," while Norma Talmadge in "The Forbidden City" will follow later in the month.

Marion Davies' picture, "The Burden of Proof," is a story based on Newport and Washington social life, in which there is found a flavor of the big war. Miss Davies is directed in this picture by Julius Steger, who has spared no pains to make it the greatest of the Marion Davies pictures to date. Miss Davies has the part of a young girl prominent in social circles, who is engaged to a man whose uncle is a member of the President's cabinet. Financial difficulties make it possible for German agents to approach the young girl with a proposal to betray her country. The story is cleverly directed and it is asserted that it will undoubtedly prove one of the best attractions in which this star has ever been seen.

The September release for Alice Brady will be "The Better Half," a film story of Miriam Michelson's novel, "Michael Thwaite's Wife." The story is one in which a young girl at last becomes the wife of the man she loves, although her twin sister has nearly ruined all three lives. Miss Brady plays the dual role of Louise and Trixie Thorley. The doubling from beginning to end is said to be little short of a miracle. One moment Miss Brady is the patient and lovable Louise and the fraction of a moment later is shown as her fickle and selfish sister. J. D. Robertson directed Miss Brady in this offering. The photography is by H. L. Broening.

The latter part of September will bring "The Forbidden City," in which Norma Talmadge is presented by Joseph M. Schenck, in a Chinese story by George Scarborough. This is the same author who wrote Miss Talmadge's latest production, "Her Only Way," which is now being distributed. In "The Forbidden City" Miss Talmadge is first seen as a young Chinese maiden. In the latter part of the picture she plays the part of an American Red Cross nurse. The picture gives this versatile star a wonderful opportunity for displaying her ability. Miss Talmadge is again under the direction of Sidney A. Franklin, who has assisted Miss Talmadge's technical director in the preparation of many beautiful settings.

"Over the Top" Repeats Its Successes

The first week in September marked the beginning of "repeat" bookings on "Over the Top," Vitagraph's big patriotic special, which has as its star "Private" Arthur Guy Empey.

Among the houses which have asked for repeat dates are the Klock theatre, Pittsburg, Kan.; Broadway theatre, Muskogee, Okla.; the Strand theatre, of Salina, Kan., and others. The manager of the handsome new Doric theatre of Kansas City, Mo., who used "Over the Top" to dedicate the house, expressed regrets that he had only booked the picture for a week, declaring that "Over the Top" still stands as the record attraction at his house after several months of operation.

New Cast Announced by Metro

What is said to be a brilliant cast has been assembled by Director Ralph W. Ince to support Hale Hamilton in his initial Metro starring vehicle, "Five Thousand An Hour."

Raver's "Public Defender" Campaigns Heavily

That Harry Raver made no mistake when he picked upon Mayer Goldman's book, "The Public Defender" as suitable material for a motion picture has been evidenced by the splendid list of bookings recorded for the film by exchanges who purchased territory for the production, according to report.

Backed by pages of newspaper and magazine articles covering the nation-wide Public Defender movement, the Raver pictorial illustration of the theme is said to easily become one of the finest sort of attractions with which to obtain plenty of local press comments, to say nothing of the drawing power of Frank Keenan, Robert Edeson and Alma Hanlon, the three stars of the cast.

Among the representative distributors who are booking "The Public Defender," and the cities in which they are located, are First National Exhibitors' Exchange, Pittsburgh; Boston Photoplay Co., Boston; First National Exhibitors' Exchange, San Francisco; Celebrated Players' Exchange, Chicago; Elliot-Sherman, Minneapolis; A. D. Flintom-Yale Photoplay Co., Kansas City; Independent Theatre Supply Co., Montreal, Canada, and Modern Feature Photoplay Co., New York.

Consuls to Co-Operate in "Italy's Flaming Front"

The First National Exhibitors' Circuit, through an arrangement with Lieut. M. M. Prochet, of the Italo-North American Commercial Union, is said to have secured the co-operation of the Italian consuls in all the principal cities of the United States, to assist in every practical way in arousing the interest of the entire Italo-American population of the United States in the country-wide exhibition of "Italy's Flaming Front," the six-reel war spectacle which was released August 26th.

The exhibitors who have booked this picture are guaranteed co-operation from a source that is ordinarily beyond their command.

Fox Announces Title of Nesbit Film

"The Woman Who Gave" is the name of the first of the series of five pictures that Evelyn Nesbit, the actress, will make for William Fox. The picture will probably be released in October and will be a Fox standard picture. The four other pictures which Miss Nesbit is to make will probably be released at ten-week intervals. "The Woman Who Gave" is described as a powerful drama by an artist's model who hated her own beauty.

Chaplin's "Triple Trouble" Scores

Contracts for the new Essanay Charlie Chaplin picture, "Triple Trouble," are said to be pouring in faster every day, according to the George Kleine distributing system. It is reported that W. C. Patterson, manager of the Criterion theatre, Atlanta, Ga., after screening the picture, booked it for a six days' run and afterwards wrote, "second, third and fourth runs will be taken care of as suggested."

Edward J. O'Keefe wired to Essanay from Philadelphia: "Congratulate you on 'Triple Trouble.' I am glad to inform you I have broken all house records at the Cort and Criterion theatres on the Boardwalk, Atlantic City. Am holding the picture over additional days. Expect to duplicate at the City Square and Million Dollar Pier, which follow next week."

Mary Miles Minter's Latest

"The Eyes of Julia Deep," featuring Mary Miles Minter, is now being shown to exhibitors in the various selling territories of the American Film Company, and Manager R. R. Nehls says that he is receiving, in addition to large contracts, complimentary comments on the unusual picture.

It is said to be one of the most "natural" pictures made and devoid of sordid, unpleasant phases, although it deals with the life of a working girl. Northwest and Pittsburgh districts were almost completely covered with the Minter productions on the sales representative's first interview.

First Screencraft Picture "Flaming Ramparts"

The first feature to be offered exhibitors by Screencraft Pictures is a filmization of Edith Barnard Delano's story, "Flaming Ramparts," which was published recently in Harper's Magazine.

The picture title has not as yet been selected but will be announced within a few days. The feature was made under the personal direction of Frank Reicher.

H. L. Orear, Central District Manager; H. E. Elder, of the Atlantic Division, and W. S. Rand, of the Western District, Appointed by General Film to Supervise the Distribution in Their Districts

General Places Districts Under Managers

GENERAL FILM COMPANY has made several appointments of importance in its sales organization, and at the same time instituted a districting or grouping of its exchanges throughout the country. Four supervising exchange executives or District Managers have been appointed, in accordance with this movement. Working under Sales Manager W. F. Rodgers, these District Managers are to coordinate and facilitate the film merchandising activities of the company.

The District Managers most recently appointed are H. L. Orear for the Central District, with headquarters at Cincinnati, and H. E. Elder for the Atlantic Division, with headquarters at Philadelphia. Mr. Orear's jurisdiction includes the exchanges at Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit and Indianapolis. Mr. Elder will supervise the Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington, Wilkes-Barre, and Pittsburgh exchanges.

Appointments made shortly before these, were of T. F. McTyer for the Southern District, headquarters Atlanta, involving the Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas exchanges, and of W. S. Rand for the Western District, headquarters Los Angeles, with the Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, and Portland exchanges included.

An expansion and strengthening of its organization had been planned by General Film Company for some time. In fact, the announcements now made have logically followed a gradual realignment of the system in all the local branches which has been going on some months.

Mr. Orear, Central District Manager, is a General Film veteran, having been with the company for the last seven years and for the greater part of this time at Kansas City and Cincinnati. The latter branch is now to be conducted by George Davis.

Sherry Service Swings Into Its Stride

THE William L. Sherry Service, organized in June, has swung into its full stride with a vigor that speaks well for the future of the organization. As announced in MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week, Sherry Service is now releasing on regular schedule a continuous line of features, with an array of feminine stars well known for their talent and beauty.

Mr. Sherry, as everyone in filmdom knows, was for many years one of the guiding minds of the Paramount Pictures Corporation in several capacities.

Four feminine stars have thus far made their appearance under the banner of the William L. Sherry Service, all four sponsored by producers considered able and reputable. These four are Jewel Carmen, Catherine Calvert, presented by Frank A. Keeney; Doris Kenyon, presented by Theodore C. Deitrich, and Vangie Valentine, presented by Harold J. Binney. In addition to these there has been brought into Service the Burlingham Travel Pictures, an array of thirty scenic subjects taken in various parts of the world by the American globe-trotter, Frederick Burlingham. These five form the nucleus of the William Sherry Service. It is announced there will be more stars added to the list in the course of a few weeks, until a full series of fifty-two productions for the coming year is arranged for.

Jewel Carmen is the most recent star in the Wm. L. Sherry Service. Her engagement has been so recent that her first play has not been selected. Vangie Valentine is the new star discovered and exploited by Harold J. Binney. She is considered a rare "find," and an example of Mr. Binney's faith in her is the fact that he is advertising her as the "most lovable creature ever seen on the screen." Miss Valentine will be presented during the next year in eight productions from plays and novels. Mr. Binney will personally supervise all the productions.

The DeLuxe brand is the name of the series presented by Mr. Deitrich.

Perret Starts Another

Leonce Perret announced this week that he has started the production of a second patriotic feature, with a "war" side to it.

Goldwyn Begins Second Year

Samuel Goldfish Declares That Goldwyn Starts New Year With a Volume of Exhibitor Support Without Precedent in Industry

SIGNALIZING the second year of a producing and distributing organization that has grown with great rapidity, Goldwyn released throughout North America this week its first production with Geraldine Farrar, "The Turn of the Wheel," which likewise is the first picture to be distributed by the organization under its new policy of star series releasing and the first of the company's doubled output.

"The Turn of the Wheel" has simultaneous presentation in sixty cities of the country and has been made the subject of powerful publicity and advertising campaigns by practically all of the Goldwyn first-run exhibitor customers.

Opening its early fall sales campaign as far back as last June by announcing the company's increase in productions from twenty-six pictures annually to fifty or more, Goldwyn throughout the warm weather months has been successful in engaging the interest and obtaining the patronage and support of many big exhibitors.

Since early spring the Goldwyn studios in Fort Lee, N. J., have been the scene of redoubled activity to permit of the enlargement of production to the present ambitious and constantly expanding scale.

Both in studio and producing facilities Goldwyn was equipped to make fifty productions in its first year, but Samuel Goldfish, its president, insisted upon the smaller output for the first year to enable Goldwyn to build a shockproof organization and create in the public mind throughout the country a definite impression of what Goldwyn production stood for.

"We have in Goldwyn," says Mr. Goldfish, "a dependable and trustworthy organization, both in its producing and selling subdivisions. We have gained in strength and in production; we are still gathering around us in our scenario and continuity departments men and women from whom we are obtaining the best literary material to be found in this country.

"Our second release of the new year, on September 9, is of Mabel Normand in 'Peck's Bad Girl,' a rollicking, happy-go-lucky, broad comedy in which Miss Normand is once more the personality known to her own particular audiences.

"Tom Moore, our newest star—and our first man star, by the way—is a star of great expectations both on our part and on the part of the exhibitors whose insistence caused us to star him. His first picture is a lively romantic drama, 'Just for Tonight.'

"Madge Kennedy has justified all the predictions we made about her a year ago. Her first production this season is 'The Kingdom of Youth.'

"Rex Beach helps Goldwyn make this a still bigger year by consenting to provide us with six Rex Beach productions instead of one annually as heretofore.

"Mae Marsh begins her second Goldwyn season in 'Hidden Fires,' a romantic drama in which she reveals all of her wistfulness and charm.

"Pauline Frederick in a few days will be working on her first production, the release date of which is not yet scheduled. This firs story is by Willard Mack, who is to play a conspicuous role in shaping the development of Miss Frederick's future screen activities."

Tom Moore's First Goldwyn Starring Subject Is "Just for To-Night," by Charles A. Logue

Douglass Natural Color Praised by Exhibitor

Mr. Whitson, proprietor of the Plaza theatre at San Diego, Calif., writes the Los Angeles office of the General Film Company, through whose exchanges Hodkinson Service is distributed, as follows: "We believe 'Cupid Angling' will go down in history as marking an epochal advance in the industry of motion pictures. The public gave it a great reception and expressions of admiration were unbounded. Financially it was as great a pleasure to us as it was in an artistic sense to our patrons.

"It is an unusually artistic and pleasing picture and the process of actual photography in nature's own colors seems little short of the marvelous. We predict an unusual success for these natural color pictures. Let us have more of them."

"Her Quickening Flame"

Montagu Love and June Elvidge are to be co-starred by World Pictures in "The Quickening Flame," an original story by Elizabeth R. Carpenter, and made into scenario form by Giles R. Warren.

Travers Vale will direct the picture, and the filming began last Monday at the World Studio, at Fort Lee.

General Reports Success on "The Hypocrites"

Elizabeth Risdon's problem play, "The Hypocrites," is said to be finding motion picture house managers fully alive to the importance of the star and the story, the latter being the screen version of Sir Henry Arthur Jones' stage play. The George Loane Tucker production of the film seems to be lending it additional interest, General announces.

Out of the more recent bookings, that of a six-day run at the Boston theatre, Boston, is recorded, as well as a similar run at Fay's, Providence. New England business on this picture is described as most gratifying. Similar popularity for it is chronicled in the New York City territory of General, with dates in Loew and Fox houses leading the list. The Chicago district shows up with important downtown and suburban dates, with an echo of the same condition in Cleveland and the surrounding country.

Elizabeth Kennedy in the Legitimate

The stars and actors employed by World Pictures are watching with no little interest the production of "Phoebe Pretends," a new play by Eleanor Gates, the author of "The Poor Little Rich Girl." This grows out of the connection with it of Elizabeth Kennedy, who plays the title role and who for some time has been employed by World Pictures, more lately in "The Road to France," with Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley, in which she played the role of the little O'Leary girl.

Little Miss Kennedy is ten years old, and in "Phoebe Pretends" is called upon to memorize a part of eighty pages. This, in the parlance of the profession, has the length of a star role.

The premiere of "Phoebe Pretends" takes place in Philadelphia at the Broad Street theatre on Labor Day, and after two weeks comes to New York for a run.

"The Silent Woman" Is the Next Subject in Which Metro Presents Edith Storey

Greene Emphasizes Value of "Success Series"

"A picture you have never seen is as new as a book you have never read." This catch-phrase, according to Walter E. Greene, managing director of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, in charge of distribution, tells the story of the Success Series of photoplays, which will be released, one each week for one year, beginning September 1.

"In releasing these masterpieces of the screen a second time," said Mr. Greene, "we believe we are gratifying a public desire, just as producers of plays have been doing when they have been putting out great stage successes of other years. A play is produced in New York one season and it is so good that it runs perhaps for a year. Later it tours the country.

"Suppose when it reaches a certain town it is seen by ten per cent of the people there. If it is especially good, that ten per cent will want to see it again and the other ninety per cent, having heard so many good things said about it, will wish they had seen it. So it is good for a return engagement, and another and another."

Triangle Stars Jack Abbe in "Mystic Faces"

Adela Rogers St. John wrote "The Secret Code," which is offered as the first release on Triangle's program for September 8th. J. Barney Sherry, whose last appearance with Triangle was in "High Stakes," will be co-starred with Gloria Swanson, under the direction of Albert Parker, in this production. Catherine Carr wrote the scenario and Pliny Horn was the camera-man.

Those who enjoyed Jack Abbe, Triangle's little Japanese star, when he appeared last Spring with Jack Livingston and Maud Wayne in "Who Is to Blame?" will welcome his return as a Triangle featured player in "Mystic Faces," the second release for the week. He was co-author of this production with E. Magnus Ingleton.

Pathe Gets "Wolves of Kultur" Serial

Leah Baird, In "Wolves of Kultur," a Serial Which Pathe Is to Distribute

PATHE EXCHANGE, INC., made known this week that it will release "Wolves of Kultur," the fifteen-episode serial produced by the Western Photoplays, Inc., with Leah Baird as the star and Sheldon Lewis as a featured player. This fact was established by an announcement sent out by Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc. Several weeks ago Western made the statement that it had arranged for the distribution of the serial, but the name of the distributing organization was not announced until now. The first episode will be released October 13, according to the Pathe announcement.

In regard to the picture, Pathe said: "'Wolves of Kultur' not only possesses a strong title, one that in itself is a box-office attraction, but has a story that is timely, powerful and strongly dramatic. It deals with the activities of a body of German propagandists and spies, domiciled in the United States, and stopping at nothing to further their ends. Miss Baird plays the part of a young girl whose uncle falls victim to their murderous methods and who then devotes her whole time to running them down. Sheldon Lewis is a private investigator whose personal investigations cause him to be continually involved in the same trails which Miss Baird is following. Charles Hutchison is the young man who escapes from the band of spies through the assistance of Miss Baird, and from then on is her devoted follower and aid. Mr. Hutchison, by the way, shows himself in this serial to be a stunt man extraordinary.

"A very extensive line of advertising and publicity helps has been prepared for exhibitors' use. There will be one, three and six-sheet posters for each episode and a very striking 24-sheet."

Hutchinson Enthuses Over Sales Force

PRESIDENT SAMUEL S. HUTCHINSON of the American Film Company, Inc., believes that he has at present the strongest sales organization that has ever been organized to exploit the productions of his company. As already chronicled in past issues of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the American Film Company is now selling its releases direct to exhibitors through personal representatives of Mr. Hutchinson, stationed in each of the Pathe Exchanges, and arrangements which exhibitors make with these representatives are the same as though they were in direct personal contact with President Hutchinson himself.

"Our line-up of salesmen in the Pathe Exchanges," said Mr. Hutchinson, "contain the names of a great number of exchange men, who are well and favorably known to the exhibitors of the country and in whose business judgment exhibitors repose confidence. At present we have representatives in twenty-four of the Pathe Exchanges and reports they are making to the home office show that the exhibitors in each territory are absolutely sold on the merits of the Mary Miles Minter, Margarita Fisher and William Russell features as box office attractions second to none."

President Hutchinson submits the following list of his personal representatives in the various exchanges: Mark Nathan, New York City; N. E. Mallouf New York City; F. J. Leonard, Buffalo, N. Y.; Paul B. Elliott, Indianapolis, Ind.; L. D. Brown, Dallas, Tex.; Geo. L. Stiles, Milwaukee, Wis.; J. Russell Brett, Detroit, Mich.; L. D. Lyons, Newark, N. J.; W. A. Hoffman, Cleveland, Ohio; David G. Rodgers, Minneapolis, Minn.; C. J. Crowley, Los Angeles, Cal.; Frank O'Neill, St. Louis, Mo.; Dick Roach, Cincinnati, Ohio; Fred P. Sulzbach, Philadelphia, Pa.; E. News Weekly Services Show Big Growth

Reports from Universal exchanges reveal that the various news weekly services are having enormous growth. The exchangemen declare there is scarcely a film theatre in the country now that does not run some sort of news pictorial on its program every night.

It has become a task of great magnitude to supply the demand for news pictures, and to cover the news through the camera's eye as fast as it happens. The Universal is said to have 300 camera men in its employ scattered over the country.

Jack Cohen, in charge of the department, believes he has a more collosal task than any feature film director because of telephone calls from distant points notifying him of some occurrence that required camera work.

First Runs of "Hick Manhattan"

Al Lichtman Reports That New Paramount-Flagg Comedies Are in Great Demand as Evidenced by Initial Release

REPORTS from the exchanges of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation indicate that the first-run showings of the initial Paramount-Flagg comedy, "Hick Manhattan," released September 1, have given a decided impetus to the already heavy bookings recorded for this series of sixteen comedies, according to Al Lichtman, General Manager of Distribution.

"These comedies, written, titled and supervised by the master humorist, James Montgomery Flagg, and produced by Town & Country Films, Inc., Jack Eaton and Eltinge F. Warner," said Mr. Lichtman, "are proving irresistible to exhibitors, just as we expected they would. With such a combination of talent, success for the output was inevitable.

"In the first place, James Montgomery Flagg stands without a peer in his particular kind of humor. For years he has been writing witty, satirical short stories for the leading magazines and they have been characterized by a punch. In addition, Mr. Flagg has made use of his rare gift as an artist in so embellishing the films with art titles as to make them delightful to look at.

"When we undertook the distribution of the Flagg comedies we did so largely on the strength of the success achieved by his former series, 'Girls You Know,' and the integrity and reputation of the men composing his producing organization. In direction, photography and every other essential they are as near perfection as it is possible to make them.

"The Flagg stars are the best obtainable. In 'Hick Manhattan,' the first release, Peggy Hopkins, the Broadway favorite of musical comedy, is featured.

"In the second, 'Romance and Brass Tacks,' Peggy Adams, who recently played the nurse in Mr. Flagg's official Red Cross film, 'The Spirit of the Red Cross,' will be seen. In the third, Florence Dixon will appear; while in the fourth will be seen Beatrice Tremaine, who will be co-starred this winter with Norman Trevor in a new Broadway production. In all these comedies Olin Howland, the comedian of last year's musical comedy, 'Leave It to Jane,' will have the lead.

Ethel Clayton Film Announced by Paramount

Ethel Clayton makes her debut as a Paramount star in "The Girl Who Came Back," scheduled for release September 8.

The story has been builded by Beulah Marie Dix from "Leah Kleschna," C. M. S. McClellan's famous play in which Mrs. Fiske made one of the greatest successes of her career.

Fox and Mutual Change Cleveland Offices

The Fox Film Corporation has moved from the third floor of the Belmont Building, Cleveland, where it has occupied half a floor, to the second floor, where the entire floor will be used. Mutual has vacated the second floor, and is now located in the space formerly occupied by Fox.

This change was necessary to take care of business that has been steadily increasing ever since Sydney E. Abel took over the helm at the local exchange. Mr. Abel has opened a systematic publicity campaign in this territory during the past month, which has resulted very satisfactorily. His enlarged sales force has more than justified itself by the increased number of bookings that have been procured, and his general advertising has been of such a nature as to materially help the exhibitor who is running Fox pictures.

At the present time Abel and his aides are working on "Cleopatra," and they are getting splendid reports from all sections of the State.

Timely New Metro Vehicle for Harold Lockwood

Metro is now engaging the services of Harold Lockwood in the production of a romantic story, written especially for the star by Finis Fox, and as yet unnamed. The picture is being made at the new studio quarters of the Lockwood company at 134th street and Park avenue, New York, under the direction of Henry Otto, now alternating with Managing Director Edwin Carewe in the making of Lockwood features, and is based on a timely patriotic subject.

Ruby de Remer has the leading feminine hole, having been re-engaged because of her capable performance in "Pals First," Mr. Lockwood's recently completed picture, to be released during September as a Screen Classic, Inc., production.

Randolph Lewis Joins Pathe Publicity

Randolph Lewis has been added to the Pathe publicity staff as manager by Paul Brunet, vice president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc. He was formerly national publicity manager of Fox Film Corporation, and is a member of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers.

P. A. Parsons remains in general charge of the Advertising, Publicity and Poster Departments, this being his sixth year in that capacity. Mr. Lewis' engagement heralds a very active publicity campaign on the new Extra Selected Star Photoplays, the Special Features and "The Wolves of Kultur," the serial which, it has just been announced, will be released by Pathe.

Ekre at Coast Exchange

George J. Ekre, for some time past manager of the Portland, Ore., branch of General Film Company, has just been transferred to a larger Pacific Coast office by the company at Los Angeles. Mr. Ekre is relieving Western District Manager W. S. Rand, who had been acting as local manager pending the appointment of some one to handle the office.

Mr. Rand, after the induction of Mr. Ekre is completed, probably will return to his headquarters at Denver.

Flora Zabelle in Normand Cast

The cast supporting Mabel Normand in her newest Goldwyn Picture, "A Perfect 36," by Tex Charwate, now in the course of production, will contain Flora Zabelle, who is Mrs. Raymond Hitchcock in private life.

Although she has appeared but little in the silent drama, she has been a close friend to Mabel Normand for many years.

Gladys Leslie, Mischievous Vitagraph Star In "A Nymph of the Foothills," a Blue Ribbon Play

About New Pictures

Having completed "The Strange Woman," Gladys Brockwell, the Fox star, has begun photographing a new play, "Love's Pilgrimage," at Hollywood, Cal. The story was written by J. Grubb Alexander and Bennett Cole, and is said to have a gypsy setting.

Norma Talmadge's next Select Picture, upon which she is now working, will in all probability be called "A Tale of a Forbidden City." It is a Chinese story by George Scarborough, author of Miss Talmadge's latest Select Picture, "Her Only Way," which is now being distributed.

Robert Whittier has been added to the cast of "Five Thousand an Hour," the George Randolph Chester story which has been picturized for Hale Hamilton's first vehicle as a Metro star. Ralph W. Ince is directing the production, assisted by William W. Cohill, and June Mathis has made the scenario.

Ben Alexander, the little boy who won a place in the hearts of all who saw D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World," plays a part with Bessie Barriscale, the Paralta star, in "The Heart of Rachel," adapted from Kathleen Norris's book. Baby Mary Jane Irving is another child in this picture, directed by Howard Hickman and distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

The troubles of an undertaker in war times is a theme that brings the comedy talent of L-KO stars into the high speed of fun. Their film on this subject is "Hello, Trouble!"

Mabel Normand, About to Say Yes In the Goldwyn Picture, "Peck's Bad Girl"

Caruso has started his second Artcraft picture at the Fifty-sixth street studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Edward Jose, who supervised the production of "My Cousin," the first Caruso picture, is again directing the operatic star.

High lights in the life story of Richard E. Enright, Police Commissioner of New York City, form the subject of the latest Animated Interview produced by Jack Cohn, of the Universal, for the Screen Magazine.

"The Historic Fourth of July in Paris," which is the American Red Cross film being distributed through General Film Company, continues to be a heavy favorite everywhere, to judge from the daily booking reports from exchanges. Runs of six days are frequent in the more important houses.

Louise Huff begins her fourth picture for the World Company next Monday at the studio at Fort Lee when "The Crook of Dreams" will be put in work. Miss Huff will be directed by Oscar Apfel.

"Eye for Eye," the title of Mme. Nazimova's forthcoming superfeature, which Richard A. Rowland and Maxwell Karger will present in October, was chosen by the star herself from a list of fifty titles submitted.

Alice Joyce has returned from ten days along the Maine coast, where her company, under direction of Tom Terriss, took many exteriors for her forthcoming Blue Ribbon release, the tentative title of which is "Cap'n Abe's Niece." Miss Joyce is now at Bayshore, Long Island, in the midst of taking further exteriors.

"America's Answer" Sells Well in Blocks

"America's Answer," the United States Official War Film, presented by the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, has had a remarkable experience in Brooklyn.

The engagement at the Academy of Music was announced to cover a period of one week, but the sale of five nights to well-known business enterprises, left only Saturday night and the matinees open to the general public.

The firms purchasing the entire house for the entertainment of their employees are: Abraham & Straus, the E. W. Bliss Company, Frederick Loeser & Company, the Morse Dry Dock & Repair Company and the Sperry Gyroscope Company.

The "block sale" nights have been taken advantage of to stir up loyal enthusiasm among the workers, and special programs with addresses and patriotic music have been provided in conjunction with the picture.

Metro Augments Scenario Staff

West Coast Scenario Department of Metro Reorganized and Augmented by Addition of Tom J. Geraghty and Albert Kenyon

GEORGE D. BAKER, manager of productions, has augmented and reorganized the scenario department at Metro's West Coast studios in Hollywood, as he is convinced that the very keystone of successful motion picture production is embodied in the choice of the story and its preparation for the screen in the form of a continuity, carefully embellished by experienced scenario writers. To that end he engaged the services of Tom J. Geraghty, widely known author of motion picture productions, and Albert Kenyon, brother of Charles Kenyon, playwright.

Baker himself is in direct supervision of the work of the reorganized department, and he directed Mme. Nazimova in "Revelation" and "Toys of Fate," and personally vises every story and completed continuity that is seriously considered as available for the use of Metro stars.

Since assuming his duties, some five months ago, as manager of production at the Hollywood Studios, Baker has written no less than six scenarios and collaborated on six others. He wrote the continuity of "The Demon," from the novel by C. N. and A. M. Williamson, for Edith Storey; "As the Sun Went Wown," an adaptation of his own stage play for the same star; "In Judgment Of," in which Anna Q. Nilsson and Franklyn Farnum were co-starred; "The Return of Mary," from Hale Hamilton's play, for May Allison; "The Testing of Mildred Vane," from the story by Charles T. Dazey, also for Miss Allison, and "Kate of Kentucky," an original story, which will be Miss Allison's next starring vehicle.

With the acquisition of Geraghty and Kenyon, Metro's West Coast scenario department has been placed on a firm footing. Baker also has engaged two readers who supplement the reading done by himself, his assistant, Charles Hundt, and the continuity writers. The readers are Lillian Ducey, author of a great number of fiction stories for the magazines, as well as of originals for motion pictures productions, and Adeline Alvord, a former newspaper woman.

Nazimova, Screen Classics Star, In "Eye for Eye," Distributed by Metro

This large staff of readers and writers is daily engaged in a comprehensive survey of the whole field of current fiction. It also gives careful attention to the numerous manuscripts sent in to the studios by authors in all parts of the country. As a result, Baker believes that no good material will be overlooked, and that Metro stars working in the West will have the advantage of the very best the market affords.

U. S. Official Thanks Laemmle

L. J. Meyberg of the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities Thanks Carl Laemmle for His Co-operation

CARL LAEMMLE, president of the Universal, has just received from L. J. Meyberg, personal representative of the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities, a letter expressing the highest appreciation of the service Mr. Laemmle has rendered in obtaining Smileage for men in Uncle Sam's service.

Mr. Laemmle recently sent out strong appeals to all Universal exchanges enlisting their co-operation in getting contributions to this fund from the exhibitors, and the response is reported to have far exceeded expectations.

Following is the letter from Mr. Meyberg:

My Dear Mr. Laemmle:—

I should like to express to you, however inadequately, some measure of our appreciation for the part which you are taking in the plan of the Military Entertainment Council in its work of providing Smileage for our men in the large training camps.

We thank you especially for your assistance in introducing Smileage to our Motion Picture Industry of America along the lines suggested by you whereby you lend your good support and that of your organization toward making the present drive to obtain the "Smileage Pledge" from every theatre in the country a huge success.

There is now way of telling what it means to have your good co-operation in presenting to the industry through your exchanges, this opportunity for service upon their part. All of us recognize the important part being taken by this industry toward helping win the war, and we are confident that by hearty support of this Smileage movement they will render an especially and particularly valuable service.

The fact that there is no reward or compensation adds to our sense of appreciation for your patriotic helpfulness.

Sincerely yours,
(Signed) L. J. MEYBERG,
Personal Representative.

Raw Stock Market in Italy

Of the undeveloped film imported by Italy before the war Germany supplied 46 per cent, Great Britain 25 per cent, France 16 per cent, and Belgium 7 per cent; the United States furnished three-fourths of 1 per cent, or about 2,700 to 3,500 pounds. Imports from the United States rose to 45,800 pounds in 1915, to 227,000 pounds in 1916, and to 280,000 pounds in 1917, when they represented 83 per cent of the total imports. Great Britain followed with 10 per cent and France furnished practically all of the remainder.

It can be seen that the United States, because of the war, has acquired an important market for raw stock. However, the needs of the war and the difficulties in transportation have required that old chemical plants be extended and numerous new ones built in Italy. It is certain once the war is over that some of these plants will be converted into plants suitable for manufacturing blank films.

The leading markets for film are in Milan, Turin and Rome, where the large moving-picture companies are located .

T. H. Davison Opens Office in London

T. H. Davison, prominent British agent and salesman, until recently general manager of the Trans-Atlantic Film Co., Ltd., the European branch of Universal, has severed his connection with that company in order to undertake the control of important Anglo-American film interests.

Mr. Davison, according to News London correspondent, has opened offices at 171 Wardour street, London, W. He is personally acquainted with every buyer in the United Kingdom, and has also an extensive clientele in the Continental and Colonial markets, besides being one of the best known men in England's film circles. He is well known on this side of the Atlantic, having paid several visits to America on film matters. He announces that he is prepared to undertaake the European agency for American productions.

Metro Engages Herbert for Barrymore Film

H. E. Herbert has been engaged to play opposite to Ethel Barrymore in "Lady Frederick," her next Metro production. He is said to be equally well known abroad and in America and comes from a purely theatrical lineage.

His time between seasons has been spent in pictures. First with Thanhouser in "The Case of Lady Campbell" and "The Man Without a Country." Then with Alice Brady in "The Whirlpool" and "The Death Dance," and with Elsie Ferguson in "A Doll's House."

World Film Produces "The Oakdale Affair"

Oscar Apfel will have carte-blanche when he directs "The Oakdale Affair" for the World Film Corporation. The story is based on Edgar Rice Burrough's novel, and it is reported that both Director Apfel and the World Film officials were negotiating for these rights for some time without the knowledge of each other.

Mr. Apfel will now have the opportunity of working out the ambitious plans he has formed to make a successful production of "The Oakdale Affair," and work will be started within a few weeks at the Fort Lee studio for an early spring release.

Famous Players-Lasky Says Exhibitors Approve Plan

Proof that exhibitors of Paramount and Artcraft pictures in all sections of the country are not only optimistic but enthusiastic over their prospects for the coming year is arriving daily by letter and telegram from North, South, East and West, according to Famous Players-Lasky officials, and these expressions of approval of the company's booking policy and of satisfaction in its performances of the past is declared to be a guarantee for the future.

Exhibitors Back Up "Great Love" Review

THREE weeks after the release of D. W. Griffith's first Artcraft picture, "The Great Love," the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation announces that exhibitors everywhere agree with P. S. Harrison, reviewer of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, that this production is proving a "diamond mine," as the latter predicted. The initial success of "The Great Love" is being duplicated at theatres in all parts of the country, it is asserted, and messages from exhibitors are continuing to pour in at the Famous Players-Lasky home office on Fifth Avenue, congratulating that company on what is generally conceded to be one of its triumphs.

That managers everywhere have followed Mr. Harrison's suggestion to "advertise this production big" is readily evident. In the files of the Famous Players Lasky publicity department are bundles of newspapers showing unusual advertising even for a Griffith production, both as to quality and quantity. Page and double-page spreads on "The Great Love" are not uncommon and that the returns have readily warranted this expenditure is attested by the countless letters and telegrams from managers.

A sample of the communications received by the distributors of this film is offered in the letter from Harold B. Franklin, manager of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, N. Y., as follows: "'The Great Love' is a notable addition to D. W. Griffith's master productions. The tender, beautiful story, which entwines this massive spectacle, appeals directly to the emotions. Griffith's direction is apparent in every detail—the cast is superb. The air raids are wonderfully impressive and give American audiences a better understanding of barbaric Germany than ever before."

William Duncan in a New Vitagraph Serial

WILLIAM DUNCAN and his Vitagraph serial company have begun work on another fifteen-episode serial which will carry the title of "The Man of Might." In this, as in "A Fight for Millions," which is now showing in the United States and Canada, Mr. Duncan will be supported by a cast including Edith Johnson and Joe Ryan. The story is by Albert E. Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady.

During the "vacation" of the company between pictures, the director - star "rested" by making a propaganda picture for the Government to use in the forthcoming Liberty Loan Drive.

"The Man of Might," it is announced, will have an entirely different theme and atmosphere from those of any of the other serials in which Mr. Duncan has been starred, these being "The Fighting Trail," "Vengeance and the Woman" and "A Fight for Millions." The authors are declared to have produced the strongest of all the stories they have turned out for serial purposes, and it will be a typical American melodrama, with the mountains of the West, the desert and wilds for the background. There will be plenty of riding of the sort for which the Vitagraph cowboys are famous and the authors have put in enough risks to challenge the courage and skill even of Duncan.

"The Man of Might" is scheduled for release on January 27 next, following the release of "The Iron Test," the Moreno-Holloway serial, and will be the third serial in the announced four-a-year policy of Vitagraph. Mr. Duncan and the Moreno-Holloway combination alternating continuously on the program.

Duncan began work on "The Man of Night" the week of August 19, and already is well along with the production, it is announced.

"Pershing's Crusaders" Blazes New Trail

"PERSHING'S CRUSADERS' has brought motion pictures into new environments," according to Albert Warner, supervisor of contracts for the Government's first official feature film.

"Mining operators have brought this picture into remote regions and played it at their isolated mining camps where formerly motion pictures were unheard of," Mr. Warner said the other day. "Ministers in Los Angeles and elsewhere have used 'Pershing's Crusaders' as a topical theme for powerful sermons. And these sermons were 'for' and not 'against' motion pictures.

"Newspapers that formerly devoted merely a few lines to films have liberally donated many columns and pages to the Government feature, which has thus broken the ice for other cinema productions.

"Y. M. C. A. headquarters, churches, schools, universities, and town halls in small towns that motion pictures had never invaded before, have been visited by 'Pershing's Crusaders,' which has registered heavily in every instance and convinced lukewarm patrons of the films that the silent drama fills a real need in life.

"Halls have been created and projection machines installed in munition factories, cantonments, etc., where 'Pershing's Crusaders' has made history on its own account.

"In the far distant posts of northern Alaska, 'Pershing's Crusaders' has blazed a new trail for motion pictures across countless miles of snow and ice.

"In fact, a stanch new clientele has been won over for motion pictures, and these thousands of new friends, difficult to reach in any other way, will mean much to this industry."

Universal Gets Official British War Films

IMMEDIATELY on his arrival in New York, Carl Laemmle completed arrangements with Capt. G. McLeod Baynes for the distribution of a series of Official British War Pictures which were presented with extreme success at the Strand theatre in New York. Mr. Laemmle obtained for the Universal Film Mfg. Co. the exclusive rights of distribution in this country and its possessions.

The series is said to be a thrilling production of war pictures entitled "Fighting for Freedom." They are taken from the latest British war films, and are announced as a complete visualization of all the land, air and naval arms of warfare recently wielded by Great Britain in assuring the conquest of the Hun.

The contract was made between the Universal and the Official Government Pictures, Inc., of which company William K. Vanderbilt is president. "Fighting for Freedom" will be released in seven sections, one each week. Following are the titles for the individual episodes: "Admiral Beatty's Fleet in Action," "Bomb Dropping from Aerial Submarine Destroyers," "The Sensational Capture of Bagdad," "Thrilling Feats of the Royal Flying Corps," "Repairing War's Ravages," "Chinese and African Workers Trailing the Hun," and "Britain's Battling Bulldogs—The Navy."

A thrilling impression of the British war strength jumps out of the scenes. The spectator learns that, with all the losses it has suffered, the British Navy is now four times stronger in men and ships than it was in August, 1914, when Germany plunged the world into war.

Goldwyn Reports Success of Initial Year

THE productions made and released by Goldwyn in the company's first year continue to prove exceptional box-office attractions in every section of the country," Goldwyn reports. As evidence of their drawing power, Goldwyn reports that it is in receipt of glowing testimonials from exhibitors who have played and made money on the pictures released in Goldwyn's initial twelvemonth.

"We want to speak a good word for such pictures as 'The Cinderella Man.'" writes Mr. Gibbs, of Huron, S. D., to Goldwyn. "It is the kind of pictures every one thoroughly enjoys. The print was in fine shape, photography excellent, story left a good taste in the mouth, audiences completely satisfied. We have just booked your entire Star Series output for this winter's use and feel that we will get by with them in fine shape."

Manager G. O. Cole, of the K. of P. theatre, Rochester, Nevada, wired: "Just saw 'The Cinderella Man.' Book it for Rochester first Thursday possible. It is one of the best pictures I ever saw."

L. H. Kubley, owner of the Dream theatre, Ketchikan, Alaska, wires: "Due to poor boat service 'Baby Mine' was late getting here. No matter how late it was it was well worth waiting for and every one that saw it was highly pleased. The people of Alaska are well satisfied with Goldwyn pictures."

Vera Royer in Metro's "Lady Frederick"

VERA ROYER has been engaged by Herbert Blache as an additional member of Ethel Barrymore's Metro company producing "Lady Frederick," a picturization by June Mathis and Katharine Kavanaugh of the W. Somerset Maugham drama in which Miss Barrymore appeared on Broadway.

Miss Royer, who was last seen in a Metro picture in the part of Clara Oakes, the artist, in "A Man's World," with Emily Stevens, will play a French maid in the Barrymore production. Other Metro pictures in which she has been seen include "The Outsider," with Emmy Wehlen, "Life's Whirlpool," with her present star, Miss Barrymore, and a number of Metro-Drew comedies.

A portrait of Miss Royer, by Olinsky, was shown at the spring exhibit at the Academy of Arts, and she has posed for illustrations and paintings by Will Grefe, Carroll Beckwith, William Chase, Haskell Coffin, Alden Weir, Francis Jones and others. Miss Royer is an enthusiastic worker in war charities. She has also done entertaining for the sailors at the Navy Hospital, Brooklyn, in co-operation with Theodora Booth of the Girls' National Honor Guard.

Miss Royer was born in Akron, Ohio, but was educated in the South, at the Randolph-Macon School at Lynchburg, Va., and has spent some time in Florida. She is one of the more promising of the younger actresses of the screen.

Marion Davies on Third Select Picture

MARION DAVIES will return to New York next week to commence work on the filming of her third Select Picture, which will immediately follow "The Burden of Proof," now being cut and titled for release during September.

In Miss Davies' third Select Picture, Julius Steger, her director announces that she will portray a type decidedly different from anything she has previously done. In "Cecilia of the Pink Roses" Miss Davies' first Select Picture, she played the part of a young girl of a lower station in life who was introduced to a vast fortune, but who retained the sweet girlish spirit of her early life.

In "The Burden of Proof" Miss Davies has the part of a young society girl who becomes involved in the work of the enemy's secret service. Mr. Steger is closely guarding the secrets of Miss Davies' third Select Picture.

Strong Cast Promised for "What Love Forgives"

The casting director of World Pictures is said to have surrounded Barbara Castleton with an unusual number of well-known actors for her forthcoming production of "What Love Forgives." Among the more prominent are John Bowers, Johnny Hines and Muriel Ostriche. Perry N. Vekroff, the director, has been busy for the last week checking up locations selected to give the proper environment to this photoplay. The interiors are now being made at the World studio. This picture is to be released early next spring.

The story was written by Gardner Hunting and drew its inspirations from the poem.

Emmy Wehlen Awaits Subject

Emmy Wehlen is sojourning in the wilds of the Adirondacks, and the entire scenario staff at the Metro Studio is on a still hunt for a new feature picture for her. An effort is being made to provide Miss Wehlen with a subject as strong as her forthcoming production, "His Bonded Wife," by Lois and Arthur Zellner, already completed under the direction of Charles J. Brabin, which will have early release, and "The House of Gold," by Katharine Kavanaugh, the production in which Miss Wehlen has been seen most recently.

"Liberty Loan Jimmy" Is Metro Contribution

The euphonic title of "Liberty Loan Jimmy" has been selected for the vehicle Harold Lockwood, Metro star, has just completed in the interest of the Fourth Liberty Loan. The picture presents Mr. Lockwood as Jimmy, a munitions worker, who insists that all of his father's employees must buy Liberty bonds, and who works up enthusiasm with his yell: "To hell with the Kaiser; down with the Hun."

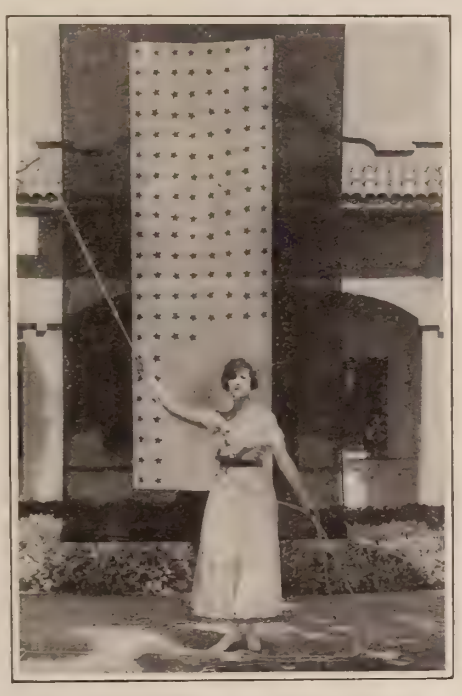
Jimmy enters the library where his father is in conference with a man who proves himself to be pro-German when he is asked to buy Liberty bonds. Taking the issue in his hands, Jimmy throws the German sympathizer out of the house and then returns to his father to take his subscription for a large amount of bonds.

The script for the picture was written by Mr. Lockwood in collaboration with his managing director, Edwin Carewe, who also staged the vehicle. Frank Currier and Louis Stern are among those appearing in support of the star.

Hart Begins Special Loan Picture

Wm. S. Hart is at work on a special film, at the request of the Treasury Department, for propaganda purposes in connection with the Fourth Liberty Loan. It will run about 500 feet and was written by Mr. Hart himself.

The sole and direct aim is to stimulate sales of bonds in the forthcoming campaign and has not yet been titled. It will be delivered in negative form to the Government and distributed through the channels controlled by the Treasury Department.



Thomas H. Ince Supervised the Production of the Charles Ray-Paramount Liberty Loan Film

Alice Brady in New Propaganda Film

Lieut. Edward H. Griffith, war department, U. S. A., attached to the commission on training camp activities, who is directing the Government's forthcoming propaganda film, "The End of the Road," spent several days with his company at the Paragon studios last week, where one of Alice Brady's forthcoming Select Pictures is being filmed. Miss Brady gladly consented to be "borrowed" for several of the scenes.

This latest of the Government's propaganda pictures which Mr. Griffiths is directing, is part of the Government's fight to keep camp communities clean physically and morally. The company includes Richard Bennett, who will be remembered for his work in "Damaged Goods," and "The Very Idea"; Sergt. Raymond McKee, who played in "The Unbeliever"; Robert Cain and Arthur Housman. The picture will be released under the authority of Surgeon General Gorgas, U. S. A., and will follow "Fit to Fight," the Government's earlier picture on the same subject.

Lockwood Turns Attention to Loan Picture

Having completed his newest subject, "Pals First," which Metro announces for early release as a Screen Classics, Inc., production, Harold Lockwood will next turn his attention to the filmization of an urgent appeal for subscribers to the Fourth Liberty Loan. Mr. Lockwood is one of the number of stars invited by the committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Madge Kennedy Is a Charming Jeanne d'Arc in Her Liberty Loan Production Made by Goldwyn

Five Stars Take Part

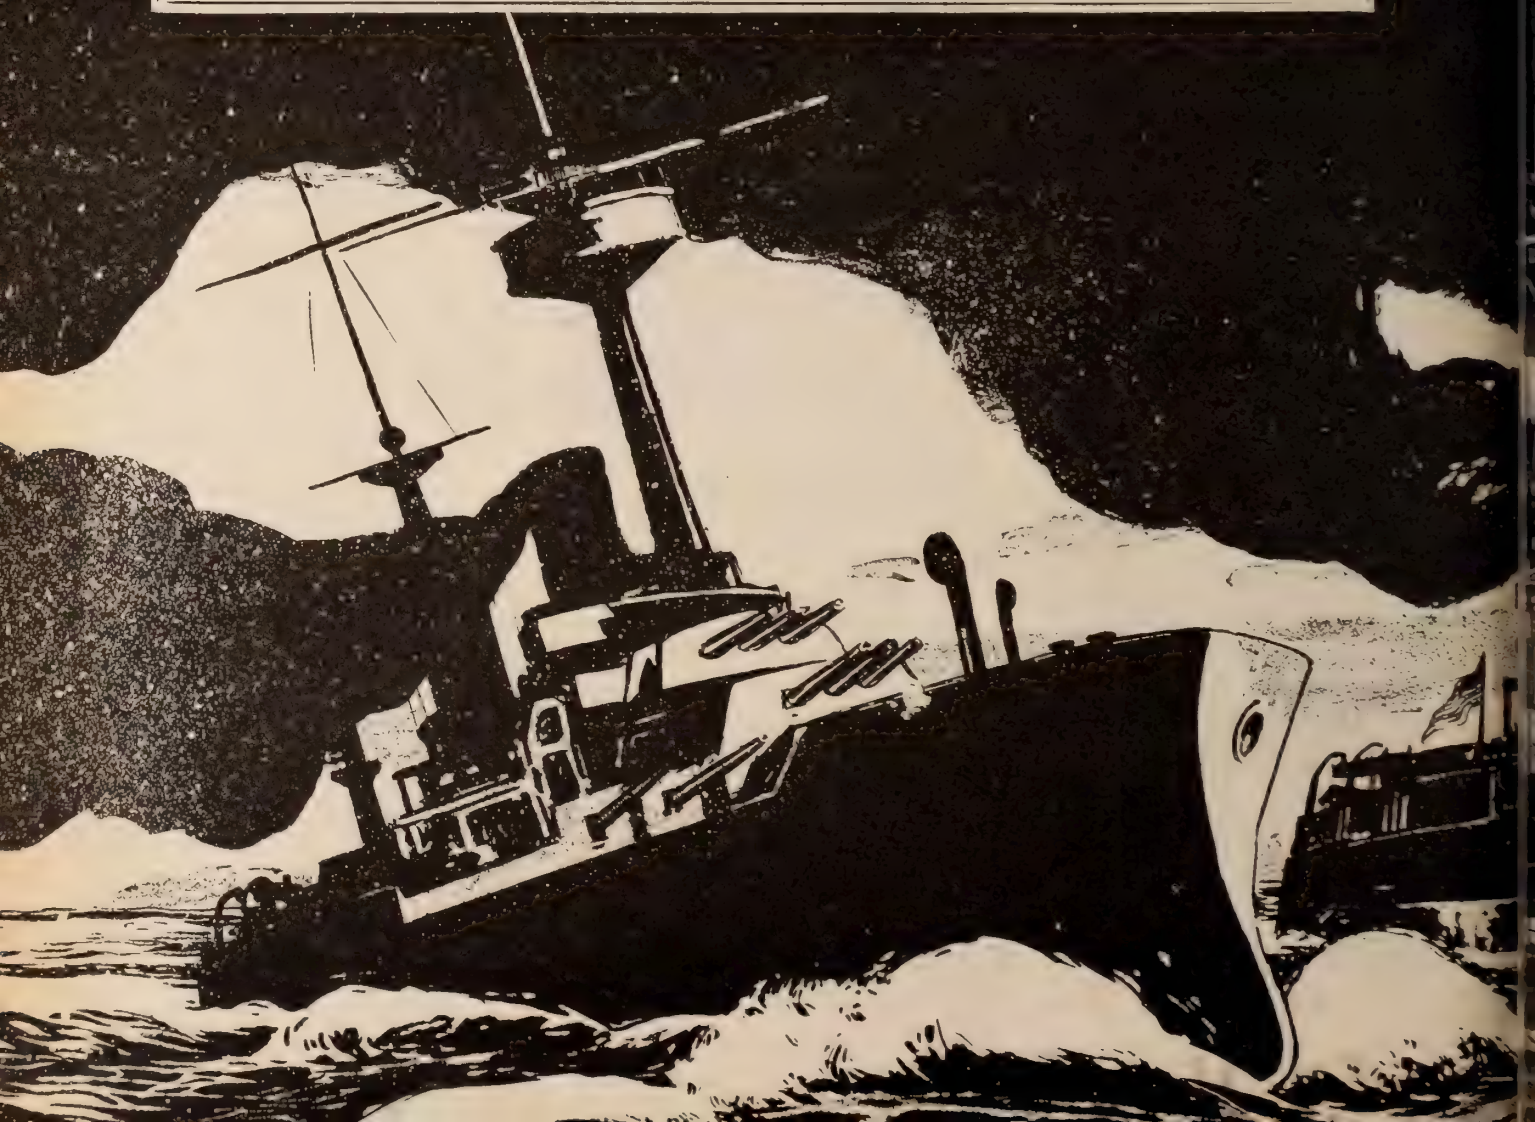
"The Story of the Biggest Game Ever Played" is the title of Goldwyn's all-star contribution to the thousand-foot motion pictures being made throughout the industry to boost the Fourth Liberty Loan.

Five Goldwyn stars have parts in the propaganda drama — Pauline Frederick, Mabel Normand, Madge Kennedy, Mae Marsh and Tom Moore. A dozen other screen players of note are in "The Story of the Biggest Game Ever Played," written by Willard Mack. Among them are John Sainpolis, Mabel Ballin, Matt Moore, Tom Moore's brother; J. W. Herbert, Barry Whitcombe, Captain Joseph Morrison, James Marcus, Clarence Oliver, A. C. Gibbons, Henderson T. Murray and Ed Sturgis. And Hobart Henley, who used to be a crack actor before he began to be a crack director, has a part, as has Carlyle Moore, an assistant director at the Goldwyn studios.

The direction of the special film is in the hands of Hugo Ballin, Goldwyn's art director. Three Goldwyn cameramen—Oliver T. Marsh, Louis Physioc and Arthur Cadwell—are responsible for the photography.

"The Story of the Biggest Game Ever Played" concerns a poker game, started by the Kaiser.

"What do you know about the game?" demands the Kaiser when Uncle Sam asks for a hand.



"I'm out of practice, but I used to play pretty well," replies Uncle Sam, modestly.

When Uncle Sam sits at the table Miss Liberty Loan disappears and there flash on the screen a thousand pairs of hands reaching for the bonds she offers for sale.

WARNING

To Every Exhibitor Who Has Played "The Kaiser, The Beast of Berlin"

DO not be caught napping, but arrange IMMEDIATELY with the nearest Jewel office for the quickest possible booking on our newest success, "CRASHING THROUGH TO BERLIN."

If you fail to do so, you will miss a chance to do just as well as you did on "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin."

"CRASHING THROUGH TO BERLIN" is creating just as much of a sensation as "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin."

"CRASHING THROUGH TO BERLIN" is just as timely as "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin."

"CRASHING THROUGH TO BERLIN" is booking just as fast and at the same prices as "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin."

"CRASHING THROUGH TO BERLIN" has been praised just as highly by newspaper critics as "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin."

As far as we can recall, this is the first time in the history of the business that any producing company, immediately after marketing such a world-beating success as "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," has followed it right up with another picture equally successful. While other companies have busied themselves making imitations of the great "Kaiser Picture," we have gone just a step ahead and have given the trade the very thing it needs—something newer, something different, something that is bound to set the American public wild with enthusiasm just when the American soldiers are mopping up the Hun and just when the new draft of men from 18 to 45 years of age has brought the war closer to the heart of America's millions than ever before.

Don't waste a minute. Make sure of another clean-up such as you made on "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin." Arrange today for your booking on

Additional Live News from the Producers

Keeney Prepares to Resume Operations

The Frank A Keeney Pictures Corporation is preparing to resume operations actively within a few days, putting out feature photoplays by leading authors and with well-known stars. Following last week's announcement of Mr. Keeney's purchase of the new studios erected at 308-12 East Forty-eighth street by the Manhattan Studios, Inc., under the supervision of its president, John W. Mahan, Mr. Keeney is putting in new equipment to make the studios up-to-date in every particular.

"I have gone ahead thus far," says Mr. Keeney, "on the assumption that the public wants high-class, artistic pictures, correct in every detail of production as well as pictures with a punch; in other words, a combination of punch and class. The public is prosperous nowadays and has money enough to pay for goods of the right sort. In all lines there is a general turn-down of shoddy stuff. This is quite as true of entertainments as it is of merchandise. One reason is the general prosperity and another is the gradual uplift in the quality of public appreciation of things which are artistic and correct."

Sounds Strange, But Press Agent Said So

Bill Parsons, smiling star of Capitol Comedies, would rather play with children and dogs than eat. And this is literal, not figurative.

Recently "Smiling Bill" was invited to a fashionable home on Orange Grove avenue, Pasadena, as the honored guest at a dinner. When the guests were ready to go in, the host and hostess looked in vain for Bill. The comedian had dropped from sight. Dinner was held up while the guests joined in a frantic search for the picture star. And finally he was run to earth in the gardens of the beautiful home, surrounded by a score of admiring tots and as many dogs. Bill had invited the neighbors' children over "to play in his yard" and had entirely forgotten the dinner party of grown-ups. There were loud wails when the protesting comedian was dragged from the children's midst.

Hayakawa Pictures in All Moss Houses

B. S. Moss, through a contract executed by Sam Rork for the Hayworth Pictures Corp., and the Mutual, has secured the pre-release showing in New York of the series of eight features starring Sessue Hayakawa, to play the string of Moss houses in New York and Brooklyn for three days each.

The first of the pictures will be "His Birthright," which is released for presentation on September 2-3-4. After the pre-release dates have been played the pictures will be released as part of the Mutual program.

For Higher Quality in Pictures

All Producers Are Striving for Higher Quality as Is Evidenced by Recent Releases; Fox Announces Definite Plan

Virginia Pearson, William Fox Star, In "Queen of Hearts"

ONE does not have to delve very deeply into the annals of motion pictures to be convinced that the trend is very decidedly upward. One of the most pronounced evidences of this, just now, is the great increase in the production of dramatized versions of well known novels and stage successes. The rights to books and plays that have passed public muster and run the long gamut of popular success were too expensive for the earlier days of the industry.

It has come to be recognized that the stories which have appealed to millions of readers and the plays that have enjoyed a year or two of Broadway success repay, through the advertising they give the picture, every cent of extra cost.

Probably there will be more stage successes and dramatized novels made into film during the 1918-19 season than have been shown in all of the previous history of the motion picture industry. William Fox, as an illustration, has announced a list of such productions that is considerably more than equivalent to his whole previous output of this class of plays.

According to his publicity department, Mr. Fox intends not to confine this type of production to any one brand of pictures, but to make it a definite and fixed general policy. In furtherance of this idea, he announces that Virginia Pearson, one of the stars in his Excel Pictures series, has commenced the filming of a dramatization of "Buchanan's Wife," a novel written by the late Justus Miles Forman. This author, it will be remembered, was one of the victims of the ill-starred Lusitania on May 7, 1915, and at the time of his death held high rank among America's most successful writers. The Pearson production of his novel will be under the direction of Edmund Lawrence, and, it is announced, will be substantially without variation from the original story.

Four of Zane Grey's western stories are on the list, two of Charles Alden Seltzer's novels and several others. The Grey stories probably will be released in the Standard Pictures classification, the Seltzer novels as Victory Pictures, and "Buchanan's Wife," afore-mentioned, as an Excel Picture. The latter series also will start with a Peggy Hyland production that is a dramatization based on the theme of a world-famous song, "Bonnie Annie Laurie."

The case of this producer, however, is but one instance cited from among a number. The whole tendency of the motion picture business is toward a higher standard of production, and those who are best informed believe it will keep pace steadily with public and exhibitor demand.

Christie Company Increases Territory

Four new states have been added to the territory receiving Christie comedies. This change was affected just a few days ago by J. L. Friedman, of the Celebrated Film Service of Chicago. The newly acquired States are named by Mr. Friedman as being, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota. The following States were already receiving the Christie output through Mr. Friedman's film service: Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska. Entire satisfaction has been experienced by exhibitors receiving Christie comedies through the Celebrated Film Service, managed by Mr. Friedman and the exhibitors in the newly annexed territory are assured a like satisfying service as far as the distribution of the Christie-made comedy is concerned. Prompt, efficient service, is the slogan of Mr. Friedman's distribution service, which has attained marked success in the handling of comedies made at the Christie plant in Hollywood.

Government Scenes in Vitagraph Production

Through the co-operation of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission, under whose auspices J. Stuart Blackton is now producing "The Common Cause," the super feature to be distributed by the Vitagraph Company as a special in eight reels, thousands of feet of official government film will be placed at Commodore Blackton's disposal for him to select the scenes which he wishes to incorporate in the action of the photoplay.

Frederick Burlingham Flirted With Death for Seventeen Years While Securing Pictures of the Swiss Alps. The William L. Sherry Service Is Releasing Them, One Every Two Weeks. Mr. Burlingham Intends to Go Back for More Shortly

Travel Films Show Much Perseverance

The Burlingham Travel Pictures, secured by Frederick Burlingham, the American traveler, and being released through the Sherry Service, are excellent examples of the perseverance and skill needed to secure really worth-while reels of this nature. It has been said that Mr. Burlingham, who spent the past seventeen years in the Swiss Alps, "starts where others leave off," in that he never "shoots" a climb up a mountain unless he is certain of getting the top registered on the film. For this reason it has been common for Mr. Burlingham to first climb the mountain and "shoot" from the top downward. Exhibitors realizing the peril attached to securing scenes of the Alps will readily understand the merit of films which Mr. Burlingham has brought back with him for the entertainment of American audiences. In securing these pictures Mr. Burlingham had many narrow escapes from death and lost many cameras in falls down the mountain sides. But, as his mountain climbing is his favorite hobby, the globe-trotter would begin all over again.

To a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS Mr. Burlingham said: "I cannot emphasize too strongly that these pictures which the Sherry Service will release, beginning September 1, are not educational reels in any sense of the word. They are not meant to educate, but to entertain, although they contain as much educational value as any productions of like nature. In fact, the London school authorities have said every school child in Great Britain should see them."

The first release, now current, is "Facing Death on the Blumlisalp." In this picture is shown how Mr. Burlingham's whole expedition, by the breaking of an ice cornice on the summit, escaped death by a hair's breadth.

Pathe Claims News Scoop

Pathe claims the credit for exhibiting the first pictures of the landing of the Allied troops in Vladivostok. The Hearst-Pathe News No. 68 scored through the enterprise of M. George Ercole, the war photographer of Pathe Freres in Paris.

Effect of East-to-West Exodus

A Moot Question Is How the Reported Exodus of the Producing Companies from East to West Will Affect Those Who Remain East

ALREADY has the effect of the contemplated removal of the producing companies to studios in California made its influence felt in the matter of salaries of actors who want to remain in and around New York. Each day a large number of prominent motion picture talent is finding its way to the World Studio at Fort Lee seeking engagements that will give them regular employment with this company. Artists, who in the past have been able to command salaries ranging from $150 to $300 a week, are now willing to enter into contracts where their remuneration will run from 25 to 50 per cent. less.

The reason for their willingness to accept a radical reduction in their pay rests solely on their knowledge that New York being the theatrical producing centre, it is possible for them to secure engagements in attractions running on Broadway and, on such days, that they are at liberty they are able to pick up extra money in moving picture studios. They also realize that if they go to California they can expect no other employment except in the motion picture work.

And even to-day there are cases without number where actors are making tidy sums combining legitimate with their picture work. Another reason to-day why the actor does not wish to go to California is because being so far distant from the centre of theatrical activity he is soon forgotten by the managers, and when he does return to these parts it will be difficult, indeed, for him to re-establish himself in his original line of endeavor.

An actor considers it essential that he should constantly be before the eyes of the manager either in plays or through personal calls.

Where in the past the personnel of moving picture companies was composed of a great number of actors whose theatrical experience was limited to third and fourth companies, to-day the very best talent are more than anxious to earn extra money by screen work.

From the foregoing it will be seen that from this condition of affairs, the film companies who continue to make their product here in the East will be able to secure the services of the very best talent in this country at a figure considerably less than has obtained in the past, and, moreover, with less difficulty be able to secure the highest degree of ability.

This, in turn, will be of great benefit to the exhibitor in the matter of better pictures and better pictures mean bigger box-office returns.

Bernstein Pays for "Pink Pajamas"

Isadore Bernstein, production manager of the National Film Corporation, has just mailed a large sized check to a pretty Red Cross nurse, Anne Scott, in Europe. It wasn't meant for a Red Cross donation, but may turn out so. It was in payment for "A Pair of Pink Pajamas." (Naturally you wonder why Bernstein should pay the lady for a pair of pajamas, but the truth is, it is the title of Bill Parsons' latest Capitol comedy, of which Miss Scott is the author.)

Parker Joins Fairbanks

Douglas Fairbanks last week announced that he had engaged Albert Parker to be a member of his directorial staff, which also includes Allan Dwan and Art Rosson.

Mr. Parker played with Fairbanks in "American Aristocracy" and "In Again, Out Again," and while on the speaking stage followed Douglas in "The Man of the Hour," and was with him in the cast of "The Gentleman from Mississippi."

Fall Season Now in Full Swing

Adolph Zukor Outlines Activities of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for Season Already Under Way for 1918-19

IN addition to beginning the new year for the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, September 1 marked the opening day of Paramount and Artcraft week throughout the entire country. Many exhibitors in the United States are playing a week of exclusive presentation of Paramount and Artcraft pictures, and many large exhibitors are said to be running one Paramount or Artcraft picture for the seven days.

Over forty of the large newspapers in the United States, said to cover a circulation of 30,147,583 readers, carried full page advertisements in which every theatre that announced Paramount and Artcraft week was represented, and the bill of each of these theatres for the entire week was given space in these advertisements. In the current issue of the Saturday Evening Post, a two-page advertisement also heralds Paramount and Artcraft week to 14,000,000 readers. Thus the total number of readers who have seen these announcements is said to be 44,147,915, including those who read announcements of Paramount and Artcraft week presented on billboards all over the country in a national billboard campaign.

Adolph Zukor, president, said:

"The new year should prove the greatest in the history of the motion picture. Never before has the screen been called upon to do such important work as is clearly cut out for it during the season 1918-19. The Government has decided that the motion picture industry is essential, that it is an important factor in winning the war. That the motion picture industry will more than live up to this faith placed in it by the Government is apparent from its past achievements in this direction.

"The entire organization of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has been dedicated to two purposes, to help keep up the spirit of America and to perpetuate and refine the art of the motion picture. For the season of 1918-19 we have laid out the most ambitious plan ever conceived by any film organization. As has been previously announced, there will be 208 feature productions released under the Paramount and Artcraft trade-marks. Besides this there will be 156 short subjects, including educational and comic films. Thus the output of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is being doubled for the new season.

"The stars who will be seen in these pictures are Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, William S. Hart, Enrico Caruso, Fred Stone, Elsie Ferguson, George M. Cohan, John Barrymore, Enid Bennett, Billy Burke, Lina Cavalieri, Marguerite Clark, Ethel Clayton, Dorothy Dalton, Pauline Frederick, Dorothy Gish, Lila Lee, Vivian Martin, Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex, Charles Ray, Wallace Reid and Bryant Washburn. Each one a star of national popularity, these artists will be presented in subjects disclosing the greatest work of screendom's foremost masters of cinema production.

Peggy Hopkins Is the Principal Figure In "Hick Manhattan," Paramount-Flagg Comedy

"D. W. Griffith, whose initial Artcraft picture, 'The Great Love,' has attracted international attention and favor, has already started work on his next film to be distributed by our organization. From his studios will come more achievements in the motion picture art for Artcraft distribution, films that will be offered direct to the exhibitor instead of to the two-dollar 'legitimate' theatres who for the past few years have been given the opportunity to offer the initial presentations of his wonderful productions."

Fox Studios Report Nine Films in Work

Nine productions are reported as now in work for the Fox Film Corporation. Three of these are being produced in the West and the six others in the East.

At Hollywood, Cal., J. Gordon Edwards has begun on his thirtieth production for William Fox, "The Siren's Son." William Farnum is in his third week on the great picture written for him by Frank Lloyd, "The Man of Power." Tom Mix and his company, under the direction of Lynn Reynolds, are at Prescott, in their fourth week of filming "The Two-Gun Man."

Peggy Hyland, in the East, is nearing the completion of her latest play, "Marriages Are Made." Virginia Pearson has begun on "Buchanan's Wife," and George Walsh, under the direction of his brother, R. A. Walsh, is nearing the completion of a new comedy drama, "On the Jump." Jane and Katherine Lee are on the final week of their first production under the direction of Arvid E. Gillstrom, "Swat the Spy."

Evelyn Nesbit is working on "The Woman Who Gave," the first of the five big productions which this actress will make, and Richard Stanton is busy filming scenes of "Why I Would Not Marry," the morality picture based on the love affairs of a beautiful woman.

Eltinge Begins One for Balshofer

Deep interest was centered last week in the activities at the studio of Over the Rhine Company on Gordon street, Hollywood, Cal., where a few days ago Julian Eltinge began work on a new picture. That Eltinge should be again at work before the camera after the broadcast announcement that he had retired from screen activities and after contracts had been closed with William Morris for an extended vaudeville tour is being generally discussed.

The impression is that Mr. Eltinge changed his mind regarding the film through learning of a story "Over the Rhine," written by his friend, Fred J. Balshofer, in collaboration with Charles A. Taylor. It is said that the entire turn about of events occurred during a dinner tendered Mr. Balshofer by Mr. Eltinge, when, learning of the patriotic appeal of the former's idea, he became enthusiastic over the possibilities of the production and decided immediately to postpone all other engagements and start work on "Over the Rhine."

Brady's "Stolen Orders" Opens Loew House

"Stolen Orders," William A. Brady's screen story of diplomatic intrigue interpreted by a cast headed by Kitty Gordon, Carlyle Blackwell, Montagu Love and June Elvidge, has been selected as the opening feature attraction for Marcus Loew's new $2,000,000 Brooklyn theatre, the Metropolitan.

The new Loew house, which has a capacity of 4,000, it is understood, will open the latter part of September. Following its presentation at the Metropolitan, "Stolen Orders" will play the other houses of the Loew circuit.

Bugbee with Goldwyn

Karl A. Bugbee, of the Bugbee Special Features Attractions, New Orleans, La., announced this week that the organization has discontinued business, and Mr. Bugbee has joined the Goldwyn branch office at New Orleans.

"Money Isn't Everything" Has Margarita Fisher As Star. It Is An American Film Production

Here We See Edith Roberts, Bluebird Player, Cry Herself Out of Jail in the Release Called "Beans." On the Right Is One of the Most Recent Universal Productions

Clark in "Wildflower" Second "Success" Re-Issue

The second of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's Success Series of re-issues, released September 8th, is "Wildflower," in which Marguerite Clark made her first appearance in motion pictures. She had the good fortune to have as leading man Harold Lockwood, while in the cast are also Jack Pickford, E. L. Davenport and James Cooley. Allan Dwan, at present director for Douglas Fairbanks, had charge of the production work.

A story of the lights and shadows of the sun-kissed forest, "Wildflower" is said to be especially appealing to the young folks —and the old folks have always liked it too.

Governors Behind Universal Fire Film

Universal announced this week that Harry Levey, director of the Industrial Department of the organization, has received letters from every Governor in the Union, pledging themselves to help in the new movement to fight fire and spies. The Industrial Department will shortly issue a picture depicting methods of preventing fire of all causes, and particularly how to combat the menace of hidden enemies.

It is expected the forthcoming film will be the means of preventing property loss running into the millions, and of saving thousands of lives. The Universal has collected data showing that in normal times there is a fire every minute of the day and night, all of which are preventable.

Griffith Completes Second Artcraft Film

Griffith's second production for release through Artcraft Pictures is "A Romance of Happy Valley."

This is said to be the first time in more than five years that Mr. Griffith has wrapped his film around homespun humanity, and he is said to have found a classic in its folds, vivid in action, laughable in details and tense in effect.

Jewel Plans Intensive Campaign

Jewel Productions Inaugurating System of Advertising and Distribution to Intensively Exploit Its Forthcoming Feature Productions

JEWEL PRODUCTIONS, INC., has opened an intensive campaign among its exchanges to exploit current and forthcoming feature productions. It is the purpose of H. N. Berman, sales manager, to inaugurate a system of advertising and distribution that will take the last ounce of waste effort out of the company's operations, and to provide the last degree of help in every direction for the exchange men.

As part of this plan, Hal Hodes, assistant sales manager, leaves this week on a tour of the exchanges, prepared to provide a special advertising program for each exchange executive. His task will be to pass enough time in each district to thoroughly educate the exchange men on the new campaign, and also to get the benefit of the ideas they may have developed for their own needs.

Jewel announces that it now has a number of first magnitude films in circulation and that others are rapidly on the way to release. Some of the current productions are the following: "Crashing Through to Berlin," "The Doctor and the Woman," "For Husbands Only," "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," "The Geezer of Berlin," "The Price of a Good Time," "The Co-Respondent" and "A Soul for Sale."

The tentative itinerary for Mr. Hodes takes him west as far as Minneapolis, and will keep him on the road about a month. However, he may cover a wider territory and remain away a much longer time.

Jewel reports tremendous success with all the films that have thus far borne its trade name. The policy previously followed, by which this company has confined its attention exclusively to big productions, each possessing some unique appeal, will be followed, it is declared, in the future.

The expectations are that all Jewel films now on the market will remain in circulation for an indefinite period. Jewel reports that although the prints have been widely circulated, and bookings made rapidly and without let-up, none of the films anywhere have yet exhausted their field.

"In most cases the demand has created a list of advance bookings extending far into the future," said a Jewel official. "'The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin,' for instance, bids fair to break records in respect to second and third bookings. 'The Geezer of Berlin,' likewise, is assured of equal distribution, drawing its patronage especially from the great audience created by its forerunner, which it was produced to throw satire upon."

Thornby Directs Allison in Metro Pictures

Robert T. Thornby has been engaged by George D. Baker, manager of production at Metro's west coast studios in Hollywood, to direct May Allison in her newest starring vehicle, "Kate of Kentucky," by George D. Baker and Thomas J. Geraghty. This is Miss Allison's third picture to be made on the west coast, following "The Testing of Mildred Vane" and "The Return of Mary."

Thornby first directed for World Film Company in the east, and then for Paramount in the west. He has directed also for Pathe, Universal and Fox.

Gordon Griffith, twelve-year-old actor, is cast in a showy role with Bert Lytell in the Metro star's newest picture as yet unnamed, now under production at Metro's west coast studios in Hollywood. Master Griffith has the part of the heroine's "kid" brother, who is largely responsible for the happy outcome of her romance. He played the child Tarzan in "Tarzan of the Apes."

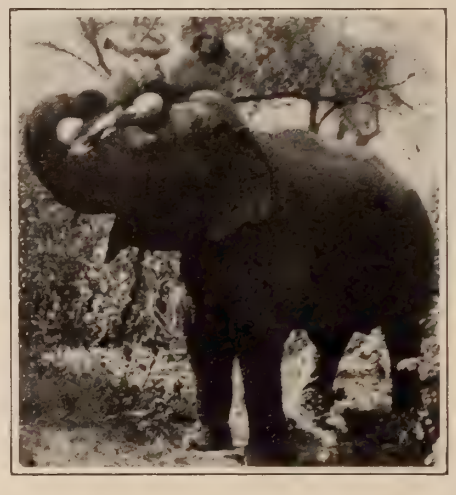
Hotaling Directs Comedies

Arthur D. Hotaling, who directed "The Geezer of Berlin" for Jewel, has been established at Universal City, and is in charge of the Lyons-Moran Comedies.

He is now directing the company on a picture entitled "The Million-Dollar Maid."

Coming Program Offerings

"First National" Releases Five



Chaplin, Petrova and Anita Stewart Productions Scheduled for Next Two Months—All Said to Be Super-Features

THE coming two months will be momentous ones, it is said, in the history of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, owing to the number of releases that are scheduled for presentation in first-run houses during that time. The First National has listed five super-features that are declared good for exceptional runs in every instance.

"The Romance of Tarzan," sequel to "Tarzan of the Apes," will be released on the 16th of September. A comprehensive advertising and publicity campaign is now under way to assure this production of adequate exploitation. It is expected that every theatre that booked the first of these jungle novelties will play the sequel, which is said to be even stronger from a dramatic standpoint.

Charlie Chaplin's second comedy, "Shoulder Arms," is now being cut and assembled under the personal supervision of the comedian himself and will undoubtedly be released on or before the first of October. It has not been definitely decided the exact length in which the production will be distributed.

Mme. Petrova's fifth picture made under her own management, entitled "The Panther Woman," will be shown in first-run houses about two weeks later. The personal tour, which Mme. Petrova has completed in First National theatres, has increased the box-office value of her productions to such an extent that it is predicted "The Panther Woman" will overtop all other features she has made up to date in actual drawing power.

First National Exhibitors' Circuit Is Distributing "The Romance of Tarzan"

Anita Stewart's initial appearance under the joint auspices of Louis B. Mayer and The First National will take place, according to present predictions, about October 1, following "Italy's Flaming Front." The production in which Miss Stewart will first be presented, has not been definitely decided upon, but will undoubtedly be the dramatization of one of the most popular novels of the day. George Loane Tucker has begun work upon this production and the combination of star and director should guarantee exceptional box-office possibilities.

Elaine Hammerstein in "Her Man"—Pathe

ELAINE HAMMERSTEIN in "Her Man," a six-reel special feature picturized by John E. Ince, from Charles Neville Buck's novel, "The Battle Cry," heads a program which Pathe releases the week beginning Sunday, Sept 7. It was produced by the Advance Motion Picture Corporation and directed by Ralph W. Ince.

The locale of this stirring romance is the mountainous sections of Kentucky and treats with the "call of the clan" which is so powereful as to destroy the veneer of civilization and education. In the role of the city-bred girl who returns to assist the people of her ancestors, Miss Hammerstein was given great latitude for personal interpretation and Pathe considers it one of the best productions that it has ever distributed.

Who is the Phantom Rider in "Hands Up," the popular Pathe serial featuring Ruth Roland? This question, asked again and again, is repeated as the mystery deepens and the perils increase in the fourth episode, The "Phantom Trail," released September 8.

Toto, the cinema clown-comedian, will be seen in one of the Rolin comedies, released by Pathe on September 8. It is called "The Dippy Daughter."

The Post Travel Series released by Pathe on September 8 presents its thirteenth subject entitled, "Georgetown, British Guiana."

"All for Liberty," released September 8, is the eleventh of the Official War Review and shows the great accomplishments of the Allies.

Vitagraph Ships New "Big V" Comedies

Shipment of prints was started last week on the first of Vitagraph's "Big V Special" comedies, the new two-reel feature comedy unit which the company will add to its service September 16.

"Misfits and Matrimony," featuring Earle Montgomery and Joe Rock, will inaugurate the "Big V Special," and it is declared by Vitagraph to be the fastest and cleverest comedy this team has produced for the company.

The regular Big V releases in one reel will continue until the last week in September.

Vitagraph Announces First Six on New Plan

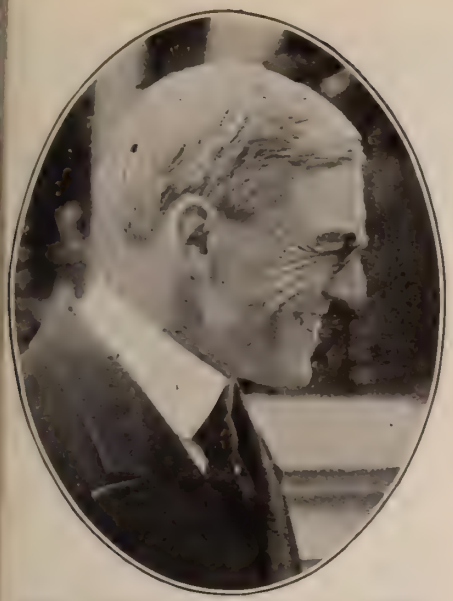
Vitagraph announces the first six Blue Ribbon features under its new booking plan, recently announced to the trade.

In its special announcement a few weeks ago the company, setting an example, gave out the dates for a year of each star's releases. It stated that exhibitors could book on the fifty-two week basis, on a star series basis, a combination of stars or, in an emergency, a single feature. Here are the first six features listed under this new plan:

Septemeber 30—Earle Williams in "A Diplomatic Mission"; written by Don Bartlett; directed by Jack Conway. October 7—Gladys Leslie in "The Mating"; written by Millicent Evison; directed by Frederic Thomson; October 14—Harry T. Morey in "The King of Diamonds"; written by Edward Ballou; directed by Paul Scardon; October 21—Alice Joyce in "Everybody's Girl"; adapted from "Brick Dust Row," a story by O. Henry; directed by Tom Terriss. October 28—Corinne Griffith in "Miss Ambition"; written by Rex Taylor; directed by Henry Houry. November 4—Bessie Love in "The Dawn of Understanding," a story by Bret Harte; directed by David Smith.

Gymnasium in Capitol Comedy

In "The Jelly Fish," the latest Capitol comedy to be started at the National Film Corporation's Hollywood studios starring "Smiling Bill" Parsons, will be shown an exact reproduction of Bill Muldoon's gymnasium on his famous White Plains health farm. Bill says so and Bill ought to know, for they say he has stepped around some.



Gibson in "Danger Ahead"

Helen Gibson is featured in a two-reel railroad drama released by Universal on September 14th. It is entitled "Danger Ahead," and was written by L. Caufield.

Bluebird's release for September 16th is a screaming comedy entitled "Beans," featuring Edith Roberts. The story was written by John B. Clymer and the film produced by Jack Dillon.

"The Italian Battlefront" Booked Strong in West

An important booking of "The Italian Battlefront," the multiple-reel war picture from the Italian Government, has just been secured by Manager D. W. Whitney of General Film Company's Denver exchange.

So far the booking involves eighteen days, the exhibitor being the Americanized Committee of the Colorado District, with headquarters at Boulder. "The Italian Battlefront" is to be shown during mid-September to foreign-born miners in the area about Pueblo for four days and in that about Trinidad for fourteen days under the auspices of this committee.

The booking followed the reception given "The Italian Battlefront" when it played during August as a special attraction in the Grand at Pueblo.

Other Colorado cities that have most recently given the big war thriller an enthusiastic reception, as reported to General Film Company, are Fort Morgan, Brighton, Alliance, Rapid City, Walsenburg and points in Wyoming and Nebraska.

"Road to France" Requires Extra Prints

The demands for pre-releases on the forthcoming World picture, "The Road to France," are said to have assumed such proportions that it has been found necessary to order from the laboratory sixteen more prints than this company has ever issued before.

The subject matter of this picture reported as unusually timely, dealing with the gigantic efforts of this country to provide sufficient shipping to meet the demands of General Pershing both as regards men and food together with adequate munitions to make the drive to Berlin.

The fundamental theme of the "Road to France" is declared to be the very thing that is stirring the blood of American citizens as it has never done before.

It is expected by the World Corporation that Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley in this release will exceed the high-water

Program Glances

It has often been said that New York City is the greatest rube town in America, and James Montgomery Flagg, in his first Paramount-Flagg comedy, "Hick Manhattan," released September 1, attempts to prove it. Peggy Hopkins is star.

The month of September will witness the release of "Pals First," starring Harold Lockwood, according to an announcement by Metro, which will dsitribute the picture under the banner of Screen Classics, Inc.

From the Indianapolis office of General it is reported that series bookings of the O. Henry Stories and of the Wolfville Tales by Alfred Henry Lewis are being made with great readiness by exhibitors throughout the state.

Ethel Clayton makes her last appearance in World Pictures in "A Soul Without Windows." This five-reel feature had its first public presentation on September 30, on which day it was released. The story was written by Julia Burnham and directed by Travers Vale.

"The Trail of the Retreating Hun" is the title of Official War Review No. 10, Pathe announces.

The amateurish efforts of two detectives who do everything but detect will evoke howls of laughter when "Just For To-night," Goldwyn's medium of introducing popular Tom Moore as a star, is released.

"A Nymph of the Foothills," the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature scheduled for release the week of September 8, is said to be a strong romance of tragedy and mystery and the supreme test of a young girl's faith. It presents Gladys Leslie in what is said to be an especially appealing role.

Comedy, fast and furious, is declared to be the keynote of "He Comes Up Smiling," the Artcraft picture released September 15, in which Douglas Fairbanks has the role of a young chap who turns knight of the road and blunders into a big stock deal through his assumption of another's character.

There is a real polo game in which ponies and riders crash against each other in perilous onslaught in "The Brazen Beauty," Bluebird's release for September 9. The picture is rich with scenes of sunny California, mansions and great estates.

William Russell's latest picture, "Hobbs in a Hurry," is an avalanche of pep, ingenuity and applied humor, and is being booked by representatives of the American Film Company, Inc., with great success throughout the thirty-odd selling territories of the corporation. The picture is the first one of a series of eight made by William Russell Productions and handled by the American through Pathe exchanges.

Rex Beach collaborated on the scenario and supervised every detail of the "Laughing Bill Hyde" picturization for Goldwyn, just as he did in the production of his two previous motion pictures, "The Auction Block" and "Heart of the Sunset."

Lila Lee began work last week on her third picture for Paramount under G. Butler Clonbough. It is "The Secret Garden," by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" and many other stories. Marion Fairfax did the scenario.

Dissolving Title Used in Kennedy's Latest

What Goldwyn announces as strikingly interesting and novel is a double exposed title flashed over a scene in "The Kingdom of Youth," Madge Kennedy's latest Goldwyn Picture. It is declared another illustration of Goldwyn's methods of blazing the way to greater achievements in motion picture production.

The incident shows Ruth Betts (Madge Kennedy) struggling in the water after falling out of a skiff while rowing to her yacht anchored in the harbor. As she goes down for the second time there flashes before her eyes a swift panorama of bygone events, and Ruth's vision carries her back to her secret marriage to Jimmy Betts on the eve of his graduation from college several years before. She sees the cottage of the justice of the peace, where they have been secretly married.

Here the title dissolves into a scene visualizing the first of many strange happenings that lead to her struggle with death in the river.

"Hash and Hypnotism"

The latest International black and white comedy, scheduled for release by the Educational early in September, is entitled "Judge Rummy in Hash and Hypnotism." The court may be supreme in the forum of justice, but at home (the International inculcates), like every other mortal, he is at the mercy of the cook. On the occasion which the artist picturizes, the cook had some goodly liver ready for the Judge's supper, but the kitchen cat ate the liver and the cook substituted a nice long cut from a rubber overshoe.

Charles Murray in It

"His Wife's Friend" is the title of the latest Paramount-Mack Sennett comedy scheduled for release September 8, with Charles Murray, Wayland Trask, Gonda Durand and Harry McCoy as the leading comedians. From start to finish this comedy is said to be filled with mirth-provoking action.

Gaumont Announces Sales of Its New Serial

THE Gaumont Company announces that it has sold its twenty-reel photo-serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," to the United Film Exchange, 1314 Vine street, Philadelphia, Pa., for eastern Pennsylvania to the 77th Parallel, and southern New Jersey, including Trenton.

The Celebrated Players Film Corporation, of Chicago, Ill., which has purchased the rights to the Gaumont photo-serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," for the States of Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and North and South Dakota, has arranged for the Four-Square Exchange, of Minneapolis, to handle the distribution in North and South Dakota, Minnesota, and upper Wisconsin.

While the Gaumont Company is said to be well pleased at the success which has attended the showing of its newest photo-serial, it is not surprised at the reception accorded it, says a statement this week.

The story upon which this serial is based is described as a unique one, which was built solely to entertain. It was written for the screen by an author who had in view the sole purpose of constructing a photoplay which would interest.

"Sporting Life" Arouses Much Interest

The fact that "Sporting Life," the Maurice Tourneur picture which will be released independently early in September, will be a companion piece to "The Whip," is said to have aroused wide interest among exhibitors not only in America but across the seas. Hiller & Wilk, Inc., New York selling agents for Maurice Tourneur Productions, have received inquiries from Australia as well as from all sections of this country, it was declared this week in a statement from the company.

"This is distinct proof of the wide popularity of 'Sporting Life' as a stage attraction," said Mr. Tourneur. "'Sporting Life' was a London hit, in fact one of the biggest successes ever presented at that famous home of melodrama, the Drury Lane. It scored again in New York and was widely popular in practically every English speaking country."

Affiliated Explains for Masters

Affiliated Distributors' Corporation, of which H. A. Brink is president; Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel, and W. J. Clark, secretary, has sent out a general letter as follows in regard to the withdrawal of E. Lanning Masters from the organization:

"In the event of your making any announcement of the severance of the relations of Mr. E. Lanning Masters with this organization, will you please see it is made plain that Mr. Masters is leaving Affiliated Distributors' Corporation, because of the pressure of other activities upon his time.

"Mr. Masters is still interested in the development of co-operative booking as promoted by the "Affiliated" plan, and we regret very much that it will be impossible for him to continue to handle the advertising publicity of this organization.

"This statement is sent to you in fairness to Mr. Masters, and to insure the right interpretation being placed upon his withdrawal from Affiliated Distributors' Corporation.

"Thanking you, I am,

"Very truly yours,

"SYDNEY S. COHEN,

"Chairman, "Board of Directors."

Schomer Enthuses Over His New Feature

To prove that he has the courage of his convictions, and that he is convinced "Ruling Passions" is an unusual picture, Abraham Schomer this week caused to be issued from his publicity department the following statement in regard to the production:

"No better result has ever been effected out of the combination of the brains of an author, a director's ability and the earnest and finished efforts of conscientious artists than in 'Ruling Passions,' the new photo-drama written and directed by Abraham S. Schomer and enacted by Julia Dean, Edwin Arden, Claire Whitney, Earl Schenck, and an all-star supporting cast. It was Mr. Schomer who wrote 'To-day,' 'The Yellow Passport' and 'The Inner Man,' plays and photodramas whose popularity is still on the increase and whose drawing powers grow the greater with each passing day, while to mention the achievements by which the artists of his latest production forged their way to the pinnacle of histrionic fame would mean the setting forth of all the greatest dramatic and photo-film successes of the better part of the latest decade."

The invitations for the trade showing of "Ruling Passion," arrangements for which are now being rapidly completed, will be limited. Preference will be given to those who have already communicated with the Schomer Photo Play Production Co., Inc., and to those who in the near future indicate their interest in the play.

Affiliated Distributes Perret Feature

Affiliated Distributors' Corporation this week announced that it has secured the Leonce Perret patriotic motion picture spectacle, "Lafayette, We Come!" as its initial production, to be distributed under the Affiliated co-operative booking plan.

Although Adolphe Osso, business manager for the Perret productions, and C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel for Affiliated, commenced to negotiate the deal several weeks ago, the deal was not closed until a careful study and investigation of the Affiliated plan was made by the producing company. Last week Mr. Osso, representing Leonce Perret, reported that the result of this investigation was favorable and indorsed by his principals.

The positive prints of "Lafayette, We Come!" (Pershing '17) are now being made, and it is anticipated that the medium for the physical distribution of same will be satisfactorily arranged and decided upon during the week so that when the prints are completed no time will be lost in releasing the film.

World's News in Gaumont Graphic

A statement from the publicity department of Gaumont this week said: "Though the newspapers have been full of statements that our airplane program is not up to expectations, the current Gaumont News, No. 23, which was released August 27th, has a subject which will lead Kaiser Bill to think our press has been what our British allies call 'spoofing,' for it contains a number of scenes photographed on a Western flying field under the supervision of Major General Kenly, Chief of the Department of Military Aeronautics, which will, indeed, be bad news for Bill. As far as the eye can see are airplanes and aviators to handle them. When it is considered that this is only one of the many fields now in operation, it will be realized that we intend to succeed.

Houdini Prepares Stunts for New Serial

HARRY HOUDINI'S present act at the Hippodrome, New York, where he opened the season after beginning his first serial for B. A. Rolfe, is said to have several new and interesting phases which Mr. Rolfe intends to use in the film feature wherever it is possible to do so without hurting the story.

"The story in this serial is the first consideration," stated B. A. Rolfe, president of the company, "and I don't propose to drag anything in by the hair, as it were. If there is a logical way to use any of the Houdini accomplishments we are doing it, but first and foremost it must be a part of the story.

"I believe the day of the fight, fight, thrill method of producing serials is over, unless of course the fights are brought in logically and belong to the basic plot instead of starting a fight just for something to do.

"I am making this serial as I would make a feature. The first consideration is story, the second consideration is story, and the third consideration is story. If I have a good tight story that holds interest and that justifies action and thrills I am certain of success.

"Another thing that will not be neglected is tempo," continued Mr. Rolfe, "and it is a well-known fact that this is sorely neglected in most serials. The way a feature approaches the crescendo and all the points of the plot are along converging lines is being used in the development of each episode of the Houdini serial."

United Adds Florence Reed to List

It was announced this week that Florence Reed is the third star whose productions are to be released by United Picture Theatres of America. The other two are Dustin Farnum and Kitty Gordon. President J. A. Berst intends to announce a fourth star in the near future, it was said last week.

The immediate program for Florence Reed is a series of six modern features, directed by John M. Stahl for the Tribune Producing Company. This series, like the Farnum and Gordon pictures, is to be released in the United Picture Theatres exclusively.

The title of the first of the Reed Tribune-United series is as yet undecided.

In regard to Dustin Farnum's picture, "The Light of the Western Stars," United said last week that a special showing would be given at the Chicago convention. The presentation will be in charge of E. J. O'Donnell.

Gordon-Mayer Engage George Robinson

It was announced this week that the Gordon-Mayer Film Corporation, which is rapidly perfecting its organization, has signed George K. Robinson as sales manager and efficiency man. Mr. Robinson was formerly connected with Louis B. Mayer, but for the past four years has been with the Paramount offices in Boston.

H. Hirsch has also joined the forces of the Gordon-Mayer Film Corp. and of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

Blanche Sweet Goes to the West Coast

Blanche Sweet has left for California where she will start work immediately on "The Unpardonable Sin," by Rupert Hughes, a story which recently ran as a serial in the Red Book Magazine, and which has just been published in book form by Harper Bros. "The Unpardonable Sin" will be produced at the Sunset Studio, which Harry Garson, under whose management Miss Sweet is now working, leased some six months ago, and which has been fully remodelled and enlarged. In the meantime the various sets to be used in the picture have all been completed and everything is in readiness awaiting Miss Sweet's arrival. "The Unpardonable Sin" will be the second Sweet picture to be released under the Garson management, her first picture, "The Hushed Hour," having been completed before she left California.

Werner Starts on Trip for Producers

As special representative for the Producers' Distributing Corporation, launching twelve special productions for the coming year beginning with Evelyn Nesbit in "Her Mistake," Arthur M. Werner has started on an extended tour which will keep him on the road for several weeks.

With St. Louis as his first stop, his itinerary includes Kansas City, Omaha, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Salt Lake, Denver, Seattle and San Francisco, from which city he will return to the home office by way of the South, making stops at Los Angeles, New Orleans and Atlanta.

Inter-Ocean London Head Speaks of Conditions

Preparing to depart for London, after a vacation of some weeks spent in this country, John H. Taylor, managing director of Inter-Ocean Films, Ltd., of England, spoke interestingly of American film conditions as viewed on the spot.

"The war seems to have stimulated business on this side," says Mr. Taylor. "I have met few complaining exhibitors. The loss in one class of patrons is made up by the increase in young women, all of whom are earning more than formerly and naturally have more to spend. It is quite similar, in this respect, to the situation existing in England. It appears to be generally accepted that the cinema keeps the morale of the home folks high and so does public service that is recognized and respected. I was especially glad to see the kindly attitude your newspapers hold toward the movie in its war work.

"I am surprised at the scarcity of good foreign subjects in American theatres. I do not believe that American audiences would pass such films if they were advertised as American films are. I mean in the case of the Class 1 foreign production, of course. I know the mediocre sort is not wanted. But the usual picture, the film with the punch and publicity possibilities; your programs would be more interesting for such films, more varied, more compelling and carry wider appeal.

"Indeed here is the great difference between England and America. In the former, American films abound. This is not due to non-production of British films, for of late there have been many, and of striking value. But the British trade wishes to keep its screen international. They do not believe in all-British programs."

Marguerite Snow Tours

N. T. Granlund announced this week that Marguerite Snow has started on a motor tour of New England, appearing in person in the theatres where the picture, "The Eagle's Eye," is shown. Miss Snow has the leading feminine role in the production.

Ohio Censors Pass "Finger of Justice"

It was reported from Cleveland this week that the Ohio censors have passed the picture, "The Finger of Justice," without a single elimination. George Stockton, of the Ohio-Ivan Film Company, recently returned to Cleveland from Columbus, where he showed the picture to the members of the board.

Mr. Stockton has secured the consent of Rev. Paul Smith, the author of the picture, to come to Cleveland and make a series of talks at the various churches, telling what the conditions on the Barbary Coast were as he found them, and what the conditions are now, since he instituted his reform methods. Just what he did, and how he did it, is shown in "The Finger of Justice."

Rialto-De Luxe Features Trade Mark

Rialto-De Luxe Productions announces that it is proudly featuring its new trade mark. The design is from the brush of Burton Rice, whose posters for the first Rialto release, Grace Valentine in "The Unchastened Woman," created comment in fifth industry circles.

It is the intention of the company, as explained by a Rialto Productions official, to express in this mark the high class and artistic excellence of releases put out under the Rialot brand. At the studio experiments are now being made for the preparation of a trailer, an animated Venetian scene, which will dissolve into the Rialto bridge scene shown as a silhouette in the conventionalized trade mark.

Awarded for Entertaining

Dolores Cassinelli, who is co-starring with E. K. Lincoln in Affiliated's production, "Lafayette, We Come!" (Pershing '17), which was produced by Leonce Perret, has been appointed First Lieutenant by Major John B. Brandreth of the Third Battalion, 152d Depot Brigade, United State Army, in recognition of her numerous activities in promoting the welfare and entertainment for the boys at Camp Upton.

Frank Hall Adds to Sales Organization

WITH General Manager Lynn S. Card of the Producers' Distributing Corporation, visiting the important film centres, east of the Mississippi, the roster of Frank Hall's organization is being increased by new names daily. Prominent among the film men recently added to the list are, Philip Meyer, manager of the Liberty Exchange, New York; M. F. Tobias, formerly Exchange manager for the Mutual; A. L. Erghott, of Boston; Grank J. Flaharty, of Chicago; Sam Farber, Jerry Herzog and Frank G. Gillman.

Frank Hall's system of distribution is said to call for experienced film men in every section of the country. Arrangements for distribution of the twelve special productions scheduled for the coming year under the Producers' Distributing Corporation franchise are now nearing completion. Meanwhile, representatives of the company are busily engaged closing contracts for Evelyn Nesbit in "Her Mistake" and the balance of the year's output.

While the fixed-price policy of the new corporation, which limits charges for rentals to $10, $20 and $30 per day, simplifies the work of the salesmen by assuring the exhibitors an equitable contract, the large number of first-run bookings in each city, not only demands the attention of experienced representatives with considerable executive ability, but also calls for men intimately acquainted with the booking conditions in their several localities.

W. H. Sells Foreign Rights to Two Films

IT was announced this week that W. H. Productions Company has sold the rights to Australia and New Zealand for "Carmen of the Klondike" and "Mickey," to Australasian Films, Ltd.

Mr. Johnson, president of Australasian Films, Ltd., who had reviewed "Mickey" several months before, is now said to be very enthusiastic over his purchase of this production. Mr. Johnson stated that the publicity campaign will be carried on in Australia along similar lines to those used by W. H. Productions in this country.

"I know the Australian public will welcome 'Mickey'," said Mr. Johnson, "and that Mickey's appealing ray of sunshine will penetrate to the very hearts of a people living under the great sorrow of the war.

"In all the years of my experience in the film industry I have never allowed myself to become too enthusiastic about any particular motion picture, especially before purchasing. It has been two months since 'Mickey' was screened for me, and while I have made a number of other purchases during this time, I did not close for 'Mickey' for Australia and New Zealand until last week, and, of course, the reason was on account of the extremely high price asked for this territory. But 'Mickey' made a lasting impression on me, and taking up the question with my people in Australia, I was informed that the Australasian exhibitors, and in fact, the public in various sections were already familiar with this forthcoming production and were waiting for same."

Stoermer Out of American Standard

Thomas Bedding announced this week that General Sales Manager William Stoermer, of the American Standard Motion Picture Corporation, has resigned from that organization, his withdrawal taking effect September 1. At the same time, Mr. Bedding announces, W. K. Bielenberg also left the company, which is moving its offices to Chicago. All business of the organization will be conducted from Chicago in the future, Mr. Bedding states.

In regard to Mr. Stoermer, it is said, he intends to devote himself in New York to the affairs of the William Stoermer Enterprises, of which he is president. His plans are to be announced shortly, it is expected.

Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley Are the Featured Players in "By Hook or Crook," World Production

Olive Tell Completes First Star Picture

"SECRET STRINGS," Olive Tell's first subject as an individual Metro star, has now been completed at the Metro studio under the direction of John Ince. "Secret Strings" is a romantic screen drama from the pen of Kate Jordan, originally published in Ainslee's Magazine, and June Mathis has picturized it. This five-act feature has been produced under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger, manager of productions.

Miss Tell's introduction to Metro audiences came through her portrayal of the role of Alice Monroe, the American girl, in the Screen Classics, Inc., superfeature, "To Hell With the Kaiser," in which Lawrence Grant is featured. Her success was such that in "Secret Strings" she is a star in her own right.

"Secret Strings" was produced on the speaking stage with Lou-Tellegen in the leading masculine role. It was chosen for Miss Tell on account of the opportunities provided in the part of Janice. Janice, a young woman of great beauty and charm, finds herself suddenly plunged into a most amazing situation, calling for all her wit and daring. Moments of delicacy are contrasted with scenes of dynamic power.

The settings for "Secret Strings" are said to be beautiful in the extreme, calling for magnificent estates. Homes on Long Island and in Westchester county, including the Roscoe Conklin estate and the Capt. Delmar estate, were used as backgrounds for this picture. Some unusually attractive beach scenes were photographed, Metro claims.

William J. Kelly is Miss Tell's leading man in "Secret Strings," in the part of the master crook, played by Lou-Tellegen in the stage version.

Stockton Exploits Smith Film in Ohio

It was announced this week that George L. Stockton is exploiting personally "The Finger of Justice" in Ohio, which State is controlled for the production by Ohio-Ivan Film Service through arrangements with Arrow Film Corporation.

It is said Mr. Stockton has been able to align the mayor and chief of police of Cleveland in the cause, as well as the Anti-Saloon League and other organizations opposing vice.

Gaumont Graphic Shows War Views

Gaumont Graphic, No. 23, which the Gaumont organization announced for release August 30, contained many interesting war views in the seven subjects scheduled. The reel opened with a few shots of the flame-swept Revere Beach, near Boston, and included the following: Pelham Naval Station defeats teams from American and foreign warships at New York City in athletic events; Civil War Veterans at Portland, Ore.; shipbuilding revived in New Hampshire; launching of cup defender at Detroit; bathing girls at Venice, Cal., sell thrift stamps, and the official war review from somewhere in France. The latter subject carries ten subjects.

Arrow to Release Hun Production

The Arrow Film Corporation announced this week that it is preparing for the state rights market a six-part photodrama called "Huns Within Our Gates," in which Derwent Hall Caine, son of the author, and Valda Valkyrien are starred. The production is completed, it is said, and is being edited and titled at the Thanhouser Laboratories by Madame Marie Genores and Jesse J. Goldberg. The release date set for the picture by Arrow is announced as September 15.

The production deals with the operations of enemy aliens in America who seek to control the invention of an American citizen, which is a powerfuly chemical.

Studio Short Notes

William Desmond is to be a Western actor, Triangle officials have decided, and he is shortly to begin work in the third photoplay of this character. The decision was reached after two Western subjects had been made with Mr. Desmond in the leading role. The first was "Wild Life," and during the past week the last scenes for "The Pretender," originally titled "The Tenderfoot School Master," were filmed. When this was seen on the screen all were unanimous in the opinion that Desmond would prove more popular in photoplays of this character than in the subjects he had played in during the past two years or more. "The Pretender" was directed by Cliff Smith, and Ethel Fleming was Desmond's leading woman. The story was written by Alvin J. Neitz, and many of the scenes were taken near Randsburg, Cal., a typical frontier town even today, where all kinds of Western action was registered on the celluloid with Desmond as a daring Western horseman.

Desmond now passes under the direction of T. M. Heffron and filming of "The Passing of Deuce Duncan" will be started in a day or two. This story is by George Hively, and Luella Maxim will be the leading woman. Miss Maxim is an expert horsewoman and has played in scores of Western subjects dating as far back as the Indian comedies created for Kalem in the Glendale foothills four or five years ago. Ed Brady, George Fields, William Ellingford and Joe Singleton are in the cast.

This will give Triangle two Western companies, as Roy Stewart, who will continue in this character of photoplays, has just returned from a month's vacation which he spent motoring to various resorts in Southern California, ending with a trip to San Francisco, where he said goodbye to his brother, who left for "Over There" with the last detachment of the regular army from the Pacifict Coast. Cliff Smith will return to the direction of Stewart and the photoplay next to be made is "The Silent Rider," by C. M. Clark. The cast for this has not been named.

Indications are that the Diando Film Corporation will have additional producing units in the very near future. Additional stages are being built and a larger laboratory is now being constructed. It is expected additional companies will be added shortly and it is understood General Manager W. A. S. Douglas will make necessary arrangements for release while in the East. Mr. Douglas was expected back daily from New York, as he was to leave Los Angeles on August 26 for Gettysburg, Pa., to enter the tank training camp there.

The Baby Marie Osborne company is still at work on the production of "An Old Maid's Baby," in which "Sunshine Sammy," the negro boy, will play in many of the scenes with Baby Marie Osborne.

Manager-Producer Frank Beresford has returned from spending ten days in Bear Valley, where he selected locations and completed the writings of a Western subject which is to be produced under the direction of Stuart Paton.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

Paramount-Artcraft

Three new subjects are now in production at the Ince plant. Douglas MacLean, who was leading man for Enid Bennett in "The Vamp," and has since played opposite Mary Pickford, has been re-engaged by Thos. H. Ince to support Miss Bennett in her next subject, now being directed by Fred Niblo. The story is by Julian Josephson and is laid in a small Western mining town and New York city. This is a serio-comic. J. P. Lockney takes an important part, he playing the role of the father of Miss Bennett.

For the first time since Charles Ray became an Ince-Paramount star he is not under the direction of Victor Schertzinger. Jerome Stern is now in charge of the filming of a college story in which Doris Lee plays the feminine lead. A vaudeville troop of twelve young men touring the coast with a college days act have been engaged by Mr. Ince to play atmosphere.

A new Dorothy Dalton subject has been started by Director Victor Schertzinger, in which Ed Coxen will be the leading man, he playing the role of the petted husband. The fourth Ince company, that filming "False Faces," directed by Irvin Willat, is this week working on submarine chasers or patrol boats and steamers plying between Los Angeles harbor and San Diego.

C. C. Faw, who became cashier of the first company managed by Thos. H. Ince and who has since served in that capacity continuously, died the week of August 24th, at the age of forty-five. He leaves a wife and daughter. Faw served two enlistments in the U. S. Regular army and was a member of the Border Patrol during many Indian battles a few years back. He served throughout the Spanish-American war.

The F. P.-Lasky Studio

The usual production activities at the Famous Players-Lasky studio have been greatly disturbed by the making of propaganda films for the Government, a condition that is more or less true at all of the coast producing plants. Each of the companies working at the Lasky plant appeared in short subjects made for the Fourth Liberty Loan drive, as did also Mary Pickford and Roscoe Arbuckle, who were given the use of the studio on instructions from President Adolph Zukor and Jesse L. Lasky.

Practically all of these films are now completed, and the companies have returned to the subject on which they were working. George Melford has been assigned to direct Vivian Martin with Niles Welsh as her leading man. This will be this actor's first appearance in west coast made subjects. Miss Martin has just completed work in "Morandy Smiles," which was directed by W. C. de Mille. Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, author of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," has contributed a story which will serve as Lila Lee's third Paramount vehicle. This has been put in continuity form and is being directed by E. Butler Clonebaugh.

"Too Many Millions" is the name given the new film now completed by James Cruze. Wallace Reid is the star of this, and Ora Carew played the opposite lead.

Bryant Washburn has completed his first Paramount subject directed by Walter Edwards, "The Gypsy Trail," and this director is now to make a Select picture with Constance Talmadge as star.

William C. de Mille is making a romantic drama, as yet unnamed, starring Ethel Clayton, in which Henry F. Woodward will be the leading man.

Chester Withey, who has been directing Billie Burke at the New York studio, has been transferred to the coast, arriving there this week, and will shortly be assigned a production.

Directors Donald Crisp and Robert Vignola are the other directors of this staff not producing at this time.

Live Triangle Items

The Triangle directorial staff was increased this week by the addition of Roy Clements, who will first film a story featuring Claire Anderson, with Joe Bennett playing the opposite lead. "The Crown Jewels" is the title of this story, the continuity of which was written by Robert F. Hill of the Triangle staff. Mr. Clements has been identified with some of the best producing organizations of the coast in the capacity of director. He is secretary of the Motion Picture Directors' Association, and a very successful director.

The second Triangle subject for Taylor Holmes will be an adaptation from the Mina Wilcox Putnam story, "When the Highbrow Joined the Outfit." It is definitely stated that the film will not be released under this title. Lawrence Windom will direct Holmes in this story, with a cast yet to be named.

The continuity is now being prepared for the next Triangle subject which will feature Alma Rubens. This is to be an adaptation from the Cosmo Hamilton story entitled "Marriage." William C. Dowlan, who has just completed filming "High Regard," featuring Pauline Stark, will direct Miss Rubens in this film.

The film originally titled "Out of the Western Seas," which will star Rosemary Theby, and made under the direction of E. Mason Hopper, has been re-titled "Love's Pay Day." This will be finished by the end of the week by Director Hopper, and he will then take up the production of a story by Harry Mestayer, who will be starred in the subject. This is titled "Wife or Country," and the continuity for it was written by Charles J. Wilson.

Director T. N. Heffron continues on "Deuce Duncan," starring William Desmond.

Cliff Smith has been taking scenes at the Western ranch for the Roy Stewart story, "The Silent Rider," and Wm. Christie Cabanne expects to start a new picture by the end of the week.

Universal Newsettes

There are many new people to be seen at Universal City, a number having been engaged during the past week by Employment Director Arthur Hoyt for current productions. Harry Hilliard is to play with the Tod Browning-Edith Roberts company; and Pat O'Malley, leading man, who recently came from the east, will play opposite Priscilla Dean in the subject now being made by Jack Dillon, "Dealing with Daphne."

Margaret Skinner, former character woman for Essanay, has been made a member of the stock company, and Fred Vroom will play character leads for Universal.

Betty Compson, who has been appearing in Diando serial and features made for Pathe, will be leading woman for Monroe Salisbury in the subject now ready for production, "Breathes There a Man." William Wolbert, who is alternating with Rollin S. Sturgeon in the direction of Salisbury, will film this picture while Sturgeon edits "Hugon the Mighty," just filmed, and works with the continuity department in the preparation of the next play. George Nichols and Norval MacGregor, both well-known directors and actors, have been engaged to play the leading character parts in support of Salisbury.

Edward Peil is to be the leading man for Helen Gibson in the two-reel western drama being made by Director Harry Harvey. This company is now working on "Trails Divided."

Mary MacLaren, who has been under the direction of Ida May Parke for the last two subjects, has been transferred to Director Rupert Julian, and a special story is now being prepared for her by Elliot Clawson, head of the continuity department.

Fox Studio Doings

After a vacation of two weeks Gladys Brockwell is back at the Fox studio at work on a new subject, titled "Love's Pilgrimage." E. J. LeSaint continues as director of this company, and the cast who are at work with Miss Brockwell includes William Scott, Wedgewood Nowell and Edwin H. Wollock. This photoplay is from an original story by J. G. Alexander and Bennett Cole. The star part is that of a gypsy girl.

Lynn Reynolds has returned from Arizona with the Tom Mix Company, after an absence of nearly four weeks, where both interiors and exteriors for "The Two-Gun Man," adapted from the Western novel of the same name, were filmed. The peculiarity of this photoplay is that there is but one feminine role, which is taken by Jane Novak.

The Frank Lloyd-William Farnum Fox Company are absent from the studio on a sea trip to and from San Francisco.

Vitagraph News Bits

The title for the Tony Moreno-Carroll Halloway serial, being directed by Paul Hurst, was made known on the coast for the first time this week. It is to be known as "The Iron Test." The company has now completed about half of the episodes for this serial, having just returned from a stay of more than a week at Santa Cruz Islands where all the players had a number of exciting experiences. This film is from a circus story, and the recently made episodes include many scenes of water action as well as the use of airplanes.

The Montgomery and Rock Big V Company is this week working at Catalina Island.

Earle Williams is leaving for the East in a few days and will be absent from the Vitagraph studio for about a month. It is understood Mr. Williams' contract with Vitagraph expires with the completion of the present picture, and his trip East is made for the purpose of negotiating with Vitagraph officials for the continuance of his services with this company.

Grace Darmond, who has been leading woman for Williams, will not go East.

Here and There

All exteriors have been filmed for the first Billie Rhodes series of five-reel subjects, the company now being at work at the studio filming the interiors of "The Girl of My Dreams," directed by Louis Chaudet. This story, adapted from the stage production of the same name, requires a number of big interiors, and this unit has practically monopolized the stage space at the National's big plant.

William Parsons has just finished another release for Goldwyn which is titled "The Jellyfish," in which Mary MacLaren played opposite him. This film was directed by Wilfred Lucas and Bess Meredyth, who are authors of the story.

Tom Walsh, who for five years has been identified with several of the Western studios in the capacity of actor, director and casting director, has resigned his position as casting director at the Thos. H. Ince studios, and left for his former home in Sydney, Australia, where his father recently died, leaving a big ladies' tailoring business. Walsh will manage the affairs of this business until same can be disposed of. He then plans to return to the film colony.

Dorothy Gish is to have a new leading man in her second Paramount subject, shortly to be put in production, in the person of Richard Bartholemus, who has appeared opposite Marguerite Clark and other stars, and has come to the coast from New York and been engaged by this company. The continuity for Miss Gish's second release is now being prepared, it being an adaptation from a novel.

Clara Kimball Young, who has engaged space at the Sunset Studios, is expected to resume producing activities with her company in a few days. The star has been in the East, and is now on the way to Los Angeles.

This studio will also see the activities of the Blanche Sweet company. Marshall Neilan, who has been in the East for Artcraft, will be the director for Miss Sweet, and arrived in Los Angeles this week to prepare the story for the first production.

D. W. Griffith, having his second Artcraft subject wholly completed, "Happy Valley," is now writing the story for his third release, and rehearsals on this will begin within a few days.

Charles Chaplin had hardly finished the filming of a propaganda film for the Fourth Liberty Loan when he received a request from the Canadian government for similar aid, and he has laid aside his work on "Shoulder Arms" for the First National to prepare a picture for the Canadian government. His Fourth Liberty Loan subject is titled "The Bond."

"Shoulder Arms" is now practically finished, and the supporting players besides Edna Purviance include Albert Austin, Henry Bergman, Loyal Underwood and Syd Chaplin. A great portion of the comedy is laid behind the Hindenburg line in territory held by the Huns, and in these scenes Syd Chaplin plays the role of the Kaiser.

SEPT. 14, 1918 NEWS MORE NEWS

Well—warm.

Earle Williams' goin' east.

Fredrick Ward is rearing a beard.

Bill Russell has not been seen in town for a week.

Mary Anderson is now the mascot of a submarine.

Carl Laemmle is not coming to U City until October, he writes.

Bill Hart was seen at the studio the other day in a western make-up.

Bill Desmond is wearing a highly polished pair of spurs since he became a western actor.

Ruth Roland, since her recent accident, can see no mirth in the simile, "as funny as a crutch."

Bill Parker, the well known screen author, has worn out three typewriters writing continuity.

George Beban is making a propaganda picture and threatens to use up all the visible film supply.

William Worthington for the sake of variety is directing another picture starring Sessue Hayakawa.

The west coast expects numerous arrivals shortly. An invitation to all filmsters is tendered by HOOKUM.

Dorothy Gish is a blonde, but her first picture for Paramount doesn't indicate it, for she wears a black wig.

Now that Connie Talmadge has flitted back from an Eastern Broadway, there is much life about the Morosco studio.

Eddie and Lee have hit the trail for a vacation, and in an effort to get close to nature are filming "Camping Out."

Ben Turpin found Ford Sterling's chief of police beard the other day, and right away pinched everybody on the Sennett lot.

Jack Dillon came out of seclusion at U City long enough to attend the regular meeting of the Directory Association.

Will Sheerer is back in town after three years, and the number of "Hello, Bills!" in the Alex lobby would indicate an Elks convention.

The I. A. T. S. E. walk out at several of the studios this week was staged so quietly the P. A.'s didn't know of it for hours afterwards.

Vacation trips reported this week include a jaunt to Catalina Islands by the Montgomery and Rock fun makers. They went there to make a film.

HOOKUM lost a two-bit bet last week on who was the prettiest blonde in pictures, simply because the name of May Allison was forgotten for a minute.

Dick Willis was seen with his coat off the other day, and his hair muchly ruffled up, so a new crop of September poems may be expected shortly.

Niles Welsh, after a ten days' sojourn in vacationville, has put on the old grease paint and powder, and is doing leading man honors in front of a Lasky camera.

Julian Eltinge is as happy as a bird just escaped from a cage, for now it is that he can daily cast aside the rough clothing of a man and don again his lingerie.

Bryant Washburn, who has been smiling ever since he wore Skinner's Dress Suit, is to pay a fine for missing roll call at a certain squared circle, southeast of Los Angeles.

Lois Wilson has a new way of doing her hair, but as HOOKUM has no beauty hints department, description cannot be given here. Besides, revealing the secret now would be tipping it off in advance of the next film.

Frank Powell, who has House Peters and a lot more over at San Antonio, is said to be having a hard time getting an exterior scene without a Federal airplane decorating the skyline, for Kelly Field has thousands of young eagles in the air there daily.

Louise Glaum is now doing a Minnehaha role, or Indian princess, or something like that, but Louise would not use any of that old stuff with feathers, buckskin, etc., as well as beads. No! Louise is a modern Indian princess, educated and everything.

Director Rollin Sturgeon and Miss Marjorie Bennett have cast aside a large quaitity of clothing because of an unpleasant experience in Bear Valley when a little black-footed animal crossed their path. The offensive one has been named after the play they were producing, "Hugon the Mighty."

Monte Katterjohn claims to be a record breaker. This is a poor joke, because the record was one of Mr. Columbia fonographs make, and it accidentally rolled out of Monte's car. One would infer from that that Monte is a student of music instead of screencraft, but then one of the film industry must secure a liberal education in all kinds of art.

A Universal Company gave a Red Cross benefit and raised one hundred dollars at Bear Valley last week. Marjorie Bennett sang, George Holt recited, Chief Dark Cloud and other Indians war danced, the property man and carpenter put on a wrestling match, and Monroe Salisbury read the palms of the ladies at two bits per. A good time was had by all.

Mr. Morrisey of Fox is said to be the luckiest P. A. of the west coast. He no more than gets the Grand Canyon dust brushed off after spending some time in the Gosh Awful gorge with Bill Farnum and Frank Lloyd, than this pair of filmsters give him a sea trip to Frisco and back. Some people are born with a silver spoon, and others are just lucky, naturally so.

The pressagent brigade of the west coast has a new recruit. A. F. Gillaspey, late photoplay editor and department manager of "Baltimore News," is now seated squarely in front of a faithful Underwood at the "Over the Rhine" studio. Gillaspey no doubt threw a lot of pressagents' copy into the waste basket in his time, and now he will have opportunity to think it over and decide whether or not he still thinks he was justified.

HOOKUM claims that giving up a thirty-thousand-dollar job for the salary of one dollar a year is surely a display of patriotism, and so we say "good luck and Godspeed to Frances Marion."

U. S. GOVERNMENT
PROCLAMATION TO MERCHANTS

THE Government will, early in September, under the new Selective Service law, call for the registration of every male in the United States between the ages of 18 and 45 (both inclusive), unless previously registered, on a date to be announced by Presidential Proclamation and in the public prints. There will be no valid excuse for failure to register. Imprisonment is the only penalty for default.

The Government, therefore, appeals to you as an employer and leader in your Community to do your utmost to inspire every man of 18 to 45 in your employ to present himself at his local board for registration on the day to be announced in the newspapers.

There are many ways you can help in this essential work before the day of registration by the proclamation of this fact:

Every Man

between 18 and 45 (both inclusive), unless previously registered, must register to win the war

WATCH NEWSPAPERS FOR REGISTRATION DATE

Insert a square like this in your newspaper advertising.

Post it in Bulletin form in your store and windows.

Print it on slips for the pay envelopes of every employee, male and female. Enclose slips in every letter and invoice you send out.

Wrap it in every package.

Post this message on the side of your delivery wagons.

Call patriotic meetings of your employees and impress on them the vital importance of complying with the law, and others with their duty of seeing that the law is complied with. Appoint a committee to see that it is done. Arrange for definite hours when the men in the different departments of your business shall go and register.

Call a meeting of other merchants in your locality and devise ways and means of conveying the all-important message to every man you can reach.

Appeal to your local newspapers to give it editorial emphasis in every issue.

Call upon your church, club and lodge.

Exercise your resources of ingenuity and originality in proclaiming this message broadcast.

Not every man will be called to military service, only those who are properly assigned to Class 1 will be selected. But every male of the specified ages must register.

For the cause of Liberty, Democracy and Humanity your Government calls on you to immediately devote every possible effort and energy to this most vital work, that we may quickly win the war.

Not an hour is to be lost. Start at once.

The Operator and the Fourth Liberty Loan

SEPTEMBER twenty-eighth marks the opening of the biggest drive yet made by our country for finances to carry on the world war in which our men are fighting so gallantly. This war cannot be carried to its final and just conclusion without money in the treasury to pay the enormous bills which are being contracted for each day. It is not a case of—can we raise the amount asked for by the Secretary of the Treasury, but—we must raise any amount which the country and the boys "over there" need.

The methods employed in raising the money are to be as numerous as is necessary in order to reach every resident of our land from every conceivable angle. Not a man or woman must escape—none should wish to. A fifty dollar bond at a dollar a week from one man means as much to the country from the patriotic view as a thousand dollar subscription, cash down, from another. It is a case of INVEST ALL YOU CAN IN THE BEST SECURITY IN THE WORLD. Don't let any one tell you he has "contributed" when he has bought a bond—he has not; he has "invested," for his money is always there. He can get it back when the bonds become due or before if he needs it.

This year MOTION PICTURES are to be used more than ever before. The President has asked all the big stars of the screen to turn to and make a picture which will aid in the campaign. Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Alice Brady, Clara Kimball Young, William Hart and some forty others have not only consented but have actually produced patriotic pictures which should be of the greatest conceivable help in promoting this, the greatest of all loans.

These pictures are to be distributed through the standard exchange systems of the country so that every theatre will have a different picture to show its audience one each one of the twenty-one days of the drive. The exchange men are to be impressed with the importance of seeing to it that every house in the country receives one of these subjects each day, but it must not be allowed to end here. Every theatre man must demand these films. The OPERATOR must follow this demand up and see that the film is shown on the screen. He must check up the house manager and help the Government see to it that this great piece of national propaganda "gets over" in the biggest possible way.

In addition to the film campaign there is to be sent out to every theatre in the country a set of five stereopticon slides. These slides are not to be merely reproductions of pretty pictures, but are to be statements of fact in cold type. They tell how much can be bought with the proceeds from the sale of a fifty dollar bond, how much from the sale of a hundred dollar bond, and so on. This is done so that those subscribing may picture to themselves exactly how much aid they are rendering to their husbands, brothers or friends "over there."

This, too, is when the OPERATOR can help, for he can see to it that when the slides are received that they are used and not discarded. Remember, the Government spent the money and had them made in order that they may be shown and stimulate patriotism.

As members of an essential industry let us remember that it is essential for each of us to put our shoulders to the wheel and help in this, the greatest of world wars, into which we have stepped, and from which we must not emerge until it has been brought to its just conclusion.

Next week on this page we will publish suggestions for slides which will contain actual facts which operators throughout the country can use on slides prepared by themselves to supplement those which the Government supplies. The facts contained in these suggestions will not appear on the official slides, though they are correct, having been received from the national Liberty Loan Committee.

Equipment Operating Projection Questions Answered

The Model Operating Room of Standard Theatre, Cleveland, O.

THE exhibitor who intends building or remodeling a theatre always benefits by a study of the arrangements in other high-class houses, and all operators, likewise, derive new ideas from the inspection of the equipment and layout of the operating rooms of the nation's representative photoplay theatres; therefore we believe that all of our exhibitor and operator readers will derive useful ideas from a study of the following description of one of the finest operating rooms to be found anywhere in the United States.

This model operating room belongs to the Standard theatre of Cleveland, Ohio, a house noted for its excellent management at the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Grossman, and it is due to their enterprise and their pride in the Standard theatre that we are able to present the excellent series of photographs which illustrate the ensuing description.

The projection room of the Standard theatre is so replete with refinements in the details and arrangement of the apparatus that all can hardly be enumerated, but, as Fig. 1 shows, the projectors are Simplexes of latest design equipped with Speedco arc-controllers. A study of this photo serves to show that the feeding elements of the arc-controllers are attached to the lamp houses in a special manner, which affords great smoothness of operation. More will subsequently be said about the projectors and their complementary appliances, but Fig. 1 affords an excellent view of the switchboard, from which the entire lighting of the theatre is controlled.

At the top of this switchboard are two ammeters, one for each arc, while just below these are the switches for the projector motor and house-light circuits. Next are seen the regulating knobs of two field-rheostats, which are not at present in use, but were formerly used as motor speed controls with the Edison Super Kinetoscopes, once used at the Standard theatre. Below the field-

Rheostat handles are the two switches of the arc controller circuits, and last on the switchboard come the switches for the machine arc circuits. These, it will be noted, are double-throw, giving four circuits, which are kept fused at all times so that in the event of a fuse blowing the switch is just thrown over to the other side and the performance continued without interruption.

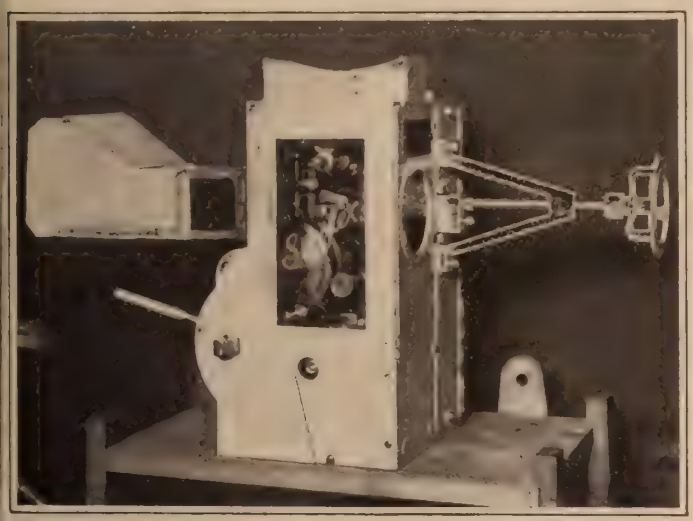

Fig. 4—Extra Mechanism. Note Special Bracket for Shutter Spindle, and Construction of Light-Shield

A more comprehensive idea of the Standard's operating room will be gained from Fig. 2, which shows to advantage the elegant appearance of the enamelled projectors. The machines are finished in light gray enamel, to harmonize with the color of the walls, and this enamel is baked on, insuring a lasting finish. The lamp houses are, of course, not finished in this manner, their white appearance in the photograph being due to reflection. The arc-controllers and their tables, the machine motors, magazine arms, etc., are finished with aluminum paint, and to add to the neat appearance of this operating room the wires are all run in conduits, none being exposed to annoy the operator or invite short-circuiting. Chimneys from the lamp houses of the projectors connect with a large vent-pipe, seen at the top of Photos 1 and 2, and a fan situated on the roof connects with this pipe and draws off all carbon dust and arc fumes—an ideal condition, which should be the heritage of every good operator.

A powerful lesson may be learned from Fig. 2, before we pass on, and that is the importance of having everything in its proper place. We see to the right in this illustration the rewinding table, and under it a tool rack containing the tools needed by the operators. How much easier it is to make an emergency repair if one can instantly lay his hands upon the necessary appliances, instead of having literally to unearth them, as is all too frequently the case. The rewind is the customary Simplex device, but equipped in addition with a motor, and the motor switch and speed control rheostat may be seen attached to the under side of the rewind table.

The clean and spotless appearance of the room and machines in Fig. 2 might cause some readers to assume that things were especially cleaned up for the purpose of making the photos, but this is not at all a correct assumption; the operating room of the Standard theatre is always in this immaculate condition, even at the instant when the day's performance is concluded. Credit for this condition must be shared between the management and the operators.

The distinctive character of the Standard's operating room does not reside entirely in its general arrangement and appearance, however, for when we come down to details we discover that the projectors have been equipped with some special attachments of creditable design. The "close-up," Fig. 3, shows a modification of the mechanical motor speed controllers supplied on all Simplexes, which does away with the tortuous path usually traversed by the belting and makes a much simpler and more compact arrangement. This is found to be entirely as effective as the arrangement supplied by the maker of the machines, and does away with an additional pulley, as the illustration shows.

All up-to-date operators realize the importance of threading the films "in frame" at the aperture of the projector, because only by doing this can a good change-over be accomplished when presenting a continuous performance with two machines.

The lamp, mounted on a flexible tube, seen in Fig. 3, is a further attachment with which both projectors at the Standard theatre are provided, and it is readily apparent from the photo that these lamps may be brought close to the aperture to illumhave long been considered standard equipment by the leading motion picture machine manufacturers. The product of America's greatest lens specialists, who have been producing high grade lenses of one type or another for 65 years, they are unexcelled in the clear-cut, evenly illuminated pictures they produce on the screen.

Because of the demand made upon our resources for some of the Government's most important military needs, we are unable to make projection lens deliveries for the present. inate the image, thus facilitating the threading of the pictur "in frame." When the machine is in operation the lamp is be to one side, out of the way, and its flexible mounting renders useful as a pilot-light when examining or oiling the projecto It can be bent over to illuminate the motor side, or any oth desired position. This framing lamp is connected to the mot switch and is provided with an 8 candle-power bulb.

Fig. 3 also shows a large metal light-shield which is attached the customary Simplex colored glass eye-protector, and exten a considerable ways back from the cooling-plate. This ligh shield is better shown in Fig. 4, and such an attachment may made by any operator from pieces of tin or other light sheet-met

The particular feature emphasized by Fig. 4 is, however, th special bracket which supports the revolving shutter spindle, thu allowing the shutter to be placed at a point in the projected lig beam, where its cut-off action is a dissolving one, without su jecting the shutter gears to the strain and rapid wear which o curs if the shutter is mounted a long ways from its gears witho making provision for the extra strain and vibration thus im posed. The projector mechanism shown in Fig. 4 is an extr or reserve, mechanism, always kept in readiness on a table in th operating room of the Standard theatre and maintained in pe fect adjustment so that it can be instantly put in place on eithe projector in the event of a breakdown. It is almost needless t say that no breakdown has ever yet occurred at this house.

Fig. 7—Operators' Clothes Lockers. Note Source of Fresh Air at Right was necessary to remove the revolving shutter when making the photograph, Fig. 4, but the shutter is always kept in place prop erly timed.

In an operating room kept so scrupulously clean as that of Cleveland's Standard theatre the fire risk is naturally at a mini mum, but every precaution is nevertheless observed in the handling of films. Fig. 5 shows the cabinet in which the Standard's daily show reposes when the reels are not actually being projected and at the bottom of this film cabinet is a drawer, made of cop per, containing camphor blocks and a small amount of water which are intended to keep the films pliable. The flooring of the cabinet, upon which the reels of film rest, is of heavy mesh wire, and to insure the safety of the films from fire the cover of the film cabinet is prevented from opening any wider than is shown in the photograph, and therefore falls shut of its own weight when released by the operator.

It would be inconsistent, indeed, to maintain great cleanliness in an operating room and make no provision for the personal cleanliness of the operators, but this item has also been attended to by the management of the Standard, for behold in Fig. 6 the operators' wash basin, provided with hot and cold water, and the necessary toilet accessories. The fan shown in this illustration is an additional means of exhausting the vitiated air of the room.

It is just a step from the wash basin, shown in Fig. 6, to the steel lockers provided for the operators to keep their clothes in, these being prominently featured in Fig. 7. To the right in Fig. 7 is noticed a 7-inch pipe which terminates in an ILG blower on the roof and supplies a constant stream of fresh air to the operators. This arrangement completely changes the air in the Standard's operating room every 1½ minutes.

Before closing we must not neglect to mention the telephone system installed in the Standard theatre, which connects with the following important branches of activity, viz., operating room, box office, doorman, organ and office. Current for this telephone system, and also for the emergency house lights, is derived from a 6-volt 120-ampere hour storage battery, which is wired for charging, and may be seen (enclosed) under the shelf at the left of Fig. 7.

Messrs. Konjoccerty and Thomas are the operators in charge of this splendid room and equipment at the Standard theatre, and it is gratifying to state that their performance is in every way equal to the working conditions which have been provided them.

Lucas Supplies Projectors for Southern "Hearts of World" Companies

The Lucas Theatre Supply Company, 158 Maretta street, Atlanta, Ga., report the sale of a number of Simplex projectors to A. S. Guckenheimer for several "Hearts of the World" road companies organized by him for touring the majority of the Southern states.

Mr. Guckenheimer, who is the owner of the Arcadia Theatre, Savannah, one of the city's foremore motion picture houses, has been a successful exhibitor in that city for a number of years.

It is understood that the "Hearts of the World" companies controlled by Mr. Guckenheimer will open at Atlanta and New Orleans during the week of September 1.

Special trunks have been ordered for the transportation of the road equipment.

Camera Laboratory — Picture Making — Studio Technique

A Portable Apparatus for the Development of Motion Picture Film at High Temperatures

By J. I. Crabtree

Communication No. 74 from the Research Laboratory of the Eastman Kodak Company

The Developing Tanks

These are shown in Fig. 4 and consist of three tanks, T-1, T-2 and T-3, T-1 being without cover and fitting into T-3, fitted with a cover and removable screw caps S-1, S-2. The tank T-3 in turn fits into T-2, likewise fitted with a cover. The tanks are nickel-plated and fitted with turn-up rings at L-1, L-2 and L-3 to facilitate the rocking of the trays when full of solution. The capacity of each tank when containing the reels averages about 8 liters, or 2 gallons.

Fig. 4

Method of Development

The apron enclosing the exposed film is moved from reel B and placed in the tank T-1 containing the special developer T-6, lifted up and down once or twice so as to remove air bells, and the tank then rocked in alternate directions for 1½ minutes at 95° F. or 3 minutes at 85° F., or for the required time in a developer containing sodium sulphate.

The apron is then drained quickly and immersed for one or two seconds in T-2, containing rinse water, at the same temperature as the developer in T-1, lifted out, drained and then immediately placed in T-3.

T-3 contains the fixing bath, at the same temperature as the liquids in T-1 and T-2, and is of course kept covered when containing the formalin fixing bath.

The following chrome alum bath is used at temperatures up to 85° F.:

	Avoirdupois	Metric
Hypo	7 ozs.	200 g.
Sodium Sulphite (desiccated)	1 oz. 175 grains	40 g.
Chrome Alum	2 ozs. 350 grains	80 g.
Acetic Acid (28%)	150 minims	10 cc.
Water to	32 ozs.	1 liter

Dissolve the sulphite and chrome alum together and add to the hypo solution, finally adding the acetic acid.

At temperatures up to 95° F. the following formalin bath should be employed:

	Avoirdupois	Metric
Hypo	9 ozs.	250 grams
Sodium Sulphite (desiccated)	1 oz. 350 grains	50 grams
Formalin (formaldehyde 40%)	4¼ ozs.	125 cc.
Water to	32 ozs.	1 liter

First dissolve the hypo, then the sulphite, and finally add the formalin.

In ordinary practice with large racks and tanks the odor of formalin in most cases prohibits its use, though with the above outfit and using the covered fixing tank (see Fig. 4), the odor of the formalin is negligible. The tank T-3, fitted with a cover and removable screw caps, S-1 and S-2, may be filled through S-1 and emptied through S-2. The tank should be kept covered, and the lid removed only to allow of the immersion of the apron.

It is advisable to wear rubber gloves when working with formalin.

Washing

After thoroughly fixing, the apron is removed to tank T-2 and thoroughly washed in several changes of water at the same temperature as the fixing bath. Washing may be carried out with a minimum amount of water by three or four immersions of 3 minutes each, and rocking and draining after each immersion.

Drying

Several methods of drying film were tried, as follows:

(a) The apron was telescoped over a long rod and allowed to dry in the air. In this way the film was dried in contact with the apron and could be separated from the same when dry. However, by this method the first few feet of film are invariably scratched by virtue of pushing out the center of the roll. If a "leader" is used, scratching of the exposed film may be avoided.

(b) By blowing air through the spirally wound apron, thus drying the film in a manner similar to that employed for the drying of prints by means of the Majestic print dryer (EKCo.). The method of procedure was to place the apron within a funnel-shaped holder fitted with a rubber sleeve so as to fit tight around the coiled apron and to blow hot or cold air through the apron by means of a fan.

The experiments were not successful because drops of water were invariably left on the film, and these left drying marks on the finished film. From this it was considered absolutely necessary to squeegee the film and remove superfluous moisture before drying if drying marks were to be eliminated.

Attempts were then made to squeegee the film by re-reeling the apron and film from reel A to reel B (see Fig. 2) and passing the film between squeegeeing rollers affixed to a spring so as to take up the slack formed by expansion. Although after squeegeeing in this manner better results were obtained, it was considered that owing to the bulkiness of the fan required to supply the air this method was not practicable.

The method finally adopted for drying was simply to re-reel the apron and to wind the film on to a collapsible rack similar to the racks used in the tank development of motion picture film. The surface moisture was removed from the film with a chamois before drying, the film being sufficiently hardened to permit of such treatment.

If the washing was not thorough a little residual hypo was left on the back surface of the film owing to contact of the same with the apron, though this was removed during the usual process of after cleaning.

The apron was readily dried by hanging up in the coiled condition, though it was not found necessary to thoroughly dry the apron before reeling a new length of film for development.

Development of Positive Film

The apparatus may be used for developing motion picture positive film in exactly the same way as for negative film.

Portability of the Apparatus

The apparatus is extremely portable, the reels, apron and tanks fitting into one tank, as shown in Fig. 5, while the base of the reeling apparatus is made in two parts, which fold together, as illustrated.

The diameter of the reels for different lengths of film is as follows:

Length of Film	Diameter
100 feet	14 inches
150 feet	17 inches
200 feet	20 inches

An outfit for finishing 200-foot rolls would therefore only take up a space of 22 x 9 inches.

Summary

By an application of the apron method of developing film as adopted in the Kodak Film Tank outfit a portable and compact apparatus has been devised for the development of motion picture film, while by applying the method of developing at high temperatures, as described in Communication No. 62 (B. J. 1917, p. 555), it is possible to develop motion picture film up to temperatures as high as 95° F. In view of this and the portability of the apparatus, it is hoped that the method will be of particular value to explorers traveling in tropical countries, who must develop their film as soon as possible after exposure and under existing conditions.

The apparatus consists of a celluloid apron somewhat wider than the width of motion picture film and a suitable reeling apparatus and developing tanks, the film being wound on to the apron, developed, fixed and washed in the apron, and finally dried by transferring to a collapsible frame rack in the usual way.

The formula for the T_6 developer recommended is as follows:

	Avoirdupois	Metric
Paramidophenol hydrochloride, or Kodelon	105 grains	7 grams
Sodium Sulphite (desiccated)	1 oz. 300 grains	50 grams
Sodium Carbonate (desiccated)	1 oz. 300 grains	50 grams
Water to	32 ozs.	1000 ccs.

The time of development with this developer is 1½ minutes at 95° F., but if this is too short for convenience in working, the time may be extended to three minutes by adding 10 per cent sodium sulphate to the developer before use.

After developing, rinse for a few seconds and fix in the following chrome alum bath at temperatures up to 85° F.:

	Avoirdupois.	Metric.
Hypo	7 ozs.	200 grams
Sodium Sulphite (desiccated)	1 oz. 175 grains	40 grams
Chrome Alum	2 oz. 350 grains	80 grams
Acetic Acid (28 p. c.)	150 minims	10 cc.
Water to	32 ozs.	1 liter

Dissolve the sulphite and chrome alum together and add to the hypo solution, finally adding the acetic acid.

At temperature up to 95° F. the following formalin bath should be employed:

	Avoirdupois.	Metric.
Hypo	9 oz.	250 grams
Sodium Sulphite (desiccated)	1 oz. 350 grains	50 grams
Formalin (formaldehyde 40 p. c.)	4¼ oz.	125 cc.
Water to	32 oz.	1 liter

First dissolve the hypo, then the sulphite, and finally add the formalin.

When developing at high temperatures it is very necessary to maintain the temperature of the developer, fixing bath, and wash water the same, otherwise if the film is transferred from a hot to a cold solution or vice versa reticulation of the gelatine coating is liable to occur.

By a slight modification the apparatus could be made suitable for daylight developing, though this would necessitate the carrying of a collapsible box to fit around the reeling apparatus.

The author is indebted to Mr. S. Tulpan for his valuable assistance in the carrying out of the various experiments.

An Orchestra as an Advertising Feature

BELIEVING that a good orchestra is one of the best advertising features a picture house can institute, the Greater Features Company of Seattle has employed this agent in all of its theatres, and especially The Coliseum, in Seattle.

This theatre claims to have one of the best equipped and most talented orchestras in the country. Mr. Von Herberg is said to have searched the country and parts of Europe to obtain an efficient leader, whom he found in the person of Marcus Brambilla. The orchestra contains thirty members, every one of whom is a capable artist. The management believes that the best available musicians pay in the end, hence they only obtain the services of those capable of correctly and appropriately interpreting the emotions of the film, regardless of the cost.

Another reason for this new innovation is because the manager realizes that people enjoy and appreciate good music, and consequently if a good orchestra is employed the lovers of music will return. This super-orchestra also gives a "punch" to the picture as well as the house. It places the house in a class of its own, which is, in other words a personality.

Manager Frank Steffey, of the Coliseum, uses his thirty-piece orchestra for different unique purposes. During the week of July 7 he had as a concert number, "The Evolution of Dixie," and in conjunction with this, he had the assistance of a few pickaninnies. This was received with hearty enthusiasm by the audience. Each week he has some new tableau of similar description. This could not be done effectively without some kind of an orchestra or music, and the better the music, the greater the box-office receipts. In cases where patriotism should be shown, this orchestra is indispensable. People leave, expressing their deep appreciation of the performance and the music especially.

We fully realize that a small house cannot afford this expensive outlay for music, but it can at least improve its so-called "music" and try to elevate its patrons to a better appreciation of the classics.

The Coliseum Theatre in Seattle, Wash., maintains a thirty-two piece orchestra, insuring perfect musical settings for every picture presented

Announcement to the Profession

THE Musical Editor of these columns considers it his duty to keep the readers of MOTION PICTURE NEWS up-to date concerning current events in the musical world. For the past few weeks he has been trying to obtain such numbers as "Waltz Divine," "The Golden Youth," "A La Mode" and several others, all composed by George Rosey, and was unable to secure copies until a few days ago, when he learned that Belwin, Inc., of 701 Seventh Ave., New York City, are the sole owners of all George Roseys' compositions, published in single form, and is therefore in a position to supply the demands.

Being aware of the fact that many readers of these columns were, or still are, in the same predicament as I was in reference to purchasing these numbers, I have availed myself of this opportunity to inform you.

George Rosey's compositions are admirably suited to interpret the emotions of the film and the following numbers by this well-known composer are known to me:

1—Military Tactics is a typically modern march and the most original composition of its kind. It consists of various bugle calls and the orchestra arrangement is one of the most clever and effective that has come under the editor's notice.

2—Savannah, a very melodious one-step in a class by itself.

3—Sachem, an Indian intermezzo of exceptional merit, not only Indian by its title, but really an Indian characteristic in its melody.

4—A La Mode, a French characteristic one-step, most appropriate for ballroom scenes in society dramas.

5—6—The Golden Youth and Valse Moderne, two melodious valse lentes, very appropriate for garden scenes, society dramas, and even love themes.

7—Valse Divine, a medley arrangement in waltz form of such famous melodies as "A La Bien Aimee," "Kiss Waltz," by Arditi, "Kamennoi Ostrow," by Rubinstein, and several others, very effectively arranged and playable for any combination of instruments.

8—The last number is a selection of such favorite melodies as "Whispering Flowers," by Blon, "Naila," by Delibes, "To Spring," by Grieg, "Funeral March" of "Marionette," by Gounod, "Minuet," by Paderewski, "Argonaise," by Massenet, and other extracts of works by classic composers.

The above named compositions are now obtainable, as heretofore mentioned, at Belwin, Inc., of 701 Seventh Ave., New York City, at special reduced prices, and I earnestly suggest that if you are not in possession of any of these numbers to avail yourself of the unusual offer which I accidentally came across in my rambles around the Rialto of this great metropolis, and which I did not hesitate to acquaint my constant readers of.

Review of Lates Compositions

1—"Everything Is Peaches Down in Georgia." That "peach" number arranged as "peachy" fox-trot, by Geo. M. Meyer and Milton Ager. (Feist Edition.)

2—"K-K-K-Katy," fox-trot; the wonderful novelty stammering song that is the biggest kind of a hit. By Geoffrey O'Hara. (Feist Edition.)

3—"My Belgian Rose," Waltz by Benoit, Levenson and Garton. The world-wide appeal of this number has put it in the big hit class. (Feist Edition.)

4—"Forget-Me-Not Waltz," by Frank W. McKee. The waltz of a dozen features, simplicity, charming melody, good harmony, a well-written score, three contrasted parts, novel orchestration, the right length, delightful rhythm, character and appeal, superior mechanical production, and a full measure of the Waltz King's genius and a low price. (G. Schirmer, 3 E. 43d St., N. Y.)

5—"Back the Man Behind the Gun," March by H. Wasserman. The big patriotic song hit. A great favorite with all our military bands. (Carl Fischer, Cooper Sq., N. Y.)

7—"Songs of Uncle Sam," March by E. McCoy. The biggest march of the year. You all know his "Lights Out" and "Signal Corps." This beats 'em. If you want a march to set the pace for all others, then get this. New edition conforming to U. S. Band Army requirements. (Carl Fischer.)

8—"I'm Sorry I Made You Cry," Waltz by N. J. Clesi. This one is now a top-notcher—sung and played everywhere. (Feist Edition.)

9—"Comedy Allegro," by S. M. Berg. An original conception of a comedy scene. One of the most unique numbers of its kind. (Belwin, Inc., 701 Seventh Ave.)

10—"Mountain Music Suite," by Gaston Borch, "composer of classics for the masses." It comprises four different compositions, entitled "Sunrise on the Mountain," "Mountaineer's March," "Mountain Song," and "Mountaineer's Dance," each one ably portraying what its title indicates. (S. M. Berg, Columbia Theatre Bldg., N. Y.)

11—"Military Hurry," for battle scenes. Composed and orchestrated by Sol. P. Levy. The aftermath or coda maintains the character of the composition, but in a subdued manner, and, by making a decrescendo, the transition into the next number will not be apparent. (Cinema Music Co., 701 Seventh Ave., N. Y.)

—"Keep Your Head Down, Fritzie Boy!" One-step by Lieut. Gitz Rice. The big hit of the British-Canadian recruiting show: "Getting Together." (Feist Edition.)

Galvin Uses Effective Setting

DURING the run of the American Red Cross film, "The Historic Fourth of July in Paris," the week of August 19-24 at Poli's, Wilkes-Barre, a very effective musical setting was given the picture by J. J. Galvin, managing director of the theatre. This is probably the first elaborate musical program to be used for a single reel subject in any motion picture presentation outside of New York. Mr. Galvin's program, as forwarded by G. C. Heebner, General Film traveling representative, is as follows:

"The Star Spangled Banner."
"Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag."
"Like Washington Crossed the Delaware."
"Onward Christian Soldiers."
"Good night, Germany."
"Keep the Homes Fires Burning."
"Rally Round the Flag."

THE BARTOLA

The best theatres in America are installing the BARTOLA MUSICAL INSTRUMENT. It means better music for your pictures. Write for catalogue.

THE ESTEY ORGAN IN THE MODERN THEATRE, BOSTON

There's a reason for it

A large number of first-class theatres are installing the Estey Pipe Organ. In their dominating success, the Estey Organ has played a prominent part. They have chosen to better interpret the pictures, as well as to furnish the entire musical program. It is the best music for motion picture houses. It has proved itself where competition is strongest—where there is a variety of first-run high-class photoplays.

When you go to Boston, see The Modern Theatre, which has the largest pipe organ in any theatre in Boston. It is an Estey. On request, we will tell you some theatre near you that has one, so you can see and hear it for yourself. It can be built to fit any theatre. The price depends on what organ you can use best. We will send an expert to look at your theatre without cost. Write:

THE ESTEY ORGAN COMPANY, BRATTLEBORO, VERMONT

You can hear the Estey Pipe Organ at any of these branches:

Studios in New York, 25 West 45th Street; Philadelphia, 1701 Walnut Street; Boston, 120 Boylston Street; Los Angeles, 332 South Broadway

Directory of New Theatres

ARIZONA

Architects Alfred W. Rea and C. E. Garstang, 720 Black Building, Los Angeles, are preparing plans for a Class B motion picture theatre to be erected on Washington street in Phoenix, Ariz., for A. C. Hubbard, of Redlands, Cal. The building will be 50 x 137½ feet, with a two-story front. It will contain a balcony, and will have a seating capacity of about 1,000. The estimated cost is about $25,000.

ARKANSAS

The Princess theatre, at Jonesboro, Ark., which was recently opened, has been converted from vaudeville to motion pictures, and is now under the management of Whitney Collins. The theatre is now called the Liberty. Seven reels comprise the program.

CALIFORNIA

Fred Miller, head of the Miller Amusement Company, which is to operate the new California theatre which is being built at Eighth and Main streets, Los Angeles, said this week that the interior decoration is progressing nicely. The opening is expected shortly.

ILLINOIS

Negotiations are nearing completion, it is said, for the early transfer of the Gem theatre, Pawnee, Ill., to the second floor of the new opera house building. Manager Serra will make extensive improvements and alterations, as the popularity of the Gem has brought growing business right along.

INDIANA

Kokomo, Ind., is to have another motion picture theatre in the near future, according to recent announcements. Work has been finished on the remodeled room formerly occupied by a garage at 110 West Mulberry street, and an early date in September will see the theatre in operation, it is expected.

Mr. and Mrs. Walters, Montpelier, Ind., announced recently that their new theatre, to be known as the Palace, is ready for opening in the new location, just north of the post office. The house was not quite finished when opened, but work is being continued steadily.

MINNESOTA

It has been announced that Devereaux and Tippel have opened a new theatre at International Falls, Minn. The new theatre is strictly modern and up-to-date.

Manager Nielson is reported as erecting a new theatre at Red Wing, Minn., which is expected to be ready for opening about the middle of September. The new theatre will be named the Auditorium, and will be strictly modern and up-to-date.

MONTANA

The work on Harlowton's new motion picture theatre, at Harlowton, Mont., has not been pushed very hard this summer, it has been reported, owing to the shortage of help this year, but it is expected that the new house will be ready for occupancy some time before the first of the year. This structure is three stories high, and is located on Central avenue. The building is fireproof and cost $70,000.

NEW MEXICO

All the machinery for the new motion picture theatre at Roy, N. M., has been installed, and the house is now in operation. Exhibitor Sargent is at the helm.

NEW YORK

Among the leading new building plans filed with the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Bureau of Buildings is one by Levy Brothers for a three-story theatre to cost $300,000, on the northeast corner of Bedford avenue and Lincoln place. The new house will have a seating capacity of 3,200. It will be thoroughly modern in every respect.

Nobletti and Riggi have leased a corner, 100 x 100, on Third avenue and 112th street, New York, and will build a motion picture theatre.

OREGON

A. L. Edwards, of the Reedsport theatre, Reedsport, Ore., is said to be very anxious that a new theatre be built in that town. He is willing to take a lease for a long term.

PENNSYLVANIA

Work on the new theatre building on Main street, Johnstown, Pa., is being pushed to completion. It is the plan of Elig Brothers to have the building finished as soon as possible. When completed, it will house a motion picture theatre as modern as any in the country, it is said.

VIRGINIA

Jake Wells and his associates have added another theatre to their string, as the Victor theatre, Eighth and Broad streets, Richmond, Va., opened Labor Day as a strictly first-class picture house, showing first-run productions. Since securing the theatre Wells has made it over until it resembles a new theatre.

WASHINGTON

George H. Reizner, of Raymond, Wash., is investing $50,000 in a new theatre for that city.

H. Weatherwax, architect of Yakima, Wash., is preparing plans for a theatre to be built in that city, to be known as the Rose, for James Lane. Bids will be called at an early date, it is announced. The building will be 50 x 120 feet, and will have a seating capacity of 500.

The Rialto theatre, newest motion picture house in Tacoma, Wash., has been opened. The initial attraction was "Hearts of the World." The Rialto is managed by H. T. Moore.

The Melbourne theatre in Tacoma has been remodeled to resemble a new theatre, and will reopen as the Strand. The theatre seats more than 1,000.

Some Points About "The Complete Plan Book"

For the Manufacturer:

You can secure reprints of the different pages in The Complete Plan Book in any quantity at actual cost.

This is a bit of real service suggested to us by the fact that First National quickly placed a large order for reprints on "Italy's Flaming Front," covered in last week's issue of The Complete Plan Book.

These reprints will be placed in the hands of every exhibitor booking the production—still further evidence of the distributor's desire to aid the showman in every way in putting over his picture.

What can we do for you?

And, just one more point—each subject shown for review in the future will be covered in all-around fashion in the pages of The Complete Plan Book. But—

The amount of aid we are able to give you and the exhibitor depends on the amount of cooperation you can give us. Let us have synopsis, casts, and information regarding the advertising accessories as early as possible. Work with us to see that the cut used really illustrates the quality of advertising material furnished.

Call on us—let us get together and see how much we can do to make The Complete Plan Book the 100% service to the exhibitor.

For the Exhibitor:

You can file The Complete Plan Book entirely separate from the rest of Motion Picture News if that is more convenient for you.

It is always bound separately—so that by lifting the wire staples inside the cover you are able to remove The Complete Plan Book to file away in handy manner in your desk.

You can clip the Ad Talk to give to your newspaper editor if that has been your method in the past. Using the scissors will not destroy any valuable text portion of The Complete Plan Book.

This advantage is achieved by the placing of the Ad Talk so that it is always backed by an illustration. The important information and suggestions on each picture can be kept intact—when you cut the Ad Talk you only affect an illustration on the back.

If your newspaper is accustomed to giving you longer write-ups than those of our "Ad Talks," you can prepare one quickly by simply adding "The Story" on each picture to the "Ad Talk."

The material is prepared with this end in view. The "Ad Talk" is a real sales talk, not simply a re-hashed synopsis of the story.

The reviews in large face at the top of The Complete Plan Book pages is the importive review of P. S. Harrison or Peter Milne. The service material is prepared by our own staff devoting its time especially to this work.

Advance Reviews

[In addition to Advance Reviews—covering pictures shown too early to be included in The Complete Plan Book—readers will also find under this heading each week the reviews of short features and serial episodes.

For this week, also, there are included some reviews of productions released prior to the inauguration of The Complete Plan Book but not previously reviewed.]

"The Borrowed Duchess" (temporary title)

(Bluebird—Sept. 23. Starring Carmel Myers. Directed by Paul Powell)

THIS is a delightful, clean and wholesome little entertainment containing some heart appeal, some thrills and suspense, and physical action that starts somewhat in a slow manner but gathers speed as it goes along, until toward the end it becomes brisk. The comedy element is also present, which, added to the above, makes it a pleasing offering.

The basic idea in the plot, by Perley Poore Sheehan, is the belief of a fisherman of poor circumstances that blue blood runs in his veins. Comico-serious situations arise when a wealthy woman, who is looking into society through a keyhole, becomes the host of the fisherman's pretty daughter.

Miss Myer's pleasing personality and unique acting help make this contribution amusing.

It is a clean picture suitable mostly for refined audiences.

"The Cook"

(Fatty Arbuckle in another Paramount comedy. Two reels)

"THE COOK" contains many of the same gags as one of Fatty's previous releases, "The Waiters' Ball." It is really a revised edition of this earlier picture, and, happily, many of the gags and quips have been improved upon. It is never tiresome what with Fatty and his fine support. Buster Keaton gave a fine performance for his last one, and Al St. John and Alice Lake help the fun along. There is a lot of trick juggling, etc., that is always effective.

"Boston Blackie's Little Pal"

(Metro—Released Aug. 26. Length, 5 reels)

BEING a crook play, and as it contains situations with heart appeal, this attraction ought to please your patrons. The story is not thoroughly logical, but minor inconsistencies are overlooked when a picture furnishes satisfactory entertainment.

The basic idea in the plot, from the story by Jack Boyle, in the Red Book Magazine, is the reformation of a crook through the influence of a little boy. It also brings about the reconciliation of the child's parents.

As to the finish of the story, opinion, I am afraid, will be divided. After bringing husband and wife together by a worthy deception, the hero finds himself the possessor of the woman's jewels. He is shown deliberating whether to return them or not. A sub-title then is flashed, leaving the proper solution of the problem with the spectator. I think it a poor policy to leave a story thus unfinished, but that is a matter of personal opinion.

The babyish talk is altogether wrong. It hurts the picture. The boy looks too old to use such conversation.

Although the story touches somewhat on marital troubles, the picture could be shown even to the best of houses, for it has been handled well. It will appeal to all classes.

"The Mask of Riches"

(Triangle. Directed by Thomas Heffron. Five reels)

THIS picture of how sudden wealth caused one young lady, played by Claire Anderson, to completely lose her perspective is quite below the average. Triangle "society," that is, supposed highbrow, is always presented as a huge burlesque. But it is hardly funny. Social matrons don't grasp the curls of a newcomer and examine them closely with their lorgnettes.

The picture presents two love stories. That of the spoiled girl and her poor but honest lover, who opines, "We haven't got much money, Sally, but we have all the love in the world;" and that of the girl's unspoiled sister, who loves a man, once rich, but reduced to poor circumstances.

The story is not dramatic, and the interest will be largely among the lower classes, who will probably accept the burlesque society as good comedy.

E. Magnus Ingleton is author. Among those in the cast are Rae Godfrey, Jack Gilbert and Ed Hearne.

"The Mischief Maker"

Gloria Joy Continues to Please

(Oakdale-General Film—Released in Sept. Directed by Sherwood McDonald)

THE plot in this picture is not as logical as the ones in which this little star has appeared in the past, but it has been constructed especially for the purpose of enabling little Gloria to portray a mischievous nature. One thing can be said about her acting above all and that is its naturalness. She shows no self-consciousness whatever.

Her mother dies, in the story, and she is taken in charge by an Irish woman friend conducting a boarding house. She is made to wait on the table. The boarders revolt and threaten to leave as they are not able to stand her pranks.

While selling papers in her spare time she gets acquainted with a rich, old man who adopts her. He has a grown boy and a girl. The latter rejects her suitor because he is not of princely blood.

The Irish woman has a good-for-nothing son who returns after a long absence but she refuses to receive him. He meets the little heroine and makes her believe he is a hero and a prince. With the aid of her adopted brother they dress him up and make their sister believe he is a nobleman. She falls in love with him, but shortly afterwards the fake nobleman's mother, who was paying a visit to her "little darling," recognizes him and tells them he is

"QUEEN OF THE SEA"—FOX SPECIAL

Beauty—of Form and of Nature—Shown Here Aplenty

WHATEVER the entertaining qualities of this fairy-photo-spectacle may be, they are derived from the following: the eye tantalizing display of the perfect forms and body outlines of the fairies, dressed scantily and at that only around the waist line; the display of Miss Kellermann's perfectly developed figure (in some not very long shots apparently entirely naked at times, her hair forming the only protection against the fury of the elements); the splendid swimming exhibitions; the beautiful scenes of rocky shores; the magnificent toning and tinting; the sharp photography and the general artistic atmosphere.

The story, written by George Bronson-Howard, is partly a fairy tale, partly a subsea fantasy and partly a love story of knighthood days.

The picture is not vulgar except to vulgar minds, of course—clean minds could not be offended with it any more than with a naked statue in a museum. It possesses few situations with heart interest, being an entertainment for the eye only. The fact, however, must not be lost sight of that there will be lots of the young men who will giggle (provided they have not been transported overseas by that time) and several of the old ones who will rub their whiskers, if they happen to possess such a face ornament, and put on a happy smile.—Released Sept. 1st. Length, 6 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

Directed by John Adelphi.
Produced by William Fox.

THE STORY

Merilla, Queen of the Sea (Annette Kellerman), while sporting with the mermaids, finds a book of charms which reads that if she can save four human lives she will be endowed with mortal form and immortal soul. The book has come from the wreck of a ship for which Boreas, Master of Storms (Walter Law) is responsible. His daughters, the Sirens, are drowning the helpless sailors. Merilla swims to their rescue. The Sirens report to their father, and he in rage captures Merilla and confines her in a cave from which Prince Hero (Hugh Thompson) rescues her. Merilla, in turn, saves the live of the Prince when his ship is wrecked by Boreas. Boreas then captures Leandra, Princess, and shuts her up in the Tower of Knives and Swords. Merilla rescues the Princess after thrilling adventures. The Princess out of gratitude releases the Prince from his engagement to her, that he might marry Merilla, who loves him.

AD TALK

To use an old circus phrase of P. T. Barnum, Annette Kellerman's second big Fox production, "Queen of the Sea," is "bigger and better than ever." After seeing the world's most perfect physical beauty, the management of the ——— theatre can apply Mr. P. T. Barnum's favorite exploitation phrase to her latest work before the camera, "Queen of the Sea." Miss Kellerman's "Daughter of the Gods" was praised by the millions who have seen it. It was big in every sense of the word.

"Queen of the Sea" is more spectacular, more lavish in its natural and artificial settings and more stupendous than her previous work. More than two hundred of the most expert women swimmers are seen. More than a year of time was spent in its production.

The scenes are laid in Bar Harbor, the famous summer resort in Maine; the Bermuda Islands, the island of Jamaica; Florida, Mexico and California. Ten thousand sea gulls were decoyed on location in the making of this picture. Miss Kellerman executes an eighty-five foot dive after a cable has been cut from beneath her. More than 1,500 people appear in the production.

"Queen of the Sea" will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week.

SUGGESTIONS

"QUEEN OF THE SEA" is William Fox's second big aquatic spectacle with Annette Kellerman featured. It represents more than a year of work in production, has more than 1,500 people in the cast, and presents as star the woman who is considered by authority the most perfect specimen of femininity and the best woman swimmer.

A partial list of some of the fifty thrills that will be seen in "Queen of the Sea":

Star's 85-foot dive into the sea; a swimmer's life and death battle in the ocean; a ship afire in mid-ocean and the rescue of hundreds of people; storm at sea which batters to pieces a ship; heroine's escape from the Tower of Knives and Swords; hundreds of pretty diving girls as mermaids and their antics under water; battle with swords by mounted cavalry. For the Tower of Knives and Swords, special machinery for operating weird instruments of torture was installed. The building is dynamited during the course of the picture.

"THE TURN OF THE WHEEL"—GOLDWYN

Geraldine Farrar's First Goldwyn a Thrilling Murder Mystery

GOLDWYN secured an excellently developed mystery play and a skilled cast to support Geraldine Farrar in her first appearance on its program. The handling of the story serves to create a full measure of suspense and it is so well presented that the reviewer can say truthfully that the ending cannot be anticipated by even the dyed-in-the-wool fan.

The film is lavishly mounted, the settings being designed by Hugo Ballin while Reginald Barker, formerly one of Tom Ince's star directors, has staged it with all the sense of the dramatic that is at his command. There are some long dramatic episodes, played without a cutback that are surprisingly forceful.

Herbert Rawlinson, Percy Marmont, who did such excellent work supporting Elsie Ferguson in "The Lie," Violet Heming, a stage star in her own right, and Hassard Short, another noted figure of the boards, render sterling performances. Photography and lighting are all that can be desired.

Miss Farrar gives a well sustained characterization as Rosalie Dean and appears beautifully gowned. "The Turn of the Wheel" can be boosted as a cracker-jack murder-mystery story and no one can talk back to the exhibitor if he follow this course.—Released September 2nd.—Peter Milne.

AD TALK

Geraldine Farrar, in her first Goldwyn picture, "The Turn of the Wheel," will be the program feature at the ——— theatre ——— of ——— week. America's favorite daughter of the operatic stage and one who has become popular with the millions of picture fans since her work began before the camera, is given a role in her first Goldwyn production that presents the star of "Joan and the Woman" in all her charm of personality, dramatic ability and persuasiveness.

In the supporting roles appear some of the best known faces on the screen—Herbert Rawlinson, who has been leading man for Mabel Normand, Catherine Calvert and others; Percy Marmont; Violet Heming, who is the star of one of the season's best stage productions, "Three Faces East"; Hassard Short, Maude Turner Gordon, Henry Carvil, Clarence Handysides, Ernest Maupin and Mabel Ballin. The story is by Tex Charwate and was produced under the direction of Reginald Barker, one of our best directors.

It is of this production that the conservative New York Times said on the occasion of its metropolitan premiere: "An absorbing spectacle, considerably more engrossing than the common run of film plays." Film fans of this city now have the opportunity to see the grand opera star at the ——— theatre prices within a few weeks of its New York opening.

Miss Farrar turns detective in her latest work and solves a mystery that would have taxed the genius of a Sherlock Holmes. A duplicate scene of the famous gambling resort, Monte Carlo, is seen in this production. Geraldine Farrar in "The Turn of the Wheel" at the ——— theatre ——— of ——— week.

THE STORY

Rosalie Dean (Geraldine Farrar), an American girl, is traveling in Europe and visits the famous gambling resort, Monte Carlo, where she sees a strange man to whom she is drawn. Frank Grey (Herbert Rawlinson) is the man, and for days he has been losing steadily at the roulette wheel. Eventually he loses all, and as he is leaving the room Rosalie, fearing that he will do harm to himself, follows him and is instrumental in saving his life.

Grey is convinced that he can recuperate his losses and Rosalie forces him to accept a loan. From this time on Grey wins as steadily as he had lost before. Rosalie and he are seen constantly together at the roulette wheel. But their courtship is interrupted by the appearance of detectives who place them under arrest, Grey being accused of murdering his divorced wife, and Rosalie is held as his accomplice.

Rosalie believes him innocent. Grey had visited his former wife the night before she was shot. Beyond that, there was no evidence. Rosalie believes that Grey's elder brother's wife can throw light on the murder, and to this end she works. In a most clever manner she gets in the good graces of the wife, and by getting her drunk succeeds in taking her to the apartment in which the woman was killed. When the girl recovers her composure, the truth is revealed and Grey is acquitted.

SUGGESTIONS

The star is your best bet in exploiting this production. She is known from one quarter of the globe to the other and especially popular in America.

There is one pertinent point that exhibitors might bear in mind in exploiting this production: Fans in some sections have come to fight shy of pictures with stars of Farrar's calibre because so many of them have been presented in costume and historical subjects.

But in "The Turn of the Wheel" you have the chance to exploit all the star's fame and popularity—plus a modern story, a real mystery that could stand exploitation apart from any star. Use stills and ad-cuts that show the MODERN—and get the cash both ways, out of the star and the story.

"Little Mary's" Latest Is Sure Fire Light Comedy

YOUR patrons will be delighted with this latest Mary Pickford contribution. The star is given a thoroughly human part. Light comedy prevails throughout the story, part of it being derived from the situations and part of it from the witty subtitles. In any event it forms a clean and wholesome entertainment that any one will enjoy heartily.

The story, by Rupert Hughes, relates the efforts of several enlisted men to win the love of the heroine.

This picture has been produced with the co-operation of the 143d Artillery Regiment, under the command of Captain Faneuf, and of which Miss Pickford is an honorary Captain.

The little boy, with freckles enough in his face to hide his features, is very comical. He acts naturally.

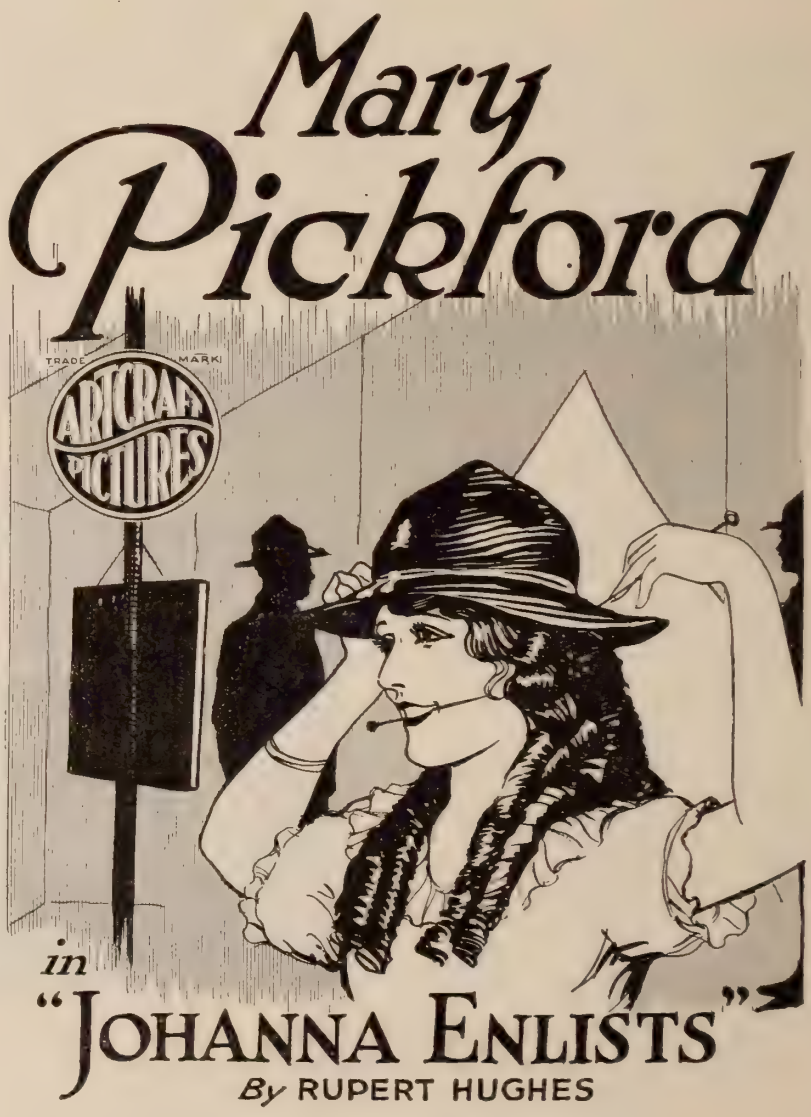
AD TALK

Next week is Mary Pickford week at the ——— theatre, the popular star appearing in her latest Artcraft photoplay "Johanna Enlists." This is a comedy, the situations of which arise from the mobilization of troops in the United States. Johanna is a farmer's daughter and becomes the girl of the whole regiment when Major Wappington's troops decide to make camp on her father's farm. She has three ardent suitors, a Private, a Lieutenant and a Captain, but we will leave it for the film to tell the identity of the lucky man.

"Johanna Enlists" is based on the story by Rupert Hughes entitled "The Mobilization of Johanna." Mr. Hughes is one of the most prolific writers of the modern day. He always keeps up with the trend of the times and allows none of the foibles of present day humans to escape his notice. Mr. Hughes is certainly to be commended for the inspiration which resulted in the story upon which this picture is based. Happily he decided to treat the war, that is the war preparations on this side of the water, in lighter vein. And though there are some supreme touches of pathos here and there throughout the film, comedy is its dominating note.



The adaptation from the Hughes story was made by Frances Marion, who has gained fame through her work in all of Miss Pickford's recent Artcraft pictures. William D. Taylor directed the production. It is interesting to note that Mr. Hughes, Miss Marion and Mr. Taylor are all serving the Allies in the great war at the present writing, Mr. Hughes as a Captain in the ranks of the A. E. F., Miss Marion collecting data in France for the reconstruction work of the Red Cross and Mr. Taylor as an officer with a British regiment. Truly a trio well fitted to produce a patriotic comedy.

THE STORY

Johanna Renssaller serves the unromantic necessity of caring for her younger brothers and sisters and the small livestock on her father's farm. No man has ever cast a friendly, far less a yearning, eye upon her. She possesses much despised freckles and has never learned any of the finer feminine arts that serve to beautify the appearance.

And then at last there comes a whole regiment of soldiers—to pitch camp on the Renssaller farm. Enter romance with a vengeance. Lieutenant LeRoy of this force of armed men is taken sick and as a consequence is quartered in the farm house, Johanna going as far as to give up her bed for him. And so a strong attachment between the gallant Lieutenant and Johanna springs up. And another one between Private Vibbard and Johanna. And another one between Captain Van Renssaller and Johanna, although this last named

Pre-War Intrigue the Basis of Dramatic Subject

THE pre-war German-Austrian intrigues, that led to the assassination of Archduke Ferdinand of Austria, plunging the world into the present catastrophe, form the basis of this entertainment.

Great latitude has been granted to the imagination by incorporating incidents, some of which have been invented and some borrowed from newspaper articles. But, as they can be neither proved nor disproved, and as these situations have been handled by the director intelligently, they will have the same effect on the mind of a spectator as if they were real.

The picture is extremely dramatic and possesses the element of mystery, swift physical action, thrill and suspense to such a degree as to make it interesting and entertaining.

The ending is tragic. Blood is shown on the wall, where the bullets penetrate the heroine's body as it reels to the floor. But owing to the nature of the subject it will not prove as repulsive as it would ordinarily. Still, part of it might be eliminated to good advantage. You may find it necessary for your particular patronage.

THE STORY

The story opens with the Kaiser's agent, Baron von Zeller, head of the German war office, leaving for Austria to notify Emperor Franz Josef (Alfred Fremont), that he, the Kaiser (William Burgess), is ready to declare war on France. At the same time France gets rumors of trouble, and Rene de Bornay (William Scott), secret agent, is sent to Vienna to learn the truth.

The favorite of Emperor Josef is Countess von Arenburg (Gladys Brockwell). She is in the disfavor of the royal family, and especially so by Archduke Ferdinand (Charles Clary), who determines to rid the country of her presence. The Countess knowing of this engages Danilo (Nigel de Brullier) to watch Ferdinand.

Arriving in Vienna, Rene meets the Countess. The Countess threatens to expose Rene after she has detected him in eavesdropping. The Archduke is eventually murdered by the Countess. Rene decides to go to Berlin. The Countess arrives on invitation from Baron von Zeller. She is placed on the lookout for Rene. When war is declared the Countess takes Rene to her apartment and hides him. She urges Rene to escape to France. Rene escapes and, for assisting him, the Countess pays the penalty of death.

AD TALK

A new angle of the vital question that confronts the Democracies of the World is presented in William Fox's second Victory production, "Kultur," featuring Gladys Brockwell. It will be seen on the screen of the ———— theatre on ———— of ———— week. "Kultur" was produced under the direction of Edward Le Saint and written by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton. Appearing in the cast in support of Miss Brockwell are Georgia Woodthrope, William Scott, Willard Louis, Charles Clary, Nigel de Brullier, William Burgess and Alfred Fremont.

"Kultur" is not a war play in the sense that we think of such in connection with battle scenes and the horrors of war. Its theme is based on the facts that lead up to the war. It lays bare the diplomatic intrigues and the household scandals of Hun royalty. The sensational romance of the mistress of Emperor Josef reveals the fact that it was largely through her influence and petty jealousies that the first warlike act was committed by the Teuton powers—that of the assasination of Archduke Ferdinand, heir to the Austrian throne. The role a woman played in this awful tragedy that threw the entire world into war is exposed in William Fox's production, "Kultur." Cherchez La Femme wrote O. Henry—Find the Woman.

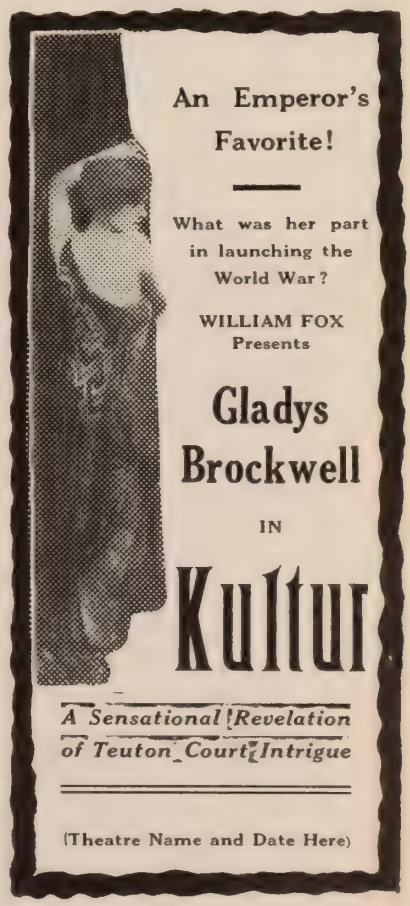
SUGGESTIONS

Three big advertising possibilities present themselves in this attraction—the question of the actual cause of the war is taken up; a graphic portrayal of the system of "underground" politics and secret diplomacy which led to armed strife and an exposition of the scandals in the private life of Emperor Josef, of Austria—the story of the beautiful Countess who ruled him.



The last-named phase of the attraction has never been incorporated in a photodrama of the war. Austria has received little attention by the writers for the screen. It has all been Germany.

This fact, then, is one of the strong points to be brought out in your newspaper advertising. The star's name should also be given prominence, for she has a large following in most sections.

In devising advertising plans be careful, above all, to keep away from the stereotyped methods of ballyhooing war pictures. Let them know that this is something different.

For this reason it is advisable to lay particular stress on the "woman" angle and on the court intrigue. Book publishers have known since the Year One that the mere mention of court scandal in a publication boosted the sales sky-high. Hearst's Sunday magazines never miss an opportunity to lay bare "The Inside Secrets of Emperor Bumpty-Bumps Court," and so on.

This is most likely the sales angle that William Fox had in deciding on the production of "Kultur." Now, don't lose it by letting them think you are just showing "another war picture." "Court Intrigue" and "Inside Scandal" are the two catch-words to success on this production.

"BEANS"—BLUEBIRD

Swift Moving Comedy-Drama with Fine Suspense

THE title should indicate that this offering is a comedy-drama. It is not a massive production, to be sure, but one of those little pictures that send your customers away pleased. It combines comedy, romance, thrills and suspense.

When the villain deceives the heroine and obtains the valuable papers, the spectators will thrill with indignation. Her recovery of the same papers at the hotel by removing them from the villain's pocket is a situation productive of joy, also anxious moments lest she be apprehended. Her daredevil riding on a motorcycle and her fall is another sensation.

The above are only a few incidents. The picture is full of them. They are woven together by an impossible but interesting story with swift physical action.

This attraction is clean and will undoubtedly prove suitable for any kind of audiences. It will leave a happy feeling.—Length, 5 reels—Released Sept. 16.—P. S. Harrison.

THE CAST

Betty Brewster.....Edith Roberts
Kirk.....William E. Lawrence
Wingate.....Charles Gerrard
Ellis.....Harry Carter
Written by John B. Clymer.
Directed by Jack Dillon.

SUGGESTIONS

This picture should be featured strongly as a comedy full of action. It is the sort of a picture that will please everyone if you put it before the public frankly as such a character of a picture. Build humorous lines around "Beans," and there is plenty in the story to justify you.

Beans, beauty and bluff form a strange combination here, and you can feature the three words in your lobby and your advertising. Keep the title of the picture coupled up with everything that you say about the picture, for that of itself suggests something out of the way.

Don't build the exploitation of this story on the love element. This is merely an incidental portion, and though it is a part of the logical ending of the picture, it has little to do with the current interest in the development of the story.

Feature the personality of Edith Roberts as a miniature female Fairbanks. She may not be quite as strenuous as Doug. is at times, but the comparison is legitimate, and your patrons will get your full meaning when they have seen the picture. The lines will create word-of-mouth advertising during the run of the attraction.

William E. Lawrence and Douglas Gerrard are both well known to all followers of the screen, and it is well to get their names into the advertising and into the house copy.

If you use slides, you might couple this up with the comedies that you show on preceding day with a slide: "You may believe that you have laughed, but wait until you see 'Beans.'"

AD TALK

There has been quite a lot of fun pulled off at the expense of the bean, but there has never been a cleverer story written around them than the picture of that title starring Edith Roberts which begins a ——— day engagement at ——— theatre on ——— Monday. And not even the Mexican jumping member of the family has been responsible for more action than there is through these five reels.

Betty Brewster, daughter of the bean king, is frustrated in her desire for a business career, but in the absence of his secretary he has to entrust an important mission to her, as the result of which she proves her ability to care for herself, to save the family fortune and incidentally to win a husband for herself.

A considerable portion of the humor is aided by the bean advertisements which Betty writes in the course of the rapid action of the story. And the strange thing about the love element is that it develops while Betty and the secretary are unknown to each other.

It is a story where the suspense is always strong and where there is also enjoyment while each incident is developing. Miss Roberts is always an entertaining comedienne, and in this production she is ably supported by William E. Lawrence and Charles Gerrard.

"Beans" will satisfy every desire of those who are looking for real entertainment, for it is made with that purpose purely and simply.

THE STORY

Betty Brewster is anxious for a business career, but her father, a bean king decides that society is the place for her. Yet Betty's opportunity comes when Brewster must send the renewal of an option on properties that are essential to his business to San Francisco. Kirk, Brewster's secretary is away at the time, and Brewster is forced to send Betty with the papers.

But Wingate, who is in the employ of Ellis, overhears the instructions of the girl and starts out to prevent the delivery of the papers. He follows the girl to the train and there attempts to convince her that he is Kirk and to swap his identity with Kirk, whom he declares to be the real enemy. He persuades Betty to give him what he believes to be the right papers, but Betty is too wise and instead hands him a roll of the bean advertisements that she has written. Wingate disappears, and Betty turns her attention to Kirk, who had just shown up at his employer's in time to be sent on the girl's trail and lures him from the train.

The girl and the secretary are still unknown to each other, but they steal an automobile and to circumvent his getting to San Francisco she pours horse liniment into the machine and it stalls, with the result that both are arrested and placed in jail. They succeed in making their escape and then they steal a motorcycle. In the meantime Wingate has found that he has been tricked and given the wrong papers, but on his way back to find the girl the motorcycle bumps into his automobile and he seizes the real papers, and makes his escape. The girl and Kirk right their machine and follow the villain and as the girl enters the village hotel sees Wingate washing the dust from his face while the coat with the papers in the pockets hangs near. Betty steals the papers back again, and again jumping on the motorcycle, starts for her destination.

Meanwhile Kirk, entering the hotel a moment later, recognizes Wingate and they begin to fight. In the meantime Betty reaches San Francisco just in time to close the deal. In the meantime the father has been notified of what was happening and he arrived at the hotel during the fight, and he and the secretary start for San Francisco, but arrive too late—or at least they would have been had not Betty been there in plenty of time.

There has been a strong element of love running through the adventures of Betty and Kirk, and now that they come to know who each other really are there is a quick denouement.

CATCH LINES

There is more action in "Beans" than in a barrel of the Mexican jumping members of the family.

"Beans" and Edith Roberts are the chile con carne of the motion picture.

There's a square meal of fun and adventure in "Beans," the story of a pretty girl who outwitted all the men folk.

She saves the family fortune, proves her ability as a business woman and wins herself a husband in the mixed-up plot of "Beans."

"MODERN LOVE"—UNIVERSAL

A Border-Line Picture That Will Please, However

THIS is a good picture. It will engage wholly your attention and, as the action keeps at a steady pace, will hold your interest to the end.

The construction of the story is clever. It is not dealing with the sex problem, as some of the situations lead you to believe. Several times they head you to a point where a disclosure, which you much desire, of the heroine's past would reveal that it was bad.

The only strong point in the picture is the several scenes of the assault. Some of them could be eliminated without injuring the continuity. You may ask your exchange to do that for you if your patronage is discriminating.

Your patrons, especially the women folks, will like this attraction because the heroine is given a sympathetic part. It should entertain any kind of audience.—Released Sept. 9.—Length, 6 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

THE CAST

Julian Lawrence.....P. McCullough
George Addison.....Arthur Shirley
Myrtle Harris.....Claire Du Brey
Wilbur Henderson.....George Chesbro
Mrs. Hall.....Mrs. A. E. Wright
Della Arnold.....Mae Murray
Written by F. McGrew Willis.
Directed by Robert Leonard.

SUGGESTIONS

Mae Murray should be played up as strongly as possible in all of your advertising as one of the best known actresses of the speaking stage who here has the role of a young girl faced with one of the pitfalls of stage life. Her pictures should be prominent in the newspaper advertising and in the lobby displays.

Arthur Shirley is one of the best known leading men on the screen. In George Chesbro and Claire Du Brey there are two actors who have many admirers. Robert Leonard, who directed the picture, was formerly a noted actor before he took charge of this phase of motion picture work.

Any idea of the suggestive may be avoided by showing that "Modern Love" turns out to be the real true love in this picture. So many stories of the stage end with a somewhat bitter taste to them that your patrons will appreciate knowing in advance that this is a picture that comes out just as everyone would have it end.

AD TALK

Romantic elements of life on the stage and as an artist's model run through "Modern Love," the latest feature starring the charming Mae Murray, which will be seen at the ——— theatre

Miss Murray has the role of a girl who has just obtained her first position with a traveling company, only to be forced to quit it through the attentions of the leading man and who finds him her nemesis, even to separating her from the man that she is going to marry. But even when the fiance believes the false statements of the actor, she wins the love of another who has come to believe in her, and who had hidden his love because he believed that she cared for the other man.

Suspense is strongly held in this picture. At the start one sees the girl, who is desperately in need of a job, refusing one because a certain actor is in the company, and the reason for the action is not revealed until near the end of the picture, this element adding to the current interest in the production.

Miss Murray won a remarkable success on the speaking stage before she went into motion pictures, and certainly no one is more competent than she to portray such a role. Robert Leonard has directed this production.

THE STORY

Della Arnold, a recent recruit from a dramatic school, is out of a position, and she gets an opportunity to get another one through Mrs. Hall, who has played in the same company with her. But when she arrives at the theatre she finds that the leading man is Julian Lawrence, and without giving any explanation to her friend she refuses to accept the position and returns to New York.

In her apartment she meets Myrtle Harris, who invites her to a party in which George Addison, a wealthy idler, was present. He was attracted by her beauty.

Della expresses a desire to leave the stage. Myrtle suggested that George Addison might secure a good position for her. Myrtle mentioned the fact to him. George recommends Della as a model to Wilbur Henderson, an artist.

Henderson falls in love with Della and proposes. She accepts.

At the club Henderson meets Lawrence, who is a close friend to him, and tells him he is about to marry Della. He laughs. This arouses Henderson's suspicions and he demands to know. Lawrence tells him a false story that they remained in a hotel registered as husband and wife.

Henderson returns home and asks Della if it is true. She denies it but he will not believe her. Angered, she dismisses him and tells him men such as he drive women to desperation.

Della asks Myrtle if there was room in their party that night for one more. Myrtle answers she will make one. Della dresses and gets there. Addison, who was present, is glad to see her, and in asking his friends to toast the bride to be she rises and begs them not to make such a toast as there will be no marriage. Myrtle nods the guests to retire, leaving George and Della alone. He asks her if it is true she is not to marry Henderson, and if so if she would consent to become his wife. She tells him that before she consents he must listen to the reason of the breaking of her marriage engagement. She then tells him how she and Lawrence, while on the road with a one-night stand company missed the train, and how they were compelled to remain in a hotel for the night, and how Lawrence, unknown to her, signed the hotel register for her as his wife, came up to her room and tried to attack her, and how she was saved by the hotel proprietor, who was aroused by her screams. Then all is happiness.

CATCH LINES

Pure love stills an actor's lying words and brings her a noble man instead of a weakling for a husband.

Della Arnold refused to pay the price and she was strongly rewarded in the end with real happiness.

"THE SILENT WOMAN"—METRO

Edith Storey Gets Good Opportunity in Strong Drama

YOU will admire Miss Storey for the splendid exhibition of her acting powers along emotional lines. She does the best work in her career as the Silent Woman.

Although the story, by Lois Zellner, touches on marital infidelity, the element of self-sacrifice upon which it is based and intelligent directing make it a good entertainment.

An element that adds greatly to the heart appeal is the employment of a four-year-old boy, one of the prettiest and most lovable children ever introduced on the screen. He shows such an affectionate disposition that you can't help loving him. It helps the picture. If you happen to be a father you will know exactly how it will affect your patrons. The scenes showing the death of the first wife can be shortened to good advantage. This is only a minor point, however.

This picture will affect the emotions of refined as well as uneducated patrons alike.

THE STORY

Nan McDonald (Edith Storey) is clerk in a store at a Hudson Bay Trading Post. She is know as "the angel of the lumber-jacks." John Lowery (Frank Mills), his wife (Lilie Leslie) and little son (Baby Ivy Ward), come to the trading post to visit Clifford Beresford (Joseph Kilgour), owner of a lumber tract.

Beresford makes violent love to Lowery's wife, and she is flattered by his attentions. Little Billy is neglected. He makes friends with Nan. When Billy is taken sick, Nan nurses him. The doctor persuades her to remain at the house overnight to look after Billy during a bad spell. During the night she sees Mrs. Lowery carrying on a flirtation with Beresford. Mrs. Lowery starts down the stairs, slips and falls, and is instantly killed.

Beresford with Billy and Nan return East, and Nan becomes a little mother to Billy. Gossips link Nan and Lowery. To avoid this, John and Nan are married. After the marriage John tells her that he does not love her. Nan, to forget, plunges into the gaieties of life. Beresford comes East and makes love to Nan. At last John's eyes are opened to the fact that he loves his wife and all ends happily.

AD TALK

Edith Storey with Frank Mills as her leading man will be seen on the screen of the ——— theatre on ——— of ——— week in a screen version of Lois Zellner's fascinating story of a Hudson Bay trading post life romance and tragedy in the north woods. Miss Storey's ability to interpret before the camera is unquestioned. She is one of the most accomplished actresses working in the silent drama, and has had a successful career for years. As Nan McDonald, "the angel of the lumber-jacks," in the far North, Miss Storey has one of those sympathetic, appealing roles that only she can portray with the most subtle artistry. In "The Silent Woman" she gives one of the most finished performances of her career.

In support of Miss Storey are Frank Mills, a favorite of stage and screen; Joseph Kilgour, one of our best heavy and character men; Lilie Leslie and other favorites in stock. Herbert Blache directed, and he has turned out a production that will please old and young alike. All classes will find thorough enjoyment during the run of this picture.

The great outdoors is pictured, and the human, true-to-life touches that appeal are seen in every flash.

SUGGESTIONS

Aside from the star's value the best sales angle to this production is in the fact that it is a story of the Hudson Bay trading stations. The mere suggestion of the frozen North, lumber-jacks, etc., smacks of romance, and it has a never-failing appeal on the stage, in books and on the screen.

So here is the advertising catch-word, "The Eternal Triangle in the North-woods." Pull in such words as "primeval," etc. For example, "True Love and the Other Man in the Primeval Forest."

Of course, you know the value of the star to you—but have you taken full advantage of the fact that she was among the earliest in stellar rank among present-day stars? Liberal use of photos and other advertising matter announcing her coming seems certain to bring out a number of fan dimes that you might otherwise miss if they only knew that you had "a picture" to show that night. Take a chance on a little extra bang on the name of Edith Storey and see if you don't get some of the old timers out just to see how "their old friend" is getting along.

Frank Mills, who is seen for the first time as Miss Storey's leading man, is popular on the stage and screen, and the exhibitor should make a special effort to get his name well up in front in advertising his first release as Miss Storey's leading man.

"QUEEN OF THE SEA"

Pay particular attention to your newspaper advertising and use one or more of the layouts suggested by William Fox in his press book on this production. Make the star the predominating subject of display in your lobby. Make it a point to get the figures on comparing the star's measurements with those of Cleopatra and Venus. Many newspapers will be glad to print this information on the women's page.

This is a picture that will be put over by pictures—not by type. The best sales angles you have are the photos of Miss Kellerman and the diving girls. You don't have to worry much about what you will say in your ads and the newspapers if you let the pictures do the talking. Let them talk in every conceivable way—from posters, in your lobby, and from the newspapers.

Above all, no matter how shore or how long your run is going to be on the picture, start your campaign early. Whet their curiosity and work on it. For example, make your lobby "A Gallery of Beauty." As early as a week in advance show one or two photos of Miss Kellerman and the diving girls. Tell them more photos are coming. Then show a few more each day—and, to be frank, a bit more daring each day.

No special stunts are being suggested here for the simple reason that stunts depend on the facilities of your territory and the length of the run. But this time you have the past as a guide. Think back over the previous Kellerman spectacle and the stunts you thought of "too late"—after you had seen the picture. Such things as prize contests for the local girl with the nearest to Kellerman measurements, use of local swimming experts in lobby or float stunts, and so on.

Sub rosa—remember, also, that there are over two hundred diving girls in the production. There is nothing to prevent your digging up a fairly good swimmer to appear as "one of the beauties in the picture" and tell some anecdotes. Have her in one-piece bathing suit—with a cloak loosely tossed over it. Give her the spotlight—how about red?—then let the cloak drop "accidentally" as she scampers off after her final bow. Or, some laughs can be secured during her brief talk by having the cloak "slip" and be rescued a few times.

"NYMPH OF THE FOOTHILLS"—VITAGRAPH

Gladys Leslie in a Well Constructed Melodrama

UNLIKE the pictures in which Miss Leslie appeared in the past, this offering is somewhat of the heavy type. It is a melodrama well constructed and directed, although the idea is not new. However, it will hold the interest well and will offer a satisfactory entertainment.

The story is by Rex Taylor. It presents the heroine as a mountaineer girl who falls in love with a city fellow and whom she marries in spite of her father's objections. Her father is killed and her husband arrested, charged with the murder. At the trial it develops that he is innocent.

The Vitagraph people have been been giving us some fine photography, with sharp definition lately. This no doubt proves welcome to the moving picture operators as well as to the managers—not to speak, of course, of the critic of last resort, the audience.

This attraction will appeal to all classes of picture goers.—Released Sept. 9.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

THE CAST

Emmy Chaney.....Gladys Leslie
Ben Kirkland.....Alfred Kappeler
Tubby .....Walter Hiers
Henry Kirkland.....C. A. Stevenson
Directed by Frederick Thomson.
Author, Rex Taylor.

THE STORY

Gladys Leslie is seen as Emmy Chaney, the untutored daughter of a mountaineer and destined by her father's will to wed Jeff Crandall, one of his hunting companions. But when Ben Kirkland comes to the mountains with a party of city friends an acquaintance springs up that develops into true love. They are hurriedly married when the opposition of Emmy's father becomes violent and leave for Kirkland's city home.

Emmy's father and Jeff start out to hunt for the lovers when they hear the news but the parent is shot and killed under circumstances that make Tub, one of Ben's friends, believe that he is guilty. He flees, leaving behind Ben's gun, and it is not long before the alarm is out for the latter as the murderer.

Meanwhile Emmy in the city has been given a cold reception by Ben's family and social set. In his absence on a hurried business trip Mildred, who loves him, plays on Emily's unsophisticated feelings and convinces her that she has been wronged by Ben. Emmy, broken-hearted, starts back to her home in the mountains.

She arrives in time to find the population of the foothills inflamed against Ben for the alleged murder of her father. Ben, following her, is arrested and placed on trial. Everything is going against him when Emmy succeeds in finding Tub and inducing him to tell his story in court. But just as Tub is, as he supposes, confessing his guilt of the crime, an old hermit enters and what he tells forces Jeff to confess to killing Emmy's father. Then Ben convinces Emmy that they are really married and they are happy together again.

AD TALK

Gladys Leslie, dubbed by many fans "the girl with the million dollar smile," will be the star in the attraction of the ———— theatre next ————. And Gladys plus the garb of a wild mountain girl makes a combination that few will want to miss.

"A Nymph of the Foothills" is the title of the production. It is a Vitagraph offering staged with all the regard for realistic atmosphere that this famous organization's product is noted for. In fact, while viewing a thrilling story in "A Nympth of the Foothills" you may also feel that you are being transported far off to beautiful mountains and towering forests.

The story of this production is of the thrilling melodramatic type, with suspense that keeps you on edge until the last moment fearful that some dire fate may overtake the hero and heroine. It gives Miss Leslie one of the best acting opportunities of her screen career—that of a mountain girl who marries a "city feller" and then has her love put to the supreme test.

Supporting Miss Leslie in this attraction for next ———— are Alfred Kappelier, Walter Hiers, and C. A. Stevenson. Other attractions on the bill with "Nymph of the Foothills" include ————.

CATCH LINES

Gladys Leslie, "the girl with the million dollar smile," in a tale of the mountains.

Should circumstantial evidence convict a man? See "A Nymph of the Foothills" and decide for yourself.

A "mountain wildflower" loved a "city feller"—and romance and thrills resulted.

A tale of love in the mountains staged in the beautiful Cumberland Mountains.

Should a girl of lowly station marry a man of higher position—should love be thwarted by the World?

SUGGESTIONS

Gladys Leslie is distinctly the Sunshine Girl. In these war times many exhibitors are making it a point to play up such pictures, some even going so far as to devote special nights each week to the happy production. This point cannot be made too strong in all of your exploitation.

Point out the fact that most of the famous women stars have won considerable of their earlier fame in the roles of girls of the mountains. Tell the public that Gladys Leslie has just such a role and ask your patrons to compare her with other stars that they have seen in the past. That is a subtle way of placing her right at the top of the artists without seeking to make superlative statements yourself.

Vitagraph supplies one and two column stock cuts of the star, and it is always advisable to play up the picture of a beautiful woman, especially when the character of the picture is in keeping. Make the pictures of Miss Leslie stand out in all of your advertising.

"MYSTIC FACES"—TRIANGLE

"Among the Best of Triangles," the Verdict on This

THIS picture ranks among the best released under the Triangle banner. Here are the reasons: The heart appealing situations in the story (the lieutenant and his sweetheart save the dog of the hero from the dog-catcher; the hero feels grateful towards them, and when the girl is kidnaped by white slavers he saves her at the risk of his life); the mysterious atmosphere that envelops any story connected with things Chinese (the reproduction of a real Chinatown, that of Los Angeles, California); the fight, and the brisk action of the story and the suspense it creates.

In addition to the above, the faithful dog, who is introduced in the scenes intelligently and with striking effect, will lend additional heart appeal.

Young Jack Abbe, the hero, duplicates the surprise he had caused in his first appearance in "Who Is to Blame." He is of pleasant appearance, and, owing to the fact that he is given the human part, attracts the sympathy. No doubt he will endear himself with your patrons. The types used around the gambling table are remarkable.

It is a clean and wholesome entertainment and suitable for all audiences.—Length, 5 reels.—Released Sept. 8.—P. S. Harrison.

THE STORY

Yano (Jack Abbe), a little Chinese, works in a small antique shop in the Chinatown district. The shop is run by his uncle Goro (M. Seke). Yano longs for the glory of his forefathers and romance run rippling through his veins. His chief duty is to deliver packages to his uncle's customers.

While delivering a package to Letty Stanford, a wealthy American girl, who is devoting her time to work for the Red Cross and who is engaged to Frank Maxwell, a lieutenant in the army (Larry Steers), Yano becomes a good friend of Miss Stanford.

Two German agents plan to kidnap Miss Stanford and their plan is carried out. Yano is locked out of his uncle's home and he is forced to spend the night in the streets. He enters a gambling resort, the place is raided but he escapes. He learns of Letty's misfortune and learns where she is held prisoner. He arranges her escape by bringing her a disguise and then notifies the police. The police arrive and find that they have captured two desperate spies. Yano receives a handsome reward and is enabled to build a little cottage for his Chinese sweetheart.

AD TALK

Jack Abbe, the little Japanese fellow who is the featured player in this late Triangle offering, is considered by the critics to be one of the leading juvenile actors on the screen today. He came to the front as a star, because of his excellent work in Triangle's production of "Who Is to Blame" and since then he has been featured in this, his first starring vehicle, "Mystic Faces," a story of the Chinatown district of 'Frisco.

The element of mystery in this late offering is played up strong by the author, E. Magnus Ingleton, and in its construction and the many human touches which the director and the little star has added "Mystic Faces" presents one of the most entertaining drama that the ———— theatre has offered for some time. It will be seen on the screen ———— of ———— week.

"Mystic Faces" is a story of the Orient as it is seen in the Chinatown district of San Francisco. It presents a very clever little Japanese actor in the leading role. The management of the ———— theatre assures everyone of his patrons an hour of thorough enjoyment when this attraction is screened.

Kerrigan's Latest Is Marked "Just Average"

YOU will not go wild over this feature. It contains hardly any situations with heart interest. Besides, the hero gets no sympathy, excepting a little in the beginning and end.

The atmosphere is anything but the Canadian it is supposed to be. Within one hundred miles of the city of Los Angeles, Cal., where this picture was taken, lie the San Bernardino Mountains, noble lakes and rivers; a veritable treasure ground of beautiful scenery. Yet, in the attempt to create a Canadian environment, the producers have used half-withered branches of trees in some of the scenes. Why employ artificial means when Nature's beautiful resources are available in such profusion?

Half of your patrons will find it difficult to understand the French-Canadian dialect in the subtitles. This should have been toned down.

CATCH LINES

Soft hands of a temptress bar the way of a baby's chubby fists to his father's neck.

He laughed and fought his way to fortune only to lose it in a moment to the smile of a siren.

He could conquer the forests and best his fellow men, but the first sight of the vampire after months in the woods broke his resolution like a reed.

He was a man's man, but a vampire's prey.

In the mountains he was strong as one of its sturdiest pines, but a woman broke him as easily as a withered bough.

Would you put your hands to a woman's throat if she had thrice torn your bride and baby from you for her own sordid desires? This French Canadian did after he had twice endured a robbery with the stoic good nature of his race.

AD TALK

J. Warren Kerrigan has a role that is strongly suited to his manly physique in "Prisoners of the Pines," the story of a French Canadian who wrests successive fortunes from nature only to yield them to a woman's wiles. It is the story of a man who toils for a year only to lose in a day all that the inspiration of his real love has brought to him.

There is always something very appealing to these stories of the lumber camps where force is the one law that rules. This picture takes us into the heart of the primitive where men's passions govern them. There is a flavor of humor all the way through the picture and Kerrigan has a role that reminds one at times of George Beban in one of his Italian characters.

"Prisoners of the Pines" is responsible for the staging of a most realistic fight in the dance hall. With the aid of his friends the lumberjacks, Kerrigan wrecks the place and put to fight the hangers on. There is a thrill every moment promised here and then there is a strong scene as the French Canadian finally confronts and triumphs over the woman who has caused him all the misery.

One of the most beautiful of the vampires of the screen appears in this production. Claire Du Brey, who will be remembered for her work in Universal pictures. Lois Wilson is again seen playing opposite Kerrigan, as his girl wife.

Ernest Warde, son of the noted Shakesperian actor who directed his father in the moving pictures in which the latter appeared, is responsible for this production which will be seen at the ———— theatre on ————.

THE STORY

Hillaire Latour is a trapper in the valley, but he sees the men from the hills above come down each year, come down, cash their checks and live in luxury and the warmhearted French Canadian determines that he will go there to seek his fortune and save his earnings, but before he leaves he claims Rosalie Dufresne as his bride, though he is compelled to leave her behind.

At the camp he becomes partner of "Spud" Lafferty, the Irish cook who has six times been "down the hill" with his pay check and has returned to the pine woods without having gone home to his wife, but Hillaire is sure that will never happen to him—all the surer when a letter which "Spud" has to read to him comes from Rosalie, saying that he is a father. With this news he calls for his money and leaves the pines to see his wife. But at the saloon in the valley he falls under the wiles of Louise, one of the women of the underworld and she steals his purse and he returns to the hills to make another sum before he can see his wife.

Another year comes and he starts again, but again he has to battle with the wiles of Louise and again he falls her victim. She persuades him to tell her of his Rosalie and his little son, but she makes her physical charms too strong as she asks him are Rosalie's arms as smooth against his neck as are hers. Then he makes the trip a third time and the mention of Rosalie is a sour to him to break away and he rushes from the saloon to the express office only to find that his purse has been stolen again. But the appeal of his wife and child have become too strong now. He rushes back to the woman and after a bitter fight wrecks the dance hall and grasps the woman by the neck. "Rosalie's throat is softer than yours" he tells her as he wrings from her the hiding place of his money and goes home to happiness with Rosalie, forever freed as a prisoner of the pines.

SUGGESTIONS

This is a story of the mountain country, of fighting men and the dance halls. Such pictures have a wide appeal and the very outline of the character of it will draw largely.

This picture should be featured as the story of a child of the outdoors, with a big care free heart whose tenderness led to his own downfall, but whose manhood was able to shake off the wiles of the temptress and win his way back again to his bride and his baby. Do not lose the appeal to the women element in making the strong call to the men.

If the patrons of your theatre are interested in vampire productions, you may interest with the assertion that Claire Du Brey is said to be the most beautiful vampire of the screen and ask your patrons to decide for themselves in this picture.

In this picture Kerrigan is supported by two women, both of whom have been stars in their own right and who doubtless have many admirers. Names of Lois Wilson and Claire Du Brey can be prominently used.

Kerrigan is one of the most manly of actors and by displaying a number of photographs of him in characteristic poses you can achieve a very simple and effective lobby display.

"HER COUNTRY FIRST"—PARAMOUNT

A Comedy Indulging In Too Much Superficial Patriotism

ONE can not be greatly impressed by Vivian Martin's latest picture even though it was based on a story by Mary Roberts Rinehart. It tells of a young woman, whose patriotism was so great that she organized a company of girls and eventually succeeded in capturing German spies.

The subtitles contain a great many speeches apparently injected in the hope of bringing applause, but it must be confessed that the majority of them are so baldly superficial that they fail to inspire.

The action is at many times quite stilted and artificial, rather surprising, too, as James Young directed. And who is guilty in these times of referring to a Major as a Captain in a subtitle? There are few persons who don't know the insignia of the army these days.—Released September 22.—Five reels.—Peter Milne.

THE CAST

Dorothy Grant, a Patriotic Girl...Vivian Martin
Franklin Grant, a Munitions Contractor
John Cossar
Mrs. Grant, his Wife.....Florence Oberle
Isabelle Grant, Dorothy's Sister...Brydine Zuber
Craig Allison, Dorothy's Fiance...J. Parks-Jones
Dr. Barnes.....L. W. Steers
William, the Butler.....Lewis Willoughby
Henry, the Chauffeur.....James Farley
Lena, the Cook.....Lillian Leighton

THE STORY

While in boarding school, Dorothy Grant, a young American girl, listens to a patriotic address by a British soldier, and is so moved by it that on her return home she organizes her friends into a military company entitled the Girls' Aviation Corps. They employ the word "aviation" because it sounds well. It matters little that they do no flying. Dorothy is profoundly disturbed by rumors of spies, particularly as her father is president of a large munitions factory not far from his home. The girl is constantly on the watch. Eventually the mysterious actions of her father's butler, William, arouse in her suspicions that he is a German spy.

She rushes out to the garage to inform the chauffeur, Henry, of this, warning him to beware. That night Lena, the cook, comes to Dorothy's room, saying that Henry is ill and would like to see her. All unsuspecting, Dorothy goes to the garage and there is made prisoner by Henry and Lena. Poor Dorothy! She had blundered. Henry was the spy and William was a Secret Service agent after all. And Henry makes William captive too. He attempts to force the password to the munitions factory from Dorothy. The plan is to blow the works up. But Dorothy will not tell, not even when Henry hurts her in true German style.

And at length through Dorothy's cleverness at signaling and because of her sheer pluck and nerve help comes before the spies secure the password. And after that she is photographed and interviwed and made the real heroine that she is. And then there is Craig Allison. We almost forgot all about Craig. He has been debating all through the picture whether he will join the colors or remain a slacker. It is Dorothy's heroic deed that inspires him to do and dare, and just when Dorothy is wishing for one thing to make her happiness complete, that "thing" appears in the uniform of Uncle Sam!

AD TALK

Next ——— the management of the ——— theatre will present the refreshing Vivian Martin in a screen version of Mary Roberts Rinehart's charming story, "Her Country First." This picture gives proof conclusive that a girl can don a uniform and be useful besides looking pretty. Miss Martin as Dorothy Grant, a patriotic American girl, proves the good of her military organization of young women when she unearths a German spy plot aimed at her father's vast munitions works.

A story by Mrs. Rinehart is most always a treat whether it come between the covers of a magazine or on the strips of celluloid that go to make up a feature picture. She is ever reflecting modern thought in both serious and humorous vein. She is always up-to-the-minute in her stories. In "Her Country First" patrons of the ——— theatre will not fail to recognize human traits and foibles that have become more or less commonplace since the United States entered the war. And the story teller who can make these commonplaces, both little and big, thoroughly interesting, that is the true artist. And this is Mrs. Rinehart's faculty.

James Young, a director whose name has been identified with a number of previous pictures shown on the screen of the ——— theatre, was in charge of the production of "Her Country First." His work is skillful from every angle. He has retained the human note of Mrs. Rinehart's story to a remarkable degree. A strong cast was assembled to support Miss Martin, including Lewis Willoughby, J. Parks Jones and James Farley.

CATCH LINES

Dorothy's suitor teased her about the G. A. C. on her cap standing for Girls Adore Clothes, but she showed him that the Girls' Aviation Corps was the real, honest-to-goodness, useful artcle.

"Her Country First" stars Vivian Martin in a patriotic comedy drama by Mary Roberts Rinehart, the celebrated modern writer.

Dorothy mistook the Secret Service man for the German spy and vice versa, but she fully atones for her mistake in the thrilling climax of "Her Country First."

Vivian Martin will make you all captives in her natty little uniform of the G. A. C.

Trembling with anxiety over her father's safety, Dorothy stood on the stairs peering down into the dark parlor below. Was he dead? Had he been killed by the German spy? Finally she gathered up courage to go down. Her father was nowhere to be found in either parlor or dining-room. Softly she opened the kitchen door, and there to her horror discovered her father—presiding over a midnight supper!

This war has shown us that women are needed in the country's service. See how Vivian Martin as Dorothy Grant thwarts a German spy plot to destroy an important munitions works.

A patriotic comedy drama, with the adorable Vivian Martin proving that a girl can serve her country as advantageously as a boy.

Dorothy Grant decided that to "do her bit" for her country was not enough, so she "did her best."

SUGGESTIONS

Vivian Martin, one of the most refreshing actresses in pictures, is star of "Her Country First," and as she is a strong favorite she is featured in all advertising.

A fine selling point is the fact that the story was written by Mary Roberts Rinehart, an exceptionally popular author of the present day. Her work has appeared in numerous magazines and she is always sought after by editors.

Lay stress on the fact that "Her Country First" is a comedy drama, and that at the same time it is of a most patriotic character. The fact that the author has derived real comedy from her central character should make it most welcome.

As the picture has to do with a girls' military organization entitled the Girls' Aviation Corps, bodies of women and girls organized for military duty could be circulafized providing the picture is played for a sufficient length of time to bring returns on such circulars.

"JOHANNA ENLISTS"

gentleman being of pure old Dutch stock is inclined to look with disfavor on the freckled, uncouth little girl, despite the fact that he knows very well he loves her.

One night Johanna innocently make a decision that brings on the climax of her love affairs. According to certain beauty hints she decides on a milk bath. LeRoy hears her partaking and wondering, enters the room to see what is happening. Result—loud screams and Private Vibbard to the rescue. Vibbard forgets and calls his superior a variety of cheese. Then comes the court martial.

But Vibbard isn't shot or anything. Johanna straightens everything out. As for Van Renssaller he discovers that Johanna comes from dyed-in-the-wool Dutch stock and when the regiment rides away Johanna goes too to marry her Captain in the next town.

CATCH LINES

Mary Pickford's latest picture is a patriotic comedy.

It took the war to bring romance into the colorless life of little Johanna.

Written by Rupert Hughes, adapted by Frances Marion, directed by William D. Taylor. Each one of this trio is serving the Allied cause in one way or another.

Johanna had to choose between a Captain, a Lieutenant and a Private—who do you think was the lucky man?

The Lieutenant hadn't bargained to face the situation of a young woman taking a milk bath when he enlisted, but it must be confessed he didn't turn tail and run!

Written by Captain Rupert Hughes, of the old 69th Infantry of New York.

Including the services of an entire regiment of United States fighting men.

Patriotic dramas and melodramas are so plentiful, we feel sure you will welcome this picture—which is a comedy.

SUGGESTIONS

The fact that Mary Pickford is the star of this production is sufficient advertising suggestion for anyone playing it.

However, it will be well to dwell on the fact that it is a patriotic comedy-drama, not one of the usual blood and thunder melodramas with a patriotic title.

An interesting angle could be derived from the fact that Rupert Hughes, Frances Marion and William D. Taylor are all serving in the ranks of the Allied forces.

"BY HOOK OR CROOK"—WORLD

"Fine Burlesque with Thrilling Stunt Climax"

WORLD FILM comes to the front with another fine laugh-maker in "By Hook or Crook," which has Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley as the featured players. Blackwell is seen as a young society fop who has perfume in his bath and a telephone connection above the tub. When he turns burglar and with his valet, played by Frank Doane, ventures forth into the night to crack a safe there is a line of great comedy. Doane, skilled actor that he is, does notable work. His expressions and his stealthy walk and run are wonderfully funny.

The five reels are brought to a close with a thrilling stunt climax in which Blackwell proves himself peculiarly adaptable to the Fairbanks type of action.

Dell Henderson, who produced Mr. Blackwell's preceding comedy, never lets a chance for a laugh slip by. Blackwell, World Film and exhibitors should extend him a vote of thanks.—Released late in September.—Five reels.—Peter Milne.

CATCH LINES

You wouldn't think a man with the name of Frederic Algernon St. Elmo Pritchard could succeed in life, would you? But watch Carlyle Blackwell overcome this name as the hero in "By Hook or Crook."

"Just leave your worries at home for the evening and see "By Hook or Crook." You won't be able to find the worries after that.

Carlyle Blackwell featured in a picture of comedy, romance and thrills.

Circumstances force a society fop to become a crook and afterwards he turns out a man!

You remember "The Beloved Blackmailer," the last Blackwell-Greeley comedy? "By Hook or Crook" goes it one better.

Frank Doane, formerly musical comedy leading man, is a riot of fun as Smithson, the valet.

AD TALK

Next ——— at the ——— theatre, there will be presented one of the most genuine comedies yet screened. This is a product of the World Film corporation and features the popular star, Carlyle Blackwell, with Evelyn Greeley in the opposite role.

The management takes great pleasure in offering this picture to its patrons, as it is totally light in composition and succeeds in making the observer forget the troubles and worries of these times. Blackwell is cast as a young society fop, who turns burglar for the sake of his fiancee and so succeeds in restoring to her her lost fortune and thwarting the plot of the villain.

Blackwell plays his comedy role excellently and receives sterling support from Frank Doane, who appears as his valet and companion in crime. Mr. Doane is well known on the speaking stage as an actor of real skill. This verdict will be supported by our patrons in general, we feel sure. His expressions of fear during his efforts to turn himself into a competent burglar are riotous and he affects a funny stealthy walk and run that are ludicrously funny.

The comedy is brought to a close by a thrilling climax in which Blackwell takes a truly sensational dive from the top of a tall building to the channel below.

The date is ———. And the theatre ———. Don't forget!

THE STORY

Frederic Algernon St. Elmo Pritchard is a scion of wealth and laziness. He takes his bath—and probably pronounces it with the "a" as broad as the ocean—at twelve noon and bows into his father's office at 4 p. m. His father incidentally is a self-made man and doesn't think much of his son. But there is one who does think much of him, same being Gloria Nevins.

Now Gloria is a pretty young woman who has a villainous uncle, said uncle holding many thousand dollars worth of jewels for security to a Nevins note calling for only five hundred. He also holds a proxy from Gloria's mother giving him the right to vote on the disposition of her factory. The wicked uncle has formed a company to buy the factory at a ridiculously low figure. Poor Mrs. Nevins, with not an ounce of business ability in her head, is helpless. So much for the plot.

To proceed: In company with his valet, Smithson, a serious-minded fellow, Frederic Algernon, etc., etc., sets out to get the jewels for his heroine, and suffice it to say—he succeeds. And then Frederic A., etc., etc., confronts the wicked uncle in his office and declares that he is master of the situation, as he holds Mrs. Nevins's latest proxy.

Gnashing his teeth, the uncle slyly locks our hero in the storeroom and hies himself to the meeting, there to cast Mrs. Nevins's vote himself. But Frederic is undaunted. He escapes to the roof of the factory by a clever trick, dives to the channel, is picked up by a motor-boat, landed and reaches the meeting just in time to save the day.

As a final triumph Freddie introduces Gloria to his father as his future wife, and has the satisfaction of showing him he has made good in the business world.

SUGGESTIONS

Play this as a high class comedy with a thrilling stunt finish and there will be no come back.

Blackwell does great work in the star part, and Frank Doane, as the valet, runs even. Boost Doane—he's worth it.

You might dwell on the fact that the picture contains nothing at all sombre, serious or in the least objectionable.

Feature the thrills at the climax if this sort of advertising goes for you. They are really sensational.

And don't forget the comedy—it is excellent.

Play it as a cure for war-time blues and there will be many who will respond to the suggestion that they are going to get an evening of laughs and clean thrills—with respite from tragedy and heavy drama.

"THE SECRET CODE"—TRIANGLE

A Picture That Entertains Under a Handicap

THIS is not a bad picture, but it could have been much better had the author allowed the senator a little more sense. For instance, it doesn't sound logical that an official of such high standing would have taken into his confidence a woman whom he knew nothing about; or that he would suspect his wife as being a spy without any direct evidence; or that he would reveal to his secretary that the papers he was placing in the safe were very valuable and it would help the enemy to have them in his possession. Had he been that kind of a person he would naturally not have been entrusted with the chairmanship of the spy investigation committee by a sound government.

The entertaining points of this clean offering are derived from the mystery element in the story, which creates suspense, from the swift physical action and from the splendid emotional acting of the star.

Mr. Barney Sherry's work is good, but he is not given much of a sympathetic part. The picture could have been helped a great deal had a better selection of a supporting cast been made.—Released Sept. 8.—Length, 5 reels.—P. S. Harrison.

THE STORY

John Rand, United States Senator, marries Sally Carter, a woman many years his junior. With America's declaration of war on Germany, Rand is unable to devote his attention to anything else save his government duties. Not realizing that his wife desires to share his responsibilities with him, he encourages her acquaintance with young Baron de Vorjeck of the Russian Embassy.

Mrs. Lola Walling, an adventuress in the pay of Germany who had previously striven to captivate Senator Rand only to be defeated by Sally, encourages the friendship of de Vorjeck and the young wife, hoping to arouse Rand's suspicions. In this she is finally successful.

With Harrow, of the Secret Service, Senator Rand gets on the track of German spies. Through Mrs. Welling's machinations Sally is suspected of being a spy by her own husband. In reality it is Mrs. Walling who is giving important news to the enemy. She manages this by crocheting code messages into mufflers which are sent to the enemy.

Harrow, however, manages to clear up the entire situation. He locates the headquarters of the spies and learns the manner in which they work. And just as Rand has become convinced of his wife's unfaithfulness to him and to her country, he is set aright by the information supplied him by the Secret Service operative. Rand learns that his wife is the soul of loyalty and that she yearns to help him in his heavy duties of state. He learns, too, that she is to become a mother, so happy in mutual trust and confidence they begin life anew.

AD TALK

Next ——— the management of the ——— theatre will present Gloria Swanson's latest picture, "The Secret Code." As the title suggests, this is a picture of spies, enemy spies, and the vicious manner in which they sought to shatter the domestic happiness of man and wife in order to further their plotting against the United States. All who are anxious to see justice meted out to the agents of the Hun in this country will certainly appreciate "The Secret Code," particularly when it is said that the author, Adela Rogers St. John, resorted to the facts of a well known spy case on which to base the framework of the story.

Miss Swanson is one of the rising stars in the Triangle firmament. It was less than half a year since that she made her debut as a star in dramatic pictures. She has proven herself fully worthy to carry the heavy burden which stardom creates. She has the beauty and the talent that makes for complete success.

In "The Secret Code" she is supported by J. Barney Sherry as her husband and Joe King as the Secret Service operative. These two lead a supporting cast of distinguished merit, every member of which is admirably well fitted to his respective role. The picture was produced by Albert Parker, one of the best younger directors in the business.

CATCH LINES

It looked like a harmless knitted muffler. In reality is was a code message to German headquarters giving important information regarding the military activities of the United States!

Woman's work in war time must be active. So discovered Senator John Rand soon after his marriage.

Madame Walling was apparently one of the patriotic women of Washington. She was often seen knitting. In reality she was a German spy and the stitches she "dropped" were code messages.

Gloria Swanson, the beautiful dramatic star, in a drama of life in the capital of the nation.

"The Secret Code"—a mystery to be solved at the ——— theatre, next ———.

To what extent the German spies will venture to secure valuable information is startlingly revealed in Triangle's latest picture, "The Secret Code."

SUGGESTIONS

The German spy plot and Gloria Swanson, the star, are the salient advertising points in "The Secret Code."

Miss Swanson is worthy good billing and newspaper publicity. Stories regarding her rapid rise to stardom would be interesting reading. It will be remembered that she was once one of the Keystone beauties. Given her chance in dramatic pictures she immediately made good. A short biography written on these facts would be entertaining.

The spy stuff should be handled originally. Such advertising lines as "The secrets of the German spy system revealed" are rather old these days. Work up a little mystery in the advertising. Feature the Madame Walling in the cast as a supposed patriot and disclose the fact that her many patriotic activities were only a mask.

Spy stuff out of the ordinary can be built on the fact that a harmless knitted muffler was used to carry the code.

her own son. The girl now thinks the old love is good enough for her.

It is a clean picture, suitable for children, and those of the grown ups who love attractions in which the principals are children.

"The Midnight Burglar," with Little Gloria Joy

(Oakdale-General Film—Aug. 26. Directed by Bert Ensinger)

THERE is more heart interest in this offering than in any of her past ones. It ought to make a hit with your patrons especially if you have run her other pictures. It is remarkable how she has taken to acting. She doesn't act, she lives the part. This contribution will no doubt make her popular to picture goers.

The story introduces the diminutive heroine as the little daughter of a money-mad man, who does not hesitate to throw out of the apartment he has for rent a poor family. The heroine runs away from home, visits the poor family and becomes their administering angel. She has enough money in her purse to pay the rent for a few days.

She decides to burglarize her own home and get food for the family. Due to overeating, from the foodstuff they carried away from the pantry, she gets sick. The doctor is called and she is ordered home to the joy of her parents. Eventually she gets well and the father lets the poor family stay in the apartment without rent.

There is a little monkey used in the picture which will prove the delight of children, little ones as well as six-foot sixers. It is a good point to feature.

This picture will appeal to all those who have a heart.

"The Power and the Glory"

June Elvidge in an Average Program Offering

(World—Sept. 2. Directed by Lawrence C. Windom)

THIS is an ordinary program picture, built on fairly steady physical action. It contains no situations with heart interest.

The story is based on the novel by Grace McGowan Cook. The heroine is introduced as a country girl who comes to the city and gets a job in a mill to help her mother, brothers and litlte sister.

The owner of the mills falls in love with her. He is hated by some of the workingmen because of several accidents to children, but is misunderstood as he is really kind at heart and doing all in his power to alleviate their sufferings.

While on a ride in the woods he is caught and is about to be murdered, but the heroine rescues him. In the end they get married.

The picture is clean.

Lee Herz, President of the Silee Flm Co., has just returned from a business trip to Indianapolis.

I. L. Lesserman, manager of the Universal Chicago Office, is spending his vacation motoring through Wisconsin.

H. Elsas, manager of the Garden Theatre of Harvey, Ill., reports business good and is booking big features only this season.

Mrs. Jordan, manager of the Hinsdale Theatre at Hinsdale, Ill., has also been made manager of the Illinois Theatre at LaGrange, taking charge of that house September 1st.

Leo A. Landau, manager of the Butterfly Theatre, Milwaukee, stopped long enough in a mad dash for his train to get the latest issue of the NEWS. He would rather run a chance of missing the train than the NEWS.

H. Benson is the manager of the Majestic Theatre, the new house at Milford, Ill. The Gem Theatre is closed.

The new picture, "Crashing Through to Berlin," sponsored by the Jewell Film Co., opened at the Auditorium September 1st for a week. Sid Goldman, Chicago manager, claims that this picture is the mightiest and most amazing spectacle ever shown in the history of motion pictures, and is absolutely authentic.

Pete Sarantos of the Family Theatre, Elkhart, Ind., is spending a few days in Chicago.

Richard A. Rowland, President, and Joseph Engle, Treasurer, Metro Pictures Corp., stopped off in Chicago on their way to Los Angeles, to arrange details of moving all of Metro Studios to the coast.

R. C. Cropper of the Beehive Exchange, reports that his educational pictures, particularly the celebrated Ditmar Animal Studies, are going big. Beginning in October, the Living Book of Nature will include a series of wonderful and beautiful pictures of life in the depths of the sea.

Cress Smith made a flying trip to Indianapolis and reports that he booked Nazimova in the "Toys of Fate," at the Circle Theatre, and "To Hell With the Kaiser" for a week run at the Opera House.

Nate Erber, Lincoln Square Theatre, Decatur, Ill., will reopen the house September 7th. Mr. Erber, associated with several of Decatur's business men, have taken a new lease on the property for nine years.

Max Levy, city sales manager of Metro Pictures Corp., Chicago, has just returned from his vacation feeling fine, looking fine, and says he is going to do some fine selling for the fall.

Glen Ellyn, one of Chicago's suburbs, was denied the privilege of seeing a moving picture of Mayor Wm. Hale Thompson of Chicago.

Rothaker Girls Hold Successful Party for Red Cross

ACTING under the auspices of the Illinois State Council of Defense the young lady employees of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company held a Bunco Card Party and Studio Dance at the Studio of the company on Diversey Parkway Friday evening, August 23, which was attended by over three hundred people. The studio, card tables, chairs and decorations were donated by the company for the occasion and printed tickets for the event, which were sold by the employees, were donated by a neighborhood printer.

Much excitement ensued during the game of Bunco, after which the floor was cleared and dancing indulged in.

The girl employees originated the idea, made all arrangements and carried the affair through to a successful conclusion entirely by themselves through committees. A goodly sum was realized from the sale of tickets, all of which was donated to the proper authorities.

Gathered in Green Bay

MAY MARSH in the Goldwyn picture, "The Beloved Traitor," was the feature attraction at the Colonial theatre August 23 and 24, but it was a disappointment to many who saw it. One of the Billie Rhodes comedies was shown in connection with it.

"TO HELL WITH THE KAISER" opened at the Orpheum August 29 and played to good business three days. The production is from the Metro studios.

MARGERY WILSON in the "Law of the Great Northwest" was presented at the Royal theatre August 27. A Paramount-Bray pictograph and a news weekly were also shown.

WILLIAM FARNHAM appeared in the Fox film, "American Methods," at the Orpheum theatre August 21-22.

"ALL MAN," a Vitagraph film, featuring Harry Murray, was shown at the Colonial August 25-26.

"THE GHOST OF ROSEY TAYLOR," with Mary Miles Minter, was presented at the Colonial August 28 and 29 in connection with a Lyons-Moran Comedy and a Chester-Outing picture. The program pleased, although Miss Minter could have been put into a picture more suited to her talents.

BILLIE BURKE pleased audiences at the Orpheum theatre August 23-24 in "The Land of Promise," a Paramount film.

"IN JUDGMENT OF," a pleasing Metro film, was screened at the Colonial August 26-27.

MISS JENNIE ALK, who is in charge of the ticket office at the Colonial theatre, has been spending a vacation of three weeks in Chicago and other cities.

Additional Chicago News

A. W. Lindsey, whose theatre at Industry was destroyed by fire recently, has been in Chicago buying new equipment for the new theatre he is building.

Fred H. Sears, Vice-President of the Classic Films Distributing Co., says that their big picture, "Belgium, the Kingdom of Grief," is going over big. They have disposed of several states and have almost completed negotiations for two or three others, the names of which will be announced soon.

S. B. Griever has been in Chicago in the interest of the Ford Educational Weekly, which is controlled by his company for the entire country. Mr. Griever is on his way West, having already signed up with the best of the eastern exchanges. B. H. Hodupp, Inc., has taken over the Indiana territory. The Beehive, located in Milwaukee, are handling Wisconsin.

Tom North, western division manager of Pathe, with offices in Frisco, stopped over in Chicago to say Howd'y on his way to New York from Seattle. California's climate undoubtedly agrees with North, vim, vigor and vitality a plenty.

Harry Cohen, special representative of Metro Picture Corp., New York, is making a tour of the Mid-West offices and spent two days in Chicago.

O. W. Jastram, manager of the Strand, Pecatonica, Ill., leaves for France September 28.

Following the disclosure that the showing of motion pictures of enemy origin is being attempted and the military censor has declared that such exploitation was in violation of the "Trading with the Enemy Act," will make all exhibitors particularly watchful of their bookings to preclude any publicity of German propaganda, the sole intent of which would be to influence public information in America.

W. L. Hill, the genial publicity director of the Famous Players Chicago Office, is up to his neck putting over the Paramount Week which bids fair to be a great success in Chicago.

Roy MacMullen has just been appointed manager of Ascher Bros. Lakeside Theatre to succeed W. C. Lamoreaux, who goes to Racine.

Miss Flossie Jones of Waukesha was one of the first to sign a contract for Paramount Week.

Bill Jenner of the George Kleine System is having a great time checking new contracts and wrestling with hay fever.

Charlie Chaplin in "Triple Trouble" is going big. There are fourteen prints being used and the exhibitors report a clean-up.

Miss Alice Rea has been appointed booker for the George Kleine System, succeeding Bill Hamm, who is now working on Liberty motors for the Budha Motor Works, Harvey, Ill.

Adolph Zuckor's feature, "On the Quiet," presenting John Barrymore, a Paramount picture, is doing a splendid business at Orchestra Hall.

Chris Whelin, manager Chicago branch, George Kleine System, reports that their bookings for the "Unchastened Woman" are phenomenal.

"Behind the Lines in Italy" is doing a splendid business at the Playhouse and will undoubtedly prove a winner for all the exhibitors that are booking it.

Movie Moves Audiences Out of Theatres

FROM THE demonstrations made by audiences in a number of Chicago Theatres, it would seem that it behooved all exhibitors to know positively the nature of their pictures before running them on the screen during these unsettled times.

The experience of the Howard Theatre management, one of Chicago's leading picture palaces, and a number of others in the same class has proven conclusively that it only takes a spark to start something hard to stop. Mayor Thompson of Chicago, who is running for Senator, has been able to arrange with a number of theatres to show a film of himself in conjunction with the Stars and Stripes, the showing of which immediately caused large audiences to stampede and make accusations against the management of being pro-German. People rushed out of the theatre in droves demanding their money, causing riots. The owners of the Howard Theatre claim that the picture was sent to them as an educational film. The trouble at this house was not stopped until the arrival of the patrol wagon and a body of police.

Clarence Phillips, manager of Knickerbocker Theatre, on Broadway, was brought to his knees trying to explain that he did not know what was in the film, an explanation which did not set well with the patrons of the house.

The old adage that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure should be applied to all exhibitors.

What Racine Is Doing

DESPITE the warm weather of the past week the local theatres are enjoying their usual patronage by billing exceptional pictures. Racine people have come to consider the moving picture theatres as a source of news and information as well as a place of amusement, and now come to the show houses to learn of the latest movements of the boys on the front and of all community interests.

MANAGER McKIVETT of the Bijou Theatre has been awarded the Victory Service Pledge from the Committee on Public Information and is arranging to aid the government in all endeavors. He is booking every picture that will possibly assist in keeping up the morale of the local people.

ANOTHER patriotic war service being conducted by the Racine theatres is that of Arthur Friedman of the Palace Theatre who has agreed to take a feature and his copyrighted community songs to Great Lakes every Monday night for the benefit of the bluejackets. Last week in one Y. M. barrack he had some 3,000 of the lads, a goodly portion of them in the rafters singing at the top of their voices.

CAL DEVOLL, one of the leading musicians engaged in movie theatre work has arranged a book of community songs and original parodies besides a number of his own compositions. These songs have taken the crowds by storm and prove a good drawing card.

RACINE has record of a touching incident to add to the collection of Mary Pickford stories. Corp. W. H. Graham, of this city, was killed while going over the top in France. Prior to the day the notice of his death was received a letter was received in which the following was included:

"Our Y. M. secretary is from Los Angeles and is a personal friend of Mary Pickford, the great movie star. He has a number of photographs of Miss Pickford and he gave one of the fellows of our battalion a picture of her. One night this fellow crawled through No Man's Land to the first barbed wire entanglement in front of the German line. There he placed the picture of Mary Pickford and an American flag. Maybe it will make Kaiser Bill wish the war was over, so that he could get acquainted. The secretary says Mary is coming over here in September and it is an introduction for me."

"THE LITTLE DISTURBER" will appear in D. W. Griffith's supreme triumph, "Hearts of the World," at the Orpheum Theatre during the first week of September.

THE REX program for the week included William Fox's masterpiece, "Divorce;" Mary Maclaren in "The Model's Confession;" "Neighbors;" and the Lee children in "Doing Their Bit." Mary Maclaren always draws a large crowd and despite a Chautauqua and exceedingly warm weather played to a capacity house.

THE REX THEATRE in Racine, Wis., is now under the management of Tom Norman and W. J. Blumberg, who was formerly employed at the Palace theatre. The managers have leased the building and they claim that soon the Rex will be the finest theatre in the country. Plans are being made to re-decorate the house and the capacity will be 1,200. The great feature of the theatre will be a new organ, which is said to be the best in the city. The management has engaged the well known De Voll orchestra, to insure the public of getting the best music obtainable. Messrs. Norman and Blumberg are live wires and both have had a great deal of experience in theatre management and exchange work. The managers are desirous of expressing their appreciation to the public for the spirit of good will that has always been shown to the Rex. The pictures will be the Fox and the Metro productions, Chaplin's and Anita Stewart's of the First National Exhibitors.

THE REX THEATRE has secured "The Savage," with Clara Kimball Young; "Safety Certain," starring Norma Talmadge; Mazimara in "An Eye For An Eye"; Harold Lockwood in "Pals First," a Jewel special, "Crashing Through to Berlin," and William Farnum in "Les Miserables."

days showing "Sign Invisible," with Mitchell Lewis. The "Price of Applause" drew a large crowd from the neighboring villages and the 1,200 seats were not nearly sufficient. The play was obtained by Manager Owen McKivitt from the Merrill in Milwaukee. The original "Last Raid of Zeppelin L-21" was also shown.

"TO HELL WITH THE KAISER" will have a run of five days at the Bijou, beginning September 9. Owen McKivitt is sparing no expense in billing and advertising the production. He expects packed houses throughout the entire week's run. A float in the Labor Day parade was a new method employed by McKivitt in advertising the production.

THE PALACE THEATRE will celebrate National Paramount and Artcraft Picture week. The special program includes Enid Bennett in "The Vamp," Billy Burke in "Pursuit of Polly," Pauline Frederick in "Her Final Reckoning, and Charles Ray starring in "The Claws of a Hun."

W. C. LAMOREAUX will be the manager of the new Rialto theatre and he will also have charge of the Palace. Mr. Lamoreaux is coming directly from Chicago, where he managed the Asher Brothers' circuit.

Dubuque News and Views

"DEAD SHOT BAKER" with Carol Holloway and William Duncan, played at the Family theatre Wednesday, August 21, and as usual, when these popular serial stars are presented the Family had a big night. On Thursday, "Danger Within" with Zoe Rae and True Boardman was shown.

GOLDWYN'S delightful comedian, Madge Kennedy, was shown at the Princess theatre for two days this week, Wednesday and Thursday, August 21 and 22 in "The Fair Pretender." Without a doubt, this was one of the best plays in which Miss Kennedy has ever appeared.

THE LIBERTY presented "The Awakening" with Montagu Love, on Wednesday, August 21. As this was the first appearance of Mr. Love at this theatre for over a month, the picture was unusually well attended.

HERBERT BRENNON'S masterpiece "The Lone Wolf," adapted from the novel by Louis Joseph Vance, and starring Bert Lytell and Hazel Dawn, drew fine crowds at the Grand, August 21 and 22. Mr. Lytell is a decidedly clever youngster and his work never fails to please.

DUBUQUE'S own star, Frank Keenan, was seen at the Dreamland theatre for two days, August 24 and 25. Manager Boyle never has to worry about having good houses when Frank Keenan appears, for Dubuquers are mighty loyal to their "home town" actor.

WILLIAM FARNUM has never been seen to better advantage than in the 1918 version of the powerful William Fox photodrama "A Soldier's Oath," which was shown at the Majestic theatre for three days, August 22, 23 and 24. William Fox did not make a mistake when he chose this play as one of the six greatest plays produced by his company.

VITAGRAPH'S greatest player, Earle Williams, came to the Family theatre Wednesday, August 28, in "The Love Doctor," and added another leaf to his laurels by his good work in the role of the surgeon. Mr. Williams is always associated with good plays and good receipts.

SATURDAY, August 24, marked the first appearance of Elsie Ferguson at Dubuque's North End theatre, the Family, in her greatest success, "Barbary Sheep." The noted Artcraft star won the instant approval of nearly all the theatre's patrons.

LINA CAVALIERI made her debut at the Princess theatre Friday and Saturday, August 23 and 24, in "The Eternal Temptress." The picture drew average crowds.

"THE MERCY OF MEN" was another dramatic triumph for Alice Brady. The picture, which was shown at the Princess theatre Monday and Tuesday, August 26 and 27, drew exceptionally well.

HAROLD LOCKWOOD and his nice little leading lady, Pauline Curly, played at the Family theatre on Metro night, Friday, the 23d, in "The Square Deceiver."

"THE HOUSE OF HATE" and "The Lion's Claw" continue to draw crowds at the Family theatre every Monday. These serials are great favorites, especially "The House of Hate," every episode of which is breathlessly watched from start to finish. On Monday, August 26, the ninth episode was shown, and the fans cheered heartily every time Pearl White appeared on the scene. The tenth number of "The Lion's Claw" was presented.

FOUR STARS, Fritzi Brunnette, Thomas Santschi, Bessie Eyton and Eugenia Besserer, were shown at the Dreamland theatre on last Friday and Saturday. On Sunday "The Painted Lily," with Alma Rubens, "the girl of a hundred expressions," was presented.

WALLACE RIED played at the Princess Sunday in "The House of Silence." To say the house was crowded would be putting it mildly. People just swarmed to the theatre, and Managers Billos and Yainnias were about beside themselves trying to handle the crowds.

"THE FOX BABY GRANDS," Jane and Katherine Lee, were returned to the Liberty theatre Sunday, August 25, in "We Should Worry." The picture was brought back by special request.

VIVIAN MARTIN and Tom Moore starred at the Family theatre on Sunday, August 25, in "Little Miss Optimist," adapted from the book by Gardner Hunting.

"TANGLED LIVES," with Harry Morey, was shown at the Grand last Sunday. On Monday and Tuesday Henry B. Walthall appeared in "Humdrum Brown."

FREDERICK YOUNT, of the Family theatre, has made a few changes in his program. In the future Paramount pictures will be shown on Sunday; Monday is serial day; Tuesday, Select Pictures and Selznick productions; on Wednesday Bluebird features are presented; Vitagraphs are shown on Thursday; Metro on Friday and Artcraft on Saturday. Mr. Yount now has the most varied program in the city.

THE BELKNAP theatre at Hopkinton, Ia., will present "The Kaiser" on Saturday, September 21. The manager is doing much advance advertising. On Saturday night, August 24, "The Upheaval," with Lionel Barrymore, was shown.

"THE GERMAN CURSE IN RUSSIA" was the program at the Crystal theatre at Anamosa, Ia., Monday, August 26. A good house was reported.

THE COZY theatre's program at Bellevue for the week of August 25 included the following stars: Carlyle Blackwell in "The Good For Nothing," Mary McAllister in "When Sadie Went to Heaven," "The Trap" with Alice Brady, and John Barrymore in "Are You a Mason."

MANAGER EDWARD HENDRICKS of the Web theatre at Savannah has extended the courtesy of his theatre to the soldiers. Everyone in uniform will be admitted free to any of the performances.

THE SATURDAY, August 24, program at the Grand theatre at Lancaster, Wis., was "A Mother's Secret," with Ella Hall.

MARGUERITE CLARK was shown for two days, Sunday and Monday, August 25 and 26, at the Palace theatre at Waverly, Ia., in her famous fairy tale, "The Seven Swans." Marguerite drew packed houses, as usual.

THE FEATURES shown at the Plaza theatre at Manchester,

Ia., during the week of August 25 were: "Bab's Burgler," with Marguerite Clark; "Brave and Bold," with George Walsh; "Over There," with Charles Richman; "The Fair Pretender," with Madge Kennedy, and "The Sunset Trail," with Vivian Martin.

THE STAR theatre at Decorah, Ia., presented Charlie Chaplin in "A Dog's Life" for two days, August 23 and 24. Wallace Reid in "The Hostage" was also shown.

"OVER THE TOP" was shown at the Auditorium at Cuba City, Wis. August 30 and 31.

Fond du Lac News Notes

MANAGER F. R. SMITH, of the Bijou theatre, has closed a contract for the Paramount program for the coming year, beginning September 1. Mr. Smith is a firm believer in Paramount service and was one of the first to contract for it.

MARGUERITE CLARK in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be one of the features of the Bijou program about the middle of October.

"THE GEEZER OF BERLIN," a travesty on "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," drew good business on a three days' run at the Bijou Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 29, 30 and 31.

"LEST WE FORGET," a master patriotic story based on the sinking of the Lusitania, drew large audiences three days in succession when presented at the Bijou under the auspices of St. Joseph's Guild of St. Joseph's Catholic Church on August 26, 27 and 28.

MARY PICKFORD in "How Could You, Jean," surpassed all expectations at the Orpheum in Fond du Lac for the three days, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, August 26, 27 and 28, drawing big houses at each performance. A children's matinee at 1:15 Monday packed the house, scores of the children bringing their lunches in order to make sure of getting in.

IF THERE was any doubt as to the sentiment in Fond du Lac on the question of community singing at the moving picture theatres the first week it was tried out, it was all cleared up the second week. "Community singing is simply going fine," says Manager Ainsworth of the Orpheum, "and we propose to continue it indefinitely. The audiences seem to like it; at any rate they sing the songs with real spirit, and we are going to give them what they want. It is our plan to continue this feature on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays of each week."

In Springfield Theatres

MANAGER BLOOMBERG of the Palace Theatre honors the annual Artcraft and Paramount week by booking "City of Dim Faces," the last of the Sessue Hayakawa pictures under the Artcraft management; "The Vamp," with Enid Bennett; "Claws of the Hun," with Charles Ray; "Pursuit of Polly," with Billy Burke; and "Next of Kin," with Wallace Reid starring.

THE BIJOU scooped the other movie theatres by booking "Triple Trouble," Charlie Chaplin's final Essanay film that comes direct to Racine from the Castle Theatre in Chicago. "Triple Trouble" is considered Chaplin's best picture under the Essanay management.

MANAGER W. D. CAVE announces that he will bring "Hearts of the World" back to the Chatterton for either five days or a week in October. The last engagement turned out to be highly satisfactory despite a very poor start,. The picture is considered by local fans to surpass Griffith's "Birth of a Nation."

ED MAISEL, of the Capitol, reports that his first day's business on "Hands Up!" the new Pathe serial, exceeded any day in the history of the theatre. The last chapter of "The House of Hate" was on the same bill, and the police were called on five times to handle the crowds.

THE GAIETY and Vaudette theatres report the business for Fair Week surpasses that of last year by a comfortable margin. The Gaiety hung up a new mark for attendance, which will probably stand for some time to come.

MISS FREDA SNOW, pianist at the Vaudette, has gone to her home at Paw Paw, Mich. It is rumored that the talented young lady will soon become Mrs. J. Reilly. The groom-to-be is a salesman for Metro films. Robert Isaacs and Mrs. Hoag are now the pianists at the Vaudette.

HARRY LOPER and Mrs. Loper have returned from a long vacation feeling much refreshed. The Lyric will display a lot of "pep" from now on, for the manager has it in chunks these days.

THE PRINCESS took "Blue Blood," a Selexart play, off after the second day. It was a trifle "high brow" for some of the patrons, who admitted that it was a beautiful production, it was just a bit off as far as being real entertaining. "All Man," a Vitagraph play with Harry Morey and Betty Blythe was booked to take the place of the discarded picture for Tuesday, August 27.

GUS KERASOTES, of the Royal, sprung a big surprise on the boys by booking "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," for two days, August 27 and 28. Aided by a high-powered publicity man, Gus went after the advertising strong, and the first day's business was a corker. Second day was just about as good as the first, and Gus had them standing out on Sixth street and fighting to get in. The newspapers were glad to see Gus come back into the advertising columns, he having been out for about a year. The Royal is admirably situated and with proper publicity can play the big productions to dandy returns. Gus got ten and fifteen cents on "The Kaiser," it being a repeat, the Gaiety having played it to five days earlier in the season. As far back as memory runs this is the first time the Royal ever asked for more than ten cents admission. The management, pleased with the way things went, booked "A Soul for Sale," "The Man Without a Country," "Crashing Through to Berlin," and several other Jewel productions. Barney Rosenthal, St. Louis manager for Jewel, was in the city to see that Gus put "The Kaiser" over right.

THE GAIETY had a terrific week August 18-24 with Douglas Fairbanks in "Bound in Morocco," "The Geezer of Berlin," Madge Kennedy in "Friend Husband," and "Smiling Bill" Parsons in "Bill's Baby." Parsons used to sell insurance for the Franklin Life here, and his brother Elks turned out en masse and in full. They say that Parsons could cure the blues from anyone when he lived in this community.

CHARLES RAY had four corking days at the Vaudette in "A Nine O'Clock Town." Manager Watts had on the same bill one of the Sennett reissues, "He Did and He Didn't," with Fatty Arbuckle and Mabel Normand and a Screen Telegram. Pauline Frederick finished the week in "Fedora," but did not do so well, it being a bit heavy for the natives. This was the week of August 18-24.

STATE FAIR WEEK with the Lyric turned out fine. Sunday and Monday, August 18 and 19, Manager Loper had Virginia Pearson in "The Liar," a Christie comedy and weekly; on Tuesday and Wednesday, August 20 and 21, Emily Stevens in "A Man's World," a Lee Moran and Eddie Lyons comedy and Weekly, and on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, August 22, 23 and 24, Marion Davies in "Cecilia of the Pink Roses." For the following week, August 25-31, Manager Loper has the fine attractions noted: Sunday and Monday, Jewel Carmen in "Lawless Love"; Tuesday and Wednesday, Viola Dana in "Opportunity"; Thursday, Friday and Saturday, William Farnum in "True Blue."

THE PRINCESS reports business as satisfactory during State Fair Week. Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, "Mothers of Liberty," with Barbara Castleton, was the attraction; on Wednesday and Thursday Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley in "The Beloved Blackmailer;" Friday and Saturday saw Dorothy Phillips in "The Mortgaged Wife." The usual Pathe weeklies, Pathe comedies, Allied War Reviews and other short subjects were also given. For the week of August 25-31 the Princess will have: Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, Howard Hickman in "Blue Blood;" Wednesday and Thursday, Kitty Gordon in "Merely Players"; Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Bessie Barriscale in "Maid o' the Storm." "For Husbands Only" is announced as a coming feature to be shown soon.

NORTH END CIRCLE, Empress, Palace and Pekin theatres, all report that business is entirely satisfactory, and augurs well for a good fall and winter season.

THE GAUMONT WEEKLY and Allied War Review films are making a big hit with patrons of the Majestic.

THE GAIETY made a grand start on Sunday, August 25, with W. S. Hart in "Riddle Gawne," the engagement being for four days. Alice Howell in "She Did Her Bit," was on the same program. For the last three days of the week Manager Thornton will have Petrova in "Tempered Steel," and "She Loved Him Plenty," a Mack Sennett comedy. "Till I Come Back to You," newest of De Mille-Artcraft super-productions, comes to the Gaiety Sunday, September 1, for four days.

SUNDAY, September 1, Monday, September 2, and Tuesday, September 3, should be big days at the photoplay houses here. Reason, Sunday is always a good day, Monday is Labor Day, with a big celebration and lots of out-of-town people here, and the next day is circus day, Ringlings being in the city, which of course means the bringing in of lots of strangers looking for amusement. There is always a little slump after a circus day, but the "boys" should be well fortified for it by preceding good days.

BILLIE BURKE, prettier and better than ever, delighted big crowds at the Vaudette with "In Pursuit of Polly." Manager Watts had "Dizzy Heights and Daring Hearts," a Sennett comedy with Chester Conklin and a Screen Telegram on the bill for four days also, and the program went over "like a house afire." Folks paid "Bill" lots of compliments and said the show was bully. Mae Marsh will follow for three days, on August 29, 30 and 31, in "The Glorious Adventure," a Goldwyn play. This will be the first time Mae Marsh has played the Vaudette since the time when she was a Mutual star under D. W. Griffith. Dorothy Dalton will succeed Miss Marsh in "Green Eyes."

MANAGER BEN ROVIN of the Amuse-U is taking in more money than any time since he opened the theatre at Sixth and Washington. The business "Bill" Hart does for Ben is a caution, also some of the other big stars. Too bad the Amuse-U hasn't a larger seating capacity, for it surely needed it Fair Week, and also nearly every day. Ben says he is going to book some real good shows for his patrons, the best pictures he can get.

THE PRINCESS has signed for United Pictures, which will give them some extra good plays along with the present program. Dustin Farnum in one of Zane Grey's stories is said to be the first of the "United" offerings to be released.

"THE BRASS BULLET," one of Universal's great serials, opens at the Savoy on Wednesday, August 28. The Savoy crowds eat up the chapter plays and the more Manager Louis Kerasotes gives them, the better they like him and the more business he does. As usual, Louis is going to let the youngsters in to the first episode with a ticket and five cents. Tickets are being scattered promiscuously over Sangamon and adjacent counties.

JUST WHAT the new draft law will do to some of the film theatre managers remains to be seen. Several are between the ages prescribed by Congress and may be "marching away to be soldiers" shortly. There isn't a manager in the city who hasnt' done everything possible to help Uncle Sam since this country entered the war, and the enlistments from the motion picture theatres have been heavy. Everyone here is ready to answer the call when it comes, and it can't come too soon to suit some of them.

THE PRINCESS has booked the Keeney pictures, and will show the first one some time during September.

PRODUCERS of the news weeklies had film men on the job taking pictures of ex-President Roosevelt during his visit to the State Fair, and in making the Centennial speech. One hundred thousand people were on the grounds.

LOUIS KERASOTES is making things hum at the Savoy; Sunday, August 25, he had Neal Hart in "The Trial of No Return," and a comedy; Monday, "When Men Are Tempted," a Vitagraph play with Alfred Whitman and Mary Anderson; Tuesday, Margarita Fisher in "Jilted Janet," and a comedy; Wednesday, the first chapter of "The Brass Bullet," a Lee Moran and Eddie Lyons comedy and Universal Weekly; Thursday; Franklyn Farnum in "$500 Reward"; Friday, No. 17 of "The Lion's Claws," and Saturday, Mae Murray in "Her Body in Bond."

Notes From Here and There

H. W. SAVAGE, of Alton, Ill., says that this is the best season that he has had at the airdome theatre, and that the summer has been very good at his regular houses.

A CYCLONE put the power plant out of business at Madison, Ill., on August 10th, and there were no lights or movies.

LOUIS LANDAU had a similar experience at Granite City, which deprived him of the revenue on both his theatre and airdome, the entire city being without lights.

JOE ERBERE will build a new vaudeville theatre at East St. Louis that will seat 2,200, at the finish of the war. Plans have been drawn and ground purchased.

SOUTHERN Illinois exhibitors are indignant at the poor express they are given. The worst point is at East St. Louis, in the relay depot, where film has been known to wait for a week for transfer to southern Illinois points. Exchanges are advised to allow plenty of time when shipping to southern Illinois.

OTTO BERGE, of Collinsville, Ill., had a surprise when his son unexpectedly came home from Camp Dix on a furlough, and was completely winded when the aforesaid married the daughter of Otto's life-long chum.

LOUIS DANIELS, manager of the Gem theatre, Benld, Ill., has been drafted. Joe Buccie is now in charge.

KENNETH HACKLEY, who formerly had the Banzai theatre at Earl Park, Ind., has purchased the Starland theatre at Paris, Ill.

THE Lindsey theatre, managed by Edwin Lindsey at Lindsey, Ill., was destroyed by fire last week, total loss over $10,000. New plans have been drawn for another house, work on which will start immediately.

JOE TABOR, manager of the Majestic theatre at Belvidere, Ill., is complaining about business on account of the extreme heat and the draft, which has taken many men from this little city.

J. E. OWBRIDGE, manager of the Court theatre, Sycamore, Ill., has closed his other theatre on account of poor business. The Court theatre is the only theatre running in Sycamore at the present time.

A LABOR shortage at Mendota, Ill., has made it necessary for E. J. Degenhardt to operate his own machine, his operator having been drafted on the work or fight ruling.

THE only pictures being shown now at Rutland, Ill., are at the Sacred Heart Church, which shows the best in moving pictures every night. Father Dyckman is some show man.

L. J. BARR, of Lacon, Ill., says that business is in the worst condition he has ever seen it there, due to local conditions apparently brought about by the war.

H. C. HIPPLER, of Chillicothe, Ill., claims that business is very poor and that he has been forced to cut down to three nights a week.

IT seems to be the vogue nowadays for film hounds to own cars. Jack Meredith is the latest to acquire one.

IKE VAN RUNKLE, of the Goldwyn Chicago office, says that he is positively swamped with new business. Every mail brings an avalanche. Mr. Van Runkle is enthusiastic over the outlook for the fall business. He feels that the new Farrar picture, "The Hell Cat," will break all records.

B. W. ALBERTS, booker of the Goldwyn Chicago office, is so busy with the new contracts coming in that it will be impossible for him to take a much needed vacation.

SID GOLDMAN, manager of the Chicago Jewell office, is full of enthusiasm over their new seven reel production, "Crashing Through to Berlin," which he has hopes of putting on at the Auditorium for a run. This picture is entirely different from any war picture that has yet been made, as it covers every angle of the great conflict from the start to date in an absolutely authentic manner.

displaying pictures projected from a distance of 250 feet. It will be thrown close to the Government breakwater off Grant Park. The projecting machine will be situated on a platform built in the lake and the audience will be seated on shore.

CRESS SMITH says that before knowing the name of the third Nazimova picture, which they now know has been named "Eye for Eye," they booked it for twenty-four days in three houses.

"TO HELL WITH THE KAISER" is breaking all records. The Metro Chicago office now have fifteen prints working every day.

GEORGE BROMLAY, formerly of the sales force of Triangle, Metro and Fox, has taken over the Albany theatre, which will open in September.

"WITHIN THE LAW," Vitagraph's wonderful dramatic photoplay, came to the Princess theatre Monday and Tuesday, August 19 and 20. Alice Joyce was truly great in the leading role—her magnetic personality attracted as never before. Plays like this are always appreciated, according to Manager Billos. They never fail to please—they are full of pep and punch—not a dull moment from start to finish.

"THE GIRL IN HIS HOUSE," starring Earle Williams, was Sunday's (August 18) offering at the Grand. Mr. Williams was fine in the role of Jim Armitage—he is a star the audience always appreciates.

PARAMOUNT pictures draw very well at the Family theatre, so Manager Yount has decided to use Paramount and Artcraft releases exclusively for his Sunday program. Accordingly on August 18 he presented "The Mysterious Miss Terry," with Billie Burke.

JACK PICKFORD, "the typical American boy," was presented at the Princess theatre Sunday, August 18, in "His Majesty Bunker Bean." The popularity of the star, combined with the well-known story, proved so great a drawing power that the theatre was packed at 8 o'clock. Jack Pickford is at his best in plays of this kind, and so is his charming little co-star, Louise Huff.

An Avalanche!

Yes, when we started the COMPLETE PLAN BOOK last week it took the country by storm. "Just a year or so ahead of any other trade publication in the field," is what they all say in letters of congratulation.

Portland Managers Start School for Operators

PORTLAND theater men have thrown a bombshell into the ranks of motion picture operators and stage hands with the announcement that they are not going to wait until the draft threatens their business but that a school for women operators and stage hands will be started immediately.

If the unions object to the presence of feminine apprentices alongside them, a theater will be hired and operated by the women, proceeds to go to charity.

A new work and wage agreement of the Theatrical Federation, including operators, stage hands, musicians, bill posters, etc., calls for a revolutionary wage increase, revolving about a six-day week, with pay for seven, and Sundays and holidays at time and a half. The theatre men are going to fight this, agreeing to an increase of from $7.50 to $10 per week, but insisting that it be for seven days. They demand that a seven-day business be recognized as such.

The agreement as submitted by the Federation, and to which Theatrical Managers' Association and Exhibitors' League object so strenuously, means, with its six-day provision, overtime, etc., to an increase of about 40 per cent.

Coughlin With American in Spokane

WALTER A. COUGHLIN has resigned from the Fox organization to accept the management of the Spokane, Washington, office of the American Film Company. He will have his office with the Pathe Exchange in Spokane, from which point he will be in charge of booking the William Russell, Mary Miles Minter and Margarita Fisher subjects in the northwest territory. Coughlin was formerly manager of the Mutual, Butte Exchange, where he served for four years and made many friends among the exhibitors of the inter-mountain states. Mr. Coughlin took up his new work the middle of August.

Lloyd Engages Leatrice Joy

LEATRICE JOY has completed her work in Warren Kerrigan's latest picture, "Sons of Men," and has been engaged by Frank Lloyd to play an important part in William Farnum's present production at the Fox studios in Hollywood, and has already started to work in the picture. Leatrice has been in California but a short time and has already played in two features with Kerrigan, one with Louise Glaum, one with Carmel Meyers, and now the Farnum engagement.

Brunton Studios' Companies on Location

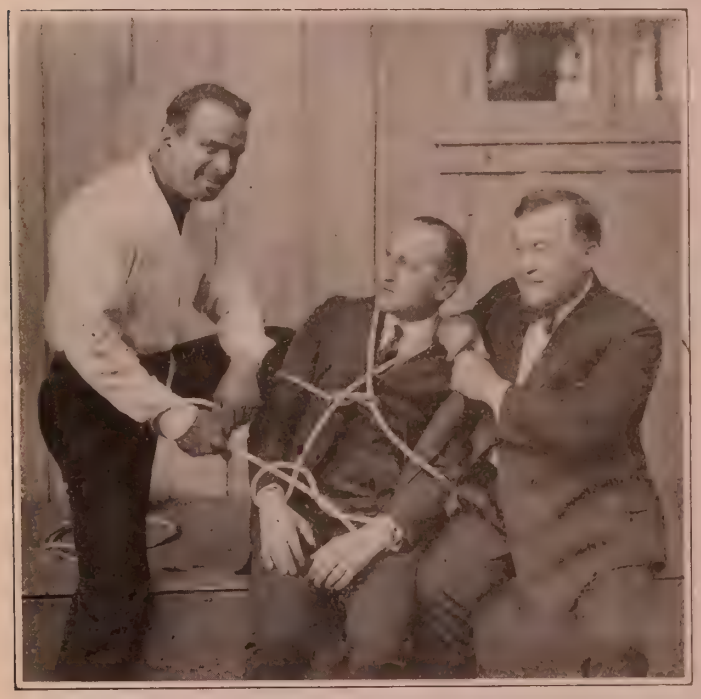
WITH SEVERAL of the producing units filming at Brunton Studios absent from the plant making exterior locations, the big lot presented a rather unusual appearance last week.

The Louise Glaum Company, directed by Wallace Worsley, is back from a stay of ten days in the San Bernardino mountains, where "The Goddess of Lost Lake" exteriors were made. This play was originally titled "Part White." The entire cast selected for this includes W. Lawson Butt, leading man, Hayward Mack, heavy, J. J. Dowling, Frank Lanning, Eva Moulton and Roy Laidlaw.

Since completing "The Heart of Rachael," Bessie Barriscale has been on a vacation, but the continuity for her next subject is nearly completed, and she will resume work this week.

Verne Porter has been engaged to collaborate with R. J. Matzene in preparing the continuity for the first Madame Yorska play, story for which was written by Madame Sarah Bernhardt.

The Zane Grey Company will cast for its first subject within a few days, and the Haworth organization will begin the filming of another play, starring Sessue Hayakawa. Marie Dressler, making World comedies, is also working at this studio.



Denver Exchange Man Attests Popularity of News

THE following voluntary testimonial attesting the popularity of the Motion Picture News was received this week from Manager John R. Meldrum of the Denver Universal exchange: "I have read every motion picture trade publication on the market for the past ten years and I want to go on record right now with the statement that I am convinced that the Motion Picture News is in every sense of the word the best publication of its kind. I receive all the trade papers each week here at the exchange, but always read the NEWS first, not simply because it always carries all the live items, but because nine times out of ten the NEWS has them first."

Manager Bailey Tries Girls as Ushers

MANAGER BAILEY of the American, Butte, Mont., has dispensed with boy ushers and is now using girls attired in pretty uniform. Women are being used in Butte theatres wherever possible on account of war demands for man power. The American now has a ten-piece symphony orchestra in attendance every evening, this being the largest in the city.

What Butte Is Doing

"BABY BARBARA" Luddy is in Butte with her mother, Mrs. Dr. Sproule, en route to Hollywood, Los Angeles, where the little girl will appear in moving pictures. They are making the trip in their Reo auto, stopping off in the leading towns where the child puts on her clever dancing act at theatres. She is a talented tot and her Montana friends look for her to make good in the picture world. Barbara is a Montana girl, born in Helena.

MANAGER ECKHART of the New Marlowe theatre at Helena is reported to be doing good business in the capital city's new house. He is running feature pictures and road attractions.

"THE GREAT LOVE," the Griffith production, went big at the American the past week. Manager Bailey's house was packed every night during this showing. The picture pleased the patrons.

BILL HART, in "Shark Monroe," is going strong in Montana houses where the feature is now being exhibited.

BIG lettering, covering the Rialto theatre building, along the Park street side, was used by Manager Ruffner to advertise "Pershing's Crusaders." No phase of advertising the officially endorsed government picture was overlooked by Ruffner. The local army recruiting officers got permission to paint on the sidewalks to advertise the production, although to get this permit, a city ordinance prohibiting it had to be shoved aside. Prominent local business men, who saw the picture, gave laudatory interviews, which were printed in the daily press. Big display ads were used and it was no wonder that the patriotic picture drew capacity houses. The 14th Infantry troops stationed in Butte, in command of Major Bradley, were guests of the management at the first showing of the "Crusaders." This proved a good advertising stunt. Mayor W. H. Maloney was a guest at a private showing just prior to the beginning of the run and his statement is worthy of repetition. He said:

"It's one of the most wonderful pictures I ever saw. I have seen many wonderful things portrayed on the moving picture screen, but never anything that made such a deep impression on me. I wish that every Butte citizen could see it. Not only is it entertaining and of gripping interest throughout, but it is exceedingly instructive. It opens your eyes to what the United States is doing.

"You can talk about your Hun efficiency and all that, but just watch the Yankees at work! I think you will have to hand them the palm.

"We are all proud of having been born under the Stars and Stripes, but seeing 'Pershing's Crusaders' will send new thrills of pride and patriotism through your being."

Brief News of San Diego

THEDA BARA and party of five have been enjoying a horseback outing in the mountains of San Diego's back country.

A FEATURE of the presentation of "The Kaiser's Shadow" at the Broadway Saturday evening was the presence of Miss Dorothy Dalton, the star of the picture. Miss Dalton came down to attend a ball at the U. S. Grant hotel, and during her stay met many of her admirers.

EXCAVATION has been commenced for the foundation of the new theatre, to be known as the California, to be erected on Eighth street, between Broadway and E street. The ground dimensions are 75 by 100 feet, and the theatre is to have a balcony which will add largely to the seating capacity. It is estimated that the cost of this new motion picture house will be about $50,000.

HEAVY outdoor advertising by the Pickwick management brought good box-office receipts the past week when "To Hell with the Kaiser" was the feature.

THE Illusion theatre, formerly in the motion picture field but for several months dark, has been the scene of a score of political meetings during the primary compaign. The Crystal theatre is still closed. The Union theatre was recently dismantled and the location remodeled for a store.

MANAGER R. E. HICKS of the Cabrillo theatre made liberal use of the billboards, as well as quarter-pages in the daily press, prior to the showing for a week of Griffiths' big feature, "The Great Love," which was presented here at the usual prices of the house.

Balshofer Company Gets Into Action

THE OVER THE RHINE COMPANY, recently organized by Fred J. Balshofer and Julian Eltinge, is actively engaged in the production of their first picture which will star Eltinge. This will be titled "Over the Rhine," and is a patriotic appeal to the public, written by Balshofer in collaboration with Charles A. Taylor, well known writer for the stage and screen. This company will produce at the studio at 1329 Gordon Street owned by Balshofer, which was formerly occupied by the Yorke-Metro Company.

Sheerer Arrives on West Coast

WILLIAM A. SHEERER arrived on the coast recently and it is understood he is here with the view of organizing a producing company for the making of several subjects, stories for which have been written. Mr. Sheerer stated principals for these pictures will come out from the east in the near future

What Exchanges and Theatres Are Doing

LOS ANGELES theatre patrons are to have the first opportunity to see the Universal propaganda subject, "The Yellow Dog," for this film is to be given its national premier, Sunday, September 1, at the Superba theatre, one of the popular down town houses in Los Angeles which is owned and managed by Universal officials. It is expected the film will have a very exceptional run, and the advertising is of such a character as to insure attention, and will no doubt greatly aid toward making this picture one of the phenomenal successes of the year.

THE UNIVERSAL has leased Quinn's Rialto theatre for the showing of "Crashing Through to Berlin," the historical subject giving the important phases of the war from its beginning to the present time. This showing begins on September 1, and the house has been engaged for an indefinite period. It is very probable the Universal will show a large number of subjects on the same plan at the Rialto.

CORPORAL KENNETH O'HARA, formerly publicity man for Thomas H. Ince and Brunton Studios, who is now stationed at Kelly Aviation Field, San Antonio, Texas, is spending a two weeks' furlough in Los Angeles with former acquaintances of the film colony. He was accompanied by M. D. Biddulph and C. S. Phipps, cadet flyers.

CONTRACT for fifty star productions of the Golden program have been made with Charles Grogg, of the Pastime theatre, Bakersfield, the new Hippodrome, at Taft, and the Alvarado theatre, of Los Angeles. These contracts were made by Harvey Grausman, who was recently added to the sales staff of the Los Angeles office.

JAMES MONAHAN, owner of the Liberty theatre, at Brawley, Cal., was recently married at Seattle, and arrived in Los Angeles this week on his way to his home at Brawley. While in Los Angeles Mr. Monahan was a busy booker of film roll.

DEER HUNTING honors for the 1918-1919 season in California, so far, are held by Jack Root, owner of the Strand theatre, at Pasadena, who, on August 26, while hunting in the San Bernardino mountains, killed a buck weighing 115 pounds dressed. The antlers have twenty-one points, which is greater than the number on any deer killed for the past several seasons. The prize has been on display all week in a refrigerating window of a Pasadena market, and has proven a very big attraction. The Theatre Owners' Association have made a request of Root that he be one of the speakers at the next bi-weekly luncheon and explain how he did it.

GLEN HARPER, secretary of the Theatre Owners' Association, who has served as manager of the Rosebud theatre, of Los Angeles, for the past two years, has tendered his resignation, to become effective at once, and has taken up the work of the Exhibitors' Booking Association, of which he was recently elected vice-president at a meeting in the East. Harper will leave the latter part of the week for a trip over southern California in the interests of the association.

WILLIAM QUINN, of the Universal Exchange, has returned from trips through the San Joaquin Valley and to San Diego, made for the booking of "The Doctor and the Woman" and "A Soul For Sale," as well as other releases booked through the Universal Exchange. The above mentioned film will have a week's run in San Diego at the Pickwick theatre.

SPECIAL REPRESENTATIVE ALEXANDER, and Branch Manager Steele, on the 26th received announcement from the William L. Sherry New York office of contract for eight five-reel productions, starring G. M. Anderson. This word was immediately passed along to exhibitors, with the result that several bookings were made within a few hours after the telegram had been received.

SERGEANT GEORGE HANES, former assistant manager of Pathe's Los Angeles exchange, who has been at Camp Lewis the past year, is spending a two weeks' furlough with Los Angeles friends.

THE PATHE SERIAL, "Hands Up," has been booked by the Hippodrome Circuit, for showing at the Majestic theatre, Douglas, Arizona. Later the serial will go to the houses controlled by this circuit at Bisbee and Tucson.

HERMAN RAYMAKER, former director of Sennett comedies, who enlisted in the Naval Reserve Training School at San Pedro, has been placed in the officers' training class, and will shortly receive a commission of Ensign, or better.

VAN MURICK, owner of the Airdome, at Nogales, Arizona, visited on film row, Los Angeles, this week.

THE WEEK of September 8 will be a banner one for the Los Angeles Universal Exchange, inasmuch as bookings have been made from the first-run showing of subjects from this exchange at six of the eleven first-run down-town houses. This list will include "The Yellow Dog," at the Superba; "Crashing Through to Berlin," at the Rialto; "Bread," at the Symphony; "Sinking of the Lusitania," by Winsor McKay, at the Kinema, and Current Events at Miller's and the Garrick.

THE FLORENCE REED FILM, "The Struggle Everlasting," purchased for California by the All Star Feature Distributors, is to have its first run at the Alhambra theatre beginning the latter part of September. The booking provides for a two weeks' showing.

REPORTS from San Diego are to the effect that "Nine-Tenths of the Law" is having a very successful week's run at the Plaza theatre. Little "Breeze" Reeves, who takes an important child part in the play, has gone to the Southern city to make personal appearances each evening.

CLAUDE HALSELL, who for several years has conducted Los Angeles theatres and is now owner and manager of the American, a 600-seat Broadway theatre, has leased the Riviera, and after numerous improvements and alterations will re-open the theatre, which has been dark for several weeks. The Riviera was originally opened as the Woodley, later named the Sennett, and finally given its present name. Up until the time it was closed recently, this house maintained an admission price the same as many of the other leading down-town theatres, namely: fifteen, twenty and thirty cents, plus war tax, but it is now reported that Halsell plans to reduce the price to ten and fifteen cents.

C. F. GLIMM, manager of Caulfield's Garrick theatre, Los Angeles, is back on the job after a two weeks' fishing trip in Bear Valley.

GUY PRICE, manager of the dramatic and photoplay departments of the Los Angeles Herald, is away on a two weeks' vacation which he is spending at Hotel Del Coronado. During his absence the photoplay department is being edited by Reed Heustis, former studio publicity and scenario writer, and Ray Davidson.

JOSEPH POURIS, who has the Rex theatre in Bakersfield, was a Los Angeles visitor this week.

THE ALL STAR FEATURE DISTRIBUTORS have received copies of the two-reel official war film, "The Bridge of Ships," and booking will be announced shortly.

SO SUCCESSFUL was the run of the first Official War Film, "Pershing's Crusaders" at Millers' Alhambra theatre, that Manager Herman Bosley this week contracted for "America's Answer" for a three-week run without seeing the picture. In fact, the contract has been signed a week, and the film has not arrived. The dates in the contract were left open to be added as soon as it was known the picture would be received by the All Star Feature Distributors, who have charge of the California territory for the official war films. The run may begin September 8 or 15.

R. G. TURNER, Metro salesman, is making a special trip over Arizona booking "To Hell With the Kaiser."

EARL SINKS, Universal salesman, is doing Imperial Valley this week, and reports from him indicate good business for the theatres, even though the mercury is playing over the century mark.

WINIFRED EGAN, cashier at the Metro Los Angeles exchange, is enjoying the first vacation since accepting the position three years ago, and she has gone to San Diego for a stay of three weeks.

W. R. SPALDING, one of California's progressive theatre men, has been remodeling his Theatre Visalia, at Visalia, and has ordered some specially made frames, both of gilt brass, from G. A. Metcalfe. These frames will open from the front with hinged doors, protected by lock and key, and will add greatly to the attractiveness of his lobby. Exhibitors are finding Metcalfe's gilt frames, made in San Francisco, a splendid substitute for brass frames, which have so greatly advanced in price.

THE ELKS CLUB of Alameda are installing the latest model Powers motion picture machine, with motor drive and Excelite equipment; the order for this has been awarded to G. A. Metcalfe, of San Francisco.

A Moment With Universal Players

THE CANADIAN SCENES for "Till We Meet Again," starring Dorothy Phillips, are being made at Bear Valley by Alan Holubar. The company going to the mountain resort included twenty players, among them William Stowell, Robert Anderson, Grace MacClean; Cameraman Fred Granville; Assistant Director Reeves Eason, and a number of others.

DIRECTOR PAUL POWELL, who is filming "One Bright Idea" with Carmel Meyer, will have Charles Dorian, Mary Warren, William Dyer, Wadsworth Harris and Jack Hill as his principals.

LYONS AND MORAN have just filmed "A Narrow Escape," and are now working on a comedy named "Camping Out," which will take them to the wild, untrampled region where mountain lions, bears, wolves and mosquitoes add to the comedy situation. Dorothy Devore continues as leading woman for this company.

FRITZI BRUNETTE is now sufficiently recovering from her recent injury, the spraining of an ankle in a dance scene for "Vindetta's Daughter," to return to the studio for the few remaining scenes for this picture. In the future Miss Brunette will be known as Florence, this being her name. She became known as Fritzi because her little brother pronounced Florence in that way. The cause of changing the name now is that many people believe that Fritzi is the feminine for Fritz.

JOSEPH DeBRASSE, who has directed pictures for Universal for the past five years or more, is temporarily retiring from active work at Universal, and will take a long rest. In point of continuous service for Universal, Mr. DeGrasse has been the oldest director on the coast for some time.

Lillian Peacock Dies

LILLIAN M. WEBB, known professionally as Lillian Peacock, died recently at the home of her parents in Los Angeles. She will be remembered for her work in scores of Universal made comedies. Her death followed a year of illness, which was said to be due to internal injury received when she fell from an automobile during the filming of a scene.

Recruits Treated to Motion Picture Show

THE INSTRUCTION BOARD for the Silver Bow and Butte draft districts gave the departing recruits an excellent entertainment at the Empress Theatre, through courtesy of Uncle Dick Sutton, last Saturday night. Moving pictures were a feature. Smokes were distributed and the government board showed the boys a good time.

What Portland Exhibitors Say

JOHN HAMRICK, Seattle exhibitor, was in Portland recently to book his "The Fall of Barbary Coast." He closed with John C. Stille of the People's Amusement Company and will show the feature at the Star theatre early in October.

OSCAR T. BERGNER and Mrs. Bergner motored to Portland recently from Southern Oregon and then went up to Seattle for an invasion of film row. The Bergners operate the Page theatre at Medford and the Vining at Ashland.

DENNIS HULL of the Joy theatre, North Bend, Ore., was in Portland a few days, bound for Seattle and a short vacation.

CLYDE GAGE, who will open a new theatre at Coquille, Ore., about September 1, was in Portland last week arranging for film service.

ART KOLSTADT, Hood River film impresario, was in Portland a day or two ago with samples of Hood River cider.

MANAGER DANZ of the Star Theatre, Astoria, Ore., has been sporting a new roadster about Portland.

A. W. GOFF, assistant general manager of Greater Vitagraph, and H. F. Naugle, Western Division manager, were in Portland recently with James M. Tally, the Seattle Vitagraph chief.

KNOX PRICE, the four-year-old Four Minute Man, made a hit at the Liberty theatre with his patriotic speeches, but the management failed to secure consent of the authorities for the appearances of the youngster and he was hurriedly withdrawn.

GEORGE R. GEORGENS, film photographer for the Bureau of Markets of the United States Department of Agriculture, is in Portland making arrangements to obtain a series of pictures of the Northwest, dealing with harvesting in this section, tracing the disposition of grain through the process of harvesting, shipping and milling.

JOE MERRICK, Mutual supervisor for the Coast, with headquarters in Los Angeles, has been touring the Northwest.

J. H. MILLER of the Rex theatre, Orofino, Idaho, has rented the Grand at Weippe, Idaho, from T. B. Lewis, and will operate it for the next three months, while Mr. Lewis is vacationing. Mr. Lewis is in Vancouver, Wash., for a visit to his son, Earl C. Lewis, who has enlisted in the aviation branch of the signal service. Another son, Leroy, is soon to enlist.

J. H. WILLETT of Amity, Ore., has reopened the Palace theatre, formerly operated by Dr. Morris of McMinnville.

MRS. MARY ELLIOTT is manager of the film theatre at Redmond, which has changed its name from Sparks to Victory.

J. C. UGLOW of Dallas, Ore., a business man of that town, has purchased the Orpheum theatre from Otis Smith. He took charge on August 1.

F. M. DAVIS is opening a new house at Shelley, Idaho, with 600 seating capacity.

THE LIBERTY THEATRE, a new Chehalis, Wash., house, is soon to open.

Salt Lake City Exchanges

W. A. CALKINS, Branch Manager
PATHE EXCHANGE, Inc.
D. PURDY, Representative 64 Exchange Place

JOE DANZ has bought the Little theatre, Seattle, from John Hamrick.

CHARLES BROWN is to succeed Manager Lewis of the Scenic theatre, Montavilla. Mr. Lewis is obliged to devote his entire attention to other business affairs.

Harry Sherman Prepares for New Production

HARRY SHERMAN has returned to Los Angeles after a stay of several weeks in New York, where he completed arrangements for the disposition of Sherman productions, starring Dustin Farnum, to United Theatres.

Mr. Sherman is now giving his attention to supervising the work of preparing for the next production, which will be "The Wolf Breed," adapted from the Jackson Gregory novel of the same name. Mr. Farnum, supported by Winifred Kingsley, will be starred in this film, active production of which will be started within the next two weeks.

What Seattle Exhibitors Say

MANAGER MEAD of the Universal office, Seattle, is proud of the way the people in this district appreciate "The Sinking of the Lusitania." The drawings for this picture were made by Winsor McKay. He was compelled to paint 25,000 drawings on glass, which took him twenty-two months, before he was satisfied with the screen..

PAUL SHALLACK has taken over the Twenty-second Avenue theatre in Denver.

F. M. DAVIS is opening a new house in Shelley, Idaho. It will have a seating capacity of 600 and cost $5,000.

W. P. HORNE, formerly of the C. & A. Amusement Company, at Pocatella, Idaho, has taken over the Columbia at Rexburg, Idaho.

H. W. PEERY, manager Ogden theatre, Ogden, Utah, has enlisted in the Navy.

CONSTRUCTION on the new theatre in Toppenish, Wash., is continuing after a brief delay.

THE LIBERTY THEATRE, Chehalis, Wash., recently held its opening.

RAYMOND, WASH., will have a new theatre in a short time. It will be called the Tokay and will be on Duryea street, near the Central Building. It will seat approximately 1,100 people.

J. MILLER of Great Falls, Mont., manager of the Liberty, is planning on a new $5,000 house.

ROY McDANIELS of Kalispell, Mont., has bought the Princess, from E. N. Drisney.

E. J. FISHER has been elected secretary of the Washington Theatre Managers' Association to succeed George Ring, who is enlisted in the army. Mr. Fisher will also be delegate to the National Convention in Boston.

G. H. CHANDLER is erecting a new theatre in Bingham, Utah, which will be operated by Brisk & Chesler, owners of the Princess.

CHARLES BROWN will soon succeed Manager Lewis of the Scenic theatre, Montavilla, Mr. Lewis being obliged to devote his entire time to other business.

FRANK STANNARD, manager of the Gem and Wenatchee, Wenatchee, Wash., limousined over to film row, the other day.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAMS, owners of a string of theatres in and around Snoqualimie, Wash., took a trip to Seattle to overlook new pictures, etc.

GUY NAVARRE of the Paramount and Artcraft productions has just returned from his vacation at See View, all tanned and partly bald (as usual).

ANOTHER visitor on film row was S. B. Paul of Olympia, Wash.

THE GENERAL FILM COMPANY'S Seattle office is receiving congratulations from its competitors and customers on the business and the quality of pictures it has been showing. Manager Allen says he is glad that he can deliver the goods after they are sold. All of General's features, which are now being launched, including Kerrigan's Paraltas and the famous Hodkinson's News Service, are going wonderfully. "The Turn of a Card," by Kerrigan, has been doing wonderful business for the theatres wherever shown. It was shown at 22 and 38-cent prices at the Coliseum, and the house was packed.

J. F. BOSCH, one of the whirlwinds of the General Film Company, Seattle, has just returned from a six weeks' trip around his territory. While he admits the summer business was slow, when you look up the fall business he got for Paralta, you'll think he signed contracts for a couple of falls. The following theatres in Seattle have followed the first-run pictures in Seattle and all have done well with them: Imperial, Isis. Flag, Palace, High Class and Jackson. George J. Ekre, branch manager of Portland for the General Film Company, has been transferred to Los Angeles, Cal. Then Portland branch will be taken care of by the Seattle General Film office, under the direction of R. H. Allan.

MANAGER MENDELSOHN of the Rose theatre, Anacortes, Wash., was a welcome visitor to Film Row a short while ago.

In and Around Denver

JULIUS FRANKEL, president of Supreme Photo Plays Corporation, has returned from Colorado Springs, fully recovered from his recent illness.

H. A. KYLER of Supreme, is out on a six weeks' visit with western slope exhibitors.

EARL RADCLIFFE of Select, who recently enlisted in the aviation service, has not yet been called, and will leave shortly for a trip covering Wyoming and northern Colorado.

MANAGER WHITNEY of General, is visiting northern Colorado exhibitors this week.

A NEW PIPE ORGAN is being installed in the Jones theatre at Canon City.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG is expected in Denver early in September in connection with the fourth Liberty Loan drive. She will appear at the America, where she will endeavor to duplicate her splendid work in San Francisco and in Seattle.

J. J. MORGAN of the Mountain-Plains Theatre Supply Company, has returned from a two weeks' outing in the mountains.

HOWARD H. KANAGY has arrived from Los Angeles to take charge of the Denver branch of the William L. Sherry Service at 1723 Welton street. He is thoroughly familiar with every detail of the business through several years experience, and is a welcome addition to Denver exchange circles. He was formerly with the World and with the Blue Bird headquarters in Los Angeles, where he was recently division manager for Alexander Sherry. He has been getting his Denver bearings since his arrival and will shortly visit the country exhibitors.

GLENN GOFF, proprietor of the Iris theatre at Monte Vista, has accepted a position as road salesman for the World out of Denver. Mrs. Goff will have charge of the Iris for the immediate future at least, he says.

THE DENVER STRAND played to capacity houses during the recent four days' showing of "His Birthright," and will probably secure a return engagement. The Sessue Hayakawa picture has also been booked by the American at Salt Lake, the Ogden theatre at Ogden, Utah, and the American at Colorado Springs.

THE STRAND opened September 1 with the war picture, "Crashing Through to Berlin," Universal's seven-reel fact narrative of the world war.

DISTRICT MANAGER EDWARD ARMSTRONG of Universal, spent the past week-end in Colorado Springs and Pueblo, lining up first and second run bookings on the same production.

H. D. WOODS of the local Pathe headquarters, has been promoted to road salesman in charge of Colorado and New Mexico territory.

E. P. BRIGGS, Denver representative of the American Film Corporation Inc., has closed with the American theatre here on the series of eigh William Russell pictures. He has also booked the Strand, Denver, fo eight each of Mary Miles Minter and Marguerita Fisher, giving these houses first runs on all American releases next year.

T. Y. HENRY of Colorado Foursquare, is covering the western slope an Big Circle this week.

HUGH RENNIE, also of Foursquare, is sending in nice contracts from New Mexico exhibitors.

MANAGER BRIGGS of the American has also closed year contracts with the following theatres: American, Colorado Springs; Star, Cripple Creek; Opera House theatre, Victor; Jones theatre, Canon City; Atlas, Cheyenne Isis, Boulder; America, Longmont, and the Weber and Emblem theatres Denver. Mr. Briggs opened Denver headquarters for the American two weeks ago.

WEDDING BELLS rung twice for local Goldwyn men during the past week. Roy E. Churchill led to the altar of St. Barnabas church Miss Mary Aiken of Hastings, Neb., at high noon Tuesday, August 27, and left with his bride immediately following the ceremony for Eldorado Springs, where they are spending a two weeks' honeymoon.

THREE DAYS prior to the Churchill wedding, Sam L. Wanger, also o Goldwyn, and Miss Henrietta Kushner, one of Denver's fairest daughters slipped away to Littleton, the local Gretna Green, and allowed a justice of the peace to tie the nuptial knot. They are spending their honeymoon at the Broadmoor, Colorado Springs.

"SALOME," Theda Bara's latest production, is booked at the Broadway Denver, for a two weeks' run beginning Sunday, October 13.

I. EHRENSOFT of Supreme has just completed a trip covering Wyoming and northern Colorado. He says he has booked practically all Supreme features, including "The Whip" and "The Eyes of the World." He leaves shortly for southern Colorado and New Mexico.

Short News of Spokane

"THE WHISPERING CHORUS," a Cecil De Mille production, proved a superlative screen attraction at the Clemmer theatre, and played to big houses during its run the first of the week.

DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS drew record houses to the Liberty with his latest screen hit, "Bound in Morocco," an Artcraft production.

VIRGINIA PEARSON, the statuesque Fox beauty, in "The Liar," was the film offering at the Class A. Charlie Chaplin was presented on the same bill in "A Hotel Mixup."

MITCHELL LEWIS, now working in the Washington Film Corporation's studio in Spokane, was the stellar offering on the Majestic theatre program, starring in "The Bar Sinister." Charlie Chaplin is on the same bill in "His New Job."

NORMA TALMADGE, a favorite among the younger emotional stars of the screen, has the support of two popular juveniles in "Missing Links," Triangle photoplay that headed the new bill at the Lyric. They are Robert Harron and Elmer Clifton. Polly Moran appears on the same bill in the Sennett comedy, "A Battle Royal," and Benjamin Chapin presents "The Slave Auction," another of "The Son of Democracy" series.

ARNOLD DALY is featured in "My Own United States," a photopla which had a four days' run at the Casino.

THE GLOBE THEATRE, Portland, Ore., is the latest film theatre of the Rose City to jump into the 15-cent admission class. A change of management has been effected, the house has been remodeled, and under a program schedule of Paramount-Artcraft subjects exclusively, the 700-seat down-town house is playing to nearly double the business at 15 cents that it did at 10 cents.

CARL MARQUARD, a hustling young chap who was superintendent and assistant manager of the Liberty theatre, is the new Globe manager. A few days after he took charge he broke into the G. A. R. national encampment parade with a Globe theatre banner advertising a patriotic show for the veterans, with "The Call to Arms," one of the Benjamin Chapin pictures, as the feature. It was the only banner in the parade and not only attracted attention to the Globe, but packed the house the next afternoon.

AFTER A LONG PERIOD as a 10-cent house the management was prepared to meet a remonstrating public on the day of the 15-cent opening. However, but four people left the box office without depositing the extra nickel, and the next day—it was Wednesday—was the best Wednesday in two months.

THE CIRCLE THEATRE, the Fourth and Washington house operated by G. T. Holtzclaw, is making good with its new prices of 10 cents for matinees and 15 cents for evenings, Sundays and holidays. The Circle was formerly a 5-cent house, then jumped to 10.

THE PRESENCE of from 30,000 to 40,000 shipyard workers in Portland is responsible for the unusual prosperity attending film exhibition, particularly in the downtown theatres. The Liberty, the biggest house, is charging 25 cents, when 15 cents was the top until November of last year, and is getting by with it.

PAUL E. NOBLE, or "No-Bull" Noble, as he is known to the film world, is now manager of the Columbia theatre as well as advertising manager for the Liberty and Columbia, Portland's two Jensen and Von Herberg theatres.

A. E. LAFLAR, Columbia manager, is at present in Seattle, and may remain there, so Noble was pressed into service for the Columbia.

HOWEVER, no sooner did Noble take charge than he was confined to his home, and then to a hospital for an operation; throat trouble retiring him temporarily from his office.

NOBLE celebrated his return to Portland by adding a Ford car to the advertising equipment of his two houses.

C. S. JENSEN, of Jensen and Von Herberg, took a trip to Butte to look over Ralph Ruffner and the Rialto, and then jumped to California and the Los Angeles studios.

Pathe Films Newspaper Story to Follow Keenan Production

NOW THAT THE Frank Keenan Pathe subject, "The Silver Girl," has been completed, preparations have been made for the filming of a newspaper story with this star. This subject will be titled "Todd of the Times," and cast for it will be selected before the end of the week. Eliot Howe is to continue as director for Mr. Keenan.

Will you send a package of home cheer to a lonely American boy in France?

HE doesn't want to come back home till his job is done—he doesn't mind the hardships and the danger—all he asks is that once in a while a "bit of cheer" be sent to him to ease his lonely vigils on the rim of "No Man's Land."

Tens of thousands of American Lads are today fighting our battles in France. Soon there will be millions. They will want letters from home—they will want "smokes" from home. Tobacco eases the shell strain. It comforts the wounded. It is a "first aid" to the surgeons and Red Cross nurses.

If you knew what comfort and pleasure and satisfaction the tobacco bought with your dollar or your five dollars (go as high as you like) gives to American boys in the trenches, you'd forget the money, or the little sacrifice, or anything else.

25c buys 45c worth of "smokes."

$1.00 buys a month's supply of tobacco

$5.00 buys enough to keep 5 men in tobacco for a month.

And remember: Every package of tobacco sent to our boys in France contains a return postcard, addressed to you, which he'll mail to you if he can possibly do so. That's a war souvenir worth having. Dig down—deep and quick!

HAVE YOU HAD THIS EXPERIENCE?

The projection isn't as good as it was, and day after day you watch it grow worse, until finally the pained expression in the faces of your audience leads you to order repairs.

Now, those repairs may not cost much; but the screen-results which showed their need were much more costly than the repairs themselves. For the people don't say "Never mind, the projection will be better next week, when the Machines have been repaired." Not on your life! They simply stay away.

We realized this from the beginning; and that's why we build the Simplex as nearly repairless as possible: a Machine that doesn't need the Projection Doctor.

And the thousands of Simplexes in use demonstrate that in place of Intermittently Perfect Projection we have created Permanently Perfect Projection.

Intermittently Perfect Projection may pay the P. D., but it doesn't pay you

THE EVENING MAIL

IN FILMLAND

By T. E. OLIPHANT.

It is doubtful whether any young woman ever traveled the road to screen stardom via a shorter route than that traversed by Lila Lee. Some two or three months ago Jesse Lasky announced her discovery. The public was told that "Cuddles" of Gus Edwards's vaudeville "kid" acts, had grown to young womanhood and photoplay star estate at one and the same time. That as Lila Lee she would make her stellar bow shortly in a Lasky-Paramount picture.

Which she did yesterday at the Rivoli Theatre, in "The Cruise of the Make-Believes." No one will deny that her advent into filmland was made under auspicious circumstances, but film history has shown that even a pathway strewn with reams of publicity will not make a star. All the more honor, therefore, to Mr. Lasky's judgment and Miss Lee's talents, for Lila is a film figure to be reckoned with. She is of the stuff from which celluloid stars are made; she is beautiful to a marked degree, and it is quite evident that her pretty little head is crammed full of intelligence. She has "arrived" with her very first picture.

"The Cruise of the Make-Believes" hasn't one thrill from the first reel to the last—praise be! It is just the sort of story that every one has woven into his day dreams. Its message is happiness, and who doesn't prefer happiness to thrills?

Bessie Meggison is a daughter of the tenements who provides a livelihood for her alcoholic spirited father and worthless brother by renting furnished rooms. To the tenement next door comes Gilbert Byfield, son of wealth. He is something of an author, in search of type atmosphere for a story. Bessie comes into his range of vision and together they cruise in her backyard yacht constructed from old boards and chairs with a discarded wagon wheel to steer the course.

Their first cruise leads to love. Byfield, concealing his identity from Bessie, bribes her father to take her to the country place for a month's vacation. Meggison is to announce that he has come into a sum of money and Bessie is to have a cruise on the waters of real life. The trip is fairly well under way when an ambitious mother of society appears upon the scene with her marriageable daughter. Byfield's identity is disclosed and the boat goes on the rocks. Bessie, heartbroken returns to her backyard yacht, and Byfield—but that would be telling the best part of the story.

Mr. Lasky has surrounded Miss Lee with a cast that would test the talents of many a more experienced star. Even though she plays with such skilled actors as Raymond Hatton, Harry Ford, Spottiswoode Aitken and Mary Kelso, she had been decorated with the Cross of Honor for conspicuous bravery.

D. W. Griffith's next motion picture, following "The Great Love" and "Hearts of the World," will be entitled "A Romance of Happy Valley," and work on this film is already under

On the Screen

"Cuddles," who used to be "Georgie's" vis-a-vis in the Gus Edwards revues, made her debut on the screen at the Rivoli yesterday in a picturization of "The Cruise of the Make-Believe."

The story is filled with the philosophy of "Pollyanna" and "Daddy Long Legs" and of course "Cuddles," whose real name is Lila Lee, is the girl in the case. Miss Lee is considerably larger than she was when we saw her

Lila Lee's Debut at Rivoli—

The Cruise of the Make-Believes, which is the feature at the Rivoli this week, is important chiefly because it introduces a new star to the screen. Her name is Lila Lee, and she does not seem at all depressed by being known as "Cuddles." Lila has a twinkle all her own. Before her appearance she was handicapped by being advertised as an "infant prodigy," but she lived this down in her first few moments on the screen, and

Even Blasé Broadway Said:

"Lila Lee Is Great!"

THE CRITICS WERE WAITING FOR LILA LEE on Broadway; doubting, ready to pick her to pieces; eager, perhaps, to sneer at this little girl who so quickly had been made a star.

It was a terrific test, for contrary to some methods of launching a new star, it had been decided that Lila Lee must make good by merit alone.

No wild, weird tales, no sensational billing had misled the public.

She was represented as just what she was—a clever motion picture actress, a girl with rare charm and talent. And she was young and beautiful!

Over night she was a sensation!

The critics were unanimous in their praise. Her debut was the feature of every dramatic page in New York.

She was made in a day—for one reason and only one—because all that was said about her was true. She was clever, she did have rare charm and genuine talent. She was the sort of an actress that the public loved at first sight.

The Rivoli played to big business the first day and—this is the real test—box office receipts increased steadily throughout the week.

That meant that the folks who saw "The Cruise of the Make-Believes" went home and told their friends how wonderful the star and picture were.

Every person who sees Lila Lee is a continual advertiser for the theatre that shows her pictures.

SUCCESS

Back of each production is concentrated the genius of eve

WE'VE been working six months on the Success Series, getting these re-issues in perfect condition. We wouldn't change the negatives if we could, for they're masterpieces. That was the kind we chose from the hundreds of pictures in our vaults—the kind that the public wouldn't want altered any more than a Mark Twain story, a Caruso record, or a James Montgomery Flagg poster.

But the original negative isn't quite everything. These re-issues come to you in perfect condition—the prints are right off the drying drums, the titles have been re-made and re-edited, all unnecessary scenes have been cut out.

And the accessories are as new as the prints.

The way you advertise the Success Series is mighty important.

We give you every aid. The advertising and cuts are the finest we can produce, the copy has been written with careful attention to your needs. Special exploitation plans on the Success Series have been laid out for you.

Everything is ready for a big year for the Success Series. The tools are there. Use them!

"I Am Minnie Peck—"

THE town scamp who foils the vamp.

A small town incorrigible who became a heroine.

The girl who caused the "run" on the Yaptank bank.

The girl who put the Yaptank Fire Department out of business.

A harum-scarum who became the fashion plate of a country village.

The girl who wouldn't go to the reform school.

MABEL NORMAND in Peck's Bad Girl

By Tex Charwate

with

LADY TSEN MEI

The First Chinese Star of the Screen

Conceived and Directed by Ira M. Lowry

This is the first time in the history of the Stanley Theatre that a "Special Production" has ever been booked in that great institution. It is being advertised for four continuous weeks in advance of its presentation by the Stanley management.

BECAUSE

It is a wonderful patriotic picture.

It shows the foiling of the Hun in Siberia.

It features the first and only Chinese Star, beautiful Tsen Mei.

It possesses the thrill and novelty that guarantees its box-office success.

It is directed by Ira M. Lowry, whose "For the Freedom of the World" has been a year-long success.

Goldwyn advises every exhibitor who booked "For the Freedom of the World," as well as all other exhibitors to telegraph or write at once for prices and playing dates on

Jesse D. Hampton Productions

Jesse D. Hampton presents
J. WARREN KERRIGAN
in
"PRISONERS OF THE PINES"
by Kenneth B. Clark

IN his first production under the banner of Jesse D. Hampton, Mr. Kerrigan caps the climax of success achieved in his recent triumphs "One Dollar Bid" and "Burglar for a Night."

Kerrigan's productions, under the personal supervision of Jesse D. Hampton, will be the best possible under intelligent management, direction and production.

Kerrigan's name over your theatre entrance means that you are showing on your screen a picture that is clean in conception, clean in production and powerful in theme. Doesn't this mean something to you—and your audience?

Distributed by
W. W. HODKINSON CORPORATION
527 Fifth Avenue New York City

Jesse D. Hampton

ALL of Kerrigan's pictures are safe bets for every exhibitor. They are all clean, overflowing with romance, mystery and action, but never heavy or morbid. Kerrigan will send your audience away with a smile and a desire to see his next production. Facts which are of immense value to you under the present war conditions. Kerrigan as a young versatile player portrays the best in American life and backed by big stories from the pens of prominent authors, and produced under efficient and up-to-date management, they offer a profitable and good-will building program for the entire trade.

Jesse D. Hampton-Kerrigan productions will be released as part of Hodkinson Service. This in itself indicates the quality that must be in the productions as the Hodkinson Organization has definitely announced its policy of "Quality Pictures for Quality Houses," carefully selected to meet the needs of the exhibitor. Ask the Hodkinson Special Representative at your nearest General Film Exchange for full particulars on "Prisoners of the Pines" and coming Kerrigan Productions.

Hillaire's introduction to the lumber camp was in the role of a peace-maker —with his good right hand as a sturdy and effective argument. This is one of the many thrilling episodes in Kerrigan's new romance of the great woods. . . . episodes that send the blood coursing a bit faster and make all lovers of pictures hold their breath.

Hillaire's meeting with one of the dance hall girls was a momentous occasion in the life of the young French-Canadian and was destined to turn his hitherto peaceful life into another channel . . . . . here's a new style of screen "vamp" and one that every person who sees "Prisoners of the Pines" will like.

The advent of a traveling clothing salesman among the rough men of the forest adds a delightful tone of comedy to this undeniably great screen product. Throughout "Prisoners of the Pines" there is an abundance of genuinely good comedy . . . the sort of comedy that compels laughter.

Wag

W. W. Hodkinson Corporation

Productions, Los Angeles, Cal.

AS THE still photographs reproduced below show, "Prisoners of the Pines," Kerrigan's latest production is of an entirely different nature to anything he has done before, and gives him a most picturesque role, that of a French Canadian trapper, who later becomes a lumberman. The picture is full of interest and drama, including many big scenes, such as: The fight in the bar room and the thrilling episodes in dance hall and saloon in which Hillaire is robbed of his year's pay, almost within the proverbial twinkling of an eye.

The scenes depicted below give you an excellent idea of the general theme of the picture and the explanations accompanying each indicate how these various angles of the picture may be used to advantage in your advertising. Every exhibitor using "Prisoners of the Pines" in his house should give careful attention to the press book accompanying this production. The concensus of opinion of those who have seen it is that it is the best and most complete exploitation book of its kind ever put out. The advertising accessories accompanying all of Kerrigan's new pictures will be most complete and each will have a definite practical value. Material supplied will be designed from the exhibitor's viewpoint, rather than from the producer's desire to make something pretty.

There is a dare and a challenge in the eyes and on the lips of this fascinating young woman of the dance hall that makes Hillaire hesitate for a moment . . . until he quickly recalls his own little wife, Rosalie, so many hundreds of miles away.

During the long, weary winter nights in the woods, Hillaire and his accordion provide entertainment for the men who are shut in from the rest of the world . . . and Hillaire's plaintive voice chants the songs of his far-off country and makes for merriment.

The well dressed stranger with his enormous gold watch chain, inspires a new ambition in the heart of Hillaire Latour, and he makes up his mind that he, too, shall go to the lumber camp, as did the stranger, and also make his "leetle wad," and possess one of those wonderful gold chains. . .yes, and earn enough money to marry Rosalie, the prettiest girl in all that country.

THE GROWTH OF HODKINSON SERVICE SPEAKS FOR ITSELF

The continual expansion of Hodkinson Service represents the fulfilment of an aim and the achievement of promises made.

Mr. W. W. Hodkinson promised the exhibitors of the United States that through the medium of his Organization, he would select for them and continue to build up, a Service of quality product suited to their needs.

The acquisition of product such as the Jesse D. Hampton Productions advertised in the preceding pages, presents conclusive proof of the success of this policy That producers of the calibre of Jesse D Hampton appreciate that the Hodkinson method is right is a proof of the foundational strength upon which Mr Hodkinson is building.

Exhibitors of the United States will do well to watch the development of Hodkinson Service in the next few months with extreme care and prove for themselves, by actual experience, that the selective system under which Hodkinson Service is chosen is producing the results for which it was planned.

PATHÉ SERIALS

Pathé believes, and the belief is based upon sound reasoning and FACTS, that Pathé serials have made MORE money for the exhibitors of the United States (and the entire world as well) than ANY pictures put out by ANY company.

Pathé believes that MORE persons have attended theatres with the primary object of seeing Pathé serials than ALL of the best advertised features put together. The very real gratitude expressed by thousands of exhibitors has convinced us of the fact.

Pathé knows that its serials are RIGHT; right in the star; right in the cast; right in direction; right in story; right in production; and right in box office value.

Pathé points with justifiable pride to "The Perils of Pauline," the three "Elaine" serials; "Who Pays?"; "The Red Circle"; "The Iron Claw"; "Pearl of the Army"; "Patria"; "Mystery of the Double Cross"; "The Seven Pearls"; "The Neglected Wife"; "The Fatal Ring"; "The House of Hate"; and many others, not to mention "Hands Up", now just started, and "Wolves of Kultur" soon to be released.

Pathé Knows Serials and Exhibitors Know That Pathé Knows Serials. Serial Success Means "Pathé"!

Pathé announces that the incomparable star

PEARL WHITE

is now engaged in the making of another serial sensation, the working title of which is produced by Astra, directed by George B. Seitz and written by Bertram Millhauser; the same unequalled combination of talent which made "The Fatal Ring" and "The House of Hate" such excellent attractions.

"THE LIGHTNING RAIDER"

Miss White has starred in more serials, and more successful serials than any other player. Beginning with "The Perils of Pauline" every one of her serials has packed houses. Today she is admitted to be unsurpassed as a box-office attraction. The whole world has taken her to its heart!

It will be some time before we will be prepared to announce the release date BUT-

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL WAR PICTURES

All Exhibitors in North America:

The United States Government wants you to exhibit "America's Answer," the official war picture from the battlefields of Europe —for the benefit and comfort of American families — in every city, town, hamlet in North America. Our Government requests that you run these live pictures of our own sons, brothers and friends — filmed at the gates of Hell and brought back through the submarine-infested seas — in the same worthy spirit that put America in this world war. In this instance, Distributors and Exhibitors should be above commercialism. Consistent with operation the price will be made fair. Every Exhibitor is part of the plan. Your co-operation is necessary. Every effort will be made to get "America's Answer" to you. Right here in town there are many families represented in these pictures. You should localize the effect. A plan has been thought out whereby you can show "America's Answer" without raising your admission price. The cost to you will be the consistent minimum and you are asked to not haggle and barter and hold off, but to be personally as anxious to exhibit them as our intrepid soldiers are to establish democracy with the blood of their stalwart bodies. These pictures show you how they are doing it — show to Mothers the priceless nobility of their son's manly courage in fighting for the Right. Show these pictures — you will ease many aching hearts in American homes. Exhibitor, get these films — you will gain — your patrons will be grateful and you will effectively serve your country. Co-operate with the Government. Our salesman will call and outline a plan whereby you can do so advantageously. Your personal interest is respectfully urged.

"America's Answer"— Released October 14th

UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL WAR PICTURES

Proportionate Cost Plan

Small theatres can show "America's Answer" at a cost proportionate with each theatre's income - a new plan devised in friendliness and fairness to the small as well as the big.

"America's Answer" comes to you — with the thousands of dollars of introductory expense for heavy advertising all paid bearing the stamp of approval of the biggest centers.

The smallest theatre can afford "America's Answer" — the poorest shall have it. Apply !

Distributors presented bids to the Government for the physical distribution of "America's Answer" and from and on the bids submitted the World Film Corporation was selected. Write to the World Film Corporation now ! !

Preference was given also to those distributors who had not yet had an opportunity to handle an official war film.

But all of the big distributors are patriotic and are requesting and instructing their sales forces and employees to help spread "America's Answer" over the length and breadth of the United States.

"America's Answer" comes as a thrilling message of the approaching victory of Democracy over Autocracy.

The screen is the medium by which the real news, alive and in the making, is conveyed to the families in America — they are all waiting for it.

Show "America's Answer" to Americans.

At the Casino Theatre last night there was shown one of the best motion pictures seen in New York in some time.
The name of the photoplay is "Wives of Men," and it has for its principal player, the talented actress, Florence Reed, and for once she did not have the role of a "she-villian." Instead she is the neglected wife of James Randolph Emerson, Jr. and lives with him for 12 years despite the fact that she suspects him of having another wife. To tell you the whole story would spoil your pleasure if you decide to see this picture which will remain at the Casino for two weeks.

FLORENCE REED EXCELLENT IN "WIVES OF MEN" FILM
Pioneer Film Company Offers New Picture at Casino.
"Wives of Men," a new picture with Florence Reed as the star, was presented at the Casino Theatre last night by the Pioneer Film Corporation. It is a strong and dramatic picture, with plenty of thrills, but with practically no comedy. John M. Stahl wrote the scenario and also directed the picture. Miss Reed's role is that of a wife who, after wedding dny, learns of an indiscretion of the man she married. For two years she is, as Bertha M. Clay uses in her novels, "wife in name only," but all the while she still loves her husband. Finally she decides to see if he really loves her. She does so by pretending to love another man. The story of his infidelity was enlitled

On the Screen

"Wives of Men," which is being shown at the Casino Theatre, is so well produced and so beautifully acted that it might have been done in one less reel. This would bring the dramatic incidents in the picture closer together and do away with the impression that the characters are spending more time thinking about what they are going to do than they are in doing it.

In the case of Florence Reed, who plays the lead, this is not a fault, as one would be entertained if he merely looked at Miss Reed. She is the epitome of elegance in dress—the last word in grooming. She always reminds one of a fine thoroughbred eager to get [illegible], and she is one of the few actresses who have been able to carry their stage success to the screen. Miss Reed's shadow is almost as alluring and as convincing as Miss Reed's self. Few actresses can excel her in beauty, brains or ability, ever since the old days of the Proctor stock company when, at sixteen, Florence played "Madame Sans-Gêne" and played it well.

E. Frank Mills is the husband, and he plays with his usual repression and force. Charles Jackson is the boy in the picture. He is the clever child who appeared recently in "Cecelia of the Pink Roses."

The story is not a happy one, although it is beautifully done. It opens with a wedding and Lucille, the maid of James Randolph Emmerson, jr., becomes Mrs. James Randolph Emmerson, jr. On her wedding [illegible]

On Probation!

"Essentialize" Yourselves, Gentlemen!—and "You" Means "You"

A LIST of essential industries has just been made public by Chairman Baruch of the War Industries Board.

The list does not include motion pictures.

Which means that the industry has not as yet been classed as an essential industry.

Neither has it been classed as a non-essential industry.

The motion picture industry is on probation.

Just that! On probation! The industry is being given an opportunity—undoubtedly a full opportunity—to prove that it can conserve and so join with the Government and with all other industries in bending its every energy to win the war.

The Priorities Committee of the War Board stated that the motion picture industry would be allowed to operate as an essential industry provided and when certain regulations were complied with.

The leading stipulation is that: Each member of the industry will pledge himself to discontinue all non-essential production and eliminate all wasteful methods.

There's the situation, gentlemen.

Each "member" means you.

And you means—primarily—the president or leading executive of each producing and distributing company in the film business, for you and you alone have the power to stop the non-essential production of films and the wasteful method of distributing it.

This, as you well know, is the huge, obvious, needless waste.

And this waste, as you must realize, is going to make your industry and your business an essential or a non-essential agent in this war period.

The priorities committee is pointing its finger directly at you.

What are you going to do about it?

We believe you are going to act.

And you are going to act very quickly.

You know this waste exists.

You know that you, willingly or unwillingly, are engaged in a feverish competition to produce, produce, produce—and distribute in the simple multiple fashion.

You know that you—all of you together—are making many times more pictures than your market demands; and that your pictures are not being shown to one-half their possible public.

You know that your salesmen have multiplied till today they are said to number one to every three theatres, or customers, in the country.

You know that your film exchanges have increased till, in one city in the United States, they actually equal the number of theatres there.

And you know—you must know—that the war period will not tolerate such an industrial condition.

You know—you must know—that if you haven't the power to correct the condition—your own condition—that some other power that can will step in and do it.

But the condition is your own; and you are the one to correct it.

And you can if you will.

It isn't easy. You probably are tied up with contracts, plants, leases, and other commitments.

But even these are nothing in the light of the very grave situation that looks you square in the face—a situation so grave indeed that it recognizes nothing save the war and the conservation necessary to its successful termination.

And these difficulties don't stand in your way half as much as your pride, your ambition, your selfishness, your fatal seclusion in a little atmosphere of film so dense that you don't see out of it.

You've got to put these things aside.

You've got to.

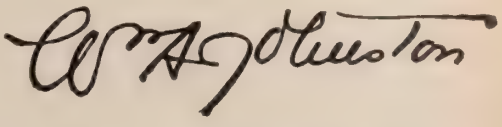
You've got to step completely out of yourself and look at the situation facing you with completely new eyes.



If you don't yet know what is meant here just fix these two sentences in your mind:

First: "Each member of the industry will pledge himself to discontinue all non-essential production and eliminate all wasteful methods."

Second: "When these regulations, and others to be announced later, are complied with the members of the industry will be granted the priorities necessary to enable them to operate.

Gentlemen, it's up to you.

You've got to get together, dump your pride, throw away your suspicion of the other fellow, sit around the table and save your industry—and yourself.

Serving It with Speed and Ginger

RIGHT smack up at the top of this page we want to repeat something which has been said several times in MOTION PICTURE NEWS within the past few weeks. But each day brings letters in our mail which shows that the point in question is not yet clear in the minds of the writers.

So here goes:

The placing of the industry on the preferential list by the War Trade Board or the granting of favors by the Fuel Administration have nothing whatever to do with your draft status.

Don't write us and say: "I read in THE NEWS where the industry has been declared essential and now the local draft board wants to take my operator. Can you help me?" Or a half dozen similar questions.

Here's the situation about as clearly as we can put it:

In the first place, if you—or your musician or your operator—are in Class 1 of the draft, that is, without dependents, you are liable to call by your board at any minute.

This is regardless of any favors that may have been granted the industry by General Crowder, Chairman Baruch or Administrator Garfield.

But, in the second place, if you are in a deferred class because of dependents and your local draft board says you must don a uniform or get into some more essential line because of General Crowder's "work or fight" rule you have nothing to worry about. You need only present evidence showing that you come within the provisions of General Crowder's amendment expressly exempting from the "work or fight" rule "all skilled persons necessary in the production and presentation of motion pictures."

If you are a film salesman and your draft board declares that you do not come within the above amendment ask them to look up the various rulings covering traveling salesmen.

Now that the above is in type we are going to have a hundred odd reprints made. Because the letters will still continue to come and we can save 'steen odd hours of the stenographer's time the minute we see a letter saying: "How can they draft me if the screen has been declared essential?"

SPEAKING of war service we have something on our desk that we know will tickle you and give you that cheery hip-hip-hurrah feeling around the corners of your heart.

J. L. Johnston, who was MOTION PICTURE NEWS correspondent in Minneapolis and publicity manager for the Universal exchange there, recently enlisted in the service. Last week we received from Camp Grant a note which said "Attached hereto you will find a copy of a letter received from R. H. Cochrane, of Universal, which I think deserves publication. This letter shows a real American spirit worthy of the highest commendation. Please publish it.—J. L. Johnston."

And here is the letter he received:

"Don't worry about your welfare after the war. The policy of the Universal, and, I believe, of every other self-respecting American corporation, will be to give first consideration to those who have sacrificed everything, as you are doing, to help win the war.

"So, when you return, come to my office and you will be taken care of in a way that will show our appreciation of the good work you have done in the past, but more important, the great thing you are doing in offering 'all that you have and all that you are' to Uncle Sam. If there is no place in the Home Office for you, I shall simply make a place by letting out someone who has not served in the army or navy. If we did less than this for the Universal boys who serve their country, we would be the yellowest kind of yellow dogs.

"Goodbye, good luck, Godspeed and—don't worry!"

A committee of the National Association met this week to discuss fuel conservation. The official report is lacking but the unofficial reports are lacking neither in color nor humor. Our own dopester tells us that the meeting was summed up in the adoption of a resolution calling upon Secretary Elliott to go to bed in the dark.

Other members of our staff station at the Hotel Astor tell us that the lights are going to be turned out in a number of important studio departments this year.

SOMEHOW or other is seems as though this whole page is destined to touch on the subject of war. If it keeps on this way we'll change the heading to "Crashing Through to Berlin." (adv.?)

Frankly, though, in addition to the above subject (another adv.?) there are a couple of pictures we would like to mention on this page for the sake of exhibitors wondering how they can help Uncle Sam and book profitable pictures at the same time.

The first is the news story in this week's issue announcing the distribution of "America's Answer" through World Film.

We don't know whether the news story tells all the details but we have been let into the confidence of the Committee on Public Information and we can assure exhibitors that the distribution and rental plans adopted are interesting—to say the least. As far as we can see it the principal object is to secure wide and complete distribution of Uncle Sam's message. With that thought as your premise you can see that the proposition is worth looking into.

The second picture on our minds is "Around the Clock With the Rookie," the Y. M. C. A. single reeler being distributed by Universal. As soon as we can spare the facts we'll have a good news story on this to give you—for from all we hear there sure is a corking story available.

Just think of a one-reeler playing week runs as the featured number of the bill! That and many other surprising things have happened with "Around the Clock." Look into it.

Somebody says we talk too much about ourselves on this page. So we'll let someone else do the talking.

For example: H. L. Kincey of The Strand Theatre Co., Birmingham, Alabama, says: "I wish to congratulate you on the splendid service you are now giving exhibitors and think we owe you a debt of gratitude. Your new Complete Plan Book is excellent, as is, in fact, your entire Exhibitor Service Bureau."

Couldn't have said it much better ourselves, could we?

THERE are some news stories in this issue that you don't want to miss. Take that one announcing the distribution of United Picture Theatres product through General Film.

That's interesting both because it is the latest step in the development of United and because we have a hunch that it is only one of the snappy items we are going to have from General Film's direction in the next few weeks.

We are not in Frank Tichenor's confidence but by putting our ears to the ground we have been able to hear rumblings that betoken some real news in the near future.

Another story in this issue that exhibitors should be certain to read is "Your Theatre and the Liberty Loan," Page 1852. It's by Harold B. Franklin, of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, and you'll be glad you read it when the next few weeks brings the Liberty Loan campaign along as one of your problems.

FOUR PICTURES

Tally Declares Pickford Will Make That Many for First National

AT last, it appears, according to reports by wire from the West Coast as Motion Picture News goes to press, that something definite is rounding into shape concerning Mary Pickford and her future. America's Sweetheart has been somewhat of a mystery to producers and exhibitors recently, and for a while some thought the screen was going to lose her temporarily.

However, on September 9 T. L. Tally, manager of the First National exchange in Los Angeles, gave out the statement that Miss Pickford would make four subjects for First National during the coming year. He intimated that she would be paid $250,000 for each picture of the four. Mr. Tally admitted that the contract had not been signed, but said that all the details had been agreed upon.

WATCHFUL WAITING?

EXHIBITOR HAS A WORD TO SAY ABOUT THE PROPOSED DOUBLING OF TAX

LLOYD AND CANE, proprietors of the West Street theatre, Coudersport, Pa., do not assume to be so-called "large" exhibitors, but their theatre is merely one of the thousands of the "picture shows" which are nevertheless as necessary to the country as the most palatial building on Broadway.

But Lloyd and Cane do assume to know what taxation means to their business, and businesses like theirs, and the following letter, it is fair to believe, is voicing the opinion of many other exhibitors in various parts of the United States.

They say, in a letter to MOTION PICTURE NEWS: "We note from a recent issue of the NEWS that it is the purpose of the Government to double admission tax and also impose other taxes on the picture industry. Now this is all very well for the big cities and towns that are profiting by war industries. The small town of 5,000 and under, practically depleted of its manhood, suffers all the hardships of the war and obtains none of the benefits of having some war industry in its midst.

"We would suggest that you explain it to the chairman on ways and means or whatever the name is, that small towns should be placed in a distinct class. It is easy to raise the price in the city, but in the small town it is different. Profits should be taxed, not gross receipts.

"Many a night we do not take in sufficient for expenses, yet have to pay taxes, admission, etc.

"It is a reasonable supposition that more money can be obtained from the small town exhibitor, by giving him a chance.

"If the taxes are too heavy, why many an exhibitor quits or cuts down his running nights, so the gross gain by the imposition of too much taxation is doubtful.

"I suppose some prosperous exhibitor will yell 'BE PATRIOTIC!' Watch this kind. It is easy to be patriotic when you get it out of the PUBLIC. Let P. E. pay out of his own jeans till he cannot afford to purchase the necessities of life and then hear him squeal.

"This letter is not a 'squeal,' it is merely a statement of facts. You probably know the fable of the willing jackass. We do not wish to suffer the same fate. This is certain: more revenue cannot be derived from a lot of small towns if taxation is increased.

"Yours very truly,
"LLOYD AND CANE,
"Coudersport, Pa."

General Will Distribute United

United Picture Theatres of America Has Selected General Film Company for Physical Work of Distribution

SIMULTANEOUS announcement comes from United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., and from General Film Company of an agreement just entered upon which marks an advanced step taken in the direction of co-operation in motion picture distribution.

Owing to its importance the deal is expected to have a stabilizing and highly beneficial influence upon the trade generally. In fact, an outstanding feature of the co-operation between the two organizations is that, although from slightly different angles, both are making a practical demonstration of the principle of centralization in the distribution of film. General Film Company, as the possessor of a well equipped and going exchange system of complete efficiency, has long advocated the use of one economical machinery for distributing product, instead of many.

United Picture Theatres of America, a national organization of exhibitors, and therefore a consumer of films, was organized on principles of which not the least was that of co-operation for the elimination of waste, whether of material or of method. The two movements converged so vitally that the logical outcome was the working agreement now announced. Both parties to the arrangement are thus actually striving to carry out in practice that saving of overhead which they have so ardently advocated to the trade.

By the General-United arrangement the existing exchanges of General Film Company will act as the medium through which United exhibitor-members will receive the latter's products. This co-operation is to go into effect at once.

In the arrangement just concluded General Film Company undertakes to distribute for United the pictures controlled by the latter, and to provide storing, shipping, inspecting, billing, collecting and, in general, every detail of the exchange service.

Not only is this plan claimed to be a direct economy of overhead, but the arrangement leaves United free to concentrate upon the extension of its already lengthy chain of theatre bookings, and free to give its membership the improved service, increased attractions and profit-sharing arrangements which underlie the basis of its organization. In other words, General Film Company provides the medium for the distribution of the star features of United to the latter's member-houses, while at the same time United absolutely controls its own business.

In a letter to United members, Mr. Berst says: "Your advisory board and executives, after considering several releasing companies, decided in favor of General Film Company, not only because General has splendidly equipped offices capable of handling a large number of additional reels, but of even more importance, because General is now planning very big things, and on the strength of what has been already accomplished I feel sure they will secure so much good film as to make the General offices in each city the most important meeting place of exhibitors."

United has already announced its inaugural release, "The Light of Western Stars," the Dustin Farnum superfeature, produced from Zane Grey's novel. Kitty Gordon is in Los Angeles at work upon her first United production, while Florence Reed remains in the East for her series of six superfeatures, in which will also be seen Eugene O'Brien, who was so greatly admired in recent Norma Talmadge productions.

"Rookie" Film Arouses Unusual Interest

Excellent reports on the Universal-Y. M. C. A. one-reel production called "Around the Clock with the Rookie" are becoming more plentiful with each day. It is said that the picture is being booked for full week runs in numerous places, which is considered by the producers and exhibitors an unusual thing for a reel of this kind.

"Around the Clock with the Rookie," which represents a day's visit at a training camp, shows the excellent work being done by the Y. M. C. A. in its capacity as "big brother" to the Yankee soldier boys. The picture shows in reel form a "rookie's" full day, from reveille to taps, and is replete with interest and entertainment. Its surpassing success, according to those who have viewed it and have seen proof of its unusual ability to please, is fully justified. The week bookings are said to be becoming more frequent.

Flag Celebration Picture Filmed by Universal

Jack Cohn, of the Universal, started work this week on the production of a Liberty Loan film especially designed for the flag celebration that will be conducted during the Fourth Liberty Loan drive. The subject will depict the soldiers of all nations in the Allied cause in a spectacle advertising the various flags they are fighting for.

Arrangements are being made in co-operation with the Division of Associated Flags of the Loan Committee. The film will be released on the Screen Magazine programme. In addition to this subject the three news pictorial divisions of Universal will make special efforts to produce timely news and propaganda films in behalf of the Loan drive.

Barriscale Leaves Paralta

(Special to Motion Picture News)

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Bessie Barriscale, according to reports current here September 10, is leaving Paralta Plays, which organization has been starring her in features. Miss Barriscale's last picture is "The Heart of Rachael," which has been completed. The star's husband, Howard Hickman, has not made any statement regarding any new affiliations.

Vitagraph Has Six Loan Films

Six Vitagraph Stars Have Each Contributed a Special Film to Aid the Fourth Liberty Loan Drive

THE six Liberty Loan pictures which have been made for the forthcoming drive by Vitagraph stars have all been completed. The stars who figure in these three-hundred-foot propaganda subjects are Earle Williams, Alice Joyce, Harry T. Morey, William Duncan, Corinne Griffith and Gladys Leslie. All of them are said to be remarkable for their snap and ginger and the titles have been chosen as follows:

Earle Williams—"Bonds Versus Bonds."
Alice Joyce—"The Choice."
Harry T. Morey—"The Grouch."
William Duncan—"The Decision."
Corinne Griffith—"A Wise Purchase."
Gladys Leslie—"Her Last Pledge."

All of the subjects were made at the Vitagraph Eastern studio, with the exception of those in which Earle Williams and William Duncan play the leading roles. They were made at the company's studio in Hollywood and are now on their way east.

"Bonds Versus Bonds" is a tabloid review of the war, from the slaughter of Belgium to the present, and introduces all of the countries at war. Earle Williams plays the role of "Fighting America," which files the bonds shackling Liberty with three files representing the three Liberty Loans. He files the last shackle with the Fourth Liberty Loan and makes a plea for everybody to buy even beyond their limit. Seventeen players appear with Mr. Williams in the picture.

In "The Choice," Alice Joyce plays the role of a factory girl who determines to win back the love of her sweetheart who has been lured away by a rival whose clothes are her chief charm. The girl, Mary, portrayed by Miss Joyce, determined to take her savings and invest in fine clothes. In the meantime, the man has donned the khaki and the other girl is luring him to a jeweler's when he sees Mary investing her money, not in fine clothes but in Liberty Bonds, and her patriotic service for the men who fight brings about a reconciliation and true understanding.

"The Grouch," Harry T. Morey's contribution to the Loan campaign, shows the stalwart star as the irascible proprietor of a chain of hotels and restaurants.

Corinne Griffith, in "A Wise Purchase," is put to a test by a wealthy relative. She is a German-American girl whose uncle dies, leaving a fortune.

"Her Last Pledge" shows Gladys Leslie as a little volunteer Bond seller.

"The Decision" in which William Duncan is featured has not been synopsized as yet, but a brief note from the Vitagraph West Coast studio stated that it was "Duncanesque," which is said to graphically describe the film.

No Political Alliances Formed

New York Exhibitors Deny Press Story of Their Alleged Official Political Alliance—Will Call Meeting Soon

THE motion picture interests of the State of New York have formed no alliances with any political parties up to the present time and have taken no active part in the coming gubernatorial campaign.

This statement was made by Sydney S. Cohen, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the State of New York, in contradicting a statement that appeared in a morning paper to the effect that the theatrical and motion picture interests would form to organize the Albert E. Smith Theatrical League.

In an official denial of the participation of the motion picture interests of the State in any such movement Mr. Cohen said: "From the tone of the article in question anoyne would be led to believe that the theatrical interests and the motion picture profession had organized 'The Alfred E. Smith Exhibitors' League of the State of New York.' As president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the State of New York I wish to deny this statement, as no such arrangement has been effected in any way.

"Our organization is keeping in very close touch with the political developments throughout the State and proposes to issue a call shortly for a State-wide conference to be held at a central point up-State to discuss the situation in all its phases."

It can be safely said that the motion picture will play a prominent part in the coming campaign. The entire State has been thoroughly organized and the weight and power of the motion picture and the motion picture screens of the State will be thrown in favor of those candidates who have played fair with the picture interests.

The campaign will probably be conducted along non-partisan lines, especially in the cases of candidates for the State Senate and Assembly, and those men favored who have shown a disposition to treat the motion picture industry fairly in legislative matters.

The State-wide conference, which will comprise all of the influential motion picture men, will probably be held at Saratoga in the course of the next week or two.

Hart Finishes Loan Film

William S. Hart is one of the first motion picture stars to complete a special feature made at the request of the Treasury Department of the United States to be used by the Government in the exploitation campaign of the forthcoming Liberty Loan.

One of the features of the Government film is that Mr. Hart's pinto, which has been in retirement from film work for more than a year, appears in this production.

This patriotic film has been titled "A Bullet for Berlin," and the scenario from which it was produced was written by William S. Hart himself.

California Theatre Owners Enjoy Luncheon

(Special to Motion Picture News)

LOS ANGELES.—The by-weekly luncheon of the Southern California Theatre Owners' Association, held September 4 at Hamburger's Cafe, Los Angeles, was a most pleasing and entertaining affair, and known as "Christie Day." Following the reading of the minutes, announcement was made by J. M. Quinn that Mary Pickford would present a platinum and gold loving cup to the committee putting on the best entertainment at the luncheons given by Theatre Owners' Association.

Charles Christie, executive manager of the Christie Comedy Company, spoke briefly regarding the growth and success of his company, following which the members of the comedy producing company were introduced by Al Christie, their director. Bobby Vernon, juvenile leading man, was first called upon, and made his song a farewell ballad, for he leaves Sept. 25 for service at the submarine base at San Pedro.

Ethel Lynne, Rose Falconer and Dorothy Dane gave three minute speeches, while Clarine Seymour, a newcomer to the Christie staff, sang, and "Smiling" Billy Mason in songs, with Mrs. Billy Mason at the piano, completed the very excellent entertainment.

Announcement was made by Marshall Stimpson, Chairman of the Four Minute Men, that on September 14 every theatre owner or manager would be presented a certificate of honor for the capable co-operation given the Four Minute men by the motion picture theatres.

At the close of the luncheon, an executive meeting was called to take up the matter of the new draft law and its effect on the theatres, and the coming campaign for the Fourth Liberty Loan, in which the motion picture houses will play an important part.

Theda Bara Comes East

It was reported from Los Angeles by wire on September 11 that Theda Bara, J. Gordon Edwards, her director, and other members of the company were leaving the Coast for the East that week, following the completion of the William Fox picture, "The Siren's Song." It is announced that Miss Bara will remain in the East indefinitely.

A. L. Selig was another passenger for the East the same week.

Rowland Selects Studio Site for Metro

(Special to Motion Picture News)

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Richard Rowland, president of Metro Pictures Corporation, has taken an option on a site for Metro studios, and plans have been drawn, it is said. These are on their way to Washington for approval by the War Industries Board, and it is expected that as soon as this is given work will begin on the plant. The studios will be of sufficient size, it has been announced, for eight or more companies.

Nazimova Contributes Film for Loan Campaign

Mme. Nazimova has called her Liberty Loan picture "A Woman of France." In it she plays Louise, the daughter of Marquis X., owner of a chateau which the German officers who have captured the town have taken as their headquarters.

Marquis X. is played by Henry Harmon, who is also working with the star in her big screen production of "'Ception Shoals," the H. Austin Adams play which has been adapted for the screen by Albert Capellani and June Mathis. Tom Blake, who plays Smoot in "'Ception Shoals," plays a drunken German Baron, a bit that gives a note of comedy relief to the picture.

Robert E. Stevens, who assists Albert Capellani and Henry Kolker in the production of Nazimova features, plays a German officer, and other officers are played by T. Morse Koupal, who has a part in "'Ception Shoals," and H. F. Koser, who happened to be visiting friends in the Metro studio while the picture was being taken, and volunteered to assist.

Eugene Gaudio photographed "A Woman of France," assisted by "Billy" Tuers, and Charles Devens handled the properties.

Metro Player Designs New Liberty Loan Poster

Stuart Holmes, who is prominent in the support of Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne in their forthcoming Metro production, "Little Miss Moneybags," has completed a poster for the fourth Liberty Loan Drive upon which he has been working all summer. The drawing shows all the countries representing a face, with Germany illustrated by an ulcer. Uncle Sam dressed as a surgeon is shown cauterizing poisoned Germany.

Mr. Holmes played leads in many picture productions, some of which are "A Tortured Heart," "Under Two Flags," "Her Double Life," "Love and Hate," "The Scarlet Letter," "The Derelict," and "The Broadway Sport." "Little Miss Moneybags" will be his first Metro production.

William Davidson Joins Officers' Training

William Davidson, juvenile lead, lately appearing in William Fox productions, entered the officers' training school at Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Ky., last Thursday and was accepted after he had tried to enlist a number of times.

Three weeks ago he started work, under direction of Richard Stanton at the Fort Lee studios, in "Why I Would Not Marry," a great big sensational production dealing with the marriage question.

The day work started Davidson received official notification from Washington that his enlistment had been accepted and for him to prepare to leave for camp on September 5. In order to enable Davidson to appear in the play Director Stanton worked night and day, as did other members of the company, to shoot 150 scenes in which Davidson appears.

World Gets "America's Answer"

The Second in the Series of U. S. Government Official Features to Be Distributed by World Film Corporation

THE official announcement is made by Director Chas. S. Hart, of the Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, that "America's Answer," the second in the series of "Following the Flag to France" war pictures, which was first shown at the George M. Cohan theatre in New York, and has since created remarkable enthusiasm in other cities, will be released for distribution to the motion picture houses of the United States October 14. The World Film Corporation has been selected as the medium for distributing this important Government film.

"In releasing 'America's Answer' for general distribution at this early date," says Mr. Hart, "the Division of Films has in mind the importance of 'getting to' the greatest audience in the shortest possible time. It is recognized that this can best be done through the medium of the regular picture houses. The value of paving the way by exhibiting the official pictures in the larger cities in theatres not usually devoted to motion pictures should not be discounted. The publicity received in this way is helpful, and creates a preliminary desire on the part of the public in the smaller cities to see the picture. In another way it is helpful to the exhibitor. The picture gets to the motion picture house with all the preliminary heavy outlay in advertising and printing fully paid. The subsequent expenses to the exhibitor are practically nominal.

"In the desire of the Division of Films to get 'America's Answer' into the motion picture houses as expeditiously as possible, and, at the same time, on a basis that will be just to all concerned, a plan has been evolved that, it is expected, will meet with universal approval. Under this plan small theatres can show 'America's Answer' at a cost that will be in keeping with its income. There will be no incentive for the raising of prices. The regular admission fees will be found adequate to afford a reasonable profit, to say nothing of the increased returns that an official picture of this kind naturally insure.

"This means that the smallest, as well as the largest, among the motion picture houses can afford to play 'America's Answer,' and, no matter what their regular prices may be, there will be no need for raising them in order to warrant the exhibitor in showing the film. It stands to reason that an arrangement of this kind, based on justice and a spirit of friendliness and fairness to the exhibitor and the public, and at the same time keeping in view the importance of 'America's Answer' as the highest form of Government propaganda, will meet with a general and generous response from the motion picture exhibitors of the entire country.

"Surely no special argument is needed to convince exhibitors of the value of 'America's Answer' not only from the standpoint of the box-office, but also as a means of aiding the Government in a work that is daily growing in importance.

"America's millions who have expended their incomes lavishly in Liberty Bonds, Government Stamps and for the various organizations that are doing such glorious work behind the lines in France, to say nothing of the growing taxation which they are meeting with a smile, are entitled to know just what the Government is doing with the billions that are entrusted to it. 'America's Answer' responds to this demand in a way that is at once comprehensive, thrilling and satisfying. The exhibitor who shows this great war picture in his house is not only more than financially justifying himself for the reasonable expense involved, but he also is doing his 'bit' in stirring up his community to the needs and purposes of the world war for Democracy. Communities are more patriotic after seeing 'America's Answer.' It has helped to prove that the film is the most effective way of reaching the eyes and intelligence of the public that so far has been devised. The motion picture theatres have been 100 per cent patriotic in the war. They have in many ways aided the Government in its propaganda work. The showing of 'America's Answer' will be one more page added to the long record of helpfulness.

"Quite apart from the invaluable information which 'America's Answer' imparts, and which is now given to the public, the picture has a stirring appeal in the fact that it takes the spectator actually to the battle front, shows our American boys under fire, and visualizes war as it actually is. Night after night, in New York and other cities where the picture has been shown, fathers and mothers, sisters and sweethearts have seen their loved ones among the masses of soldiers depicted upon the screen. The possibility of seeing and recognizing soldier boys in the picture is one of the great appeals, the value of which every exhibitor must realize.

"The arrangement with the World Film Corporation ensures a systematic distribution, under the new plan which has been formulated."

Dinner Is Tendered to Thomas by Film Exporters

The Exporters of America tendered a dinner to L. R. Thomas, of the North American Film Company, last Friday night in the Yacht Room of the Hotel Astor following the announcement of his appointment by George Creel of the Committee on Public Information, for educational film work in Europe. Mr. Thomas has already left the city on his important mission and on his arrival in Europe will immediately commence the elaborate campaign planned for him to spread the message of America in nations on the continent.

Mr. Thomas was appointed by Mr. Creel owing to his extensive acquaintance with foreign market conditions, his ability as an organizer and his high ranking as an American citizen.

The dinner was in the way of a surprise for Mr. Thomas. All he knew was that he was to dine with Mr. Chapman, once his partner in the North American enterprise, to discuss the affairs of that concern. Instead he was led to the door of the Astor Yacht Room where approximately thirty of his associates in the export trade were gathered to bid him farewell.

Carl Byoir, Assistant Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, delivered a striking speech in which he discussed the type of educational or propaganda work which Mr. Thomas would be called upon to do when he touched foreign shores and complimented the emissary on the enthusiasm and alacrity with which he seized upon these new and difficult duties.

Marcus A. Beeman, of the Division of Films, also addressed the gathering and spoke warmly of Mr. Thomas.

Other speakers were Paul Cromelin, Mr. Chapman and the toastmaster, David P. Howells.

Harry Reichenbach, who has also been appointed by Mr. Creel to carry out the foreign educational work of the Committee on Public Information in Europe, was present and started all the exporters laughing when he was called upon to speak. Mr. Reichenbach will leave shortly on his mission.

Mr. Thomas was presented with a handsome suitcase containing various traveling necessities in the lid by the members of the Exporters' Association.

Among the exporters present at the dinner were David P. Howells, Sidney Garrett, Joseph Miles, L. Auerbach, Chester Beecroft, Walter Hoff Seele, Paul Cromelin, Horace T. Clarke, A. H. Sawyer, W. B. Hart, H. A. Gillespie, and E. T. Chapman. Members of the trade press also attended.

Paramount Reviews War Work

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation Extols War Work Activities of Film Folk in Its West Coast Studios

"TO present a comprehensive review of the war work done by film folk at the West Coast studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is a large order, for the ardent patriotism of the screen players is indisputable and their efforts have been myriad," stated a prominent West Coast official.

"The generosity of players is proverbial and never have they given a better exhibition of their willingness and ability to help than during these war-torn days. In money, time and labor they have given of their best, never faltering at any call in the realization of the great necessity.

"More than one-sixth of the six hundred employes at the West Coast studio are doing actual military service now, either in training camps in this country or on the fields of France. Several of these one hundred men have been wounded already, and the Folks at Home Fund was instituted by the studio in order to take care of the Lasky soldiers needing help, and their dependents. Cecil B. De Mille is chairman of the committee having charge of the fund, and already $9,000 has been raised.

"Most of this was obtained when the big dance and fair were given recently at the studio. Four thousand persons were present, and most of the famous stars in the West contributed their services and gave largely of their money. Jesse L. Lasky, vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, personally added five per cent to the total amount raised at the dance.

"The work of the West Coast players in aid of the Liberty Loan campaigns makes an interesting story in itself. During the first campaign bonds to the value of $185,000 were sold, and in the second campaign $289,000 was expended in bonds. It was during the third campaign, however, that the Lasky people made their showing. They bought $317,000 worth of bonds and donated their services to the Government, traveling about the country and exhorting people in different cities to support the great cause.

"Mary Pickford bought $100,000 worth of bonds and for six weeks traveled through the East, selling $16,000,000 worth. Her brother, Jack, now serving in the Navy, worked with her on part of the trip, and on one occasion sold $100,000 worth in a half hour. Bill Hart opened his campaign by purchasing bonds to the amount of $105,000, and then through his efforts in the larger cities of the West hundreds were induced to subscribe to a total running far into the millions. Doug Fairbanks, working in the Middle West, sold $8,000,000 worth and invested $100,000 himself. In addition to these stars Wallace Reid, Vivian Martin, Kathlyn Williams, Elliott Dexter and others were making personal appearances.

"Fairbanks, Hart and Mary Pickford also performed invaluable service in behalf of the Red Cross, the War Camp Community Fund and other funds. Fairbanks not only turned over to the Red Cross the net proceeds of his big Roreo, amounting to $18,000, but paid all the expenses—some $5,000. His two Wild West shows in San Francisco netted $60,000 for the War Camp Community Fund, and other projects of his realized $15,000 more for the Red Cross. Bill Hart and his famous Pinto pony also raised a substantial sum.

"In order to be of direct aid to the soldiers, Mary Pickford, Bill Hart, Dorothy Dalton, Louise Huff, "Fatty" Arbuckle, Vivian Martin and Douglas Fairbanks all were "adopted" by Army units in return for their generous contribution to their welfare, while any number of the Lasky players have appeared in performances at various camps.

"People of the Lasky studio are also prominent in the Motion Picture Association for War Service, at the opening meeting of which, in Los Angeles, $32,000 was raised.

"All the Lasky stars have been hard at work engaged in making propaganda pictures at the request of the Government for use in the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign. Fred Stone, Roscoe ("Fatty") Arbuckle, Doug. Fairbanks, Bill Hart, Charles Ray, Dorothy Dalton, Enid Bennett, Wallace Reid, Lillian Gish, Mary Pickford and Mack Sennett have all made pictures. In addition, Doug. Fairbanks' propaganda film, "Swat the Kaiser," which is well known, was contributed for the Third Liberty Loan campaign.

"In the Thrift Stamp drive held recently several thousand dollars worth of stamps were pledged for the future in a studio campaign directed by William C. De Mille, and more than $15,000 worth of stamps have already been purchased by studio people."

June Mathis Is Helping Belgian Orphans

June Mathis, Metro scenario writer, made the appeal for cast-off shirts to be used for dresses for the little Belgian war orphans. Boxes of all sizes, shapes and descriptions and shirts contained therein are deposited daily at her door.

She wanted to make the first dress herself and she selected a particularly pretty blue shirt. It was from the largest man in Manchester, the man who wears the biggest shirt in that New Hampshire town, and the appeal made by Miss Mathis had hit him between the shoulders.

Rosenquest Displays Grit

H. E. Rosenquest, for several years an employe of General Film Company in the headquarters auditing department in New York, has resigned to enter the Army, having been accepted for service in the artillery. He goes to Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga., to enter a replacement group for intensive training with the prospect of a commission, and had grit enough to undergo an operation so that he might qualify.

Stage Employes Reach a Settlement on the West Coast

(Special to Motion Picture News)

Los Angeles, Cal.—When local studio managers refused to grant an increase in wages to a standard scale of $6 for electricians, mechanics and carpenters and $5 for "grips," with time and a half for overtime and double time for Sunday work, more than 400 of the 1,100 members of Local 33, International Alliance Theatrical Stage Employes, have been on a strike here for nearly two weeks.

Capt. C. T. Connell, Federal Labor Mediator, upon instructions from Washington, called conferences between the producers as well as members of the union to see if a satisfactory settlement could not be effected. After spending several days in negotiations, Capt. Connell announced that the matter would be adjusted, but declined to discuss the possible basis of settlement.

The increase in wages sought by the stage employes averages one dollar a day in each instance. The studios that announced they would accept the uniform scale are Fox, Griffith, Diando, Lois Weber, Jesse Hampton, Hart, Metro, Ince, National, Chaplin, Sennett, Universal, Balshofer-Eltinge, Astra, Haworth and Helen Keller. The Rolin Company accepted the scale pending the return of Manager Hal Roach from New York.

There was no walk-out where Government propaganda pictures are being made, but at studios not granting the new scale, the strike, according to labor leaders, was 100 per cent efficient. The new scale is equivalent to the wage fixed by the Government for workers in the shipyards.

The union operators in Los Angeles then held a meeting and decided to call a walk-out unless the Theater Owners' Association here discontinues a projection school for girls, which is being operated in Los Angeles.

National Vice-President Dolliver and International Representative Roy Stephenson are the acting members for the union in the walk-out at the studios.

LATE WIRE INTIMATES SETTLEMENT

Just as the Motion Picture News was going to press the following wire was received, and indicates that an immediate settlement is possible:

"Arbitration board composed of representatives of producers' association, stage employes' union and Federal Labor Mediator Connell will iron out differences that brought on recent studio strike and settlement probably will be effected in day or two."

Joe Kelley Answers War's Call

Joe Kelley, well known in the industry as a reviewer, trade journalist and newspaperman, and who was until two weeks ago on the editorial staff of Motion Picture News, has answered the call of war. He has gone to a training camp near Syracuse, N. Y. He is in the 19th Battalion Limited Service.

Select Entrenches in New Stronghold

Finds Itself at Second Year in Commanding Position in Picture Theatres of Country—General Manager Kane Points to Importance of Houses Playing Select Product

GENERAL MANAGER ARTHUR S. KANE, speaking for the entire personnel of the Select Pictures organization, this week expressed himself as highly pleased with the Select outlook for the coming year as a result of the work accomplished in the past by the company. Select has just crossed the threshold of its second year, and finds itself, Mr. Kane says, "occupying a commanding position in the picture theatres of the United States." To back this up Mr. Kane submits a list of theatres throughout the country, considered among the most important being operated.

A strong point cited by Mr. Kane is the fact that his salesmen have written, for the season now opening, the largest percentage of renewals of contracts ever recorded by the organization.

Impressive Array

"Perhaps," said Mr. Kane to a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, in speaking of Select's unusual progress, "the full significance of this list will be apparent only to those who are thoroughly conversant with the situation as regards picture theatres throughout the country, but even a casual reading of it must impress the well informed with the fact that Select Pictures have been received universally into the best homes of the motion picture everywhere."

Continuing, Mr. Kane said:

"The fact that Select has reached and been able to maintain a very strong position is also attested by the fact that for the new season just opening Select managers have written the largest percentage of renewals of contracts ever known. These renewals have come from exhibitors of the highest grade throughout the country, who, having played Select's First Series of Star Pictures, have come back, practically unanimously, eager to contract for the second year's supply. Confidence in the Select output is the answer. Without wishing to boast it may be claimed that Select has more than lived up to its promises as to maintaining the quality of its output. Exhibitors know this and have acted accordingly.

"Today Select Pictures finds itself in the wholly gratifying position where there is a greater demand for the Select Service than the corporation is able to gratify. The company does not have to look for new customers. In numbers of instances exhibitors have kept track of their competitors' contracts, and at the time that these were about to expire have written demanding that the service be turned to them instead.

Small Number of Stars

"Doubtless Select would not be in such a strong position were it not that the company puts out only pictures starring a small number of the biggest artists the screen has ever known. The commanding position attained by Norma Talmadge and Clara Kimball Young, the popularity of Alice Brady and Constance Talmadge, and the widely renowned beauty and charm of Marion Davies making a combination of assured strength.

ANOTHER!

When You've "Seen 'Em All," Then You Know Which Is the Best

EXHIBITORS, who form the vast army of readers necessary to the upkeep and success of a trade publication, generally know what they are talking about when they "say something."

They wouldn't be long in business if they did not.

And the majority of them expressed themselves in decided phrases that MOTION PICTURE NEWS is ahead of the field so far there is no comparison.

Here's more proof from an exhibitor, speaking for the army of exhibitors: "Wish to say in regard to MOTION PICTURE NEWS that it is just what I want! That is something we don't often get, but the NEWS contains more helps to exhibitors than anything I have ever seen yet, and I have seen quite a few."

This exhibitor is J. E. Dobbins, Rosemary theatre, Rosemary, North Carolina.

DOMINATES THE FIELD

"In New York City Select Pictures are shown in S. L. Rothapfel's Rialto and Rivoli theatres, and in Marcus Loew's extensive chain of houses. The buyer of pictures need not be told what this statement means, as the theatres included have national reputations. In Boston Select Pictures are seen in the Marcus Loew houses. Here again the name of Mr. Loew signifies to the informed that Select has secured Boston's greatest winners. In Buffalo Select Pictures are shown in Shea's million dollar Hippodrome, the fame of which, under the direction of Harold B. Franklin, has spread far. The home of Select Pictures in Philadelphia is the Stanley theatre, which is the heart of the renowned system of playhouses established by the late Stanley Mastbaum. At the nation's capital the finest two houses show all Select Pictures. These are Harry M. Crandall's splendid new Metropolitan theatre in the heart of Washington's downtown district, and Crandall's beautiful white marble auditorium, the Knickerbocker, Washington's neighborhood house de luxe.

At Grand in Pittsburg

"In Pittsburgh Select Pictures are seen at Harry Davis' new Grand Opera House. Picture fans in Cleveland look to Marcus Loew's Stillman theatre for their finest attractions. Select Pictures are shown at the Stillman. In Cincinnati the picture patronage de luxe finds its way to the important group of theatres known as the Libson Houses. These include the Strand, Walnut and Family theatres, all of which play Select.

"Two eminent theatres of Detroit have claimed all Select Pictures. These are John Kunsky's celebrated Madison theatre and Harry Garson's and Phil Gleichman's noted Broadway Strand. In Chicago three great circuits of vital importance receive the Select service, which is thus seen in the finest houses of this city and its vicinity. These are Ascher Brothers' great chain of theatres, the Lubliner & Trinz Circuit, and Balaban & Katz's group of theatres. Downtown in the Chicago loop district Sig Faller's comparatively small but widely patronized Bijou Dream has become notable for its showing of Select Pictures.

"The twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul are dominated by the Finklestein & Ruben theatres, and here we find Select Pictures, in the Lyric in Minneapolis and the Garrick in St. Paul.

West Likes Select Film

"Kansas City's eminent theatre is S. Harding's new Liberty on Main street, and Mr. Harding has the Select Service. The situation in Omaha is dominated by the magnificent new Rialto theatre, which A. H. Blank opened last Spring. Having the Rialto, Select has Omaha's best.

"In Dallas it is Manager Stinnett's Jefferson theatre which shows the way with Select attractions, and in Atlanta the Criterion theatre, which has climbed to the top under the management of Sig Samuels and Willard Patterson. Loew's great Crescent is the big house of New Orleans, where Select is found. The pride of Denver—is the nickname of A. G. Talbot's big America theatre on Sixteenth and Curtis streets. Here again we find Select Pictures, and 'they are the pride of the America,' writes Manager Talbot.

"Select Pictures are one of the supports of Tally's Broadway in Los Angeles, best known and best beloved picture theatre in that center where more productions are made than anywhere else on the American continent. Moving up to San Francisco we find Select Pictures beautifully presented in that marvelous temple of motion picture art on the Western coast, the two million dollar California theatre, of which

William Fox in Patriotic Drive

Fox Film Corporation Has Enlisted Its Producing Forces in a Tremendous Patriotic Campaign to Help Win the War

BELIEVING firmly in the power of the motion picture to help win the war, William Fox has enlisted the producing resources of the Fox Film Corporation in a tremendous patriotic campaign which is designed to educate the American people on every phase of America's part in the world conflict, to stimulate the nation's morale and to deliver definite, timely blows against the Hun.

The production of motion pictures which will aid the Government in prosecuting the war is only one phase of Mr. Fox's patriotic activities, but, in the opinion of close observers within the industry, it is a factor which should and will play a large part in American victory.

Of eleven productions which are released in the immediate future by the Fox Film Corporation, eight come under the head of the so-called propaganda films.

These patriotic productions are "The Prussian Cur," the R. A. Walsh drama of the enemies at home and the secret embassy which Ambassador von Bernstorff left behind him; William Farnum's Liberty Loan film; "On the Jump," starring George Walsh; Gladys Brockwell in "Kultur"; the great picture on the draft, "18 to 45"; "Why America Will Win," based on the life of General John J. Pershing; Jane and Katherine Lee in "Swat the Spy!" and Tom Mix in "Mr. Logan, U. S. A."

"The Prussian Cur" is based on revelations made by Capt. Horst von der Goltz, the confessed leader of the plot to blow up the Welland Canal, and also on a mass of data regarding activities of German agents in this country, obtained from Government files at Washington and elsewhere.

"Kultur," a play of Germany's secret diplomacy in which Gladys Brockwell is the star, treats of an entirely different phase of the war situation. This picture reveals the methods which the Kaiser employed in bringing on the world war; it shows the evils of the underground diplomacy practiced by Germany, and it depicts the domination which Prussia holds over Austria and how Germany forced Austria to declare war on Serbia, thus starting the World War.

In "18 to 45," the big picture which R. A. Walsh has already made on the problems which will arise from the extension of the draft ages, is a direct challenge to the men of America to stand back of the draft and make the supreme sacrifice for their country. Already made and ready to be released during the days following the national registration, this film, it is believed, will have a tremendous influence in stimulating the morale of America.

"Why America Will Win" is based on the life of General John J. Pershing, and produced on a big scale.

Even the children are used in this patriotic work. Jane and Katherine Lee teach an important patriotic lesson in "Swat the Spy!"

Another phase of war endeavor—the prevention of sabotage and the rooting out of the disaffected labor agitators—is treated in the Tom Mix picture, "Mr. Logan, U. S. A.," which has its setting in the tungsten mining fields of the West.

Mundus Films Boosts American Product

Mundus Film Company, of Paris, and the largest importer of American films on the Continent, has just issued a handsome twenty-four page booklet for distribution in its territory giving a recital of the pictures that it handles. Included in the list are the First National Chaplin pictures, Metros, Paralta Plays, Seligs, Hepworth productions for the Continent, Bill West comedies, Ditmars-Educational "Living Book of Nature," and a large number of specials, including such productions as "For the Freedom of the World," "The Whip," "Today," "The Mad Lover," "The Barrier" and "Lest We Forget."

This is the first of a series of booklets that the company will issue, with the aim of informing exhibitors all over the Continent of the character of productions that the company is handling. Sydney Garret is the New York representative of the company.

Norma Talmadge Secures New General Manager

Arthur H. Jacobs, well known in the producing end of the film industry, has just accepted the position of general manager of the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation and studios.

He is particularly well fitted for this task through a wide and varied experience, having been an independent producer for a long term, as well as president of the Triumph Film Corporation, during which period he personally supervised productions for such stars as Helen Ware, Julius Steger, Lenore Ulric, Jane Grey and others equally well known.

After selling out his interest in this corporation, Mr. Jacobs became an independent producer, bringing out such features as "The Flower of Faith," "Her Fighting Chance," and "When My Ship Comes In." He will make his offices at the Norma Talmadge Studios, 318 East 48th street.

Eugene H. Roth is the managing director. Nowhere in the United States are Select Pictures more sumptuously housed.

"Ending our list in the far Northwest corner of the country we find Select holding a commanding position in Seattle, where Jensen and von Herberg's half million dollar Coliseum theatre and their phenomenally successful Liberty theatre give them first showing."

Geraldine Farrar Goddess in Loan Picture

Geraldine Farrar has completed at the Goldwyn studio in Fort Lee a Liberty Loan picture which has been sent to Washington by special messenger. It is called "The Bonds That Tie."

This task over, the nature of the contribution is made public for the first time. Both Geraldine Farrar and her director, Reginald Barker, are elated over the finished product. Harry Durant wrote the story from which the picture was made.

She appears as the Goddess of Liberty. The setting is the steps of a classical temple standing in the shadow of a tree. On one side of the entrance is a sailor (Tom Santschi) and opposite stands a soldier in the person of Milton Sills. The curtains part and reveal Geraldine Farrar as Liberty. She descends to the level of the men in uniform and addresses them in turn, concluding with:

"These Liberty Bonds are Bonds of Love. They bind those who cannot go to those who go to fight—and die if need be. Don't you love them enough to buy a bond? Then buy and buy and buy Liberty Bonds!"

The picture closes with Geraldine Farrar's arms outstretched and the stars in her Liberty cap catching the glints of myriad lights.

As with Goldwyn's all-star Liberty Loan production, everyone associated with Geraldine Farrar donated his services, from Hugo Ballin, who devised the beautiful setting, to the several electricians who operated the special lights.

John M. Dean Continues as Memphis Censor

John M. Dean, chairman of the Memphis board of censors, is to continue in that office, for Mayor Frank Monteverde has declined to accept his resignation. Mr. Dean is a business man. He follows the reports of the National Board of Review largely in his work, being a member of the advisory committee of the Board. His point of view is expressed in the following statement, which he made when his resignation was declined:

"The censor does not try to make the film fit his own opinion of what a picture should be, nor does he try to change the film so as to influence public opinion. His object is to present a clean, interesting film to the public and let each one form his own opinion and judgment."

Roswell Dague Joins Training Camp

Roswell Dague, until recently assistant scenario editor of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has gone to Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, Ky., where he is training for a commission in the Army in the Field Artillery Officers' Training School.

He was at one time an assistant dramatic critic on the New York Tribune and before that did drama for the Oakland, Cal., Tribune. He is a graduate of the University of California and of George Washington University, Washington, D. C.

Winding Up the Chicago Convention

Exhibitors and Stars Live Up to the "Blaze and Glory" Thing by Ending Festivities with Ball—Speeches Feature the Meeting

AGAIN have the exhibitors of these United States made history in Chicago, and while the annual convention which brought the divided factions together was not so exciting as that of 1917, it is nevertheless history that will find a place in exhibitor minds and books for time to come.

Stars, producers and exhibitors were there in force, and all helped to bring the convention to a close befitting such an occasion—Movie Ball. To lend a war-like atmosphere to the occasion, probably in remembrance of 1917, the proceeds of the ball went to the Navy Relief Society. A "Jackie" band supplied jazz and other tunes.

The speeches of the convention were one of its strongest features, among them being those of Frank Rembusch and Edgar Lewis.

Help Win the War

The ball which "wound" up the convention did not monopolize the war atmosphere, however, as it was quite evident throughtout the entire meeting in the form of patriotism. The slogan adopted was "Come and Help Win the War." That the meeting was in accord was amply proven more than once.

At the Thursday afternoon session, characterized as the "beginning of the wind-up," the meeting was called to order at two o'clock by Sam Atkinson, platform manager. He threw the meeting open for a discussion of the question of taxation, Mr. Choynski being the first to speak. He declared the exhibitors as a rule were quite in the dark concerning the taxation, and failed to see how they could discuss something of which they knew nothing. Frank Rembusch proceeded to throw light on the situation by explaining that William A. Brady had said that if the factions would amalgamate into a national body as a branch of the National Association, Brady would guarantee that the 20 per cent admission tax that is proposed would not pass. Mr. Rembusch said he thought the proposition was worth while to amalgamate on. Following Mr. Rembusch's talk, Mr. Choynski, of Chicago, declared the thing that interested exhibitors most is the 10 per cent film tax—the tax the patrons of the theatre are supposed to pay, and up till now have paid.

The fifteen-cent tax came in for quite a bit of discussion, drawing in Exhibitor Brown, of Idaho, who spoke from the standpoint of the exhibitor. He said he had told Mr. Brady that "no producer has ever presented your case right or intelligently in Washington. They go down there and allow a misapprehension to exist." Applause greeted Mr. Brown when he had concluded.

Lewis Speaks Interestingly

Frank Rembusch, while the metting was waiting for Frank Tichenor, introduced Edgar Lewis, the producer, who spoke interestingly along the following lines:

"This is absolutely unexpected on my part. If I had thought I'd be called on to talk at all I wouldn't have been here, because I'm not a good talker. You have heard some good ones and some bad ones today and yesterday and the day before, but I'll probably be the worst of all. There isn't much that I can say to you anyhow that I think would interest you personally, although we are all connected in some capacity with the motion picture industry. I know nothing of distribution and nothing of exhibiting except what my intuition and my common sense, if I have any, tells me and probably not many of you gentlemen or ladies know anything direct about the production and more than what you have seen from casual observation.

"It's pretty hard for me to talk here without talking about myself, and as I believe I am an averagely modest man, you place a restraint on me which makes it rather embarrassing for me to be here. I didn't expect to talk so I have nothing in mind to say.

"I am a director of some years of experience, not as many as some. I have been directing and producing pictures for between six and seven years. Before that I was a manager, theatrical manager, a stage producer, and I thought for fifteen years that I was an actor, but after attempting for fifteen years to make a fair salary as an actor and to gain a place in the hearts of the great American theatregoing public, I decided that I was either mistaken in my vocation or the public was mistaken in not accepting me. I blamed it on the public."

Tells Producer Hopes

When asked by Mr. Rembusch: "What is the hope of the independent producer in the future?" Mr. Lewis said: "The hope of the independent producer is the exhibitor. That is absolutely true. I have been in a position where I have had to sell on the open market. I have had, as I say, no hooks out. I have had no contracts by which I could force any individual or any organization to pay for and buy my product. I have made my pictures and placed them on the table or on the screen and said, 'There they are, gentlemen. What do you think of them?' 'How much do you want for the picture, Lewis?' 'I want so much.' And they reply that they can or cannot buy them.

"That question was asked awfully quick and requires some thought. The hope of the independent producer, it seems to me, is in getting together with the exhibitor. If you can eliminate that person that we call the broker or the middle man and eliminate that overhead expense and eliminate that trying to hook somebody instead of doing it along a legitimate, honest, money-making line, I think that is the hope of the independent producer.

"If I can't rely on the exhibitor wanting my product and showing my product, then I cannot live, can I? It depends on you, gentlemen. To make you buy that product I've got to produce what we call a merit product."

Vote of Thanks

Following his talk, which continued for quite a few minutes, Mr. Lewis was voted thanks for "the only real talk we've had right down to the point."

The Friday afternoon meeting brought a report that one exhibitor had said he considered his trip of 1,000 miles well paid for by Mr. Lewis' talk.

J. Stuart Blackton made a speech at the close of the convention, as follows:

"I want to congratulate the motion picture exhibitors of America upon the consummation of the most important and vital happening in the history of the industry—the combining of their two national organizations with the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, and the welding of all of these great forces into a power that will be able to safeguard the motion picture interests of all branches, and especially in furthering the splendid achievements already accomplished in educational and propaganda work for the cause of humanity.

"This gathering has been the most important, constructive and progressive in the history of the industry. We are now all together in one great body to work for a greater motion picture, which will prove of inestimable value in furthering the splendid achievements already accomplished in educational and propaganda work for the cause of humanity.

"In the past, various groups of exhibitors, distributers and producers have appeared before Congressional and other committees at Washington to fight unjust taxation, censorship and attacks directed directed against each other, through lack of union and co-operation.

"The coming year will find every motion picture interest standing solidly together, for the first time united as a complete entity. This has been the quietest convention I have ever attended, but I believe that as all great results are obtained quietly and calmly, so the events of this historic week in Chicago will become most potent factors in the present and future of our business.

"Mr. Frank and Mr. Rembusch and other officials are to be congratulated for bringing together this great combination. Mr. Brady is to be congratulated for his untiring efforts to bring about the desired union of forces, and all you gentlemen are equally to be congratulated for perceiving that the psychological moment had arrived, and grasping the opportunity that the situation offered."

Paramount-Artcraft's Big Week

Adolph Zukor Proclaims National Paramount-Artcraft Week One of Greatest Achievements in Motion Picture Industry

NATIONAL Paramount and Artcraft Week came to a close last Saturday night and Adolph Zukor stated that one thousand three hundred and fifty of the ten thousand exhibitors now running Paramount and Artcraft Pictures throughout the country, rearranged their schedules in order to run for the entire week, pictures released under these trade-marks.

The co-operative advertising campaign in which exhibitors were given the opportunity of directly tying up to a gigantic exploitation drive met with enthusiastic approval from managers everywhere, it is reported.

Billboards, national magazines and over forty of the largest newspapers in the United States covering a circulation of 30,147,583 readers alone were used in this big campaign which thoroughly covered the country with publicity.

In addition to the plans of advertising laid out for the exhibitor by the Famous Players-Lasky organization, many progressive managers used other means of boosting the week's offerings. R. B. Riggs, a Michigan exhibitor for instance, gave out copies of the advertisement which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post. Besides this Mr. Riggs stopped his shows on evenings previous to the opening of P and A Week when his theatre was full, put on the lights and went on the stage to give a four-minute talk on Paramount and Artcraft pictures, requesting his patrons to read carefully the Post advertisement. "I personally think that it was one of the best little advertising stunts that I have ever put over," wrote Mr. Riggs in a letter to the local exchange, "as it is a common thing to go into most any business place and hear them boosting the pictures that I am using at the Liberty."

"Paramount Artcraft Week is undoubtedly one of the greatest accomplishments in the industry since its inception," said Mr. Zukor. "Only with a product of such a high standard as that released under these trademarks and with an organization of magnitude such as the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, could an undertaking of this kind be possible.

"With the end of Paramount Artcraft Week we are not sitting back in satisfaction over something big accomplished. In fact, this has been merely a beginning of the new year's activities, a year which holds out the greatest possibilities ever afforded the motion picture enterprise. And we have not come to this decision only recently. Long before the motion picture industry was declared essential the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation laid its plans for the biggest year in the history of the American cinema. We had faith in our business and in our product and made out schedules accordingly, with the result that on the commencement of a new year we are thoroughly prepared for activities that exactly double those of our past twelve months.

"The enlarged releasing schedule of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is not a last minute decision. For months we have prepared for it. There has been no undue haste to make possible the release of double the monthly output of the past, but production for this plan has been going on at a steady pace for some time so that each new release will mark, if anything, an improved quality over our present high standard."

Many Screen Stars Grace Big Movie Ball

The movie exhibitors who attended the recent convention at the Hotel Sherman, when they got rid of the last tiresome details of business, skipped to their rooms, donned their best bibs and tuckers and got down to the Movie Ball, which wound up their week's labors.

The exhibitors were not the only ones there, however, by any manner or means. The public were there at a dollar a head. Proceeds went to the Navy Relief Society.

The screen favorites who graced the occasion were Dolores Cassinelli, E. K. Lincoln, Hazel Daly, Nat Moore, Herbert Rawlinson, Blanche Sweet and others more or less well known.

As no festivity nowadays is complete without the bluejacket band, they furnished a twenty-five piece orchestra for the ball, chucked jam full of "pep." The evening was enlivened by a series of vaudeville acts presenting Great Lakes sailors who were formerly on the stage.

After the theatre "legitimate" favorites playing in town, most of whom have done their bit on the screen, dropped in and mingled with the crowd. Grace Valentine and the Dolly Sisters were particularly in evidence.

Metro Presents Silk Flag to Red Cross Unit

Metro employes, recently presented a handsome silk unit flag to one hundred and one Red Cross nurses, just prior to the embarkation of these young women for their duties overseas.

Miss Winifred Lynch, formerly a Metro player, was responsible for Metro's interest in this particular unit, which was, to be exact, the United States Government Emergency Unit, Base Hospital 67, of which Miss Lynch is now an enthusiastic member.

David M. Thompson, Maxwell Karger's representative at Metro's Biograph annex, took up the collection, and contributed substantially from his own pocket. Mr. Thompson is the man to whom is entrusted the obtaining of Government permits in connection with the production of Metro pictures, and when he discovered through Miss Lynch, who has continued to keep in touch with her old friends at the Metro studio, that her Red Cross unit was not as yet provided with a unit flag, he decided that the need should be supplied, and Miss Lynch's former screen associates joyously welcomed the opportunity to "chip in."

McLaurin Wined and Dined

Mr. Rothapfel and the members of the Rivoli-Rialto executive staff tendered Hamish McLaurin, their former publicity director, a beefsteak dinner Thursday night as a farewell "send-off" before his leaving for Washington to assume his duties with the Red Cross.

In the words made famous by Artcraft's well-known booster, Pete Schmid, "a good time was had by all."

Loan Men Adopt Laemmle Idea

As Result of Address Issued by President of Universal, the Liberty Loan Officials Use Same Appeal

A SPEECH written by Carl Laemmle, president of the Universal Film Mfg. Company, entitled "Keep the Home Fires Burning," which he intended to distribute only to Universal exchanges and exhibitors, bids fair to sweep the country. The Liberty Loan officials of the New York district grasped the idea as a big one. They like the speech and the suggestions accompanying it so well that they intend now to ask all employers to deliver similar statements to their workers in all factories.

John Price Jones, in charge of the feature publicity for the Loan Drive in New York, has written to Mr. Laemmle, thanking him for his contribution to the Drive.

The film manufcturer's written statement calls upon employers to appear before their employees when the Drive opens, and make a personal appeal for their support to the Loan to the last limit of their resources. Mr. Laemmle's outline of the things the employer should say to his men in a burning document. He tells what it means to our men on the other side to keep the home fires burning, and concludes with the following counsel to the employers:

"After you've made your little speech about fires, fire any employee who doesn't prove his pure Americanism till it hurts and pinches."

Steps are being taken to have professional speakers visit the factories and other establishments where large numbers of workers are employed and deliver addresses on the day of the Drive's start, along the line suggested by Mr. Laemmle. It is expected regular Liberty Loan speakers will carry out the suggestion.

Prominent actors and lawyers may be invited by some of the factory owners to talk for them. The vital thought in Mr. Laemmle's written speech is that citizens must go into debt for the forthcoming loan. He declares that the mere subscription of what each one can spare easily is poor patriotism.

Then he tells what the news of the loan drive means to the fighting forces of the Allies abroad.

"Do you know," he says, "that the greatest news that ever reached the American soldiers in France and in the American cantonments was the fact that the Third Liberty Loan was over-subscribed? Do you know that it caused the American soldiers to cheer your victory even more wildly than you cheered their victory when they started the great drive at Chateau Thierry? Do you know that they were intensely proud of you? Imagine it! There they were, risking their lives, giving their lives to make the world safe for you; and yet they actually considered that you had achieved a grand triumph when they learned, not that you had risked anything, not even dollars, but that you had loaned Uncle Sam more than he had asked for!"

Following is the letter from Mr. Price and the full text of the communication from Mr. Laemmle:

September 6, 1918.

Mr. Carl Laemmle,
Universal Film Mfg. Co.,
1600 Broadway, N. Y. City.

Dear Sir:—

Allow me to thank you for your kind and thoughtful letter of September 4, to say nothing of your splendid suggestion and the co-operation you are giving us in helping to make the Fourth Liberty Loan a success. We hope to have a speech made in every factory in the District as the result of your idea.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) JOHN PRICE JONES,
Assistant Director of Publicity
Second Federal Reserve District.

MR. LAEMMLE'S COMMUNICATION.

"KEEP THE HOME FIRES BURNING."

When the next Liberty Loan drive opens, call all of your employees before you and make them a speech like this:

"I have called you together for the purpose of asking each and everyone of you to plunge yourself into debt.

"Ordinarily I would not give such business advice, but now I am doing it on behalf of the greatest business in the world, namely, making your home and my home, your country and my country, your world and my world a fit place to live in.

"Buying Liberty Bonds—more Liberty Bonds than you can pay cash for—is the manner in which I ask you to plunge yourself into debt.

"The man who buys Liberty Bonds only to the extent that he has cash in the bank is a poor patriot. But the man who pledges himself for a year ahead and then pays for his bonds out of the money he saves by giving up luxuries and even some of the necessities during the year is the man who is really helping Uncle Sam. And remember! In helping Uncle Sam you are not helping some stranger. You are helping yourself, your family, your friends, your country. In buying Liberty Bonds, you are not doing Uncle Sam a favor. You are paying off your debt to him, for you owe him all that you have and all that you are! And later on he will pay you back in cash and interest!

"Do you know that the greatest news that ever reached the American soldiers in France and the American cantonments was the fact that the Third Liberty Loan was over-subscribed? Do you know that it caused the American soldiers to cheer your victory even more wildly than you cheered their victory when they started the great drive at Chateau Thierry? Imagine it! There they were, risking their lives, giving their lives to make the world safe for you, and yet they actually considered that you had achieved a grand triumph when they learned, not that you had risked anything, not even dollars, but that you had loaned Uncle Sam more than he asked for!

"If this is all that the American soldiers ask of you, God knows you are getting off with ease! If a mere oversubscription to Liberty Bonds makes them proud of you, then make the next oversubscription so huge, so vast, so complete that Uncle Sam won't know what to do with all the piles of money you dump into his lap!

"If merely giving up luxuries for the period of the war will keep the home fires burning and cheer up the boys who are baring their breasts to the beast of Berlin—then in God's name build and maintain such a fire as will cast its glow all over the civilized world; a fire that will send the American soldiers wild with delight and the Hun hordes with fright."

And then, after you've made your little speech about fires, fire any employee who doesn't prove his pure Americanism till it hurts and pinches!

Brownell to Portland as Mutual Manager

H. H. Brownell has been selected by Mutual as branch manager at Portland, Ore., succeeding F. M. Hamburger, who has resigned to take the managament of a big Portland theatre.

The new branch manager is known to many exhibitors on the coast, as he has been affiliated with the film industry there for many years. Ted L. Serr will assist Mr. Brownell as chief road man.

Joseph Merrick, recently appointed coast supervisor for Mutual, has made a visit to Portland and other northwestern Mutual offices.

Newsy Reports From All Sections

Peabody Theatre Opens at Baltimore

BALTIMORE, MD.—With the re-opening of the Peabody theatre in Baltimore on Thursday, Sept. 5, another motion picture playhouse was added to the chain operated in that city by the Parkway Theatre Company. This organization has for some time been operating the Parkway, Strand, Wizard and McHenry theatres and the acquisition of the Peabody adds a fifth to their list.

H. W. Webb, president of the Parkway Company, has announced that Metro, Artcraft and Goldwyn pictures will be shown. There will be a change of films twice a week, the pictures going from one of the company's theatres to the other until they have completed the rounds as heretofore.

The Peabody was one of the pioneer large moving picture theatres in Baltimore. It has been completely remodeled and a large pipe organ has been installed. Bernard Depkin, manager of the Parkway, will also direct its destinies.

The Peabody is within a short distance of the Parkway and within walking distance of the two localities. Ground was broken some time ago for another theatre of the same size as the Parkway, to be named the Guilford. This project, however, struck a snag in the high cost of building materials and the shortage of labor due to the war, so operations on it have been suspended. However, after the war is over the Parkway Company purposes to hasten the construction of the playhouse.

No More Sunday Shows for Auburn, Ind.

AUBURN, IND.—At a meeting of the City Council it was decided to place a ban on Sunday shows in this city in the future. The new ordinance, which was passed, is practically the same as the one passed in May, 1917, with the exception of the number of days the amusement houses were allowed to operate, the former including Sunday and the latter allowing but the six days in the week. The new law will be effective in two weeks. A fine of $50 will be imposed on any person violating any provision of the ordinance.

" Pop " Hart's New Office on Broadway

The veteran film man, William J. V. Hart, better known as " Pop " Hart, is now located in Room 1212 Times Building, New York City, and building a thriving agency for the handling of photoplays and photoplayers. Mr. Hart was instrumental in the recent arrangements by which Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew will re-enter the film ranks with a new producing organization.

Fall Season Opens Strong After Stagnant Summer

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—After a somewhat stagnant summer, Rochester amusements sprang into full bloom on Labor Day, opening with a prosperity that seems to indicate one of the most prosperous of seasons. There was strong competition all of Labor Day week in the form of the Rochester Exposition and Horse Show, but despite that, business for the week held to a uniformly high level.

Two David W. Griffith pictures competed with each other within the distance of one downtown block, " Hearts of the World " playing at the Lyceum at top notch prices and " The Great Love " at the Piccadilly at the usual figures. " Hearts of the World " pulled enormous crowds all the week, from one Sunday night to the next, two performances every day; but it had nothing on " The Great Love," which with the same cast of stars and produced by the same directing genius, had an attraction for discriminating patrons that never weakened.

By accident or design the Piccadilly chose an excellent week for the showing of the Griffith picture, as it had the benefit of much of the Lyceum advertising, in which the name of Griffith was always featured. By announcing " The Great Love " as the newest Griffith production, the Piccadilly was able to capitalize the advertising power of that name to the limit.

Without deviating from its conservative policy of advertising, the house drew patrons that were not in the habit of attending moving pictures; for after seeing " Hearts of the World " at the Lyceum and then seeing that the same producer had a picture at the Piccadilly, they were induced to spend another fifteen or twenty cents to see a " just as good " picture. Apparently few were disappointed.

Film Salesmen Organize in Connecticut

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—With an initial roster of sixteen members, there has been organized what in future is to be known as " The Reel Fellows Club of Connecticut." This club has been sponsored for the sole purpose of creating a better feeling of good fellowship among the salesmen representing the many film producing and releasing companies in both Boston and New York, according to the officials.

Headquarters have been established at 131 Meadow street, where meetings are held. The officers of the club are as follows: Wm. Weisfeld, Pathe, chairman; Ben Morganroth, World, treasurer, and L. S. Tobias, American Feature, secretary.

" Something of this nature has long been needed in the Connecticut territory," declared the promoters, " and the success of the Reel Fellows is imminent."

Season Opens Up Lively in Philadelphia

PHILADELPHIA.—Columbus Stamper, the man with courage enough to purchase a full page advertisement for the Tioga theatre, in which he announced the installation of a Choralcelo, has taken over the booking for the Pelham theatre in Germantown.

" The Great Love " was booked for three days at the Locust theatre, a neighborhood house, but the crowds came in such numbers that the picture was held over for three days and all extra attractions shelved and the Griffith film run continuously.

Dorothy Shaver has been appointed as booker for the Community Pictures, which contract for the showing of movies at the Y. M. C. A. camps and the soldiers' quarters in the training camps.

Betty Malloy, who has been employed as contract clerk at the Paramount office, has transferred her labors to the Select office, where Max Milder is in charge of the office.

Benjamin Seligman, formerly manager of some of the Central Market Street Company's theatres, left for Camp Dix to become a manager for the Kaiser.

W. C. Hunt, proprietor of the theatre in Wildwood, N. J., bearing his name and theatres in other New Jersey towns, has taken over the active management of the Logan theatre in place of Allen G. Snyder, who will retire from the business end of the house, while still holding his interest in the receipts.

A $15,000 Smith-Seeberg organ has been installed in the Palm theatre in addition to a Mirror Screen, which cost $1,500. Other alterations and improvements will make this playhouse one of the best in Kensington. S. M. Jones is the manager.

The special drive on Paramount-Artcraft's National week resulted in over 120 theatres displaying these productions in one week, while several others made contracts for several days' showing. The Evening Ledger, Public Ledger and Evening Bulletin carried full page advertisements of the theatres represented.

Greencastle, Pennsylvania, has a new theatre. S. W. Yuengling is the owner.

The old Younis theatre in Providence has been taken over by the Commerford Amusement Company.

Peter Magaro has disposed of his Orpheum theatre in Carlisle, Pa., to Louis Silbert, of Harrisburg, Pa. The same manager, James Leone, will be in charge under the new owner.

Messrs. Green and Altman have reopened the Park theatre and the place has taken on the guise of a new theatre under their management. Many improvements have been made and new patrons have been secured through extensive advertising.

The Broadway theatre is now open and will show feature films as special attractions in addition to their vaudeville programs.

Exhibitors Box Office Reports

LAST MINUTE REPORTS

The Following Individual Reports Came in as Motion Picture News Was Going to Press

"The Cruise of the Make-Believe" (Lee-Paramount)—"A new Paramount star that registered fairly well for first picture."

"Bread" (MacLaren-Universal)—"It was well advertised and brought good patronage, money and satisfaction; the title put it over."

"Boston Blackie's Little Pal" (Lytell-Metro)—"Average picture to average business."

"The Vigilantes" (Bear State Film Co.)—"Starting second big week's showing."

"Riders of the Purple Sage" (Farnum-Fox)—"One of Farnum's best."

Editor's Note: The Box Office Report chart includes all pictures released since June 1 on which a sufficient number of exhibitor reports have been received to base a verdict. In the column "Average of Exhibitors' Reports" the term "Extra Big" indicates a picture which far surpassed expectation; "Big" means a picture doing better than the usual business for that day under average conditions; "Average" is the grading given the production on which business held up to normal; "Poor" indicates the picture falling below normal in box office and entertainment value.

The comments given are no indication of the number of reports received, as many exhibitors merely check off the grading without comment.

Motion Picture Theatres Up Against All Sorts of Difficulties in Advertising—"Drahma" The Whole Thing

BOSTON presents an unusual situation among the theatres of the country in connection with newspaper co-operation. In the first place there are remarkably few theatres and at the same time quite a number of newspapers there, and the situation is far from ideal. But at that the state of affairs is not far from that which exists in New York and in a large portion of the Chicago newspapers. It seems that as a general rule the biggest populations and thorough co-operation between newspapers and exhibitors do not go together.

Although the population of the city by the last census was 767,589, there are only twenty-eight motion picture theatres in Boston, and these are divided evenly between the downtown and the neighborhood theatres. This is partially explained by the fact that there are a number of combination houses and that several of the big vaudeville theatres feature motion pictures. It is also a frequent thing for big pictures to be presented for several weeks at a time at one of the legitimate houses. And in Boston, as in most other cities, the influences of combination theatre advertising on motion picture houses is not good.

Yet, from another point of view, the Boston theatres do stand out, for twenty out of the twenty-eight do advertise in one or more of the Boston papers every day in the week, and this is a percentage that we have failed to find in any other city. This is a striking situation when it is considered that there are really only three strictly first-run theatres downtown—the Park, the Modern and the Beacon. And, still further, the Modern and the Beacon run absolutely the same bills every week. Average seating capacities of the Boston houses range from 750 to 3,000, considerably larger than the theatres of most cities, and this ability to care for the crowds naturally permits the theatres to spend more for advertising than smaller houses with stronger competition could afford.

Now let's look at the newspapers. With their circulations, as given by the Lord and Thomas newspaper directory, they are:

American, afternoon daily (374,656).
Advertiser and American, Sunday only (315,878).
Globe, morning (270,151), and Sunday (309,672).
Herald, morning (130,234), and Sunday (124,460).
Post, morning (521,499), and Sunday (352,871).
Record, afternoon (49,487).
Transcript, afternoon (30,068).
Traveler, afternoon (122,588).

It should be added that the circulation figures of the Herald and the Traveler are not taken from the newspaper directory, as these papers were recently consolidated and in their statements gave the combined circulation of the morning and afternoon papers. The Advertiser is printed on Sunday only, having been purchased to obtain certain franchises for that day for the Hearst Boston paper, the American.

Now, judging from circulation figures, we can just about leave the Record and the Transcript out of the discussion, for the two other afternoon papers, the American and the Traveler, seem to cover the field, at least so far as figures go.

On the opposite page we have reproduced three pages from the Sunday American and Advertiser, which is probably the most liberal of the Sunday papers and which also represents the form of advertising that is generally followed by the Boston theatres.

The first thing that will be noted is that this paper, and all of the others, make the motion picture secondary to the legitimate and vaudeville theatres. This is what would be expected of Boston. There is a small layout on the attractions at some of the motion picture houses, but the theatre is fairly liberal with reading notices, and some of these stories are given separate headings.

It is unfortunate for the Boston theatres that the newspapers insist on jamming all of the advertising possible together and without any attempt to separate the photoplay matter from the other stage display. A glance at the two solid pages of advertising which we have reproduced shows how hard a task the exhibitor has to bring out his display when it is surrounded by a mass of other advertising. As a general rule we would term this mighty poor advertising, but still the difficulties of the situation have to be taken into consideration. Another thing that detracts is the fact that the Boston theatres have a habit of running double bills and therefore have a couple of features, and sometimes a third thing, to feature. Still further, the Sunday advertising is made more complex by the fact that the Sunday "concerts" have different bills and these must be represented in the display.

Park theatre is easily the best among the advertisers. It generally used 4½ inches double column, hand drawn, with different designs appearing in different papers. This is surrounded by a margin of white space to make it stand out the more and to give it all possible relief from the others that are jammed against it. The Modern and the Beacon also use hand drawn advertising, 3½ inches single column, advertising the same bills, but in different design.

Gordon's Olympia theatre is the one house whose advertising is represented in this paper that employs a cut, and the profile of Tom Mix is used in the display on "Mr. Logan, U. S. A.," occupying a space 4½ inches double and merely mentioning the fact that there is also vaudeville on the bill. The same is true of the Scollay Square. Bowdoin uses type in its display and occupies a single column space seven inches deep, while the Lancaster, Columbia and Fenway give their bills for the week, and the Globe uses two inches single. In its Saturday afternoon editions the American carries almost as much advertising as it does on Sunday and devotes a layout to the legitimate and the photoplays, with the latter occupying the secondary space.

The Sunday Globe carries about the same advertising as the American and Advertiser, and gives just about as unattractive a representation to the reading matter as could be imagined. Under a type heading there are short reading notices for each of the theatres and then a bunch of miscellaneous notes about stage productions. In the couple of columns printed on the page that we have reproduced we do not find a single reference to motion picture players or productions.

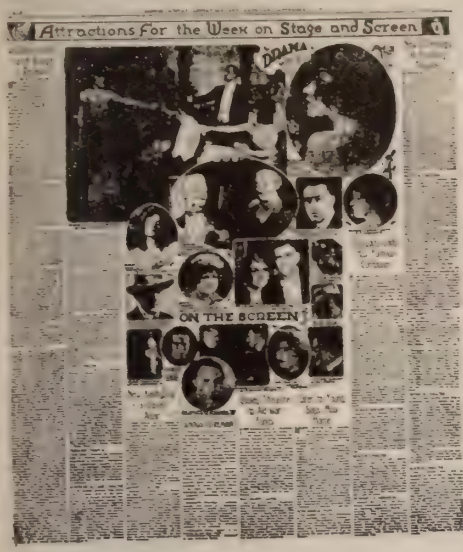
The Sunday Herald devotes two pages to the motion picture and the legitimate, again relegating the photoplay to the secondary position and according short reading notices.

In the issue of the Sunday Post before us the theatres are given even worse treatment, because the short reading notices are literally buried under a seven-column layout on the training of girl scouts.

We reproduce the page from the Saturday Transcript, which shows a couple of columns of advertising for the legitimate, motion picture and vaudeville theatres, together with excursions, etc.

The Traveler devotes a page to all of the amusements, with separate layouts for the motion picture and the legitimate.

In fairness to the American and Advertiser, it should be said that paper shows a willingness to print real news items furnished by the theatres on special occasions, and we have often seen things of interest besides the reading notices on the pages in which photoplay theatres are represented. The reading notices in this paper are also more attractively arranged than in any of the others.



But the main point is that the motion picture and real motion picture news is practically ignored, so far as the newspapers are concerned, and they seem to have placed every difficulty in the path of the theatre that wants to do effective advertising.

It would probably be out of place to tell the good city of Boston

Your Theatre and the Fourth Liberty Loan

By Harold B. Franklin

To every exhibitor proper cooperation with the Fourth Liberty Loan is going to be an important question. Mr. Franklin has done remarkable work in his partriotic cooperation at Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, and he is certainly in a position to suggest to others some plans for the campaign. The motion picture is now firmly coupled up with the task of Crushing the Hun and here is an opportunity to be of great service.

Patriotic stage setting at Shea's Hippodrome taken from the cover of the Literary Digest

ONE of the principal reasons why the motion picture industry has been placed on the essential list by the War Industries Board is because of the value of the theatre in spreading Government propaganda via the screen as well as its use by Four Minute Men and other speakers.

The truly patriotic manager will not stop at giving over his screen to the showing of all films aiding Uncle Sam to win the war. It is his duty to give his services at all times, because his job has been made possible by the Government's declaring the whole industry essential. The showing of patriotic productions and special films that aid in spreading the news of what the Government is doing and wants the people to do is not only valuable to the Government but pleasing to patrons.

Welcome "Minute Men"

Every manager should do all in his power to make the Four Minute Men welcome in his theatre. These are the men who are aiding Uncle Sam to tell those behind the lines what they must do in order that the boys overseas may "carry on." Their message cannot be delivered unless managers cooperate and make a place on the program for their talks. It is recognized that the motion picture theatre brings together folks of all classes; it is the rendezvous of the American family. It was with this in mind that local committees decided that the theatre showing motion pictures was the ideal spot for the dissemination by Four Minute Men of Government messages.

I have never been too busy to give aid to local campaigns and in recent Liberty Loan drives have pitched in and cooperated to the limit. During the last three campaigns I have had charge of the staging of the out-door features as well as the staging of special sets at Shea's Hippodrome, many of which have been pictured in the pages of Motion Picture News. In the coming drive, the committee has appointed me manager of the Features Bureau, a job involving much work, but which I feel is a duty at this time.

Chance in Stage Settings

Exhibitors who can and do produce stage settings should arrange to present scenes on the Liberty Loan during the time the campaign is on. Reproduction of Loan posters are often excellent for reproduction as stage settings as are the numerous cartoons in the big newspapers drawn for the loan by prominent artists. These settings not only thrill the audience but are of invaluable assistance to the campaign. In the last campaign the famous Howard Christy Chandler poster showing the figure of Democracy leading the Doughboys to victory was reproduced with gigantic figures against a blue sky at Shea's Hippodrome, and made more effective by the use of electrically operated bursting shells. This picture emphasized by patriotic music made a stirring scene. Immediately after unveiling this setting and at the close of the musical accompaniment a Four Minute Man spoke to the audience on the loan and as the audience was in the right mood, thousands of dollars worth of bonds were sold.

Every theatre can and should do its bit for the Government at these times. While some cannot reproduce elaborate stage settings, they can with little effort produce some novelty to bring the loan prominently before its audience. It is bound to meet with appreciation by the community and the effort on the public and Government officials should not be discounted. Efforts such as these prove to all the important place the theatre holds during these strenuous times, not only in furnishing clean entertainment but also to help the Government. Make your theatre part of the Government. Shoulder as much responsibility as you can. Uncle Sam needs every ounce of energy you can give to help maintain the cheer and morale of the nation. This can

From San Francisco to Waukesha

FROM San Francisco to Waukesha is not such a great jump, when both of the exhibitors who are speaking represent the very best in motion pictures.

Eugene H. Roth directs the destinies of the splendid California theatre, one of the handsomest in the country and one that is presenting photoplays in hundred per cent fashion.

Miss Flossie A. Jones is general manager of the Waukesha Ameusement Company which owns the three theatres in Waukesha, Wis. Her success has been notable, and you are all familiar with the way that she did it—by real intelligent work.

And the point that we want to make is this: Both are members of the Advisory Board and while we are still within speaking distance of our first anniversary we want you to read expressions from Mr. Roth and Miss Jones as to what they consider to be the worth of this work.

Mr. Roth writes:

"After twelve months of a splendid and consistent service that you have rendered to the thousands of exhibitors throughout the entire world, it gives me pleasure to extend my congratulations and say to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, 'well done.' It is hoped that you will continue exploiting that splendid branch of your worthy MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the Exhibitors' Service Bureau, because in so doing you are truly serving every proghessive exhibitor, as well as everyone affiliated in the moving picture industry.

"I do not think I am exaggerating when I say that the exhibitors have profited as the result of that service, with the result that the patrons have been better served, and the past year has been one of our greatest advancement.

"Another very commendable feature of your MOTION PICTURE NEWS is the publishing of the exhibitors' opinions of the various features, because this particular branch of your service should be of eminent value to every sincere producer to guide him in what the public really wants.

"The spirit of co-operation in every department of your magazine is truly worthy of the utmost praise, and without desiring to flatter, I wish to sincerely express my gratitude of appreciation, not alone for your efforts, but for the honor you have bestowed upon me as a representative of your Exhibitors' Service Bureau. Needless to add I shall be very happy to continue to co-operate along the progressive lines that you have now so well established."

"EACH week I find something to help me and something to spur me on and I cannot imagine how any one can be successful without the MOTION PICTURE NEWS," writes Miss Jones.

"I have applied four or five stunts of which I read in your pages to pictures that I have shown and on all of them I have done tremendous business and I feel that it was due to applying your suggestions in the proper places.

"I can hardly wait each week until I get my copy of the NEWS to see what is new and what I can apply in my own particular case, as it is almost impossible for me to be original each day in the week.

"A while ago, in a letter from a member of the Advisory Board. some one said that he wished that he could hear from any one who could exploit a different picture every day. I couldn't do it by relying strictly on myself, I'll admit, but by knowing how to apply other people's ideas I find it quite easy. So the next time you receive a letter like that, tell the writer to read his NEWS more thoroughly and he'll find a way out of his difficulties."

WE are mighty glad that Mr. Roth of San Francisco, and Miss Jones of Waukesha, and the many others that have written to us since our first anniversary, find this department so valuable.

But as proud as we are of these two expressions, we are not printing them merely as praise, but as encouragement to others to use this Bureau and to tell other exhibitors here what they themselves are doing so that their ideas can do universal service.

Today there are many of the leading exhibitors who are co-operating in letting the exhibiting world in general know what they are doing. And until one can occupy such a vantage point as we have it would be impossible to realize the good that these suggestions are doing.

From the reports that we get from the exhibitors themselves, from our correspondents and from the newspapers we find that ideas which have been worked successfully and which are recorded here are used in all parts of the country, in many instances just as they are employed in the first place and in other cases in modified form.

NATURALLY we have not recorded here that Mr. A and Mr. B and Mr. C used the idea that was originally employed by Mr. X in exploiting such and such a picture. Such records are unnecessary and would possibly serve as a reflection on the lack of originality of the copying exhibitor.

But it is NO REFLECTION and the man who sees a good idea used by some one else and adopts it deserves the fullest credit. The man who fails to adopt the good ideas of others shows that he is not only behind the times but that he is blind to his own interest. This Bureau is a forum for the best thought and the man who is not taking the fullest advantage of it is merely robbing himself.

Not so long ago we received a complaint from one exhibitor that another had copied his advertising. It had occurred several weeks after the idea had first been used and in a town far away. We promptly wrote the first man that instead of condemning the second man we admired his good sense. So long as he did not seek to take the credit for the idea of some one else, we believe that he did the exactly proper thing in adopting what he considered good, and we would have done the very same thing had we been the second exhibitor.

WE have a remarkable field here. The same picture that is being shown today at the Rialto in New York or the California in San Francisco will be shown next week or next month in the towns and villages. If the exhibitor there can get an idea out of what the biggest men in the business is doing, he is building up his own business and just as surely contributing to the success of the industry as the man with the original idea.

Let us have more and more exhibitors telling the showmen of the country what they are doing. Let's make this the gathering place of all the good ideas, fullest representation—

IDEAL SERVICE

A year ago they told us that what we are doing now could not be done. That part has been refuted. But let us, you exhibitors who know now that this department is being conducted solely in your behalf, see that ALL OF YOU are represented with your best thought.

Your Idea and Ours

DAYTON THEATRE, Dayton, O., a good advertiser from the start, is showing improvement with each effort. There is just one bad thing about this and that is the line: "The greatest silent drama the world has seen." Now we do not believe that the exhibitor is justified in making such a statement. He may be perfectly honest in his belief, but in the first place he is likely to find a lot of others diiffering with him, but the worst thing about it is the constant reiteration of such statements until the public shows distrust the moment the line is read. This line really weakens a splendid effort.

This is certainly a case where the cuts have been made to stand out and the figure of Theda Bara is so placed that no matter which way one turns the page the eyes look directly at you. It's an old trick, but always effective. The drawn-in atmosphere, even to the pyramids at the bottom, is excellent.

It's a wise manager that knows his own adjectives.

YES, we do believe in making the theatre the thing and as we have told you before we would never sacrifice the name of the theatre for trademarks or for anything else in advertising. But like other things this can be overdone, though we believe that this is the first time that we ever came on a case of overdoing the prominence of the theatre name. This is the display of the Luna-Lite theatre, Marion, Ind.

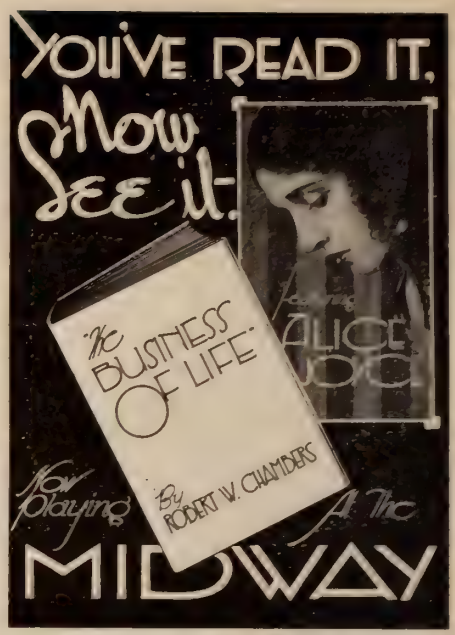
Now the theatre has used a couple of inches more than a half page for this display and nearly half of that is devoted to the design at the top and the name of the theatre. Unquestionably the drawing does bring out the idea of light, but it's a rather far call to think that it has any bearing on projection. The result has been that the space left for advertising each of the attractions is limited.

If we had been using that half page of space we would have made a smashing display on the Frank Keenan picture which was to be shown on Monday and Tuesday and then lesser spaces for the attractions for the remainder of the week, and we're pretty sure that we would have gotten more people to the theatre than this display which depended largely on the fancy drawing at the top. Incidentally, the cuts used in the Marion Chronicle print mighty badly—almost a blotch of black space. The paper can improve the appearance of both the advertising and the text matter to giving attention to this.



Some people seem to think that to get smoothness you have to make everything right oily.

THIS is an unusual and a good way of advertising the attraction for the evening of the same day in the afternoon paper and at the same time bringing out the attraction for the following day. Naturally, the form of advertising differs in afternoon and morning papers. In the case of the former the theatre must figure on covering the attraction for the day so that everyone reading the paper will know the bill, but at the same time to put the greater stress on the bill for the next day when you have a chance to get the public into your theatre early as well as late in the day.

E. L. Koppelberger, manager of the Majestic and La Crosse theatres, La Crosse, Wis., has adopted a very simple plan by simply laying one box effect over the other. It is not particularly attractive and the typing could be greatly improved, but the basic idea is worth while.

HERE is a good advertisement, if you follow it up with others giving selling arguments on the picture itself. It is the work of the Midway theatre, Montreal, and is thoroughly artistic. Certainly it is going to attract the attention of everyone who has read the story and it is also going to bring in the admirers of Miss Joyce.

People generally understand the character of Robert W. Chambers' writings and the appeal may be stronger in this case, but always in advertising a picture this way it is well to ask yourself: "How about the people who have not read the book?" It is an unfortunate fact that many mighty good novels have resulted in mighty sloppy motion pictures. It used to be the idea that the fact that the book had been successful would carry the picture to success, but that is fading. Now it doesn't go much further than to guarantee the story part of the production.

We repeat that this is mighty attractive, but we would much rather sell the subject matter of the picture. We believe there would be larger audiences.

If you worry about the other fellow you'll soon find that you've taken all the worries off his mind.

"FOR HUSBANDS ONLY" has been responsible for more good advertising than nearly any picture that has been released recently and one of the reasons for that has been the attractive advertising cut matter that has been supplied by Universal. This particular one, which is here used by the Kinema, Los Angeles, is so unusual that it is going to cause everyone to read the entire display. It is the same advertising that appeared in the Motion Picture News. "Don't forget to bring your wife" is a good line to use. It is just breezy enough and it takes away any impression that might develop in any mind that this is a "stag" picture.

This display again attracts attention by the way that the theatre has caught in the Paris Fourth of July pictures. The American flags are used in the form of curtains trailing down to the title of this picture which are in Stars and Stripes.

What Live Wires are Doing

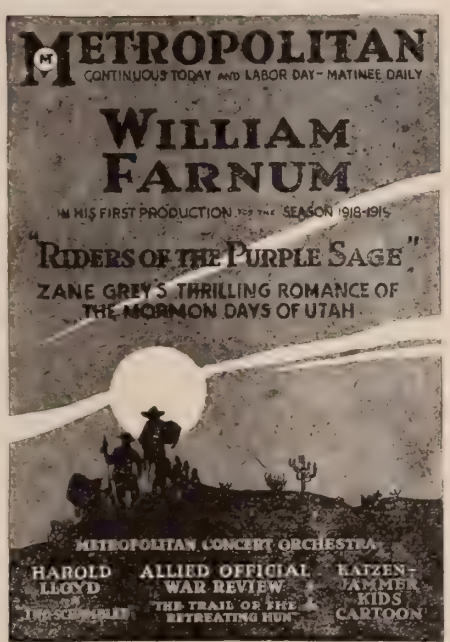
And a third thing. Though this display is fifteen inches across four columns note how little reading matter there is, how chatty and intimate the few sentences are, and how free from adjectives and exaggeration!

Progress gets up early in the morning to see how far it has gone.



WE are reproducing this not only because it is a good advertisement for a small city, but because it is an evidence of the proper sort of cooperation between a theatre and the newspaper—even if the newspaper is only a weekly, as is the Williston, N. D., Graphic, and the town has a census population of but 3,124. But here the advertising manager of the Graphic takes it upon himself to see that W. W. Boardman of the Lyric theatre gets the right sort of advertising.

This display, which occupies a space eleven inches deep across six columns, is well written and the manner in which it is set up immediately suggests to the reader that this is an unusual attraction. There is good salesmanship in the reading matter and the illustrations are well selected, but we would have played the U. S. Marines in larger type. There is a good local angle in the reference to the North Dakota boys who have already distinguished themselves in France.

Advertising and adversity may start the same, but their finals are a long way apart.

METROPOLITAN THEATRE, Cleveland, O., supplies a mighty good example of putting atmosphere into motion picture advertising through the use of art work. This display on William Farnum in "Riders of the Purple Sage" first gives an idea of the character of the production by the Ben Day background and then keeps the reading matter down to the minimum, with only the name of the star and that of the author, with the added advice of what the story is about.

It is a fine specimen of dignified advertising. When a production is put before the public in this way it is very apt to have a stronger appeal to the better class of patrons than if you undertook to tell the public what a wonderful attraction you were offering. The additional attractions are also properly played. The space is nine inches across three columns.

Take a few minutes off to consider the ought in autumn.

ARE you one of the exhibitors who figure that the youth of the country do not read the newspapers and that it is not any use to address advertising to them?

In the first place, in the case of newspapers which have good photoplay departments you will find that the children, boys and girls, do read this matter and that not only do they come to your theatres as the result, but that they influence their parents. The circulation manager of a newspaper in one of the larger cities told us that he devoted a considerable share of his attention to getting the young folk to reading the paper. "I am building for the future," he said. "Let me get a child to look for one particular feature in my paper for three months and I have made a subscriber for life." And then he declared that the photoplay department was one of the best features to accomplish this result.

There is another angle, also. When you address a display to the children, and you have a legitimate basis for this, you are going to attract the attention of every father and mother and get their interest, first on behalf of the children and then for themselves.

Star theatre, Portland, Ore., has a mighty good display here on "Boy Scouts to the Rescue." We are sure that it packed in all the kids and got a big share of the grown folk. Space used was 8½ inches, three columns.

Waiting for the other fellow to do it is like looking through the keyhole of a plate glass door.

UNIQUE and valuable co-operation of business houses is being secured all over the country in connection with the official Government war pictures. A number of these that have been accorded "Pershing's Crusaders" have been printed here, but probably the most original of all is that from Los Angeles. In advance of the showing of "America's Answer" at the Alhambra theatre the co-operation of the Southern California Telephone Company was obtained and with the September first statements to every subscriber went a reminder of this picture, with the appeal to attend based on the patriotic character of the production.

Seeing Rialto and Rivoli with Rothapfel

SUNDAY evening we sat at the Rivoli in the next seat to a high British army officer. On the other side of us, for most of the time, sat S. L. Rothapfel. They were, and are still, strangers, and the master of the Rialto and Rivoli will here learn some of the things that the British fighting man said to us. He was impressed with the orchestra and the many elements entering into the presentation. "It is another case of Americanism," he said to us. "There's nothing else in the world like this." He was surprised that the motion picture should be developed to such a degree. And he wanted to know all about who was responsible for it and how the music was made possible and how such an organization was kept together.

We did not admit to him that he was fortunate in being present at probably the most nearly ideal presentation that the Rivoli has known. In fact, were we to start out to arrange a perfect bill, out of all the pictures that we have seen, with the best of the musical numbers and the most artistic in settings, we do not see how we would have changed the current offering a whit. And so we are offering this bill to you this week as the supreme in what the motion picture theatre can do. And when you come to analyze this bill you will not find any of its elements so wonderfully "great," but what you will discover is a perfect blending of the best into a whole that fascinates with uniform heart interest.

This army officer, who had just come from the trenches of Europe, was impressed by the harmony that ran through the bill, and most of all he mentioned the music. But the harmony is there just as much as in the pictures, in the matter in which they are coupled together and in the settings that they are given. One leaves the Rivoli this week with a single impression, that the best in the world still exists. One might almost call the whole bill at the Rivoli a fantasy, for one seems to have been taken away from the rest of life and placed where the ideal exists. It is almost a dream, and certainly the manager that can take us away from the material world has accomplished a great deal. And we'll stake a lot on the statement that during the presentation of this bill there wasn't a person in the Rivoli Sunday that remembered it was cold and raining outside.

It is more than a mere visit to the land of make-believe; it is like being reborn in it and carrying away with us a great deal of the spirit in the storehouse of our supremely happy hours.

Hosmer's "Southern Rhapsody" is the overture, and this is played with the lights all gold. This selection number includes a series of the most popular melodies, including "My Old Kentucky Home," "Dixie," and finally "Old Folks at Home." Then comes "A Modern Mexican Hacienda," one of the Educational Films releases of "Mexico Today." The first and second "Carmen" suites are played and then we have "Spanish Characteristique" until the bull-fight, when "Toreador" march No. 5 is used, followed by "Los Bandarillos" until the trick of throwing the bulls by their tails, and then a galop is used to the finish.

YES, YOU CAN

You Can Make Your Theatre Stand for Something Definite

IT was cold. It was raining. And those that came to Rivoli had to walk, for all New York was rigidly observing the "No gasoline" rule.

Yet the crowds that came to the Rialto and Rivoli theatres on Sunday were well equal to the largest that we have seen since we began visiting the Rialto and since the Rivoli was built.

And lines nearly a block long stood in the rain waiting to buy tickets.

The answer was this: On this dreariest of days the people wanted real amusement and they knew that they would find the cheerful American sort of it at these theatres. It means that the people have come to know the quality of presentation at these two houses and because they know that in these war days they are going to get happy, punchy amusement.

You can make your house mean the same thing.

There is a unique effect with the first musical number, the orchestra first playing "Less Than the Dust," with the theatre lights all blue. Then the curtains part revealing an Oriental reclining on the floor smoking a cigarette. Through the round opening at the back is the blue sky and stars with two hanging red lights and incense burning at one side of the stage. Then Riccardo Benelli sings "Temple Bells," accompanied by the organ and the stringed instruments with the chime effect wonderfully reproduced.

Rivoli Animated is this week confined to the Official War Review, and certainly all records for enthusiasm go by the board with the stirring pictures and the wonderful musical setting that they are given. "The Great Drive" is the title of the issue, and it opens with bugle calls and pictures of the British going to the front with the refugees passing in the opposite direction. "La Forza del Destino" is used through the first part of this, which shows trainloads of shells going to the front, then scenes in the trenches, with a few flashes of the German dead there, and then streams of the German prisoners passing to the rear. With the title, "On They Go, Veterans of France," the "Marseillaise" is counterpointed on the trumpets and the enthusiasm is stirred still higher. There are pictures of a bombing plane brought down by the Americans and of a German tank taken by the French, and then the scenes turn to Italy and the music becomes "Sicilian Vespers." There are some shots of the preliminary bombardment and then a wonderful view of the charging men. But that grows even more when the title appearing telling us that this is Chateau Thierry, where the Americans proved the equal of any fighting men in the world. First we have some views of the hidden guns in their bombardment. These exploding shells form what are probably the greatest bombardment pictures that have ever been taken, and the rumble of the battle is reproduced with unusual realism by the orchestra effects. There is new applause as a sight of the town where the Marines won their glory is seen through the smoke of battle, and then as the men go forward the audiences literally become wild with enthusiasm and the orchestra crashes into "Yankee Doodle," which is played twice through until we get a view of General Haig and Mr. Balfour, but the records for stirring scenes anywhere is broken when we have a fine picture of General Pershing and General Foch together. These leaders talk for several minutes before the camera, and we have never witnessed a scene like that in the Rivoli, when people stood up and cheered themselves hoarse. It was the greatest demonstration of the moving power of the picture and music that has ever been recorded. "Rule Britannia" is played for the shot of General Haig and then "Battle Hymn of the Republic," with the chorus played in a very martial style to the finish.

Then the audience settles down and the rest of the program carries us far from the war. All of the lights become red with the exception of the side panels in green, and then the curtains part revealing Miss Gladys Rice seated on a bench, with red curtains forming a background behind her and a spot on her from the right of the stage. She rises as she begins to sing "Mavis." Immediately after the curtains fall the first of the two "features" of the bill is shown, an O. Henry-General Film two-reeler, "Transients in Arcady." It is a whimsical creation and altogether one of the most delightful pictures, regardless of length, that we have seen anywhere, and it has no small part to do with stamping the entire Rivoli presentation with the wonderful charm that it possesses.

It is the story of a girl clerk and a collector, both of whom register at the Hotel Astor under false colors to have the times of their lives. Each fools the other completely and the audience is kept mystified to the end, though humor is always the dominant element. "Just a Gem" is the opening number, and then we have the chorus of "By the Sea" and "Vanity," played without the introduction as the girl appears on the scene. When she drops her handkerchief it changes to the theme, "High Jinks." Herbert's "Canzonette" is played with the luncheon scene, and then follows the chorus of "Twilight Lane" played twice and then a repetition of the chorus of the theme. Then follows one of the Rothapfel numbered selections in tremulo and at the dinner sceen we have "Twilight Lane" played twice through, followed by the theme. With the dream of the man about the girl's castle in Russia we have "Glory of Russia." After he awakes, "Twilight Lane" is used twice, once with 'cello solo, and then "Fiebeleid," with one violin solo and another of the numbered selections, and finally the theme at the end, where we have the scenes at Coney Island. A remarkable burst of applause greets the end of the picture.

Now the lights of the theatre all become blue and the orchestra plays through "Smiles," and here there is a little trick put into showmanship, for as this is later revealed as the theme of the picture you can hear the people all over the house humming. It helps to keep the audience in a good humor and to make the comedy of the bill stand out all the more. The Douglas Fairbanks picture, "He Comes Up Smiling," is made unusually pleasing by the music, which we consider one of the most cleverly arranged scores that we have ever heard, though the music is all light and airy.

"Smiles" is carried into the picture, and this is followed by "Dance of the Sapling," as Fairbanks is shown taking the place of the bird in the cage, and then "Serenade" till the time he gives the bird its daily bath, and then "Causerie," followed by "Cossack Revel" during the energetic chase after the bird, which turns to "Traumerie" as the tramp philosopher asks him to remove his foot from the food. "Bed Time" is played once through as Jerry's valet gets busy, followed by "Happy-Go-Lucky" and then "Bee's Wedding," as Jerry is chased by the bees and "Sly Boots" as he goes to the auto. "Introduce Me" without the introduction is used as the General comes up. The theme "Smiles" is first introduced as the real "Bachelor" is seen as "September Morn," and then "Zoo Step" follows through with the theme repeated as Jerry throws the money to the tramp. During the dinner at Colverdale "Poppyland" is used, followed by the theme with Jerry and the girl and then "Star Gazer" as the unwelcome guest apears, and "You're in Love," followed by "Lily of the Valley." The organ takes up the music there up to the time that Jerry warns his tramp friend to be very quiet, when "Danse Fantastique" is used without the introduction, followed by "Avec Elan" as the two brokers are made prisoner, and "Fancy Free" as Jerry carries the food to the prisoners, and then comes "The Sweetest Girl," followed by the theme. With "Cousin Henry" in town comes "Come Across," and then "Club Galop," played twice, with "Chasse de Bion," followed through, and then the theme at the end.

And we'll estimate that nine-tenths of the people as they walked out of the theatre were humming or whistling "Smiles," or at least it was in their hearts.

"Solonelle," one of Tschaikowsky's masterpieces, is the overture at the Rialto, and it is one of the most magnificently rendered that we have ever heard at the Rothapfel houses—which means anywhere. This was written to celebrate the consecration of the cathedral in Moscow and commemorates the withdrawal of Napoleon from the Russian city. The lighting is blue, just a touch of it, and the first portion of the overture is played on the string instruments with a wonderful reproduction of organ music, though the theatre organ does not figure in this interpretation at all. Toward the end it becomes very martial, and almost at the end the curtains on the side panels part showing the burning Moscow at the right and at the left Napoleon retreating through the snows at the head of his men, abandoning the Russia that he set out to conquer.

Manager Jesse E. Jones, of the Jones Theatre, Canon City, Colo., reports that he is getting much benefit out of the cooperation of a local druggist in devoting part of his window display for photos bearing on attractions at the theatre. The druggist finds that this results in new attention being attracted to his window

"Punting with Sugar" is the Post-Pathe scenic. "Salut d'Amour" and Moskowsky's "Serenade" are each played once through, and then "Narcissus," until the workers are shown in the cane field, and then the tune becomes "Hello, Hawaii," and continues to the end.

Miss Annie Rosner supplies the first musical number, singing "Mine" before the Byzantine setting, with the side curtains in red and the main lights of the house in the same color except for the blue center of the dome.

Rialto Animated opens with Screen Telegram pictures of the G. A. R. veterans on parade, for which "Memories of War" is used. From the same source come pictures of the honor paid to "Buffalo Bill" at Camp Cody, for which "Stampede" is used. Screen Telegram also supplied pictures of the Navajo Indians making jewelry, with "Indian Allegro." Gaumont supplies pictures of sailors at San Pedro, Cal., being instructed in the use of the rifle, and "Pride of Columbia" accompanies them.

"If He Can Fight Like He Can Love" is played with Gaumont pictures of sailors at play. Gold dredges are pictured to the music of "Folly Dance," and then pictures of the Miss Detroit III winning the championship have "Autumn." These pictures are from Gaumont, as are the "With Our Boys in France" scenes that follow.

These first show the boys bathing and having their hair cut, unloading shells, General Pershing at headquarters, and finally the American commander going into the trenches in a "tin hat." "Good Luck to the U. S. A." is used through these. Hearst-Pathe gives us a flash of Captain Archie Roosevelt back home, and here the last eight bars of "When You Come Back" are used. There is a most unusual ending to the Animated with Hearst-Pathe pictures of seeing New York from the air. "Merry Wives of Windsor" is used for the opening scenes, and at the title, "How the planes appear to the city" we get "Sidewalks of New York."

Now don't think for a moment that the punch has been left out of this Animated by the ending. The opposite is accomplished, because the war is brought directly home to every one in the audience. It is a stimulating ending, one without any horror to it, but one that makes all remember that we are in this thing of Crushing the Hun until the job is well done.

Just before the feature, Desere La Salle sings the prologue from "I Pagliacci," and then comes Charles Ray in "The Law of the North," a picture that has considerable of the blood element in it for these strenuous times, although it held the attention throughout. A considerable portion of the score comes from the Rothapfel numbered selections. "Romance" is used with the introduction, "Yesterlove" as the girl comes up to Le Noir, and "My Best Girl" is played a couple of times with "Old Love Song" as the finale.

"Irish Tune from County Derby" and "Shepherd's Hey" is the double number then played by the orchestra with the lights all red, coming up to gold at the end.

We all go home laughing after the comedy, a Mack Sennett, "His Wife's Friend," which has some of the cleverest chase stuff

Rehearsal scene used at the Auditorium, Waukesha, Wis., with the presentation of "The Great Adventure"

Rehearsal of Musical Comedy Company Used to Give Atmosphere to Stage Picture

THERE are lots of theatres throughout the country that now and then play legitimate attractions—when they can get them—but which rely on the motion picture for their regular amusement supply. There are possible combinations that can be used and possibly as brilliant example of getting the most out of the opportunity is supplied by Miss Flossie A. Jones, who runs the Waukesha Amusement Company with its three theatres.

In the Colonial theatre legitimate attractions are shown from time to time and the city is picked out often for the opening of new plays, there generally being five or more companies to start the season here each year. This year it happened that a musical comedy company with some forty people was rehearsing at the Colonial at the very time that Miss Jones was about to present Bessie Love in "The Great Adventure" at the Auditorium.

Now this is a picture that tells of the life of a chorus girl behind the scenes and Miss Jones immediately grasped the big idea. Possibly some managers might guess that the thing she did was to use the chorus of the company in some sort of a prelude to the picture. But here was a chance to do something different and she took it. And by the plan that she followed she got the atmosphere of the picture and the actualities of the stage into the closest sympathy.

She simply showed a rehearsal of the musical comedy company after the picture had been run. She advertised "The Great Adventure" heavily and at the same time announced that after the picture had been shown the musical comedy company would give a full rehearsal on the stage. But to add to the interest of the rehearsal and to bring it close to the people she announced that any person in the audience would have the privilege of calling off any song "with a swing to it" and that the director of the company would whip the chorus into shape to dance to the tune of it.

Then came the impromptu announcement that a dance would be held on the stage of the theatre and that tickets would be sold, the money to go to the Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund. The stage was cleared and after tickets yielding $47 had been sold there was a wonderful response from the audience and scores of them danced for a couple of hours.

Probably most of the theatres cannot do the same thing. There are comparatively few of them who could secure the co-operation of a theatrical company, but the chief point in this recital is that it shows the great value of taking advantage of every opportunity that presents itself to the individual manager, and it also proves that in these days the novelty is most welcome to your patrons. People want to see things done "different," and they want the variety of getting away from the humdrum and the actualities of the present.

Everything that is published in these pages is not for the purpose of being copied in your theatre. The great thing that every manager, whether he runs the Rialto in New York or the Bijou Dream in Wetumpka, is to THINK. The reason that Miss Jones has made the wonderful success that she had scored in Waukesha is that she does think and it is mighty rarely that she lets a good bet get away from her.

Every day "We can't do it" is getting further away from us. We may know that this or that plan is not applicable to our theatre, but we begin to wonder what we can do with this or that picture. And when we begin to wonder the machinery of our brain begins to work—for it had had the LUBRICANT. That's why we print so many of the ideas of others here.

You can do a lot. And probably the things that you do do will urge others to accomplish things. That's the reason why we want to hear from you.

We know of one manager who used with success in one of the finest houses in the country an idea that originated in a 200-seat house in a mining camp.

Don't hesitate because you are "a little fellow."

Seeing the Rialto and Rivoli with Rothapfel and freak photography that has ever been put on the Screen. All popular music is used throughout, including, in order, "Oh, You Beautiful Doll," "Hello, I've Been Looking for You," "Girl o' Mine," "Who's Who," "This Is the Life," "Vampire Galop," "Who's Who," and "You're in Style."

Now, we saw the Rialto bill first and we thought it was a mighty good one and we had a lot to say about it. But right there we made a mistake, for we went to the Rivoli and we came away so full of the spirit of the presentation there that we had almost forgotten about the Rialto.

And there is just a point about the Rivoli bill that we wish we could make clear. It is the way that the spirit of the bills goes clear through you, becomes a part of you, and remains with you, that makes it so striking. There probably will be none who visit that theatre during the week who will forget either the pictures that they have seen or WHERE they have seen them. And certainly that is the greatest advertisement possible for a theatre.

Mr. Rothapfel admitted to us that he believed that this was about his best bill. And we agree with him.

How the marquis was used and display on sidewalk on "To Hell with the Kaiser" at the Schade Theatre, Sandusky, O.

Schade Again Proves Worth of Novel Methods in His Outside Exploitation

GEORGE J. SCHADE, proprietor of the Schade theatre, Sandusky, O., believes in using the front of his theatre for exploitation as all of you who have been following these pages know. His example of showmanship in a city of 20,000 is a lesson to every exhibitor of the nation in getting everything possible out of each picture

This particular piece of exploitation came with his run of "To Hell With the Kaiser." Some of the ideas had been used at other theatres, but Mr. Schade varied them just enough to make them novel and it has been rarely in the history of Sandusky that there has been as much talk about a production as greeted this one in advance of the opening.

Two weeks before the showing of the picture he had 10,000 streamers printed bearing the words "Members of To Hell With the Kaiser Club." Every auto windshield, every store window and in fact every stray box and barrel in the city was adorned with one of these. And not only did these posters attract attention, but there was so much demand for them at the box office that two additional lots had to be printed.

In addition to this, representatives of the theatre got busy on the streets and pinned a white badge bearing a red chief with the words, "Member of the To Hell With the Kaiser Club" on every one that came along. In addition to this Mr. Schade used five 24-sheet stands and posted a hundred one sheets while he distributed 5,000 heralds in the city. There was liberal newspaper advertising, space four columns by ten inches being employed for five days in advance of the production.

But it was in front of the theatre that the most unique of the exploitation was centered. This display was in advance of the engagement and was kept up during the run of the picture, the marquis being used to the best advantage. On either side of this were used cut outs of the theatres' design showing a cartooned image of the Hun ruler as a prisoner of two American soldiers. Standing out over the street were the figures of the kaiser with the Devil and a pitchfork prodding him off into space. Red incandescent lights were so placed as to provide the proper night effect.

Directly under the marquis and against the curbstone was the grave of the kaiser with a large shaft, there were small stones for "Hindenbug," "Ludenduck," "Von Turpentine" and the "Clown Prince." Instead of being green with sod, old tomato cans were used. "Don't use sod, Mr. Exhibitor," suggests Mr. Schade, "for the cans will attract the attention of everyone."

The picture ran for three days at the Schade and the proprietor reports: "We packed them day and night."

Incidentally during the run of the picture Mr. Schade has the chance to use some exploitation that he ignored. He received a letter from a pro-German crank threatening to kill him for running the picture, but instead of employing it the letter was turned over to the postal authorities.

Local News Weekly Scores Big Hit in Buffalo

Within the short time that he has been operating his Strand news weekly in connection with the Buffalo Evening News, Manager Earl L. Crab reports that it has brought him greatly increased business. Two weeks ago an article in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS told how Mr. Crab prepared his weekly.

Last week the number of local events that he pictured included the Labor Day parade, the annual clambake held by the Elks lodge, the Lafayette Day celebration, a War Savings stamp rally in Lafayette Square and views of a couple aquaplaning on the Niagara river.

Mr. Crab finds that when people see themselves in one of the scenes they send all the members of the family to see themselves appear as "screen stars" and the word of mouth advertising is of great volume. In addition the News gives first page co-operation.

WAR'S EFFECT

We Are Going to Try to Help You in Solving Some of the Problems

ONE of the most serious effects of the war will be on the labor situation, and in many communities this is going to be felt more and more.

With the second draft taking boys from eighteen and up, one of the principal concerns is to be with the ushers. Many theatres have come to find that ushers are an essential to the theatre, but they have not been ruled so as far as fighting is concerned.

This means that the exhibitors must find some one to take their places, and the natural thing will be to turn to the girls. They are now employed in a number of the finest houses in the country, but still there are managers who are opposed to their employment.

So in the next issue of the News there will appear an article by Harold B. Franklin, of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, that ought to prove of great value. Mr. Franklin uses young women in his theatre, and he will tell you of the success that he has had and the problems that he has solved.

Selling Three Pictures in Same City and at Same Time Teaches Valuable Lessons

THIS article might be called a study of the way to advertise three theatres in the same city and under the same management so as to get the most business for all three of the houses. But it embraces more than that, for here are some lessons in the proper sort of advertising that can be brought home to most exhibitors.

These are the displays of the Liberty, Coliseum and Strand theatres, Seattle, Wash., which are owned, together with the Mission by Jensen and Von Herberg. The advertising is the work of G. F. (Hundred Per Cent) Fullerton. A full page was used for "Les Miserables," four full columns for "The Great Love," and seventeen inches across four columns on "A Pair of Silk Stockings."

As we have pointed out to you on many occasions the tendency in most cities where there are several theatres under the same management is to group the advertising. This is not only bad from the fact that the public rather resents the syndicate idea being put at it, but because in this way the various attractions really don't get a fair chance to make their appeal. A third reason is that it generally results in decreased space and actually to arouse a feeling on the part of the newspaper that so much co-operation is not necessary.

It is needless to say that such principles are not followed by the Jensen and Von Herberg interests. Unless they were told, or gathered the impression from the similarity in the boldness of all the advertisings, no one would ever know that the theatres were under the same ownership. We say that because we want to call attention to the fact that though there are mighty few theatres using full page advertisements at any time, we would like to know how many managers would go to the full page on one attraction if they had other theatres in the same city in operation.

In illustration of this another city might be pointed out in which a syndicate owned all but one theatre. While this theatre was independent it did striking advertising and got big business, and this resulted in the theatres operated by the syndicate spending more money for newspaper space. But this house was finally acquired by the syndicate and advertising dropped to the minimum. Only the other day we were told by a man with no financial interests in photoplays that there had been a great drop of interest in that city as the result. While that may not be true, certainly the opposite policy does tend to increase the interest.

Of course we are always urging you to make your theatre the thing, but still it remains day after day that the thing you are having to merchandise each day is the picture. For that reason it is apparent that where there are three or four theatres under the same ownership there would not be the slightest sane argument why each picture should not be advertised to its full possibilities just as much as would be the case if the three or four theatres were bitter rivals. It simply bears out the proven fact that where theatres of a city as a whole have taken to good advertising all of the theatres that advertise have benefited.

And aside from that argument why should not the writer of advertising try to sell all three of the pictures to each patron? This is possible only where there are longer runs, for the day has passed when most people are willing to go to more than one show in the course of a day. But where the run is of sufficient length and where the advertising is properly written you can make the appeal sufficiently strong on each picture to create the desire to see all three. And when these advertisements appear in the Sunday issue it is not a case of advertising one picture against the other, but of putting forth a selling argument for each picture that actually sells each picture for some day during the week. This is just what Fullerton is doing.

To digress a moment: We are afraid that there are a lot of managers who would like to string these displays together and label them across the top "Three wonderful attractions" or something of that sort. That would, of course, weaken the selling argument for each production and deliberately invite the public to look for the weak spot in the chain. For our impression of this "Bargain bill" stuff and similar methods of exploitation is to invite the public to hunt for the "joker."

Now the thing that commends itself greatly about this advertising is the very lack of exaggeration. The William Farnum advertisement is based strictly on the wonderful heart interest of "Les Miserables," and in referring to the story he calls it "the epic of a soul transfigured and redeemed, purified by heroism and glorified through suffering; the tragedy and comedy of life at its darkest and its brightest, of humanity at its best and its worst." The huge illustration of Farnum and of the various characters completes the argument. In other words the appeal is put over

Annual Photoplay Section of Cleveland Paper Shows How Real Cooperation Pays

DOES it pay the newspaper to cooperate with the theatres?

If we hadn't already answered that question so many times we would cite the first annual of the photoplay supplement of the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Some weeks ago we considered the cooperation between the newspapers and the theatres in the Ohio city and told you that it ranked among the very best in the country. This is borne out fully by the twelve page section which the Plain Dealer has just issued.

It carries a little over sixty-five and a half columns of advertising, or more than eight solid pages. In this Paramount and Universal are represented with a page each, Goldwyn combines with the Standard theatre for the last page in colors, while Fox uses two-thirds of page, First National a half page and other productions smaller amounts. Loew's Stillman, and Mall and Alhambra are represented with a half page each, while Orpheum, Metropolitan, Knickerbocker, Strand and Duchess have quarter pages each. Fifty-four theatres are represented in the advertising.

From the front page, which includes a group of noted film stars, entirely through to the attractive Goldwyn-Standard theatre full page the issue of the Plain Dealer is a credit to the industry. It covers the news of the week at the local theatres, includes a mass of gossipy, interesting matter about the plays and the players, and then has two special articles. One of these is about Frank Powell, a Cleveland product, and the other tells about E. Mandlebaum, head of the First National Exhibitors Circuit of Ohio and one of the pioneers in pictures in Cleveland. In short, we believe that it is matter that will be read by everyone who has any interest in pictures.

Cover of Annual Photoplay Section of Cleveland Plain Dealer

We wish that every newspaper—and especially those who do not believe that a creditable motion picture section pays—could see this section. And the wish is equally strong that those exhibitors who do not see the reason for constant good advertising could also see this and that they could know the effect that this good advertising, coupled with the right sort of cooperation on the part of the newspapers, has had upon the prosperity of these Cleveland theatres.

Here is the word from the Plain Dealer itself, referring to this special section: "It proves that the exhibitors of any large city will back up a newspaper with advertising, provided the newspaper is willing to cooperate with the exhibitor."

And we believe that this is going to be the case everywhere just as soon as the two elements begin to see the light. Advertising is absolutely essential to the theatre. And it is equally true that the interest in motion pictures is so universal that the newspaper that ignores this fact is at the same time ignoring the interests of the readers and in that is failing to fill its moral obligation to the public.

Since the above was written and as this page was about to close we have also received copies of the "Motion Picture Guide," the annual photoplay section of the Cleveland News-Leader. This also contains twelve most creditable pages of live matter and though the columns of advertising is slightly less than the Plain-Dealer there are fifty-six local theatres represented.

"Reward" Bills Used by Theatre to Exploit "Honor System"

HERE is a very simple but extremely effective lobby display which was prepared by Manager E. O. Ellsworth of the Metropolitan theatre, Iowa Falls, Iowa, for the showing of the Fox production of "The Honor System."

This theatre plays both pictures and legitimate attractions and a portion of the house's stock scenery was used to form the front, with the prison effect. A couple of suits of convict clothes, ball and chain and handcuffs carried out the idea.

However, as effective as this was to get the eye, more comment was probably caused by the panel which is shown at the extreme left of the picture than anything else. Mr. Ellsworth put over a good idea here and one that will work in any community, the smaller the better. He went to the police chief and got a collection of latest handbills offering rewards for persons wanted in various sections of the country. These were all placed together in the glass enclosed frame. There was no sign and they were allowed to speak for themselves.

The result was a constant crowd in front of the theatre and hundreds of people who ordinarily wouldn't stop to read one of these handbills stayed there until they had digested the whole bunch of them and then went along to talk about the display to the friends they met. Every exhibitor, especially those in the smaller cities, knows how you can excite the public interest in this way. It is a well known fact among newspaper men that prominent escaped criminals are always "seen" in scores of different parts of the country at the same time. It appears to be a mania with some people to hunt for those resembling some particular wanted character.

The result in Iowa Falls was to cause the greatest interest in criminals that had ever been known there. It also caused new interest in the picture and brought in record crowds to see it during the run. It was simply a case of localizing the interest in convicts and did it a great deal better than a lot of lurid language would have done.

Boston Newspapers Make it Hard For Motion Picture Houses to Do the Best

and its newspapers what they should do in connection with motion pictures, for they so plainly demonstrate that they do not consider the photoplay in the same class as the "drahma" that they would resent such a hint from an "upstart" in the amusement business.

But it still remains a fact that the Boston newspapers could do a great deal to liven up their pages, and there is no one thing that would create wider interest than to give serious attention to photoplay news. All that they are doing now is to grant recognition niggardly, purely on a basis of advertising, and at the same time with a certain amount of ill-concealed contempt for photoplays in general.

It is a good thing for the nation as a whole that there are not many of these "biggest" cities. In the lesser ones the owners of the newspapers are getting closer and closer to the people and are showing more and more that they want to give the people what the people want.

A man who is familiar with Boston told us the other day that there is probably not a city in the country where there is a greater percentage of the people interested in motion pictures and where everything connected with them is devoured with greater avidity. But if that is true they do their devouring somewhere else outside of the Boston newspapers.

Now of late years Boston has not been the most stable city in the country, so far as newspaper investments were concerned. Some of the old fellows who used to be household words throughout New England have found it hard to hold up their heads, and some have gone to the wall. This has been because these papers held to the traditions of the past instead of being awake to the opportunities of the day.

One of the opportunities right now for every newspaper in the nation is to give the proper amount of attention to motion picture news. From the point of view of giving reading notices, the Boston papers may satisfy some of the Boston theatres, but we are very sure that they satisfy none of the motion picture-going public. There is nothing in the world in them to interest any fan and the theatres are actually handicapped in making the motion picture popular.

Boston newspapers not only show commercialism in their treatment of the motion picture, but they show line-drawing commercialism. They insist on leaving the impression that the photoplay is something of a much lower grade than the speaking stage. They deign to accept the advertising and then turn their backs on the advertiser.

Under the circumstances the exhibitor cannot be blamed very much for what he is not doing. The average Boston exhibitor is getting poor value out of his advertising, but it is not his fault.

If there should be a revolution in sentiment on the part of some one of the newspapers that would bring about the establishment of a real photoplay department, we haven't the slightest doubt that there would be greater use of newspaper space, better advertising and vastly more interest in the newspaper itself. But it is hard to bring about a revolution of any sort in a community where reliance is placed largely in past reputation, in the number of years of existence, in mere age—even if it is withered and shrinking.

There are two newspapers in Boston that show some desire to do things for the motion picture, but very evidently they are still dominated by the idea of the "drahma" superiority. But it is the very existence of that sentiment that gives the paper that wants to start an entertaining photoplay department the "chance of a lifetime."

And when the theatres there are able to get the newspapers to show this interest they are not going to have to put on double bills to get the public interested.

Selling 3 Pictures in One City at Once

strictly on what the picture is. You don't find grandiose statements about this being the greatest work of Farnum, though we believe it unquestionably is, or anything of that sort. "Les Miserables" is sold, and not a bunch of adjectives.

When we come to "The Great Love" we have the selling arguments of the thrill and the excitement, the battle scenes and the love story. And when we turn to "A Pair of Silk Stockings" there is a breezy little bunch of language which says:

"Ordinarily a few feet of silk stockings attracts a lot of attention, especially on Second avenue; so we announce, with a feeling of pardonable pride, the comedy feature, 'A Pair of Silk Stockings,' in five thousand feet—some feet—some stockings. Oh, Boy!"

Can you not see reasons why readers of these three displays would not want to see each of the pictures and cannot you see further how the selling point of each picture has been brought out and how the impression is left on the reader that here are three different pictures that he could see? But while that is also done, the appeal is also aimed at those who are not merely seeking a "picture show," but who have some sort of special craving to be satisfied. That is done with the realization that there are thousands who would want to see "Les Miserables" who do not attend the ordinary photoplay, that "The Great Love" would have its appeal to more thousands and that "A Pair of Silk Stockings" would bring in many who would prefer it to the William Farnum picture.

This is really salesmanship in pictures. Some managers, with only one theatre, do not appreciate the importance of bringing out salesmanship, or they cannot do it with but one theatre. Here is a case where it has been done with three.

And remember there are other large advertisers in Seattle and that they are also selling their pictures and using big space.

Exterior of the lobby display on "For Husbands Only" at the Broadway and view of half of the interior

Curiosity-Arousing Display Used on "For Husbands Only" at the Broadway

"FOR HUSBANDS ONLY" is responsible for one of the most unique lobby displays on record at the Broadway theatre this week. It is the work of M. Kashin, whose efforts have been so often recorded in these pages. New York crowds have begun to look for these unusual displays at the Broadway and crowds are constantly in front of the theatre to study them. They have been responsible for great increase in business at the theatre.

When he started out to prepare this display Mr. Kashin says that he recognized that there was a weakness in the title because it might have the effect of keeping women away from the theatre. So he started out to banish the idea that the picture was a "stag" affair and every line in the exploitation was prepared with the purpose of persuading female element that this was a production that they ought to see. Every time the title was used it was accompanied by one of the expressions, "Merely a title, not a restriction" and "Bring your wife."

"Home" was made the theme of the lobby display. The outside of the theatre represented the marble front of a Fifth avenue mansion. Three breaches were made in the walls and here were revealed three scenes from the photoplay. One showed the simple minded husband and another the bachelor millionaire who "played the game" and in the center the private theatre erected for a purpose. The detail of these various scenes was perfect. For instance, the millionaire held a real phone in his hand and the stage was the exact reproduction of a fully equipped one.

While reliance was made largely on this outside display to sell the picture, the interior of the lobby carried out the atmosphere. It was arranged on the order of a Louis XV. drawing room, with handsome walls and rich draperies. The fireplace, typifying domesticity, was featured. Starting in the middle of the ceiling velour draperies encased the entire lobby, the color scheme being deep blue, the only other color used being gold. A blue rug covered the floor of the lobby and antique ornaments were used.

In place of the mirror on the mantel there was a scene from the production and on the opposite side of the lobby was another framed picture with a second scene. Just above the entrance to the theatre hung a huge gold frame and in Old English type there was the following inscription: "Home Sweet Home—strange to say this home was sweet, even though it housed a simple husband, a spiteful wife and a clever heart-breaker."

Now here was a lobby display that really told little about the picture outside of the main selling argument brought out in this frame. It was typically a curiosity arousing display and everything that would tend to make the story too obvious was avoided, outside of the point that this was a picture for women as well as for men. But you know the old story about women and curiosity.

Cooperation with Marines Advertises Picture

Eugene Levy, managing director of the Orpheum theatre, Seattle, got a great deal of unique advertising for "To Hell With the Kaiser" by co-operating with the local campaign of the Marine Corps for recruits.

He donated all of the paper for a bill-posting campaign to the "Devil Dogs" and these appeared in all parts of the city. The marines themselves took charge of the posting and they were able to place them in scores of places where the ordinary theatrical advertisement would not be welcomed.

This paper bore just two sentences: "To Hell With the Kaiser" and "Join the Marines." They were used well in advance of the showing of the picture and greatly stimulated the interest in it.

Your Theatre and Fourth Liberty Loan be done by the showing of proper subjects on the screens of the country.

During the coming Fourth Liberty Loan campaign one of the big out-door features that will be erected under my direction will be a massive street car float, representing the sinking of the Lusitania. This float will be taken all over the city wherever there are street car tracks, carrying its message to thousands. At night the float will be strikingly illuminated. At Lafayette Square I have arranged to erect a special stage for a screen on which I have arranged to show not only the Liberty Loan pictures being made by the popular screen stars, but also other patriotic productions. This is a good way to hold crowds during speeches by loan workers and another way to prove to Uncle Sam the value of the screen.

At Shea's Hippodrome I intend to give our new big stage setting over entirely to Liberty Loan boosting. Special settings will be reproduced in each of the three spaces. Other Buffalo theatres are planning to do the same. In fact, every exhibitor in this city is already working on plans to aid the local committee in putting Buffalo's quota over the top.

To show appreciation of the placing of the motion picture on the essential list, every exhibitor should get behind the next Liberty Loan "with both feet" and push hard every minute the campaign is on. Prove to the Government that the decision in favor of the industry is right. Pershing's huskies are forcing back the Hun in France. The exhibitor can help force him back in this country. There is work now for everybody and the work for the exhibitor is to spread the "win the war" propaganda, cooperating with the Committee on Public Information, which has also recognized the value of the screen by establishing a Division of Films. Strike while the iron is hot. The campaign for the Fourth Liberty Loan is about to open. Take off your coat, jump in and help carry on to victory.

"Over the Top" Smashes Onward

Vitagraph Reports Empey Picture Winning New Triumphs—Musical Score Gets Favorable Comment from Exhibitors Throughout Country

"OVER THE TOP," Vitagraph's patriotic special with "Private" Arthur Guy Empey in the principal role, has entered upon a new series of triumphs, according to letters received at the Vitagraph offices last week, and in addition to establishing new records for attendance it has also set another record—in the musical branch of the business.

When "Over the Top" was first produced at the Lyric theatre one of the charming features of the premiere of this epic of "No Man's Land" was the musical score, and figures now available at the Vitagraph offices indicate that this score has attained wonderful popularity in conjunction with the triumphant sweep of the feature.

S. M. Berg, musical editor for Vitagraph, constructed the main theme of the "Over the Top" music and it is announced that musicians all over the country have adopted it as a composition admirably portraying and characterizing American grit and spirit. The band copies, Vitagraph's figures show, have now exceeded a thousand, so that virtually every military and naval band in the country, including the Great Lakes Naval Training band of Lieut. John Philip Sousa, is now using it as one of their patriotic concert and marching numbers.

"Over the Top Boys" the Empey theme in musical score, was published as a song by Belwin, Inc., and it has already exceeded ten thousand copies in piano solo sales, while the orchestrations, which have found great popularity not only in motion picture theatres running "Over the Top," but also in cabaret and dancing school orchestras, have passed the three thousand mark.

Other sections of the original "Over the Top" orchestrations are now being published as separate compositions, one of them the theme for von Emden, the German plotter, being published under the title of "The Crafty Spy." The battle music which is such a strong factor in the "Over the Top" scores is also out as a separate composition under the title of "Battle of Ypres." All of these have met with such favor that Belwin, Inc., with the permission of Vitagraph, is planning to publish practically the entire score in separate units and place them on sale at all music stores.

Charles Ray Denies that He Has Left Ince

THOMAS H. INCE, through the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, last Friday afternoon emphatically denied the report that his star, Charles Ray, had signed with another producer. Mr. Ince's statement is confirmed by the Paramount-Ince star himself in a wire to Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

The statement issued by Thomas H. Ince is as follows: "I wish to most emphatically deny the report which has appeared in various trade papers and which has gained considerable prominence in film circles, that my star, Charles Ray, has signed with another producer. There is absolutely no truth to this, in view both of my most pleasant relations with Mr. Ray ever since he has become affiliated with my organization and our present contract, which has two years more to run.

"In view of the fact that Mr. Ray has not even had any business negotiations with the producer involved, it would seem that either some one has made a mistake or that they were in need of publicity copy.

"Mr. Ray will continue to appear in Paramount pictures produced under my own supervision as in the past, and plans for the future point toward greater success for this talented young favorite than ever before."

In his wire to Mr. Zukor, Charles Ray said: "In reference to stories that I had signed with a certain producer, this is all news to me. I have had no business negotiations with him or any one else, by contract with Mr. Ince does not expire for two years, and my business associations with Mr. Ince and with you personally have been very pleasant, and I feel very well satisfied with the way in which Paramount has handled and distributed my productions."

Universal Contributes Film to Other Companies

Jack Cohn, in charge of Universal's Animated Weekly, has contributed in the last week a number of scenes from the Weekly program to other companies for use in forthcoming Liberty Loan pictures. The Famous Players-Lasky, Metro and Goldwyn companies, in particular, requested and obtained a supply of this material.

The scenes contributed were of late news events bearing on the war and national service. They depict large celebrations, crowds and parades, etc.

First National Announces New Release

The First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc., announces this week the release soon of a big production as a sequel to its widely shown surprise feature, "Tarzan of the Apes."

Its title, "The Romance of Tarzan," accurately describes the events of its swift moving and thrilling story, according to First National.

At the same time is made known to exhibitors the reason for the abrupt and unusual ending to its predecessor, "Tarzan of the Apes." Executives of the National Film Corporation, producers of both the original "Tarzan" picture and its sequel, realized, in the work of converting the book by Edgar Rice Burroughs into scenario form, that the action in the conclusion of the picture practically demanded a sequel to make a complete ending. The weird, fantistic experiences of Tarzan as the jungle man were so prolific in plot that it would have detracted materially from the novelty and unusualness of "Tarzan of the Apes" to attempt to combine in one production all of the elements of primitive and civilized life that the story offered. Consequently, it was decided to adhere strictly to the numerous jungle incidents of the plot as written originally by Mr. Burroughs in the production of "Tarzan of the Apes," and then await the results of its showing before determining to produce a sequel to it.

Binney Announces Plans for Star

Harold J. Binney, in an announcement this week concerning his star, Vangie Valentine, who is appearing in feature productions under Mr. Binney's personal direction, made known his plans. He said: "Some original writings will be used, in addition to popular successes of the stage and popular literature. George Edwards Hall, whose work has been much in evidence of late, has been engaged to adapt the stories to the screen. Prior to Herbert Brenon's departure for England, Mr. Hall had been connected with him in his production activities."

Goldwyn Builds Pullman Car

"A Perfect 36," Mabel Normand's newest Goldwyn picture, is under the direction of Charles Giblyn, and the scenes at present under way are in a Pullman car.

Hugo Ballin has erected a coach complete in every detail. The illusion is said to be perfect down to the small electric lights on either end of the berths.

Italian Officials Assist in Promoting Film

Anent "The Italian Battlefront" in Colorado, Wyoming and Utah, a very graceful act of co-operation by the Italian Consulate in Denver is reported by General Film Company.

The showing of this war feature has been facilitated by the issuance of an endorsement by G. Gentile, Royal Consul General of Italy, which expresses his pleasure at being able to say that the scenes in this thriller of the battle line are authentic.

This letter, given to G. W. Whitney, General Film Manager at Denver, is said to be much appreciated by exhibitors and public alike. Several leading exhibitors have framed a copy of Mr. Gentile's letter and are displaying it in the lobbies of their theatres.

Some Film Title Changes Made by Universal

The Universal has announced this week changes in the titles and release dates of several Bluebirds and Special Attractions. "The Society Sensation," formerly called "The Borrowed Duchess," will be released September 23d. "The Velvet Hand," formerly entitled "Vendetta's Daughter," will be released September 30th. "The Lure of Luxury" is the new title for the picture formerly called "The Bargain True." It will be released October 7th.

Emmy Wehlen Begins New Metro Film

Emmy Wehlen, the little Metro star, has returned from a brief vacation to begin work on her new feature photodrama, entitled "Sylvia On a Spree," from the pen of E. Forst, and being adapted for Miss Wehlen'suse by June Mathis.

Harry L. Franklin will direct the production, with the assistance of Fred Warren, and the camera work will be done by Arthur Martinelli.

Famous Players Announces Year of Comedy

FOR the first time since starting the issue of two-reel comedies, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation now announces that it will release one comedy a week for a full year. This is made possible through the fact that arrangements have been perfected for the production and distribution of exactly fifty-two two-reel comedies during the production year 1918-19, which began Sept. 1.

All these comedies will be released under the Paramount trademark, the list including twenty-six Paramount-Mack Sennett comedies, sixteen by James Montgomery Flagg and ten starring Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle. Accordingly, a complete schedule of releases has been made out for the year, a Sennett comedy being set for every other week, with the Flagg and Arbuckle products appearing on the alternate dates. The complete schedule follows:

Sept. 1, Flagg; 8, Sennett; 15, Arbuckle; 22, Sennett; 29, Flagg. Oct. 6, Sennett; 13, Flagg; 20, Sennett; 27, Arbuckle. Nov. 3, Sennett; 10, Flagg; 17, Sennett; 24, Flagg. Dec. 1, Sennett; 8, Arbuckle; 15, Sennett; 22, Flagg; 29, Sennett. Jan. 5, Flagg; 12, Sennett; 19, Arbuckle; 26, Sennett. Feb. 2, Flagg; 9, Sennett; 16, Arbuckle; 23, Sennett. Mar. 2, Flagg; 9, Sennett; 16, Flagg; 23, Sennett; 30, Arbuckle. April 6, Sennett; 13, Flagg; 20, Sennett; 27, Flagg. May 4, Sennett; 11, Arbuckle; 18, Sennett; 25, Flagg. June 1, Sennett; 8, Arbuckle; 15, Sennett; 22, Flagg; 29, Sennett. July 6, Arbuckle; 13, Sennett; 20, Flagg; 27, Sennett. Aug. 3, Flagg; 10, Sennett; 17, Arbuckle; 24, Sennett.

Affiliated Pictures Distributed by Mutual

A CONTRACT for shipping and physical service on pictures of the Affiliated Distributors Corporation through the exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation is announced by Henry A. Brink, president of the Affiliated, who closed the contract in Chicago.

The first picture to be thus handled by the Affiliated is "Lafayette, We Come!" (Pershing — '17), a story of love and war produced by Leonce Perret, featuring E. K. Lincoln and Dolores Cassinelli.

"We consider this picture an especially auspicious initial release for our project," observed Mr. Brink. "It combines a particular topical fitness for the motion picture market of today with its important values strictly as drama."

James M. Sheldon, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, discusses the move as one of special significance to the industry in this period of stress and conservation of dollars and man-power.

"This is, it appears to me, to be a most logical step for both sides of the deal," said Mr. Sheldon. "It has largely been the practice heretofore for each new venture in films to add its own physical system of branches with expensive equipment to the already over-supplied machinery of film distribution. Affiliated has saved itself and the motion picture industry the cost of a new system of exchanges, and it has availed itself of the physical services of a concern which has most thoroughly established itself with a high standard of physical service to the motion picture exhibitor."

The officers of the Affiliated include Henry A. Brink, president; H. C. Cornelius, vice-president; William J. Clark, secretary-treasurer and general manager, all of Grand Rapids, Mich., where the home office is located, and C. C. Pettijohn, general counsel, with offices in New York.

Fred Stone's First Film Appears Next Week

Fred Stone, the comedian of musical comedy, famous as the scarecrow of "The Wizard of Oz," in which he starred with the late Dave Montgomery for several years with brilliant success, will make his first public appearance in motion pictures in the Artcraft production, "The Goat."

Big Exploitation Benefits All

Exhibitors Save $200,000 a Year in Advertising Expenses When Playing Special Attractions Properly Exploited

AN expert on such subjects in the Universal estimated the other day that the advertising service provided by that company for its special attractions amounts to an annual saving of about $200,000 a year for the exhibitors.

He based his calculations on the fact that every exhibitor using special attractions, who intended to advertise the pictures adequately in the local newspapers, would have to hire special talent to make the drawings and lay out the copy, etc., if the Universal did not do this for him.

Universal sends out complete matrices of scientifically prepared advertising and elaborate press sheets for every special attraction. As an example, an average of three high class advertisements is provided for each Universal special attraction.

Preparing the press sheets for these subjects keeps a formidable staff busy all the time. But this staff would be a corporal's guard compared to the number of persons employed on the campaign if each exhibitor had to use his own resources.

The expert figured that more than 200 writers would be required to make the chief exhibitors their own advertisers. Each writer would have to study the pictures for his ideas, and each would get different ideas. Then there would be a vast outlay for material. Drawings and plates costing thousands of dollars would have to be produced, only to be scrapped when the pictures finished their run in each town.

Thirteen special attractions will have been released by December 30th since July 1st.

The expert estimated that brain energy equal to the killowat power of New York's subway electric plant running at top speed for two weeks would be consumed if each exhibitor had to prepare the advertising for the specials. The films represent dramatic stories of strong values. An exhibitor without special training would have a tremendous task in studying the stories and getting the vital advertising thoughts out of each.

Following is the list of current and pending releases of special attractions and the stars who are featured in them: "Hell Bent," Harry Carey; "Her Body in Bond," Mae Murray; "The Mortgaged Wife," Dorothy Phillips; "A Woman's Fool," Harry Carey; "Bread," Mary MacLaren; "Modern Love," Mae Murray; "Talk of the Town," Dorothy Phillips; "Vanity Pool," Mary MacLaren; "Three Mounted Men," Harry Carey; "Danger—Go Slow," Mae Murray; "Kiss or Kill," Herbert Rawlinson; "Till We Meet Agan," Dorothy Phillips; "The Big Little Person," Mae Murray, and "Boiling Over," Harry Carey.

Alice Brady Doubles in "The Better Half"

Alice Brady's forthcoming Select Picture, "The Better Half," will be released during the current month. This is a story of twin sisters, Trixie and Louise.

Miss Brady refused to allow a "double" to appear for her when it was possible for her to double herself. In hundreds of instances throughout the picture Trixie and Louise are actually Miss Brady. There is said to be scene after scene of startling revelations. In "The Better Half" Miss Brady smiles at herself—in one scene she shakes hands with herself.

Select officials declare that "The Better Half" is the crowning achievement of Miss Brady's many triumphs on the screen. J. S. Robertson is the director.

Allison Company Goes to Pine Crest

After a week spent on location in the wooded country of Topango Canyon, near Santa Monica, May Allison, Metro star, and her supporting company have gone to Pine Crest, near little Bear Lake, California, to "shoot" more exterior scenes in Miss Allison's forthcoming Metro picture, "Kate of Kentucky."

Pine Crest extends along the peaks of the San Bernardino mountain range. It is one of the most wonderful natural settings that California affords. The Allison company will be there several days. The trip involved a journey of 100 miles from Metro's west coast studios in Hollywood. It was made by the star, her director, Robert Thornby, and more than a score of players, together with Webster Cullison, assistant director; William E. Fildew, camera man, and his assistant and several members of the studio's mechanical force.

"Kate of Kentucky," a comedy romance of the Blue Grass, with its feuds and moonshiners, was written and adapted by George D. Baker, Metro's Western manager of production, and Tom J. Geraghty of the scenario staff. The scenes are mostly exteriors, with nature furnishing the settings.

Triangle Releases "The Grey Parasol"

Wellington Cross, known as a vaudeville headliner, will make his initial appearance in the silent drama under the Triangle trade-mark in "The Grey Parasol," in which he is jointly featured with Claire Anderson. This production is offered as a Triangle release for the week of September 22.

"The Grey Parasol," which was directed by Lawrence Windom and photographed by S. S. Norton, tells of the adventures of a wealthy young chap. Two men, agents of the great American trusts, seek a mysterious formula, "Coalex," a substitute for coal, known to be in the possession of Estelle Redding (Claire Anderson). Wellington Cross is Hamilton Hill.

The War Didn't Cost Mabel Normand Her Dressing Room. This Is Just the Way the Goldwyn Star "Makes Up" on Location

Farrar's First Goldwyn Receives Praise

"The Turn of the Wheel" opened the fall season in the big Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, to waiting box-office lines a block long, according to report. The New York Strand played it a solid week and it is declared that this augurs well for the remaining five of Geraldine Farrar's Star Series productions for Goldwyn this year.

"After opening with 'The Turn of the Wheel' I doubled its playing time at the Orpheum," wired the Jones, Linick & Schaefer organization of Chicago.

Nathan Ascher, head of the Ascher Bros. enterprises, Chicago, wired: "Geraldine Farrar has gone over big. She has an individual and distinctive following of hundreds of thousands in addition to the regular patrons of the cinema."

Jacob Lourie, the Boston theatre owner, reports tremendously satisfying business at his Modern and Beacon theatres, Boston, for the week of the Farrar engagement.

Elton Joins Universal's Current Events Staff

Leslie Elton, the well known cartoonist, who has been making cartoons for moving pictures for quite some time, is now drawing for the Universal Current Events. His cartoons feature the war.

Some of his latest ones are: "Hoch der Kaiser," "Liberty on Guard," "Doing Their Bit."

"A Japanese Nightingale," Pathe Offering

"A Japanese Nightingale" is the first of Pathe's Extra Selected Star Photoplays, featuring Fannie Ward, and will be released Sept. 22.

It is written by William Young, from the novel of Onoto Wotana and is picturized by Ouida Bergere and Julius D. Furthman and directed by George Fitzmaurice.

Keeney Plant Prepares for Work

Art Director Unander Builds Sets for First Production—Sidney Olcott to Direct — Lights Being Installed

LIVELY hustling is being done at the new Keeney Studios, 308-12 East Forty-eighth street, so as to get production under way as soon as possible. It has taken longer than it was expected to install the new equipment, inasmuch as Mr. Keeney has directed that every feature of it must be thoroughly up-to-date and adequate for all requirements. Had it been decided to make only such provision as might be necessary for the first picture, the work undoubtedly would have been completed by the present time.

While the installation of the lighting system and the fitting up of dressing rooms, property rooms and manager's offices, etc., are going on as rapidly as possible, Mr. Keeney's art director, S. M. Unander, is constructing sets for the first picture, which is to be even better than any Mr. Keeney has yet produced, if hard work, a superior cast, and pains and skill in directing can accomplish it. The new Keeney director, Sidney Olcott, has had very wide experience, having handled many of the leading stars of the screen in some of their most notable successes, and much is expected of his initial production.

The studio at the start will be arranged for the operation of two companies. Later, by putting in a second floor in the lofty building and by making other alterations, at least two more companies can be accommodated. The interior construction is such that the entire studio floor, 50x100 feet in dimensions, will be in the clear, thus facilitating operations of every character.

According to present plans, the first picture will star Catherine Calvert, who has been enjoying a vacation in the mountains since completing her last picture with Mr. Keeney, "The Uphill Path." Miss Calvert has appeared before the public thus far in two Keeney productions, "A Romance of the Underworld" and "Out of the Night." Both of these have been very successful. They have been generally acclaimed as exceptionally high class productions, with a distinctly human interest quality. The release date of the third of the Keeney productions, "Marriage," is to be announced in the very near future.

With his increased facilities for production, Mr. Keeney intends to put out a larger number of pictures and to add new stars to his list from time to time. He expects to be able shortly to announce important new plans.

Meanwhile, he is proceeding as rapidly as possible with the erection of his new, big and costly motion picture houses in Kingston, N. Y., and Williamsport, Pa., in which he will show his own pictures and pictures by other high class producers.

Vitagraph Releases "Misfits and Matrimony"

"BIG V SPECIAL COMEDIES," two-reel feature humor subjects, are now a permanent part of the Vitagraph service, the first release being "Misfits and Matrimony," put forth on September 16. Hereafter they will be released weekly.

Vitagraph has reported success with its single reel Big V comedies and, according to a statement from the company, the change to a two-reel length was dictated by demands of exhibitors who desire to make comedy more important in their programs. This demand became so insistent about two months ago that the company decided to double the length of its laughmakers and the production of them on a feature basis was begun at once. Two companies are engaged in making these subjects, one headed by Lawrence Semon, the other by Earle Montgomery and Joe Rock, and plans are now being made to introduce another comedy company headed by one of the most famous comedians in the country.

For the present the Semon and Montgomery Rock companies will alternate on the Big V Special program, the latter team being the stars of "Misfits and Matrimony," the inaugural release under the new order of things. "Huns and Hyphens," to be released September 23, will be Lawrence Semon's first two-reel feature comedy.

When Vitagraph announced that it would make its comedies real features it apparently knew whereof it spoke, for in this first comedy the settings and story are of real feature merit, with the company numbering more than fifty persons. These include more than a score of pretty girls garbed as Red Cross nurses, a riot squad made up of daring acrobats, and a number of comedians who are led by the stars of the company through a series of rapid adventures.

Ince Stars Finish Loan Films

Charles Ray, Dorothy Dalton and Enid Bennett Complete Their Fourth Liberty Loan Propaganda Pictures Simultaneously

LAST week was given over practically in its entirety to the Government by Thomas H. Ince, at his studios. It so happened that all three of his Paramount stars, Charles Ray, Dorothy Dalton and Enid Bennett, had finished productions simultaneously.

Dorothy Dalton begins work very shortly on a new picture by John Lynch, as yet lacking a title, but which presents the young star as a wife who "babies" her husband and finally saves him from a threatened imprisonment for a crime he didn't commit. It will be directed by Victor L. Schertzinger, while Edward Coxon is the leading man in the picture, and R. Cecil Smith did the continuity.

Enid Bennett's next picture, following "When Do We Eat?" is by Julien Josephson and will be directed by Fred Niblo. It has its genesis in a western mining camp and then leaps to the metropolis.

Charles Ray will do a story for Paramount following his Western picture, as yet unnamed, written by J. G. Hawks and with Doris Lee as leading woman. Jerome Storm will direct it.

Henry B. Walthall is getting on with "False Faces." Mary Anderson, who recently did a picture with Fred Stone, for Artcraft, will be leading woman. Irvin V. Willat is directing.

G. Harold Percival, art director for Thomas H. Ince, is the man who was chosen in a competitive contest to decorate the Shrine Auditorium for the big masked ball of the Motion Picture War Service Association, recently held in Los Angeles.

Lila Lee, Presented As a Star in Paramount Pictures

C. C. Faw, cashier for Thomas H. Ince, since the old Inceville days, died suddenly last week after an intermittent illness of a year or more. It was from Mr. Faw that William S. Hart received his first check as a film actor.

Irvin J. Martin, head of the Ince art department, has been given the task of getting out a series of art titles for "Vive La France," Dorothy Dalton's new Paramount picture.

Tom Walsh, casting director for the Ince studios, has gone to Australia to settle up his fathers' estate. The latter passed away recently.

Exhibitor Pronounces Jury Scenes Flawless

AN unusual testimonial to the fidelity to detail in the William Fox production of "Woman and the Law" is given in a letter to Lester Sturm, Fox branch manager at Cincinnati, from Thomas M. Thatcher, manager of the Gem theatre, Somerset, Ky.

After declaring that "Woman and the Law" had played to capacity houses against the rival attraction of a country fair, Mr. Thatcher, who has just completed service as foreman of a jury in Somerset, said:

"In my twelve years of service as an exhibitor I have run scores and scores of pictures portraying jury trials, and "Woman and the Law" is actually the first picture I have ever seen where the jurors knew how to conduct themselves.

"As a usual thing the director instructs the actors in the jury to register amazement when an important or startling piece of evidence is adduced. The actor-jurors usually turn to one another with gestures and grimaces in order to let the audience know they are dumbfounded. Anybody at all conversant with court procedure knows that the judge always instructs the jury to abstain from any act or expression that would tend to show their feelings or leanings, or to converse with one another about the case until final retirement to the jury room for a verdict.

"In this case the jurors sat with stern faces like statues, just as they should, and it certainly was a relief to witness a trial scene so perfectly portrayed."

"The Law That Divides," Clifford-Plaza

The injustice to children when parents follow their own selfish desires in seeking a divorce is the subject of "The Law That Divides," a Plaza picture starring Kathleen Clifford and distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Prominent in the supporting cast are Kenneth Harlan, Stanley Pembroke, Patrick Calhoun, Gordon Sackville, Ruth Lackaye, Corenne Grant and Mabel Hyde. Howard M. Mitchell directed.

"Treat 'Em Rough" Is Title of New Mix Play

The motto of the United States Tank Corps, "Treat 'Em Rough," has been chosen as the title of the new Tom Mix picture, it is stated by the Fox Film Corporation.

The picture, which is an adaptation of a novel by Charles Alden Seltzer, "The Two-Gun Man," was completed last week at Prescott, Ariz., where Mix and his company spent four weeks on a ranch.

Vitagraph Announces First Comedy Special

Sept. 16 will see the inauguration of Vitagraph's new two-reel feature comedy service. "Misfits and Matrimony," featuring Earle Montgomery and Joe Rock will be the first "Big V Special Comedy" offered to exhibitors and it will be followed on Sept. 23 by "Hns and Hyphens," featuring Lawrence Semon. Thereafter one "Big V Special Comedy," two reels in length, will be released weekly by Vitagraph.

For the remainder of September the company will continue to issue one-reel Big V subjects, there having been three already near completion when the decision to produce the "Big V Specials" was reached.

"Smiling Bill" Parsons Completes Two More

Since his return to his studios in Hollywood from an eastern trip that included personal appearances in theatres in many of the larger cities, "Smiling Bill" Parsons, star of Capitol Comedies, has lost no time in catching up with his schedule of two-reel comedy releases for Goldwyn. Two new ones are completed and the millionaire star is at work on a third.

"A Pair of Pink Pajamas," the first of the new group, will follow "Camping Out," released October 7. Mary McIvor is leading woman in "A Pair of Pink Pajamas," co-directed by Wilfred Lucas and Bess Meredyth.

British Producer Wants News Regularly

After writing the Motion Picture News that he had acquired the Clarendon Producing Company of England in its entirety, Harry Maze Jenks (Harma & Co.) admonished the News not to forget and inform him when his subscription expired so that he could immediately renew it.

Mr. Jenks maintains offices in London, Birmingham and Manchester.

Elsie Ferguson, Who Has Again Scored on the Screen in "Hearts of the Wilds." Artcraft Production

Fairbanks to Picturize the Play "Arizona"

What they consider the most important announcement of months from the Douglas Fairbanks studio is their statement that arrangements have been completed with Augustus Thomas to picturize his stage success, "Arizona" for Artcraft release.

A letter of suggestion from the author prompted Fairbanks to seriously consider filming "Arizona," the play that has lived for years, renewed annually by stock companies throughout the country, with the success that it originally enjoyed during its many engagements in New York.

Augustus Thomas personally filmed this same play four years ago, but realizing the remarkable technical and photographic advancement during that time selected Fairbanks to produce a new screen version of "Arizona."

Immediately after Douglas completes "Fire the Kaiser" his contribution to the Fourth Liberty Loan, and the propaganda film for the Canadian fifth Victory Loan, he will start the filming of "Arizona."

Next Dorothy Dalton Is "Vive la France"

Dorothy Dalton's forthcoming Paramount picture is "Vive la France!" released September 15th, will be one of the most thrilling war films of the day is the expressed belief of the producer, Thomas H. Ince, who has supervised personally every foot of the film.

The story of "Vive la France!" was written by H. H. Van Loan and C. Gardner Sullivan did the scenario. R. William Neill directed with the assistance of Bert Seivel, while John Stumar, assisted by George Barnes, is responsible for the camera work. Supporting Miss Dalton as leading man is Edmund Lowe. Frederick Starr, Bert Woodruff are also in the cast which apparently is of uniform excellence.

Caruso's Leading Woman Is Ormi Hawley

When Enrico Caruso appears in his second Artcraft picture, "Prince Cosimo," which is now in course of production at the Fifty-sixth Street studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, he will have as his leading woman Ormi Hawley.

Caruso is said to be making good progress in the new production under the direction of Edward Jose. The scenes laid in Italy have been completed and the company is now working in sets representing interiors in the Bohemian district of New York.

World Adds to Advertising Department

Miss M. L. Ogden, who has had a wide experience in commercial advertising work, having been with the National Cloak and Suit Company, and with the J. Walter Thompson Advertising Agency, has accepted a position in the advertising department of the World Film Corporation. Miss Ogden has charge of ad layouts and other commercial art work for the World.

"Fame and Fortune" Sounds Like a Good One in Which to Give Tom Mix Full Sway, and William Fox Is Doing Just That. The Story is by Charles Alden Seltzer

Dorothy Gish Starts on Second Paramount

WORK on the second of Dorothy Gish's series of Paramount pictures began this week at the Famous Players-Lasky studio on Sunset Boulevard, with another cast in which youth is by far in the majority.

The new picture will be "The Hope Chest," by Mark Lee Luther, giving Miss Gish the part of Sheila. The book will not be used as it appeared in print, but the general theme of the story will be carried in the picture.

Elmer Clifton, who directed "Battling Jane," the first of Miss Gish's series for Paramount, will direct the coming picture. He will be assisted by Leigh R. Smith. John Leezur will turn the crank for the company.

Richard Barthelmess, who worked opposite Marguerite Clark in a number of productions, arrived from New York early in the week to take the juvenile lead in the picture. Bertram Grassby, who played the heavy in Miss Gish's first picture of the series, has a similar part in this one. George Fawcett, the veteran character actor of the stage, and now becoming very well known on the screen, will take the part of Lew Pam, father of Sheila.

Sam DeGrasse will be seen as the father of the boy, a character part that has a number of good opportunities. Kate V. Toncray, who has been identified with so many D. W. Griffith productions, will have the part of the girl's mother. Carol Dempster, a new face to the screen, will be given a part in which she has excellent opportunities to make a histrionic reputation for herself. Others in the cast are Raymond Cannon and Frances Parks.

Universal Filling Up Gaps Caused by Draft

UNIVERSAL, under the impetus of special orders from its president, Carl Laemmle, has undertaken a swift campaign to fill up the gaps made throughout the organization by the recent draft. The plans contemplate the engaging of workers in all branches not only to fill the present depletion but to anticipate the inroads likely to be made by the new draft of men between the ages of eighteen and forty-five.

As part of the undertaking, Joe Brandt, assistant treasurer, leaves this week for an extended tour around the country, visiting all the exchanges. He will also work on Mr. Laemmle's latest campaign to help the Government by raising funds for Smileage books for men in the service.

Under the latter plan the exhibitors are invited to donate aproximately ten per cent. of one night's receipts once a month to the Commisson on Training Camp Activities of the War Department. Mr. Laemmle is sending out pledge blanks to the exhibitors through the exchanges. The exhibitors desiring to help will sign and return the pledges to their local exchanges, and later will transmit their donations directly to the Commission.

The latter will record each donation to the credit of the sender, and will send out the equivalent in smileage books to men in the service, addressing the books as nearly as possible to men from the particular towns or districts from which the donations that paid for their books came from.

U. S. Senate Filmed in New Select Picture

WHAT is declared to be the first time in the history of the United States that the Senate in action serves as a prominent detail for a photographic drama occurs in Marion Davies' forthcoming Select Picture, "The Burden of Proof," which has just been released.

This scene was made during a session of the Senate when an important piece of legislation was being voted upon. It was obtained through the effort and influence of Julius Steger, Miss Davies' director, and is only one of the many scenes of official Washington that appear in this picture.

Although there have been shown at various times in news reels and other special features scenes of official Washington at work, including a picture of the President reading his war message to Congress, this is the first time in the history of the country that the members of the Senate have allowed themselves to be photographed in action to provide "copy" for a photoplay.

The day for which Mr. Steger had obtained permission to shoot the Senate in action was said to be one on which a very important matter was decided, with the galleries crowded with spectators and every chair in the great hall taken. Mr. Steger and all of the Select officials are very enthusiastic over the photographic details of the picture.

Blue Ribbon Claims Patriotic Appeal

"The Girl of Today," the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature scheduled for release the week of September 23 is described as a picture of intense patriotic appeal in which the outstanding figure is not the youth in khaki who goes "over there," but the girl who does her bit right here at home. From the pen of Robert W. Chambers, it is an exposition of what any self-sacrificing American girl can do right in her home town or city to help crush German propaganda and make easier and swifter the ending of the war. It is the story of an everyday girl who hates a slacker and who cheerfully forgets there is any such thing as society, who is just as happy in last year's gowns and hats, so long as her thrift stamps and Liberty Bonds multiply, and who eventually does the work of real soldiers, in fact leads them, in the saving of a great State from German plotters.

Withal it is a romance, as might be expected of Mr. Chambers, and presents Corinne Griffith in what may be called one of the most forceful and appealing roles in her screen career.

Brunet Appoints F. Duffy on Personal Staff

Frank Duffy, for several years with Pathe, has been appointed General Manager's Representative by Paul Brunet, Vice-President and General Manager of Pathe Exchange.

Mr. Duffy first came with Pathe as travelling auditor and which has been continued through other and more responsible positions. The position was created through the need which Mr. Brunet felt to be kept in constant touch with conditions.

F. P. Earle Designs Titles for "Pals First"

An artistic touch lent to "Pals First," a Screen Classic, Inc., production, starring Harold Lockwood, announced as a September release by Metro, is the latest development in art titles as designed and executed by Ferdinand Pinney Earle, an artist.

Mr. Earle's work is represented in "Pals First" in a series of oil painted and pictorially descriptive titles and in decorations for the spoken titles.

Stage Productions for Constance Talmadge

Constance Talmadge's recent and announced forthcoming pictures contain a great many former stage productions. "Sauce for the Goose" is her latest, and Lewis J. Selznick, through Select Films, has also presented Miss Talmadge in "Good Night, Paul," and "A Pair of Silk Stockings," both former stage plays.

She has just completed another, "Mrs. Leffingwell's Booth," which was a dramatic hit on the stage.

Blackton Films Scenes in Chicago

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton left for Chicago last week, where, with the cooperation of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission under whose auspices he is producing "The Common Cause," he filmed several important scenes to be interpolated in this production whcih is scheduled for early fall release by Vitagraph.

Julia Arthur to Star in Cavell Picture

An important acquisition to the screen is the engagement of Julia Arthur to play the leading role in Anthony Paul Kelly's screen masterpiece, "The Woman the Germans Shot." Plunkett and Carroll announced the engagement of this leading American actress for the role of the martyr nurse, and Miss Arthur has been working for weeks under the direction of John G. Adolfi.

She most recently made distinct stage sucesses by her appearance in "The Eternal Magdalene," "Seremonda" and "The Flame of Liberty." In discussing the picture with Miss Arthur at the studio, she said: "I have lived the life of Edith Cavell and died her death, and I shall count it among the most wonderful experiences of my life."

Julia Arthur, to Appear In a Plunkett-Carroll Film

On the Left Is an Episode in the Fox-Lehrman Sunshine Comedy, "Roaring Lions on the Midnight Express." In the Centre is George Walsh, and on the right Is a Moment in Walsh's Latest Picture, "I'll Say So"

De Mille to Reproduce "The Squaw Man"

"Why did I wish to again produce 'The Squaw Man'?" asked Cecil B. de Mille. "Well, there are several reasons, sentimental, business and professional. In the first place, it had been decided by the Famous Players-Lasky Company that it was a picture which would prove decidedly acceptable even to those who had seen it before, while a great many new cinema patrons have been added in the several years since it was first produced. In this I concurred, and so it was determined to go ahead.

"It was my first picture. In the interim I have produced a good many films of different character, and I feel that each has in some measure surpassed the predecessors. And I also believe that I can, by reason of the fact that I have already produced 'The Squaw Man,' accomplish something really worth while in the reproduction of the drama.

"I have such splendid artists as Elliott Dexter, Theodore Roberts, Thurston Hall, Ann Little, Katherine MacDonald, Herbert Standing, Noah Beery, Edwin Stevens, Tully Marshall, Jack Holt, etc., in the cast—to see such a company together in one picture is like an all-star revival of some celebrated play in New York. I think it will be a distinct attraction in itself."

Many of the interiors have already been taken; the company is now at work on the exteriors and some of the most wonderful locations available have been secured.

Jane and Katherine Lee in "Swat the Spy"

New York was given its first glimpse of the new posters officially chosen for the coming Liberty Loan campaign last Wednesday on the steps of the Sub-Treasury building. The posters, arranged in a group on the granite steps of the building, attracted a large noon-hour crowd from the financial district.

They also served as a unique setting for a scene in "Swat the Spy!" the new production which Jane and Katherine Lee have in work for William Fox, under the direction of Arvid E. Gillstrom.

Fox Promises New Film Surprise

"Why I Should Not Marry" Is Title for New William Fox Production Which Promises Surprises

WHAT is said to be the weirdest, strangest and most daring production ever released by William Fox is now in process of making at the Fort Lee studios. It deals with the ever-burning question of marriage and discusses the problem from many angles.

"Why I Should Not Marry" is the title chosen for the play, and that in itself tells the story in a general way. It is being directed by Richard Stanton, who has selected the cast for its presentation. Mr. Stanton is quoted as saying that the production affords the opportunity to show the underlying conditions from which marital happiness and the perfect union spring.

"I never enjoyed staging a production as much as I have 'Why I Should Not Marry,'" said Mr. Stanton at the studios the other day. "'I have a perfect cast with which to work, a wonderful, appealing, impassioned story, and I want the play to be the best I have ever directed.

"It is not a sermon on marriage, but a forceful discussion of marriages, both bitter and happy. It has a moral that is bound to have its effect on both men and women and, all in all, combining its mystery and human appeal, it should be one of the big productions of the year. It will contain many surprises, new to fildom."

Mr. Stanton has been working hard directing the company for the last three weeks, and expects to have the production completed during the first week in October. Massive sets have been built and in order that the proper atmosphere may be obtained Mr. Stanton is working in three studios. In two of them large sets remain standing, so they can be used at the director's discretion.

Specific details of the story have not been announced. All that has been given out thus far is that the play deals with marriage and exploits the love trials of a girl called the most beautiful in the world. Names of the members of the cast are withheld for the present.

Incidents from real life are said to have been transferred to the screen in a deft way and woven into the fascinating, daring story. Adrian Johnson wrote the scenario and some of the ideas were developed from suggestions made by Richard Stanton.

"Why I Should Not Marry" is to be put out on an independent basis and more details are promised later.

World Buys "Praise Agent" for Blackwell

World Pictures announces the purchase of "The Praise Agent," an original story by Earle Mitchell, which will be converted into a scenario for a feature picture with Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley as the stars. The theme of this story is based on the efforts of a press agent, who, in order to gain publicity for his principal created a condition of affairs that makes it necessary for his star to live up to the story he has sent out for public consumption. The complications thus provided furnish what is thought to be an endless amount of amusement.

Brunton Returns to Coast After Eastern Visit

Robert Brunton, manager of productions at the Brunton Studios, returned to Los Angeles last Thursday after a five day's stay in New York. While East Mr. Brunton closed contracts and made final arrangements for the production of Lillian Walker and Kitty Gordon pictures in his studio and under his personal supervision.

The Lillian Walker pictures are to be distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation and Kitty Gordon by United Picture theatres.

With the addition of Lillian Walker and Kitty Gordon productions, there are nine stars working at the Brunton Studios, the others being Bessie Barriscale, Louise Glaum, Frank Keenan, Helen Keller, Sessue Hayakawa, Marie Dressler and Madame Yorska.

Vitagraph New Policy Discussed

Everything Reported in Good Shape for Inauguration of New Feature Booking Plan and Two-Reel Comedy Service

An important conference of executives of the Vitagraph Distributing Organization was held at the company's home office in New York last week, preparatory to the inauguration of Vitagraph's new Blue Ribbon feature booking policy on September 30th.

Walter W. Irwin, general manager, called the meeting which was attended by A. W. Goff, assistant general manager; E. Auger, eastern division manager; H. D. Naugle, western division manager, and J. Lawton Kendrick, sales promotion manager.

Mr. Goff had just concluded a month's tour of the United States and Canada, during which he met hundreds of representative exhibitors, and with Messrs. Auger and Naugle, who had also been out in their respective fields, reported that Vitagraph's recent announcement of "A Democratic, Not Autocratic, Booking Policy," had met with a splendid reception from exhibitors everywhere.

In addition to the Blue Ribbon service, the conference in the office of Mr. Irwin took up the Vitagraph serial policy and the introduction of the two-reel V Special Comedy service, established to start on September 16th.

Beginning with September 30th, Vitagraph enters upon its new production and distribution plan and with its announcement some weeks ago gave the exact dates for the entire year on which the features of all six of its stars will be released.

The summary of pictures shows that during the next twelvemonth the stars of the Blue Ribbon program will appear at intervals of six weeks as follows:

Earle Williams—Eight productions during the year beginning September 30th, his ket for the mutual benefit of all concerned. release on that date being "A Diplomatic Mission."

Alice Joyce—Eight productions, her first under the new plan coming out on October 21, under the title of "Everybody's Girl."

Bessie Love—Nine productions, her first being released on November 4th, under the title of "The Dawn of Understanding."

Harry T. Morey—Nine productions, his first being released on October 14th under the title of "The King of Diamonds."

Corinne Griffith—Nine productions, her initial one being "Miss Ambition," scheduled for release on October 28.

Gladys Leslie—Nine productions, her first being "The Mating," scheduled to appear on October 7th.

Under the booking plan offered to exhibitors by Vitagraph they may fill in their books for fifty-two weeks or they may book the features of any one star as a separate unit. They may also book in star combinations of two or more, or, in an emergency, book a single picture of any star.

Palmer Plan Receives Hearty Welcome

The support from all sections of the country that has been accorded the Palmer Plan of Photoplay Writing by producers and stars alike has convinced the company that Frederick Palmer, founder of the Palmer Photoplay Corporation of Los Angeles, has solved the problem of supplying worthy literary material for the screen.

The purposes and method of the Palmer Plan are set forth in an attractive booklet which has recently been issued as a souvenir of the enterprise. In it Palmer explains the reasons for bringing about better co-operation between authors and producers and the manner in which he thinks the writing talent of the country may be put in closer touch with the film story market for the mutual benefit of all concerned.

Red Cross Plans Another Short Release

Another war zone picture is to be issued by the American Red Cross for use in theatres throughout the United States. Following the success of its recent issue of "The Historic Fourth of July in Paris," Wm. E. Waddell, director of the Bureau of Pictures, announces the title of the new release to be "Soothing the Heart of Italy." The American Red Cross will distribute this film, like its former release, through General Film Company.

"Soothing the Heart of Italy" is a one-reel subject which is expected to appeal as strongly to audiences as the already famous "Fourth of July" film, but from a somewhat different angle. "Soothing the Heart of Italy" is said to be powerful in heart interest, with the spectacular subordinated to the human appeal.

Bizar at New York Metro Office

Edward Bizar, special representative for the Buffalo office of Metro Screen Classics for the past ninety days, and previously in charge of the Metro Canadian offices, is now connected with the New York office of Metro, representing the special department.

According to reports, Mr. Bizar has established an excellent record in placing the Screen Classics, and previous to his Metro affiliations he conducted branches for both the General and the Mutual and also operated theatres in Paterson, New Haven and Passaic.

Lockwood's Newest Metro, "The Great Romance"

"The Great Romance" has been chosen as the title for Harold Lockwood's newest Metro starring vehicle now in course of production under the direction of Henry Otto. The story is a romantic drama written especially for the star by Finis Fox and has a big patriotic subject for its theme.

Ruby de Remer is in the leading feminine role. Miss de Remer was Mr. Lockwood's leading woman also in "Pals First," which Metro will release this month as a Screen Classics, Inc., production.

"The Yellow Dog" Completed, Announces Jewel

The Jewel Productions' vizualization of Henry Irving Dodge's Saturday Evening Post story, "The Yellow Dog," has been fully completed at the West Coast Studio and the release date will shortly be announced.

In the roster of one hundred players that make up the cast, are many of the following artists of the film world: Ralph Graves, who had the leading masculine role in "Sporting Life," plays the male lead.

Arthur Hoyt, who played "Mr. Opp," is in an important role. Antrim Short, who has been seen in many juvenile parts, appears as leader of the Boy Detectives and is the real hero of the production.

Clara Horton, who appeared in the ingenue lead with Jack Pickford in "Tom Sawyer," plays opposite Master Short. Evelyn Selbie, Alfred Allen, Frederick Starr, Frank Hayes, Harold Goodwin, Gordon Griffith, Frank M. Clark and Frank Takanaga, the Japanese actor, will be seen in important roles.

The screen version of "The Yellow Dog" was made under the direction of Colin Campbell from the script prepared by Elliott J. Clawson, who wrote the scenario of "The Kaiser."

Kleine's Italian Picture for Legit Houses

George Kleine's new war picture, "Behind the Lines in Italy," will be shown at some of the larger legitimate theatres for runs in the important cities of the country. Mr. Kleine is having a special score of incidental music made that will fit the varied episodes.

"Behind the Lines in Italy" was made by the Cines Company of Rome at the command of the Italian government and is said to include a number of scenes of actual battle that were made by the Cinematograph Corps of the Royal Italian Army and intended originally for government record only.

Although an industrial story, as a message from the Italian peoples to the Allies, of hope and courage, and an evidence of their sincerity and earnest work for the cause of justice and democracy, the picture is said to be an unqualified success.

Week's Vitagraph Schedule

The Vitagraph program of releases for the week of September 16 has been scheduled as follows:

Blue Ribbon feature, five parts, "By the World Forgot," featuring Hedda Nova and J. Frank Glendon. Written by Cyrus Townsend Brady, directed by David Smith.

Serial, two parts, William Duncan in "The Secret Tunnel," episode No. 10 of "A Fight for Millions," supported by an all-star cast including Edith Johnson and Joe Ryan. Written by Albert E. Smith and Cyrus Townsend Brady, directed by William Duncan.

Big V Special Comedy, two parts, "Misfits and Matrimony," featuring Earle Montgomery and Joe Rock.

Big V Comedy, one part, "Wild Women and Wild Waves."

Pathe Closes Big Booking Deal

Pathe Declares When It Closed with Three Thousand Theatres in One Booking It Made Motion Picture History

Frank Duffy, General Manager's Representative of Pathe, Appointed by Paul Brunet

PAUL BRUNET, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., announces that his organization, through F. C. Quimby, sales manager, has completed the largest contract for a one-reel film in the history of the motion picture history. This was accomplished when negotiations finally were closed with J. J. Murdock, head of the United Booking Offices, for placing the Official War Review in 3,000 vaudeville houses in the United States. It is now almost a million-dollar booking.

This country-wide field of exhibition and exploitation includes alike the modern palaces of vaudeville in the great cities and the modest houses in the small towns. The big circuits which have called into service all of their publicity and exploitation facilities are the U. B. O., Orpheum Circuit, Western Marcus Loew Circuit, William Fox Circuit, B. S. Moss Circuit, Ackerman and Harris, San Francisco; Pantages and Hodkins, Chicago; Interstate Circuit and the Gus Sun Circuit.

The Pathe organization, through a carefully mapped out campaign, is confident that it will achieve an 100 per cent. national distribution with the record of millions at the end of the year.

"As the figures stand now, only $3,000 additional weekly would bring the annual return up to a round million. When it is remembered that the first issue was released on July 1, only six weeks, the booking strength of 'Official War Review' becomes at once apparent," declared Mr. Brunet.

With the vaudeville houses alone Sales Manager Quimby is confident that within a very short time now the returns will be $50,000 a week or an average of $2,600,000 a year.

Mr. Brunet in a letter to exhibitors says in part:

"We sincerely hope you have been impressed by the letter you received from Mr. Hart, director of the division of films of the Committee on Public Information, stating the necessity of booking this series. Every exhibitor in the United States has been asked to show these pictures to as many people as possible.

"As we have explained, the Committee on Public Information receives almost the entire gross revenue, so all exhibitors should show their patriotic spirit by playing the subject to as many people as they can and thus demonstrate their 100 per cent. patriotism."

The "Official War Review," Mr. Brunet promises, will be the most widely advertised of all one-reel features. One sheets will be put up in all buildings under the control of the Government—55,000 post-offices, 56,000 railroad stations, telegraph offices, express offices and, it is apparent from the present careful canvass made of the cities that the announcements will be in every municipal building.

A system has been perfected by which every city, town and hamlet can be accurately checked. "This proposition," continues Mr. Brunet, "is going through with a success that is simply staggering. Beginning on the first of July, within less than a month 55 per cent. of the theatres of the United States were booked and the prediction is within easy realization that, by Christmas, we can report to the Government that we are receiving 100 per cent. distribution of the 'Official War Review.'"

Virginia Pearson Starts "Buchanan's Wife"

Although delayed a few days by the illness of Director Edmund Lawrence, Virginia Pearson has finally begun work on her new picture, "Buchanan's Wife," adapted from the novel by Justus Miles Forman and scheduled as a release on the Excel Pictures program for Fox.

Salesmen Compete for Records

Goldwyn Announces That Its Salesmen Are in Lively Competition to Establish Speed Records in Securing New Business

SALESMEN of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation throughout the country are engaged in a spirited free-for-all contest to establish speed records in closing contracts under the company's new Star Series booking arrangement.

Charles R. Fay, a salesman in the Cincinnati exchange, tossed his hat into the ring several weeks ago by announcing that he had closed a Star Series contract and obtained a deposit check in just three minutes. The account of this incident was published in the form of a challenge in the Goldwyn Gold Winner, the weekly house organ of the company. Mr. Fay appointed himself the king of the speed merchants and defied all other Goldwyn salesmen to dethrone him.

In the September 14 issue of the Gold-Winner, large space is devoted to answers to Mr. Fay's challenge and numberous "come backs" are printed, among which are two from salesmen in the St. Louis and Kansas City offices.

Salesman Joe Bloom of St. Louis declares he is the rightful speed monarch and recounts several of his recent experiences in closing contracts to prove his claim.

Salesman W. C. Russell of the Kansas City exchange pokes fun at the challenge of his brother salesman. Russell records that while motoring through a town of 500 population he ran across a motion picture theatre, promptly drove to the entrance, tooted his horn, induced the exhibitor to take a ride around the block with him and, during the brief course of the spin obtained a contract for Goldwyn's entire output of Star Series productions.

Tom Moore, Goldwyn's Only Male Star, in "Just for Tonight"

Salesman Bloom puts in his claims for the honors on the common law of averages. Percentage, too, is taken into consideration and Bloom feels sure that he is the real, honest-to-goodness Goldwyn hurry-up man. Bloom's claims for recognition are supported by the following record: Visited an exhibitor in a town in Missouri and within 27 minutes booked the exhibitor for Goldwyn's entire 1917 output of pictures, monopolizing his screen for thirteen weeks of Goldwyn productions exclusively.

En route to another town, Bloom saw a motion picture theatre in the course of construction, so he hopped off the train at the nearest station, drove back in an automobile, a distance of four miles, and booked the new theatre for 27 Goldwyn pictures. In addition, Bloom named the theatre for the ehibitor, calling it the New Liberty. The contract and deposit check were received and Bloom was out on the net train

Metro Assembles New Bushman-Bayne Cast

THE assembling of the cast of Metro's "Little Miss Moneybags" has been completed by Director Charles J. Brabin. Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are the co-stars of this new feature, with Mr. Bushman as Van Tyne Carter and Miss Bayne as Arizona Brown, a real girl of the West.

"Little Miss Moneybags" has been written by Elaine Sterne and adapted for the screen by A. S. Le Vino.

Stuart Holmes plays Teddy Carter, a suave youth who tries to confiscate an estate. In motion pictures, Mr. Holmes played first with Kalem, then Biograph, then Fox, later being affiliated with Selznick pictures.

Sally Crute has the role of Edith Trentoni in "Little Miss Moneybags." Some of her other recent parts in Metro productions have been in "A Wife by Proxy," with Viola Dana; "The Avenging Trail," in which she played opposite Harold Lockwood; "Blue Jeans," with Viola Dana, and in Nazimova's forthcoming special production, "Eye for Eye," in which she has the important role of Madame Cadiere.

Mrs. Nathilde Brundage has been chosen by Director Brabin to play the part of Mr. Winthrop in the Bushman and Bayne feature. She has played for practically every company in the picture world, her first screen work dating back ten years. "Little Miss Moneybags" is by no means her first Metro appearance.

C. J. Williams plays James Carter in this, his first Metro picture. He at one time directed the present Metro star, Viola Dana.

William Frederic, playing the role of "Pecos" Brown, father of Arizona Brown, and William McQuire, cast as the lawyer, Austin Hobbs, are both known upon the shadow and speaking stage.

Tom Mix Completes Latest

Tom Mix has completed his latest play, according to a telegram received by the Fox Film Corporation from Prescott, Ariz., where Mix and his company produced the picture.

The picture was directed by Lynn Reynolds, who directed "Fame and Fortune," "Ace High," "Mr. Logan, U. S. A.," and other Mix pictures.

Mae Marsh "Hidden Fires" Directed by Irving

With the rapidly increasing output of Goldwyn Pictures it is a matter of concern to its executives that all the contributing factors should be recognized by the public and accorded due credit.

From some sources it is learned that the direction of "Hidden Fires," recently completed by Mae Marsh, is supposed to have been in the hands of Hobart Henley. This is probably because Mr. Henley has been uncommonly successful in bringing out all the appeal of Mae Marsh in a series of Goldwyn pictures.

But to George Irving alone belongs directorial honors of "Hidden Fires," and his handling of Mabel Normand's "Back to the Woods" earned for Mr. Irving this assignment.

Contracts for Blue Ribbons Gain Ground

Every office in the Vitagraph Distributing Organization has reported, during the last ten days, a noteworthy increase in Blue Ribbon feature contracts as the result of the statement of policy recently made by the company. A statement from the home office of the Distributing Organization declares that the branches have scored 100 per cent in the writing of new first-run accounts on a fifty-two week basis, scores of the leading exhibitors of the country having come to Vitagraph under the new booking plan.

Only One Triangle a Week Scheduled Hereafter

It is reported from Los Angeles that the Triangle Producing and Distributing Corporation has entered into a new agreement which provides for one feature release a week only, beginning September 15.

According to report Taylor Holmes, Alma Ruben and Olive Thomas will not appear in subjects made for program release, but will continue with Triangle, producing Corporation's films to be released through other channels.

Coast to Coast Messenger for Fairbanks' Film

In dispatching a special messenger with a feature film all the way across the continent in order that an exhibitor may not disappoint his patrons, the Douglas Fairbanks studio in conjunction with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is declared to have achieved the ne plus ultra in the co-operation of producer with exhibitor, according to Paramount officials.

S. L. Rothapfel had booked Douglas Fairbanks in his newest Artcraft picture, "He Comes Up Smiling," for the Rivoli theatre for the week of September 8 and had issued his preliminary announcements of the showing. Owing to unavoidable delay in the final stages of the production work, the picture was not entirely finished until last Tuesday. Deciding to take no chances with the present-day uncertainties of transportation, and being determined that Mr. Rothapfel should not be disappointed, it is said that Mr. Fairbanks took the matter into his own hands and accordingly William Nolan, of the office staff of the studio, left Los Angeles that night with a print of "He Comes Up Smiling."

Constance Talmadge on Second Select Stories

Constance Talmadge's studio at Hollywood, Cal., announces that she is starting on the third picture of her second Select Series, in which she is presented by Lewis J. Sleznick.

Miss Talmadge is now well ahead of her schedule, as there is still "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots" to be distributed, following "Sauce for the Goose," the first picture in the series, which has just been released.

In "Sauce for the Goose" she is expected to surpass her former successes in "Up the Road with Sallie" and "A Pair of Silk Stockings."

Universal Changes Title

Universal announces it has changed the title of "The Borrowed Duchess," the Bluebird featuring Carmel Myers, to that of "A Society Sensation." It is scheduled for release September 23 in place of "The Velvet Hand," which will be put on for the week of September 30.

Exhibitors Eulogize New Vitagraph Serial

IT is asserted that a remarkable instance of advertising claims making good has been registered in the case of "A Fight for Millions," Vitagraph's current serial featuring William Duncan, supported by a cast including Edith Johnson and Joe Ryan.

In its initial announcement of the serial's release Vitagraph used a line to the effect that "'A Fight for Millions' will send box-office receipts up with the temperature." And in the last week the company reports numerous letters have been received from exhibitors in vindication of the claim.

One from Julius Lamm, manager of Schindler's Loewy theatre, Chicago, Ill., reads in part as follows:

"It is a pleasure to let you know that 'A Fight for Millions" started off with flying colors. Despite its being 102 degrees and one of the hottest days in the history of Chicago's weather bureau, we packed them in all day. No $100-a-day could have duplicated this wonderful business."

Another one from William S. Nelson, proprietor of the Elite theatre in Great Bend, Kan., read:

"'A Fight for Millions' goes over with us like hot cakes on a frosty morning. We play this serial every Saturday and regardless of the extreme hot weather we have run as late as midnight in order to satisfy our patrons on this subject"

B. D. Knox, proprietor of the Olive theatre, at St. Joseph, Mo., wrote the following letter to Vitagraph:

"Showed the first episode of 'A Fight for Millions' under a handicap of 110 degrees in the shade. Opened to capacity business in spite of the heat and expect to outdo my former record on "Vengeance—and the Woman.' Have shown four episodes and wish to say that each episode has shown a marked increase in attendance."

Ned Pedigo, proprietor of the Highland theatre, Guthrie, Okla., wrote as follows:

"'A Fight for Millions' is great and those snow scenes just hit the spot these hot days. I have done splendid business and wish you could be here to see it go over. I have my balcony for the colored folks and they have a great habit of thinking out loud, so it is a common thing to hear some old colored woman say: 'Lord! jist look at dat man Duncan. He gwine tear dat villun Ryan loose from his apetite jist like a houn' shake a rabbit.' Duncan would be royally entertained here in Guthrie, for the people think he is the best ever. The serial is a corker. Put me down for all of the Vitagraph serials to come."

Big Events Afford Some Great Themes

ONE of the most significant developments in the producing phase of the motion picture industry is that which has led film manufacturers in the last year to seize upon big national or world events as the themes of their photoplays.

In this connection the Fox Film Corporation calls attention to the unique timeliness of the draft picture which William Fox produced, "18 to 45."

The ink had hardly dried on the trade press announcements of this big picture when President Wilson had signed the law which extended the draft ages to take in all men between 18 and 45. While some were still marveling at the inspired showmanship of William Fox in having a picture made on the draft before it became a law, the nation was reading President's Wilson's proclamation setting September 12 as the national Registration Day.

The morning after Labor Day found a stack of telegrams in the Fox Film Corporation's offices from Fox branch managers, declaring that "'18 to 45" was sweeping their districts like a fire in a field of grain.

The telegram from Harry F. Campbell, of Boston, Fox New England district manager, was typical of all. Mr. Campbell wired: "Caught the public at just the proper moment. Have received fifty requests for bookings already. Biggest thing yet."

Something that stimulated interest in the pictures in New York City and northern New Jersey was the big round-up of slacker suspects. When men were stopped wherever they went and made to show their classification cards it was borne in on the minds of those in the coming draft just what military registration means. Exhibitors, the Fox statement says, were quick to sense the quickening of the people's pulse and flooded the Fox Corporation's branch offices with demands for dates on "18 to 45."

Hodkinson Secures Many Representatives

THIS week sees practically every territory in the United States covered by Hodkinson Special Representatives, states an official of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. Among the latest appointments are Mr. W. A. Ratz to the Indianapolis territory. Mr. Ratz is well known in the Hoosier territory.

Mr. Graham R. Sirwell, formerly with the General Film Company in Kansas City, has been appointed to the Los Angeles branch, while Mr. E. A. Crane, formerly sales manager for the Moon Merchandising Agency, has taken over the Washington section.

W. J. Hanley, who has taken over the Wilkes-Barre territory, is also considered a man eminently fitted for the section of the country he is handling.

"The results of the representatives who have been in the field the longest are already beginning to become evident in the closing of first-run contracts in Boston, Buffalo, Chicago, Kansas City, Butte, Denver, Minneapolis and many other points of importance," declared C. E. Shurtleff, general sales manager, who has just returned from the Chicago Convention.

The Hodkinson Service has now made available one release a week to the exhibitors, fulfilling the promise of a fifty-two pictures a year program made some time ago.

P. N. Brinch, Western division manager for the Hodkinson organization, wires from San Francisco that Mr. Frank J. Bailey of the American theatre, Butte, has become a Hodkinson co-partner and will also be the first-run account in that territory for Hodkinson service, including the various units of Jesse D. Hampton, Lillian Walker, Paralta and Plaza productions.

John A. Stevenson, who is handling the Southern territory in the capacity of division manager, reports that Frank Hawking has been put in charge in Cincinnati.

National Enters Regular Production Field

THE National Film Corporation of America, which created the two special features, "Tarzan of the Apes" and "The Romance of Tarzan," announces this week its entry into the field of general producers and tops its statement with the announcement that it now has under way and nearing completion its first two productions, in which Billie Rhodes and Henry B. Walthall are starred.

In addition to the two Tarzan pictures, the National Film Corporation has been very active in the semi-monthly production of Capitol comedies in which "Smiling" Bill Parsons is featured and which are Goldwyn's sole comedy subjects.

Mr. Parsons early in the past season worked steadily, completing twenty of his first twenty-six productions, then so enlarged his Hollywood plant that it now permits of three companies working and under Isidor Bernstein's direction Billie Rhodes is finishing her first multiple reel production, "The Girl of My Dreams," from the Joseph M. Gaites' play by the same name, in which Nyams and McIntyre starred on the road for five years, and which enjoyed a highly prosperous season at the Criterion Theatre, New York.

Henry Walthall will be seen in "And a Still Small Voice" with Bertram Bracken directing and William N. Aaronson in general authority. Louis W. Chaudet is in charge of the directorial work of the Rhodes picture with Isidor Bernstein in supervision of all National productions.

Mutt and Jeff Cartoons in Topical Title

As an example of the policy now almost exclusively followed of utilizing big news as the themes of the Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons, the Fox announcement this week calls the attention of exhibitors to the current release, "The Kaiser's New Dentist."

Besides showing Captain Bud Fisher's famous characters in an exceptionally humorous situation, this cartoon is declared to have the benefitt of the great advertising accruing from the serial story published by the New York World and nearly a hundred other papers throughout the country.

Second Hayakawa Films "Temple of Dusk"

The cast of "The Temple of Dusk," the second Sessue Hayakawa production made by the Haworth Pictures Corporation for release through Mutual exchanges, include Sylvia Bremer, Jane Novak, Lewis Willoughby, Henry Barrows and Mary Jane Irving.

Both Miss Novak and Miss Bremer have appeared before the camera in numerous pictures and each is said to have a large following among motion picture "fans."

"Beans" Has Evelyn Selbie

Evelyn Selbie plays an important role in the Bluebird picture, "Beans," starring Edith Roberts. She is described as a versatile character woman and in "Pay Me" she played an ingenue part while in the same play she later appeared as an old woman.

Before entering screen work it is stated that Miss Selbie did excellent work in dramatic stock.

Foland at Kansas City for General

General Film Company's office at Kansas City is now in charge of J. E. Foland, it is announced by the company. Mr. Foland is a well known film man in the Missouri territory and was most recently in the sales force of Pathe at Kansas City.

Kenyon Begins on New Production

Work on Doris Kenyon's latest picture, "Wild Honey," produced by her own company, De Luxe Pictures, Inc., was started last week under the direction of Francis J. Grandon. The first of the exteriors are being filmed in a remote corner of Staten Island, where a town in which many of the scenes are laid has been built. More than 150 men and women and 50 horses will be used in these scenes.

After the scenes on Staten Island are taken, the company will be transferred to a location in the Adirondacks, where the remainder of the exteriors will be taken. All of the interiors and the laboratory work will be done in the Biograph studio.

"Wild Honey," which was adapted for the screen by Louis Joseph Vance from the original story of Vingie E. Roe in Pictorial Review, will be by far Miss Kenyon's most pretentious production. It will be in six reels.

William Faversham in Film for Paramount

William Faversham, for thirty years a conspicuous figure of the American stage, will be presented by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to star in the production of "The Silver King."

Prominently known both as a producer and actor in the world of the spoken drama, Mr. Faversham has also appeared on the screen with considerable success. Production on "The Silver King" will start in one of the Eastern studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation on September 12. Work on the script has been under way for the past week.

Love-Elvidge Co-starred

Montagu Love and June Elvidge are being co-starred by World Pictures in "The Quickening Flame." Work is now progressing on this picture, which will be released during the winter. It is being directed by Travers Vale.

About New Pictures

In addition to the numerous thrills which abound throughout "The Panther Woman," Madame Petrova's latest picture, one of the most exciting auto chases yet filmed will be seen when the picture is released. The story, adapted from Gertrude Atherton's famous novel, "Patience Sparhawk and Her Times," details vividly the ride against time to save the life of the woman in the death house.

Home-made smallpox helps Eliner Field out in a love affair in her forthcoming Strand-Mutual comedy, "Cupid in Quarantine," that company announces.

In "The Girl Who Came Back," adapted and Americanized by Beulah Marie Dix, for Paramount presentation from the stage play, "Leah Kleschna," by C. M. S. McClellan, the star, Ethel Clayton, is said to have been surrounded with a distinctly superior supporting cast of players. This is Miss Clayton's Paramount debut.

In celebration of the completion of the filming of scenes in the big allegorical prologue of Commodore J. Stuart Blackton's newest war feature, "The Common Cause," Mrs. Blackton entertained the stars of this part of the production, namely, Julia Arthur, Violet Heming, Marjorie Rambeau, Irene Castle and Effie Shannon at a luncheon given last Friday at her home in Brooklyn.

Betzwood Film Company, the rapidly growing Philadelphia producing organization, has had the discerning vision and the rare good luck of being the first company to offer a tremendous propaganda drama of the Orient in its "For the Freedom of the East," with Lady Tsen Mei, the first Chinese star the screen has ever known. Goldwyn releases it.

The new Thomas H. Ince production for Paramount, starring Dorothy Dalton, titled "Vive la France," which is released September 15, is said to offer unexampled opportunities for the exhibitor. To begin with, it is claimed, it is a sincere contribution to the motion pictures dealing with the events of the great war.

"Kultur" is described as the most powerful picture which Miss Brockwell has yet enacted. The story and scenario are by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton, and the picture was directed by Edward J. LeSaint. William Fox produced it.

The oldest and one of the largest grapevines in the country was used in Louise Glaum's latest Paralta Play, "A Law Unto Herself." It is the famous San Gabriel grapevine in southern California.

Through the co-operation of United States Government officials, William Farnum and his company, now filming "The Man of Power," were able the other day to stage scenes of the play on board a ship and on one of the big piers in San Francisco harbor. The scenes on shipboard were taken on one of the vessels that ply between Los Angeles and San Francisco.

The Whimsical charm of a Barrie or a Chesterton may be found, it is declared, in Tom Gallon's story, "The Cruise of the Make-Believes," which Edith Kennedy translated to the screen for Lila Lee's debut in motion pictures as a Paramount star. The story is said to be one that defies description and must be "seen to be appreciated."

Bert Lytell's fifth picture as a star under the Metro banner is in its second week of production at Metro's West Coast studios in Hollywood. This play, which was written by Lytell himself, follows "Unexpected Places," by Lieut. Frank R. Adams, and "Boston Blackie's Little Pal," by Jack Boyle.

Harry S. Sheldon, the famous dramatist, best known for his authorship of "The Havoc," in which Henry Miller successfully starred, has sold to World Pictures an original story which bears the title of "The Little Intruder."

One of the features of recent Fox-Lehrman Sunshine Comedy, made in Hollywood, under the direction of Henry Lehrman, is the presence of the famous British tank "Britannia," which was the first of the land monsters that terrified the Germans in the battle of the Somme in 1916.

The boudoir "set" in Metro's handsome forthcoming production of "Lady Frederick," in which Ethel Barrymore is the star, is one of uncommon artistic beauty. The furniture of white ivory and cane, and the draperies, pillows and curtains of rich lavender satin and ivory lace, form a dainty and gorgeous setting. Some of the important scenes in the feature take place in the boudoir.

Five Stars Announced in Blackton Prologue

When J. Stuart Blackton's newest and biggest war feature, "The Common Cause," is exhibited to the public, announces Vitagraph, one of the dramatic surprises of this super-production will be an allegorical prologue presenting Italy, Great Britain, America, France and Belgium in a tableau of the nations.

They are Julia Arthur, who impersonates Italy; Violet Heming, Great Britain; Marjorie Rambeau, America; Mrs. Vernon Castle, France, and Effie Shannon, Belgium.

The scenes of this prologue were filmed by Commodore Blackton last week, each of the stars, facing the camera on different days for individual work, and all together last Friday for the ensemble scenes, sharing honors equally. Captain Bains and Colonel Dennis of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission were also present for the staging of the allegory.

Pathe Club Enjoys Outing

One hundred and twenty-five members of the Pathe Club chartered a boat for a trip on the Hudson August 25, and luncheon, supper, a special orchestra and bathing was thoroughly enjoyed.

Club President Paul Brunet and Mrs. Brunet, Louis J. Gasnier, president of Astra; Mrs. Gasnier and daughter were there; also Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Picard, Mr. and Mrs. T. Wiley and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Zenker. Members of the club from the Jersey City studio and the New York exchange helped the home office crowd to "shake it up" and make the day enjoyable. Jack Kyle, secretary of the club, and J. T. Richards comprised the committee on arrangements.

Small Towns Exploit Big Hits

Small Town Exhibitors No Longer Fear Special Productions According to Jewel's Experience with "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin"

EXHIBITORS in small towns have discovered from experience that they need not be afraid of big pictures. In the past the small town men have stood in fear and trembling at propositions to take a chance on such subjects.

Jewel Productions, Inc., which is distributing "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," is in receipt of many letters from the rural districts indicating the change of heart. The following statements from two of these communications show that patrons out in rural districts will come out strong for big productions, and are willing to pay an increased admission price for the chance.

The statements come from Platte Centre, Nebraska, a town of 500, and Milbank, S. D., another small town. The manager of the Lyric theatre at Platte Centre speaks as follows:

"We are glad to inform you that the results on 'The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin,' far exceeded our expectations.

"Our population is about 500 people, and the Lyric's seating capacity, including a few extra chairs we put in for this picture, is not over 175. On this day we ran three performances, one afternoon and two evening, charging 50 cents for adults and 25 cents for children, including war tax. Our advertising expenses were not over $12 all told. On checking up after the shows were over we found that our gross receipts, including war tax, were $177, so you can easily see that we made a substantial profit on the transaction.

"The picture itself was highly appreciated by all who saw it. Not an unfavorable comment was heard, and many were enthusiastic over it. The prolonged cheering and applause during a large part of the show was good to hear.

"In fact, this has been the biggest money getter and reputation builder we have ever run, and broke our record for a single day's receipts."

J. J. Nelson, manager of the Bently Grand theatre at Milbank, S. D., writes that he made more money on "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin" than he ever made on any other picture.

"The advertising possibilities are great with this picture," he says, "and anyone who goes after the business with it can't fail to produce the desired results."

"Wolves of Kultur" Distributed by Pathe

"WOLVES OF KULTUR," the serial produced by the Western Photoplays, Inc., and distributed by Pathe, will be very extensively posted on the billboards of the country, according to Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc.

In compiling the list of towns and cities to be used in this campaign, Mr. Brunet said that he was careful to select for particular attention those places where picture audiences have not yet been educated to the serial picture.

The twenty-four sheet on "Hands Up!" was honored by being placed upon exhibition in the Metropolitan Art Museum in New York. The twenty-four on "Wolves of Kultur" was painted by the same artist and is described as being a very strong subject and one that will attract a great deal of attention.

It is expected that these posters will be delivered to the various bill-posting plants by the 20th of September and be all on the boards by the 1st of October. Since the serial will not be released until the 13th of October this will give nearly a two weeks' showing before release date.

A thirty-page campaign book will tell the exhibitor about the serial and show him how to publicize it. An extensive line of cuts and advertising mats have been prepared for the exhibitor to take to his local newspapers.

"Wolves of Kultur" is launched with every advantage that extensive advertising and quantitive exhibitors' helps can give.

Jack Von Tilzer with First National

Jack Von Tilzer, newly appointed sales manager of the First National Exchange in New York, is new to the motion picture industry, but reports indicate that he is progressing nicely. He was formerly with Pathe and later with the Fox Film Corporation. First National engaged him about two months ago.

Doris Kenyon's Pictures at Biograph Studio

Doris Kenyon's next picture, 'Wild Honey," by Louis Joseph Vance and Vingie E. Roe, will be made at the Biograph Studio. Following the arrangement made by Theodore C. Deitrich, president of De Luxe Pictures, Inc., with William L. Sherry for eight pictures a year beginning September 1, work on "Wild Honey" will be started this week.

It is probable that all of the Doris Kenyon pictures during the year will be made at the Biograph Studio either in New York or California. Mr. Deitrich has made arrangements with Thomas A. Persons for studio space at the Biograph. If the coal shortage prevents continuation of the work in New York, Miss Kenyon and her company will immediately leave for the Biograph Studio in California.

The exteriors for "Wild Honey" will be made in the Adirondacks and on Staten Island. A town, consisting of two streets, is now being built on Staten Island and will be used as the principal set for the production. As soon as these scenes are taken, the entire company, said to include 150 persons and fifty horses, will be sent to the Adirondacks where the mountain scenes will be filmed.

Vivian Martin's Next Film

Vivian Martin has a chance to play the kind of heroine she most enjoys portraying in "Her Country First," her next Paramount Picture, which is released September 22. She is said to make the most of the character of Dorothy Grant and her support is reported to be excellent.

In the cast are Parks Jones, John Cossar, Florence Oberle, Larry Steers, Louis Willoughby, James Farley, Lillian Leighton and Jack MacDonald. James Young has given the picture the benefit of his skill in direction and Frank E. Garbutt was the cameraman. Edith Kennedy wrote the scenario from Mary Roberts Rinehart's story.

Many Newspaper Notices for "The Hun Within"

There are said to be so many thrills in "The Hun Within," the first Paramount-Artcraft Special, released September 8, that one almost wonders why the producers didn't save some of them for future productions.

The New York Times said: "It is not often that spectators in a motion picture theatre are held as tensely and stirred as frequently to spontaneous applause."

The New York Evening World said: "Hardened screen fans sat up and took notice at the Rialto when the plot of 'The Hun Within' began to unfold. By the time it had reached its climax the least enthusiastic movie-goer had surrendered to the patriotic appeal of the story and the charm of Dorothy Gish."

The New York Tribune said: "'The Hun Within' is one of the most beautifully produced pictures seen recently, and it is hard to mention any one, except Griffith, who can make a picture like it."

The Evening Mail said: "In 'The Hun Within' the Rialto theatre has one of the most remarkable pictures ever shown on a New York screen."

The Evening Telegram said: "Alive with interest in numerous scenes that are genuinely exciting."

Another Gibson Two-Reeler

"Under False Pretenses" is the two-reel western drama released by Universal September 28. The story was written by George Hively, and produced by J. J. Davis. Helen Gibson is featured as the heroine, Helen Gray, the telegraph operator and railroad agent of Millvale.

Kerry C. Meagher, for fifteen years treasurer of the Ringling Brothers' circus, recently visited Universal City just as J. P. McGowan's circus company was making some of the most exciting scenes for "The Lure of the Circus," in which Eddie Polo is being starred, and highly complimented its realism.

Outing-Chester Progress

"The revenue from bookings of the Outing-Chester Pictures will exceed any single-reel subject ever released through Mutual," declared Assistant-General Manager A. S. Kirkpatrick.

"Saba, the Astonishing," No. 12 in the series, is released by Mutual September 15. An intimate view of an extinct volcano rising 3,000 feet out of the Caribbean Sea, gives glimpses of an old Dutch town and its quaint inhabitants.

Pictograph Shows Armenian Invasion

The story of the invasion of Armenia, one of the bloodiest pages of the history of the present war, has been filmed and brought to America by the American Commission for Armenian and Syrian Relief and is in the current release of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph "the magazine on the screen."

Coming Program Offerings

Claire Anderson Is the Indignant Young Lady, and Rae Godfrey and Jack Gilbert Are the Contented Appearing Pair. This Is in the Triangle Picture, "The Mask"

Two Current Triangle Offerings

Pauline Starke, Belle Bennett and Harry Mestayer in "The Atom," with Jack Richardson and Al Whitman in "Desert Law"

IN "The Atom," Triangle's first release for the week of September 15, Pauline Starke, Belle Bennett and Harry Mestayer, whose first appearance under the Triangle regime was in "High Tide," are featured.

"The Atom" was written and scenarioized by Catherine Carr, and produced under the direction of William Doland, with Elgin Leslie at the camera—tells of an actor, Montague Booth.

Pauline Starke is Jenny, Belle Bennett portrays Belle Hathaway, a sweetheart of Booth's theatrical days, and Harry Mestayer is Montague Booth. In the supporting cast are Ruth Handforth, Gene Burr and Walter Perkins, who offers a characterization of Oldson, the proprietor of a traveling madical show.

A play by Louis H. Kilpatrick, "Desert Law," featuring Jack Richardson, is the second release for the week of the 15th. It is described as a drama of the great west in which honesty wins in a battle with lawlessness and despotism. Jack Conway directed this picture.

Jack Richardson is Rufe Dorsey, "The Boss of Brazos County"; Al Witman, a new Triangle player, is Donald McLane, homesteader, and in love with Julia Wharton, the daughter of a wealthy rancher, played by Leotta Lorraine. George Pearce is a member of the supporting cast. George Elwood Jenks scenarioized this story and B. Edmond photographed it.

Five Goldwyn Productions for September

GOLDWYN'S Pictures releases five productions in the month of September, as the company's first contribution to its schedule of in excess of fifty productions annually.

Following the first Geraldine Farrar production, "The Turn of the Wheel," comes the second Goldwyn production, with Mabel Normand as the star. The story is "Peck's Bad Girl."

"Peck's Bad Girl" is one of the most successful pictures Miss Normand has ever made, according to Goldwyn officials, and in it she returns to the field of broad comedy. Charles Giblyn directed her.

Tom Moore's first production is "Just for Tonight," said to be a speedy, full-of-action drama of love and romance.

Madge Kennedy in the week of the 23d appears in "The Kingdom of Youth," which is declared to be the best story that this star has had since she deserted the stage for the screen. It was directed by Clarence G. Badger.

The fifth and last production sponsored by Goldwyn in September is the first of the Rex Beach productions of the new season, "Laughing Bill Hyde," announced as a drama of redemption and bringing to the screen one of the best known of this popular author's characters portrayed by the wit and lariat thrower, Will Rogers.

It woll be noted that these scheduled releases by the Goldwyn company contain the first pictures presented by that company with male stars. Heretofore the roster of Goldwyn has set forth only feminine stars: Madge Kennedy, Mabel Normand, Mae Marsh, Geraldine Farrar and Pauline Frederick.

Lila Lee's Film Shown at Rivoli

When Lila Lee's initial film was shown last week at the Rivoli theatre in New York, the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation was congratulated by S. L. Rothapfel in securing her. The Globe said that "She is of the stuff from which celluloid stars are made."

The Morning World pronounced Lila Lee "a new and surprisingly talented motion picture star," and the New York Telegram said that "she promises to become a strong favorite." W. W. Whitman, proprietor of the Plaza theatre at San Diego, Cal., wrote: "I have seen Lila Lee in 'The Cruise of the Make-Believe' and never have I received so great a surprise or a more pleasant one."

Lila Lee's second Paramount picture will be "Such a Little Pirate."

Many New Ebony Releases

A budget of new Ebony comedies, the one-reel offerings with colored players featured, which are released semi-monthly through General Film Company, will be seen during this month and October. Among these are "Catastrophe Cassie," "Love and Bricks" and "Cool Heads and Hot Feet." A new standard in production is said to have been achieved in recent releases by the Ebony Company, with the fun element developed in a manner marked by finish and cleverness.

General Film Company reports the popularity of these novel subjects not only holding but gaining.

Universal Announces Title and Release Changes

Universal announces it has changed the title of "The Borrowed Duchess," the Bluebird featuring Carmel Myers, to that of "A Society Sensation."

It is scheduled for release September 23 in place of "The Velvet Hand," which will be put on for the week of September 30.

Program Glances

Charles Ray, in the role of a brave Frenchman of the North woods, will soon be starred in his next Paramount picture, "The Law of the North," released September 29. The story is dramatic shows the struggles of the hero, Alain de Montcalm to save the girl he loves and also avenge the death of his father.

The dog comes into his own in motion pictures, in the Outing-Chester-Mutual release, "Finest on Four Feet," for September 8. Dogs of all nationalities, colors, kinds and breeds are seen—Pekingese Spaniels, Belgian War Dogs, Red Cross Dogs, Airedales, "Just Dogs" and others.

"By the World Forgot," the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature scheduled for release the week of September 10, is a picture of beautiful photography and stirring action, presenting Hedda Nova and J. Frank Glendon in roles ideally suited. The feature is from an original scenario written specially for the stars by Cyrus Townsend Brady.

In the current Wolfville Tale by Alfred Henry Lewis, two new characters are added to the highly interesting population of the famous border town of fiction. "The Deacon," considered the most harmless of the inhabitants, disposes of a double-dyed bad man, and the fact that he has no reputation as a shooter makes it appear outrageous to the citizens.

A race between a street car and an automobile, during which the chief characters of the story leap from one to the other, forms one of the exciting incidents in "The Room of Flame," which is the ninth episode of Universal's serial, "The Brass Bullet."

Fritzi Brunette will be supported in her next Bluebird photoplay, "Vendetta's Daughter," by Fred Turner, Eugene Corey, William Conklin, Wedgwood Nowell, Carmen Phillips and Nicholas Dunaew. Douglas Gerrard is handling the megaphone on this production.

The settings for "The Woman Who Gave" are said to be notable for their lavishness and the outlay of money involved. Workmen have been laboring feverishly for the last two weeks making several huge sets. This is a Fox-Evelyn Nesbit picture.

The title of "Vendetta's Daughter," the Bluebird scheduled for release September 23, has been changed to "The Velvet Hand." Fritzi Brunette is the star of the film. The picture is based on a story by Edith Barnard Delano. F. McGrew Willis wrote the scenario, and Douglas Gerrard was the director. The scenes are laid in Italy.

"Pals First," which Metro will offer under the banner of Screen Classics, Inc., will be released as a six-reel production. The picture is a screen version of the stage success of the same name adapted by Lee Wilson Dodd from Francis Perry Elliott's novel.

Having completed three big Western pictures in succession, William Farnum, the Fox star, is now working on a production which is considerably different from any he has ever done. The picture is named "The Man of Power," and some of the scenes are laid on board ship and on a desert island.

The effectiveness with which the secret service operates whenever the government is concerned is evidenced in Edna Goodrich's latest special production, "Treason," released by Mutual on September 29.

"His first appearance on any screen" might be the announcement regarding Fred Niblo, Broadway actor who recently married Enid Bennett, Ince star in Paramount pictures, and who supports her in the leading male role of "Coals of Fire," her latest Paramount offering, which will be released September 29.

Dell Henderson, directing Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley in "Allies," a new World picture to be released early next spring, has just completed a three-act comedy intended for Broadway consumption. The one interesting feature of this play, from the manager's point of view, is that it requires the services of only six people and it is absolutely essential that no scenery or properties be used in its presentation.

In his first Artcraft picture, "The Goat," released September 22, Fred Stone has to put over an unusual and rapid-fire stunt when he plays a young ironworker, Chuck McCarthy, who literally breaks into the movies. The "break" occurs when he is ordered to do some construction work at a studio and is attracted by a boxed set.

Hayakawa Pictures Play Many Big Houses

A. S. Kirkpatrick, assistant general manager of Mutual, announces that the pre-release bookings of the Hayakawa Special Productions, produced by the Haworth Pictures Corporation and released through Mutual exchanges, now include practically every representative house throughout the country.

The Ziegfeld theatre, Chicago, ran "His Birthright," the first Hayakawa picture, for an entire week. The B. S. Moss Circuit has contracted for the entire series for New York City and Brooklyn, and will run each picture three days in each house.

Sam E. Rork, general representative and manager of distribution for the Haworth Pictures Corporation, who has been in Chicago for the past week conferring with Mr. Kirkpatrick, reports unusual interest is shown by the trade.

"After pre-viewing 'His Birthright' and 'The Temple of Dusk,' exhibitors are convinced that these productions will set a new standard for photo-dramas of absorbing interest," said Mr. Rork.

Universal Current Events

Universal's latest Current Events release presents some scenes of the latest Allied drive in France. The onrushing operations of first the British, then the French and Americans at the points of the bitterest fighting are shown, and glimpses are given of the Huns in retreat.

In additions to the battle scenes there are shown the latest films of General Haig, General Pershing and other military leaders at the front, and of President Poincare and other big international figures.

Bailey Joins Hodkinson

Frank J. Bailey, of the American theatre, Butte, Montana, has signified his belief in Mr. W. W. Hodkinson's ideals for the motion picture industry by joining the Hodkinson Co-Partnership Plan.

The American is one of the representative theatres of the Northwest.

Taylor Speaks of Advent of British Film

IN a statement by John H. Taylor, the London Inter-Ocean head who is now preparing to leave New York for his home shores, American official film publicity comes in for praise. He says:

"The splendid advertising of official films by your Committee of Public Information has given the photoplay theatre a boost in the estimation of the whole American people. Every class and condition of American society is reached and I doubt now that interest in pictures has been aroused in persons who never entered a picture house before the war. Such stunts as selling the theatre to the large business firms, each to have it exclusively on an evening for their employees and friends, are most commendable; and surely the Government publicists leave no stone unturned in getting these pictures before the public. Every conceivable publicity device is employed, and as I say it is a great thing for American pictures as a whole.

"You show most of our official film in this country and I am certain that, as time goes on, you will give equal attention to all our dramatic and comedy film that is worth while. Now that British producers are spending large amounts and making films that are worth while, a large section of the trade feels that it is only fair that these films be booked in America. If England welcomes the right sort of American film, we contend that America should welcome the right sort of British film.

"It's just a matter of getting started on your market, and we feel that your big releasing programs could do this easily.

John H. Taylor, Managing Director of Inter-Ocean Film Co., Ltd., London

These programas release their good productions in our country. And, of course, we would only expect tham to accept good British productions for release in your country. At any rate, I am sure the present policy of total elimination of English photoplay productions cannot long endure and we have faith in the future."

Gaumont Serial Scores in Washington Town

THE Gaumont Company this week reported great success for its serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," in Washington. In an announcement the company said:

"Its population, made up largely of the most highly cultured and educated people, drawn from all sections of the United States and foreign countries, Washington, our national capital, claims to stand in a class alone. Its entertainment seekers are composed not only of statesmen and diplomats and their families, but of the many thousand employees of the Government who are necessarily well educated, and whose amusement tastes are therefore refined and discriminating.

"In the past some exhibitors who own big down-town picture theatres have seemed to fear that serials would not appeal to their patrons, but were more suited to the neighborhood of lower-priced houses. The Gaumont Company has been able to show that this fear is not justified. It has made the claim that its newest photo-serial, 'The Hand of Vengeance,' will appeal to the majority of the picture-seers in any theatre large or small, 'high-brow,' 'low-brow,' or between.

"That its judgment is correct has been clearly proven by the success of 'The Hand of Vengeance' in the District of Columbia. Sidney B. Lust, hustler extraordinary, and President of Super-Film Attractions, Inc., which is distributing this red-blooded photo-serial in that territory, has already broken all serial records by placing it with more than one-third of the theatres in the "Athens of America."

Picture Against Alcohol Filmed on Coast

A motion picture film depicting in story form the inefficiency caused by the use of alcoholic beverages, has been brought to the screen by a new producing company of Los Angeles, the United Film Corporation. The story centers its force on the effect on the business world and Government of alcohol.

The film is named "The Crime of the Hour," and was produced under the direction of Thomas R. Ricketts, a member of the Motion Picture Directors' Association, who produced "Damaged Goods," and has a long record for the making of successful films.

The cast selected for the important parts in this film were booked by Director Ricketts to fit each type. Ed Coxen plays the hero role, a youth who inherits the drink habit. The story opens with him serving as a farm hand, and being induced to the city by an acquaintance where he is given a position with a construction company. It takes him but a short time to convince the owner, taken by W. A. Barrows, that saloons near the working camp of the company are a menace to the organization.

Vivian Rich plays the role of the underworld vamp, Nanine Wright apears as the mother, Arthur Moon takes the part of the discharged superintendent, and Lois DeKay is the ingenue.

The owners of the United Film Corporation have placed the film in the hands of Ernest Shipman, and it is to be sold on the state rights basis.

United on Coast Films Big Feature

An international issue, claimed by the world leaders and the governments of Great Britain, France, Italy and the United States to be almost as menacing to humanity as Kaiserism, is the theme back of the first offering of United Films Corporation, of Los Angeles.

"The most human love story ever told," is a featured line in its preliminary announcements and its producers claim that "no door of creed, politics, governmental co-operation, or theatre for amusement only will fail to open at its knock." Some claim, but you never can tell.

It is the first of a series of "Pictures with a Reason" which the United Films Corporation will produce from time to time, with the purpose of keeping abreast of the world's march in international events. Thomas R. Ricketts, who directed "Damaged Goods," is the director general of this new company and its first masterpiece was produced under his personal direction.

Kempner Engages Wiener for "Manx-Man"

Sales Director J. L. Kempner, of The Manx-Man Company, announces the acquisition of Louis Wiener, formerly of World Film Corporation for the force of "Manx-Man" special representatives that are operating from the Goldwyn exchanges and in co-operation with the Goldwyn branch managers.

Mr. Wiener originally entered the motion picture field with the old Kinemacolor Company, where he was also associated with Mr. Kempner in sales work. He will explain the special publicity campaign and merchandising possibilities of "Manx-Man" in the New England territory.

The New York Goldwyn office reported ten "ManxMan" bookings for the week commencing Monday, September 9. Up state the feature opens shortly at the Strand, Buffalo, with eight bookings at local houses to immediately follow. The film showed at the Washington, Detroit, last week and is now playing "follow" dates at Grand Rapids, Lansing and Bay City. In all these cities the Anglo-American propaganda campaign is being employed.

Special Representative Leon Schlessinger, in a four-day flying trip through Iowa, visited Dubuque, Mt. Vernon, Clinton, Cedar Rapids, Lyons and Mechanicsburg, and booked "The Manx-Mmn" to exhibitors in all of them.

"Ashes of Love" Unfolds to the Trade

Ivan Abramson's latest photodrama, "Ashes of Love," made for the Graphic Film Corporation, was scheduled for a trade showing at the New York theatre roof on Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, September 10.

With James K. Hackett, Effie Shannon and Mabel Juliene Scott in the stellar roles and a supporting cast including Ruby de Remer, Paula Shay, Hugh Thompson, William B. Davidson, Dora Mills Adams, Thea Talbot and William Bechtel, a strong story is unfolded, filled with tense moments and startling and unexpected situations, which keep the audience on the qui vive of expectancy from the first title to the final scene.

This picture is said to represent Ivan Abramson at his very best.

Pioneer Reports Sales of "Still Alarm"

NATHAN HIRSH, president of the Pioneer Film Corp., reports that the "Still Alarm" has been disposed of for the following territories: First National Exchange of Denver, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico; Sydney B. Lust-Super Film Attractions; Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia, Carolina, Special Features Co., Alabama, Tennessee, South Carolina, Florida; First National Film Exchange of Seattle, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana; Hatch Film Co., Kentucky, Ohio, West Virginia, Pennsylvania; All Star Features, California, Arizona, Nevada; Supreme Photoplay Productions, eastern Pennsylvania, southern New Jersey; Superfeatures, Canada; Specialty Film Co., Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi.

Exhibitors are said to be very enthusiastic wherever "The Still Alarm" is mentioned, as is best evidenced by the following excerpts from two letters received from R. A. McVey, manager of the Auburn Photoplay Co. of Auburn, N. Y. Mr. McVey first wrote:

"Gentlemen:—Ship me a print of the 'Still Alarm' for screening at once. I will immediately return it but I MUST see this picture before I play it. If it is NOT as I understood it was I do NOT want it. I have every faith in Mr. Cobe, he is my best friend, but some place near here ran a play by this name recently and it has reached the ears of my public and patrons that it was terrible. I cannot believe it was the picture Mr. Cobe sold me but in any event I am going to call ten of these people together when it arrives, also our fire chief, who is a personal friend of Mr. Cobe's.

"All other bookings O. K. but I must see this film right away or I shall have to cancell the booking.

"Be sure NOW and get it right down to me. It will be back the next day or can be shipped anywhere you may direct. but I must see it. Competition and business in general here is too tough to let a report go around like this."

Harry Houdini Serial Nears Completion

THINGS are going full blast at the two studios in Yonkers which B. A. Rolfe is using to produce the Houdini serial and work is progressingly famously under full speed ahead at these studios. Up to the present time a great many episodes have been taken and in an interview Mr. Rolfe stated:

"I am more than pleased with the results that Burton King has obtained in the Houdini serial and really feel that a great deal of credit is due him, particularly as this picture is more like a feature than a serial from the standpoint of production, light effects, photography and action. When I started on the production of the serial I did not think it was possible to get the finer touches in a two-reel picture, but I felt that the success of a serial did not necessarily have to depend entirely on story, punch and thrill, but believed that the production itself could be materially improved by treating each episode in the nature of a feature. With this point in view, I set out to make the Houdini serial a series of two-reel features, and up to the present I must say that I am more than pleased with the results that have been obtained. It is our intention to give this picture every artistic touch and dress it up in the same manner and with the same care that a five-reel feature is handled."

Moss Re-enters Production Field

B. S. Moss has closed a contract with Charles K. Harris, the composer and music publisher, for the picture rights to his Spanish-American War Song, "Just Break the News to Mother."

This will mark the re-advent of B. S. Moss in the picture producing field from which he retired last year to devote his entire attention to his circuit of vaudeville theatres, after having produced about a dozen features, among which were "Three Weeks" and "One Day."

The personnel of the cast to appear in "Just Break the News to Mother" is not announced.

Anna Case Sings at Studio and All Stop Work

In the neighborhood of East Forty-eighth street, New York City, where the Norma Talmadge studio is situated, Anna Case, the American soprano, is engaged in making her first picture for the International Film Service Co., Inc., under the title of "The Golden Chance," and one of the scenes represents a drawing room wherein she is entertaining some friends at a musicale.

Of course the hostess is called upon to sing, and as realism is the keynote of the production according to Julius Steger, the supervising director, Anna Case put her whole heart into the song.

Inside the studio, it is declared that every sound ceased, stage carpenters stood with their hammers suspended, electricians and property man tiptoed to a better vantage point and gazed upon the singer, transfixed by the quality of her voice, while outside, everywhere within hearing distance, women and children hung, breathlessly, out of windows, automobiles and wagons stopped, and even the voice of an old clothes man, busily calling his trade, was hushed.

Charles Richman, Broadway star of stage and pictures in his own right, is Miss Case's leading man, and among other favorites the cast includes Forrest Robinson, Grace Neals and John J. Charles.

"Romance of Coal" Reports Progress

The Educational Films Corporation's project of a big spectacle dealing with "The Romance of Coal" and the recent coal crisis is making satisfactory progress under the direction of William Parke. The release of the picture may be expected with the advent of really cold weather when the interest in this subject will be more than academic. While the patriotic purpose of maximum fuel production and conservation is being kept prominently to the fore, the chief end of the fiction story will be to entertain.

As the project has grown in the minds of its creators, the story has been strengthened and amplified, and several notable additions have been made to the cast. Among the players now working in it are J. H. Gilmour, the noted legitimate actor who has also been seen in several screen productions; Hugh Thompson, Peggy Adams, Stephen Grattan, L. F. Kennedy, J. J. Dunn, Tom Burrough, Fred Radcliffe, Henri Rolf Otte and others.

"Carmen of Klondike" Gets Bookings

"Carmen of the Klondike," that is being handled throughout the Eastern territory by W. J. Pratt for the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, after a run at Gordon's Scollay Square theatre, has been booked solid over the entire Gordon and Poli circuits, and is also booked for a first-run showing in every large city in the New England States.

This picture is meeting with success wherever shown, it is said.

Gaumont Cameraman Tells of Dangers

Gaumont, in an announcement this week, declares that standing behind the crank of a motion picture camera is as hazardous as standing in a front line trench behind a gun. The announcement said:

"Making motion pictures is not only an essential, but hazardous occupation. War cinematographers say their work is more dangerous than soldiering; they can't fight back.

"Now comes Walter Pritchard, star photographer for the Gaumont News and Graphic, who avows that not all of the dangers incident to crank turning are attendant upon climbing steep mountain cliffs, hanging on to cloud-piercing airplanes, or dodging bullets on the battle fields.

"With all the necessary paraphernalia Walter sallied forth to make some great historical pictures of the thousands of draft-evaders recently rounded up in New York City. He got along all right for a while, until a solicitous official demanded his registration card, when it developed that the draft board had presented Walter with a deuce, or the wrong color, or a something which did not please the inspecting officer. After spending many hours in the "bull-pen" the mistake was rectified but not before Walter had visions of being shot at sunrise or forced to associate with interned Germans in some federal calaboose. Pell Mitchell, editor of the News and Graphic was on hand, and personally photographed the roundup. (P. S.—Pell escaped when the officials inspected the top of his head.)"

Success Productions Makes Progress

Charles F. Schwerin, of the Success Film Productions, Cleveland, Ohio, has reported considerable progress within his organization since it was formed. The company is buying state right features, one of the most recent being a deal to handle the Frank Hall pictures for the territory of Ohio, Kentucky and Southern Indiana.

Frank Hall Plan Shows Quick Results

The announced rapidity with which the Producers' Distributing Corporation has followed the announcement of the Loew Circuit bookings for its twelve special pictures with news of the signing up of other large circuits seems to promise well for the popularity of the plan which resulted from Frank Hall's decision to set fixed prices for his pictures and announce them broadcast to the trade.

Mr. Hall's move took him into paths hitherto carefully avoided by his fellow motion picture magnates although long and successfully trod by men in purely commercial lines.

Evelyn Nesbit in "Her Mistake" was selected as his first offering and the full meaning of the ten, twenty and thirty policy seems to have been recognized immediately. The Marcus Loew bookings for all of his pictures were secured at once and he now announces the signing of similar contracts by Moss, Keith, Mastbaum and Ascher Brothers which show a keen interest on the part of prominent exhibitors in New England, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Illinois.

W. H. Announces Four More Releases

W. H. Productions Company announces the release this week of four productions.

The two-reel Mack Sennett Keystone comedy, being the last of the series of twenty-eight, which is entitled "The Doughnut Designer," former title being "Dough and Dynamite," featuring Charlie Chaplin. With the exception of only one territory the entire country has been sold on this series, and they are proving an exceptional box-office success.

The second release is "Shorty in the Jungle," former title "Shorty Among Cannibals," one of the series of two-reel Shorty Hamilton Western comedy dramas.

The third release this week is entitled "Fatty the Fourflusher," former title, "Fatty Again." There are open several territories on this series of twenty-four single-reel Fatty Arbuckle comedies.

"The Ham Artist," former title "The Face on the Barroom Floor," is another one of the series of one and two-reel Charlie Chaplin comedies. Practically the entire country has been disposed of, with the exception of a single territory.

"Wives of Men" Offered for State Rights

Florence Reed in "Wives of Men" closed its New York engagement at the Casino theatre last week and Nathan Hirsh, president of the Pioneer Film Corporation, announces that the production will be sold to state rights exchanges everywhere except the states of New York and New Jersey which the Pioneer will retain.

"The exploitation given this production and its box-office and artistic success, augmented by an excellent complete line of advertising, makes it an extremely valuable production," said Mr. Hirsh.

Judge Revises Feature as Propaganda

Under the supervision of Federal Judge Benjamin Bledsoe of the U. S. District Court, the nine-reel film, "The Spirit of '76," which caused the arrest and conviction of Robert Goldstein, the producer, and his sentence to ten years in Federal prison, has been remade and will be used for propaganda purposes.

In most instances, it was found the sections of a pro-German nature could be eliminated, and by the addition of new subtitles, a good continuity could be secured The film originally cost $160,000, and the producing company owes $40,000 with the film as the only asset. When the Continental Producing Company went into the hands of the receiver, the referee in bankruptcy, Force Parker, sought permission of Federal court, and by the aid of Harry C. Pearce and H. C. McClung, a cameraman, the picture was remade. It is believed the referee will receive more than enough money to pay all the indebtedness of the company by the sale of this subject.

Brunton Directs Gordon United Film

United Picture Theatres of America announces that the forthcoming Kitty Gordon super-features in which the multi-robed United star will be seen exclusively in the theatres of its exhibitor-members, will be under the producing direction of Robert Brunton, the well known and talented head of the Brunton studios in Los Angeles. Mr. Brunton made a special journey from the Coast city to confer with President Berst in New York on the details of the productions and immediately returned to take up the Kitty Gordon direction in Los Angeles for the United.

Shipbuilding Shown in Gaumont News

The success of our shipbuilding program is again illustrated in the current Gaumont News, No. 24, which was released Sept. 3. Many interesting pictures of yards of both sides of the United States are shown. A New Jersey yard has set its pace at two ships a week, and a California yard shows the first camouflaged specimen of the big fleet it has contracted to build.

Pictures from France show how the Salvation Army, with its oil-stores, coffee pots and doughtnut kettles, is carrying comfort and happiness to our fighters.

Lesser Reports "Topics" Going Big

According to reports received in the local office of "Topics of the Day" Films, Sol Lesser's exchanges in 'Frisco and Los Angeles are now showing in thirty-four theatres in this territory. This is considered very good results owing to the nature of this novelty. "Topics of the Day" can only be shown in the first-class theatres changing weekly and not more than twice a week. The film is a short one but it creates enthusiasm and amusement wherever shown. The Strand theatre in New York has been showing this novelty.

"Mickey" Gets More Words of W. H. Praise

"A FEW years from now when the history of the motion picture industry is written," says an official of W. H. Productions Co., "'Mickey' will be given a prominent place, because it will stand for the creation of a new era in motion picture production. 'Mickey' now stands as a monument for the best, the finest, the most artistic and most interesting in motion pictures. It has a universal appeal, and by that we mean that 'Mickey' has something in it to interest and entertain every distinct type of nationality, both male and female; the office worker, the laborer, the artisan, the lawyer, the banker, the teacher, and from the youngest child to the oldest person that attends motion picture theatres. 'Mickey' will create new motion picture fans.

"Of course the natural question arising in the minds of people hearing about 'Mickey' is, what makes it so unusual and what gives it a universal appeal? This is readily answered by the reviews of the critics, and the people who have already seen 'Mickey.' Every element that has ever been put into pictures is co-ordinated into a perfect continuity in 'Mickey' and these elements are humor, pathos, adventure, romance, sensationalism and love. There is a little bit of everything to appeal to everybody. One of the prominent features, however, in 'Mickey' is that it is big in its simplicity and cleanliness.

"Of course another question that crops up is why did it take so long and why did it cost so much money? This is also easily answered. It is an acknowledged fact that Mack Sennett, as a producer and director, ranks as one of the greatest in the industry. Mr. Sennett's first feature picture was 'Tillie's Punctured Romance,' and it was one of the two biggest motion picture successes. He had been dreaming of a picture like 'Mickey' for some time, as a second big feature, and his dream evolved into a reality," concluded the W. H. official.

Garrett Keeps Up the Sales Drive

President Sidney Garrett of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., is still hammering at the high altitude sales mark. Recent deals include the entire Billy West rights for Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania to the Co-operative Film Exchanges of Sydney, Australia. The rights to the Rita Jolivet super-production, "Lest We Forget," were acquired by the North American Motion Pictures, Inc., of Buenos Aires, Argentine, for the territory of Porto Rico, Venezuela and Santo Domingo.

The same firm acquired the Billy West comedies for the Argentine, Paraguay, Uruguay and Chile.

Baird Serial Sold for Two Territories

President Sidney Garrett, of J. Frank Brockliss, announces a big week preceding Labor Day. The Leah Baird Serial, "Wolves of Kultur," was sold for two foreign territories. The Co-operative Film Corporation of Sydney, Australia, purchased the Australasian rights which include Australia, New Zealand and Tasmania.

One of the biggest deals of the year was the purchase by the African Film Trust of Cape Town, South Africa, to the rights for the entire Far East, including Japan, China, India, Strait Settlements, the Philippines, Java, Ceylon, Burmah and the entire South African territory.

Fox Books Educationals Into His Theatres

FOR what is said to be the first time in the history of the William Fox enterprises, a group of the Fox motion picture and vaudeville theatres have booked the Educational Films Corporation scenics on a regular monthly schedule. The houses referred to are the Academy of Music, Audubon, Crotona and Star in Manhattan and the Fox Liberty Theatre at Elizabeth, N. J.

At the Academy throughout Labor Day week Bruce's "Following the Trail of the Cayuse" held the place immediately preceding the Annette Kellermann spectacle, "Queen of the Sea." Forests, mountain peaks, and glaciers of the "Cayuse" adventure, with the rugged campers, ponies and Great Dane of the Bruce outfit, were in decided contrast with the marine effects and mythic characters of the Kellermann feature.

William Fox's Audubon ran "The Glacier National Park" the last four days of Labor Day week, and on the same dates his Crotona offered the Bruce split-reeler, "Fishing for Fish" and "The Bull Thrower." "A Trip Through the Hawaiian Islands" and "Yosemite Valley" divided the week at the Star Theatre, Lexington avenue and 109th street. On Sept. 2 the new Liberty Theatre, Elizabeth, N. J., was added to the ever-increasing Fox chain, and the management signalized the event (as did Rothapfel at the Rivoli opening last winter) by giving patrons the celebrated Bruce-Educational scenic, "The World o' Dreams."

The above houses will henceforth book clever scenics regularly, and it is the expectation that other members of the Fox group will shortly come in, according to E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager of the Educational.

Schomer Prepares to Release "Ruling Passions"

The Schomer Photo-Play Producing Co., Inc., of 1440 Broadway, is soon to release "Ruling Passions," the new six-act photo-drama written and directed by Abraham S. Schomer, author of "To-day," "The Yellow Passport," and "The Inner Man," with Julia Dean in the part of Eveline Roland, one of the star roles of the production.

Miss Dean is another one of the numerous young women of the West who by their innate talent, ability and perseverance have won a permanent place in the foremost ranks of stage and photoplay artists.

It was after consultations with many artists that Mr. Schomer finally determined upon asking Miss Dean to play the part for he felt that she possessed to the full the talent, the power and the ability to properly portray the character of Eveline Roland. That he was not disappointed in his selection is evidenced by his statement that Miss Dean is a young woman of rare talent and ability whose powers are under such control that she can respond instantly and perfectly to every demand of the director in any part that she may play.

Mr. Schomer will announce the release date in the near future.

Open Market Plan for Houdini Film

Announcement has been made by B. A. Rolfe, Inc., producers of the Houdini serial, that the picture featuring Houdini will be released on the open market.

In a statement Harry Grossman, general manager of the concern, stated: "I have carefully considered all distribution plans, and I believe that the open market form of distribution will prove more advantageous to exhibitors than any other means which I can employ to accomplish this end. The Houdini serial has created a furore in the industry and not only have we given great thought to the method of distribution, but we have formulated a new plan whereby exhibitors will secure better service than is the custom on a picture of this kind. In the point of the last analysis each episode of the Houdini serial is similar to a five-reel super-feature."

United Adds Three

Arthur E. Silverman, Jack Underfeld, Harry Thomas and William L. Merrill have been added to the field force of United Picture Theatres of America during the week.

Dustin Farnum Film Reports Progress

Rapid progress in the making of Jackson Gregory's "The Wolf Breed," the second of its series of super-features with Dustin Farnum as the star, is reported from United Picture Theatres of America. A private showing of the Harry A. Sherman lavish production of Zane Grey's "The Light of Western Stars," which forms United's inaugural release of the Dustin Farnum super-series, was given at the Sherman House during Convention, and is reported to have excited praise.

Liberty Loan Slides

AS we stated last week, we have compiled suggestions for slides which the operators of the country can prepare themselves to supplement those being sent out by the government.

Facts are what count. In order to sell anything from shoes to advertising space, facts must be the basis. Government Bonds must be sold on facts—the need of the government for money, the fact that Liberty Bonds are the best security in the world, and the exact statement of fact as to just what can be bought with the money which is traded in to the government for a bond of any size.

The facts which are given below are detailed. They are also absolutely authentic, as they come from Liberty Loan headquarters. They can be used as they stand, or if desired can be re-grouped as long as the statements made are not changed—THEY ARE FACTS.

* * * *

A $50 BOND

Will pay the U. S. war bill for one-tenth of a second,
Will buy 1000 rifles cartridges,
Knives, forks and spoons for a company, or Four gas masks, to save four lives.

Sign a card today.

Uncle Sam does not ask you to pay for your bond all at once.

SUFFERING TO A RED-BLOODED MAN MEANS FIGHT.

Think of this.
100 hand grenades—104 rifle grenades,
37 first-aid packets—10 bayonets and scabbards,
50-37 mm. shells—one high explosive airplane bomb.
Any one of these for a $50 Baby Bond.
The more you buy the more Germans the boys will get.

Sign now and sign the limit.

THINK OF IT.

Two soldiers completely equipped
10 45-calibre automatic pistols
Food for a Yank for a year or 20 pairs of field shoes
$150 buys any one of them
$600 buys them all
You can't help signing up.

A $50 Bond buys part.

* * * *

HELP GET THE KAISER

Every $1000 bond we buy means—
33 rifles
148 pairs of shoes
2000 pounds of T.N.T. or
1 rolling kitchen.

It is up to you—the boys can't win without your backing. This means money. Help feed them, arm them, clothe them.

Bonds are the answer. Sign for something today.

* * * *

$2,000,000 pays for the war for one hour.
Think it over—
24 hours in one day—
$48,000,000

$3,336,000,000 PER WEEK.
Do you wonder we need money?

Every little bit helps to do your bit—sign up for all you can.

NOW.

* * * *

We urge that these slides be made by every operator in the country who has the facilities for doing so. They can be shown when the four-minute men or the special speakers are talking to the audience, and by their use the people can have facts brought to their attention which otherwise would never be brought out. It is one method of showing your patriotism.

E. K. GILLETT.

Equipment Operating Projection Questions Answered

80

Remote Focus Control

EMIL A. NELSON, owner and manager of the Star theatre, Duluth, Minn., sends us specifications of two United States patents which have been recently granted him on devices for focussing the projected motion picture from a place remote from the lens of the projector, as, for instance, from the front or rear of the auditorium, or from any other desired location, depending upon the arrangement of the electrical circuit from which the device is operated.

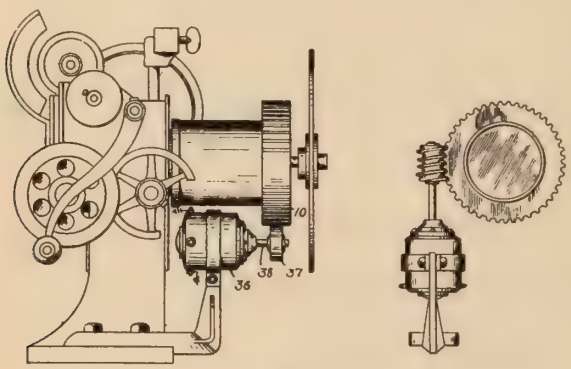

Fig. 1

Mr. Nelson shows several variations in the mechanical principle of the device in his patents, and he states that the same may be adapted to the focussing arrangements of both the Power and Simplex mechanisms. We proceed to briefly describe the two principal types of Mr. Nelson's device, which permits the screen picture to be focussed from various parts of a theatre by pressing a push button located in any desired place.

Fig. 1 shows the simplest form of the device, which consists of a small motor, capable of running backwards and forwards by closing suitably wired circuits. As the figure shows, the motor is connected by suitable gearing to the rotating jacket by which the projector lens is usually focussed, the ratio of the gearing being such that the jacket is rotated very slowly by the motor. It is readily seen that if the motor is properly connected into a circuit which extends to various positions remote from the operating room, and at which positions push buttons for closing the circuit are located, the definition of the screen picture may be regulated from the auditorium by pushing the proper button until the screen result appears correctly defined.

Fig. 2 shows another apparatus devised by Mr. Nelson for accomplishing the same end. In Fig. 2 two solenoids designated by 11 and 12, are provided with the cores 15, whose stroke may be regulated by the adjustable washers 18. As is apparent from the figure, the cores of the solenoids bear against the teeth of the gear 7 (mounted to the focussing jacket of the objective), so that when the solenoids are respectively excited, the gear 7 will be slightly rotated causing the focus of the objective to be altered. The wiring of the circuit operating the device is simple, and extends to various parts of the theatre, as in the previous case, thus the results achieved by either device would be substantially the same.

Apparently Mr. Nelson has not yet undertaken the manufacture of these remote focussing controls, and they are not as yet upon the market; consequently we can not comment upon the performance of the same in actual use. Many cases can be conceived of, however, where a system of controlling the focus in this manner would undoubtedly prove valuable in maintaining critical screen definition, provided, of course, that those who manipulated the buttons were competent judges of definition.

More About Carbons

Mr. T. A. Gramtling, Florence, Ala., writes as follows: "This is my first offense and it will do some of the boys some good, especially Mr. Fallon of Sioux City. If I understand rightly, he lays all his arc trouble to carbons. Now, a few years ago I would have sided with him, but since the Big Show on the other side of the pond opened up the American carbon manufacturers woke up to the fact that just as good, if not better, carbons could be made in the good old U. S. A. as in Europe. They are more than making good, as both National and Speer are turning out a superior grade of carbon to any imported brand I have ever used, and believe me, I have used some few different brands, from street arc carbons to French metal cored. But to get back to "Sioux City" and his trouble, and every other trouble of a similar kind, dear brothers of the profession, don't put the blame on the carbons altogether; use a little common sense and a whole lot of judgment, and a little study and experimenting will help some, too, in your selection of sizes of carbons. I have always found that with the G. E. motor-generator set using 25 to 50 amp. across the arc you get from 42 to 48 volts, and the best possible results are obtained by using a 5/8" cored upper and a 5/16" Silvertip negative, keeping the carbons from 1/4" to 3/8" apart. Set with the negative forward so that point will split the core of the positive. If Mr. Fallon will try this I think he will get rid of his trouble; also, if he will burn enough carbons for a day's run long enough to form craters upon them he will find a big improvement in results after a new trim. Well, friend Editor, this may or may not be information that's new, and I am only giving you this from my own experience. I am always willing to learn and the Projection Departments of both the News and World are the best schools I know of, and take it from me, when I can't buy both I look up some one that has them."

Comment: Due, perhaps, to his having missed some of Mr. Fallon's earlier communications, the present correspondent has not interpreted quite rightly that gentleman's present viewpoint in the matter of carbons. About the first of this year Mr. Fallon had unlimited trouble with a certain lot of apparently defective carbons, and carbons have remained more or less a pet antipathy with him ever since, but he long ago surmounted his carbon difficulties, according to his recent letter, and as we know Mr. Fallon to be a broad-minded student of projection, we feel sure that he never intended to convey the impression that "the carbons are always to blame."

Our correspondent raises a point which should not be lost sight of when he praises the American manufacturers of projector carbons, for some of the improved varieties which they have placed at the service of projectionists, represent real advances in carbon manufacture, and have undoubtedly improved the performance of the projection arc.

The carbon sizes given by the correspondent for D. C. up to 50 amperes, i.e., 5/8" cored upper and 5/16" Silvertip lower, are those recommended by the National Carbon Company as the correct D. C. trim, but if Speer carbons are used then the same size (5/8") cored upper carbon is used but the lower carbon should be the Speer Hold-Ark of 7/16" diameter. The Hold-Ark, although a metal coated carbon, differs from the Silvertip in that it has a hard core. It accomplishes the result implied by its name and has won praise from operators in many localities.

Although the procedure of burning craters on a number of sets of carbons for use throughout the day's performances is not often mentioned, its importance cannot be too strongly advocated, as there is no comparison between the screen illumination from a new and previously unburnt carbon, and one which already possesses a well-formed crater. We are glad to state that the importance of forming the craters prior to the projection of pictures is realized in New York, and in many other localities also. When the operator does not see fit to prepare a lot of carbons in advance he can still have the proper condition at the arc if he has two projectors and a current supply which permits him to burn a new trim for a while in one machine while the other machine is in operation. This is commonly done by operators where conditions permit.

There is no doubt whatever, as the correspondent states, that the Projection Departments of the trade journals are the best sources of information for operators, and the reason is not difficult to seek, for the operator who studies the suggestions of these Departments can then turn to his equipment and try them out practically, whereas the operator schools, which unfortunately are again coming into prominence, are most all handicapped by the lack of sufficient equipment, while their goal is the license bureau rather than the picture on the screen.

Royal, San Francisco, Has Up-to-Date Operating Room

IT is hard to beat the progressiveness of the Coast theatres, and the Royal theatre of San Francisco, Cal., is exemplary in this respect. The management has endeavored to provide every facility for making their patrons comfortable while enjoying the pictures, and they have succeeded splendidly.

Switchboard in Operating-room of Royal Theatre, San Francisco

Sixteen hundred persons can find easy, commodious seats in the large, well ventilated auditorium. A large fan driven by a 5-horse power motor furnishes an ample supply of pure fresh air, while a 5-foot Ventura fan exhausts the impure vitiated air. An American Photo-Player Co. organ, the blower of which is operated by a 5-horse power Westinghouse motor, furnishes the music.

The operating room is equipped with a 72-ampere Westinghouse motor generator set and the pictures are projected a distance of 130 feet upon a flat white screen, 16 feet by 21 feet. A full non-flickering current at the arc is secured for projection from the Westinghouse motor-generator, which is complete with two ballast resistors, magnetic control and transfer switch. A switchboard gives a direct-current breakdown service from a 3-wire direct-current supply circuit.

The equipment includes two Simplex machines with Type S lamp houses, special arc controls and Elbert speed regulators. There is also a Brinket spotlight, which is used during the Robert-Morton organ recitals. Slides are run on a Power double stereo. Everything in the room is equipped to run by motor, including the Elbert rewind, taking 2,000-foot Bell and Howell reels.

A glimpse at the accompanying photo will show the up-to-date arrangement for the operating current supply, of which the management of the Royal theatre is justly so proud.

Books on Projection

JUST at the present time there seems to be great interest manifested in the study of motion picture projection, as is evidenced by the requests which are constantly coming to hand for the names of books on this subject.

There are quite a goodly number of published works on cine projection, which may be consulted at public libraries in the larger cities; some of the particularly goods works being, however, in French, and therefore not of much use to the average reader. Some other books published in England and the United States were good ones in their day, but are now either out of date, or too amateurish to accomplish much in advancing the knowledge of the modern operator, while other works which are sufficiently exhaustive and accurate in some departments, are utterly bad and misleading in others, the correct theory of the projector optical system having proven a stumbling block for some writers of books, who have printed incorrect data on the same, while in other cases this phase of projection has received insufficient attention.

Under the circumstances no published book on projection is the "cure all of the class room," but the following selection is recommended as covering (1) general operating procedure, (2) motion picture mechanisms, (3) electricity:

Graphoscope Company Issues Two Neat Booklets

FROM Washington, D. C., the home of the Graphoscope and its inventor, Mr. C. Francis Jenkins, one of the genuine movie pioneers, have just some two neat little booklets describing the most recent and popular of his creations—the Junior Graphoscope.

The first of these booklets, entitled "Why the Graphoscope?" sets forth the necessity of a simple and safe projector in educational and industrial motion picture presentation, and points out the features which must be embodied in a safe machine, showing, in addition, that these desiderata are met in the design and construction of the Graphoscope.

The other booklet contains "Directions for Setting Up and Operating the Graphoscope Junior," and gives all the necessary instructions within the compass of eight small pages. The instructions are facilitated by two good half-tone illustrations of the Junior Graphoscope, in which all of the important parts are designated, with reference lines and numbers printed in red. Another Change-Over Signal

Mr. M. A. Godwin, Bridgewater, Mass., encloses a copy of the patent specification covering a "film indicator" patented by him and writes as follows:

"I am enclosing a copy of my Patent No. 1,233,868 for a Film Indicator. Inquiries regarding same were called to my attention in the January 19, 1918, issue of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS. The enclosed copy will answer all questions and perhaps be of interest to you. This indicator has been in successful operation at the local picture house since December, 1916, when application was made for the patent."

Comment: It will be seen from the appended diagrams, reproduced from Mr. Godwin's patent specification, that his change-over signal, or film indicator as he terms it, follows the basic idea of most similar devices, i. e., it is operated by a hinged or pivoted arm terminating in a roller which bears on the circumference of the film reel; the position of the arm changing as the diameter of the film roll decreases and a pointer attached to the pivoted end indicating the proper time to prepare the second machine for changing over.

The Godwin Film Indicator

Mr. Godwin's device is, perhaps, the simplest of all the change-over devices embodying this principle which has been described to date, and therefore will probably not accomplish all that some other devices will, such, for instance, as the J. K. & E. Indicator, described in the NEWS of January 19, 1918 (the issue alluded to in Mr. Godwin's letter). That device, it will be recalled, rings a bell at any desired distance from the end of the reel, in addition to showing how much film has been projected by means of a pointer and dial.

While Mr. Godwin's letter and patent specification do not state how the device is to be adapted to use with reels having various sized hubs, we suppose this is easily accomplished by changing the calibration of the indicater dial, and any user of one of these devices could readily make the necessary marks thereon.

Like many other patented devices which we describe, as being likely to interest our readers, Mr. Godwin's film indicator is apparently not yet on the market, nor even being manufactured in quantities. The device has the merit of great simplicity, however, and any reader desiring to secure one could undoubtedly receive particulars from Mr. Godwin, whose address is 238 Park avenue, Bridgewater, Mass.

Where to Get League Slides

WE are still in receipt of numerous inquiries, some from new members of the National Anti-Misframe League, and others from members who perhaps do not follow the Projection columns closely enough, as to whether there are announcement slides available wherewith an operator member of the N. A. M. L. may apprise the audience of his progressive affiliation.

As was set forth in a previous issue, the Independent Movie Supply Company of 729 Seventh avenue, New York City, carry in stock an attractive colored slide bearing the insignia of the League and stating that the operator showing same is a member of the organization, a space being also reserved for the member's number.

One of these slides may be secured for 50 cents in stamps, coin or money order by any League member who will send his order and remittance to the Independent Movie Supply Company, as above.

Cannock Returns from Well Earned Vacation

FRANK B. CANNOCK, secretary of the Simplex Company, 317 East Thirty-fourth street, New York, has just returned from a ten-day fishing trip at Silver Lake, near Akron, Ohio.

This vacation was the result of a much needed rest which Mr. Cannock had promised himself as a relief from the close attention to mechanical problems connected with the manufacture of Simplex Projectors, which had kept him confined to business for a period covering many months.

Camera Laboratory — Picture Making — Studio Technique

On Light Effects

A STUDY of the technical pages of the NEWS covering the last few years, or, indeed, any other period in the history of motion picture entertainment, will show that there has always been steady progress in the design and improvement of cinema-chinery and laboratory and studio methods of procedure, from which it is natural to contend that cinematography as an art likewise shows corresponding advances.

Whether and to what extent the photographic results of the various producers are constantly improving in artistic and technical quality can only be determined from a visual study of their various offerings upon the screen, and as a devotee of motion picture entertainment whose interest has stood the test of time, we propose to set forth our opinions on certain photographic effects—or perhaps we should say defects—which frequently occur in the screen offerings, to the detriment of the same in most cases.

A sign of increased artistry on the part of motion picture producers was the introduction, some years ago of "light effects" in their interior scenes, a "light effect" being broadly defined as that manner of lighting a scene which would produce in the resultant photographs the appearance, or effect, of the various objects or characters in the scene being lighted to an extent which would be expected under the natural conditions which the scene was intended to represent, and with the light on any given object coming from the direction which, likewise, would be noted under the natural conditions supposed to be duplicated in the scene.

The sense of this definition, then, should form the basis of intelligent and truly artistic staging and photography where "light effects" are sought, and when its full requirements are borne in mind by the producer and his staff, results are secured which reveal the possibilities of cinematography to even the practised art critic, while they impress, subconsciously, a large multitude who have no artistic or photographic training whatever—sure proof that "light effects," worthy of the name, are valuable artifices in production.

To many patrons of motion picture entertainment, and, it seems, even to some producers, the term "light effect" always implies the accentuation of some object in a scene by an overpowering flood of light which will, by visual contrast, cause it to stand out from its surroundings, but we desire to here point out that our definition of a light effect goes further than the mere accentuation of individual details in a scene, and that a light effect of the truest type may be produced without according special consideration to particular objects in a scene, if the scene as a whole is intelligently lighted to produce the effect which we would really observe under the natural conditions intended to be portrayed. Some producers have appreciated this point, and it may be said to their credit that they have studiously tried to produce interior scenes in which the objects and the characters are no more, nor no less brightly illuminated than they would appear in the rooms of an average house, while to further perfect the illusion the directions from which the light is supplied are regulated to conform as nearly as possible to the requirements of an accurate portrayal.

Such endeavors, being entirely commendable, can but react to the favor of the producers who have made them, but in the majority of cases producers have not paid sufficient attention to the correct lighting of ordinary interior scenes of conventional character, as is proven by the majority of the results one sees upon the screen. This is partly due to the fact that the majority of our motion pictures are produced under daylight (properly diffused of course), but it seems to be the experience of those having made the experiment that natural lightings of interiors can be most nearly attained in studios using artificial light exclusively. A modern studio installation of artificial lights requires to be a very flexible arrangement, whose separate elements permit the production of light effects of the more vivid type.

Considering more narrowly the "light effects" in the average production of the present day, a glaring "defect" pervades a great many of such effects, tending to bring them into disfavor with the critical "movie" patron. This is the harshness or glaring white appearance of the highlights, i.e., faces or other objects which it has been attempted to accentuate, which appear to have been flooded with light, or so severely over-exposed as to rob the screen result of practically all essential detail.

The blame for these glaring and unrealistic effects is universally thrust upon the cameraman, not only by the public, but by his employer, the producer himself, but we propose to paint conditions as they really are, thus showing that in the majority of cases the cameraman is not responsible for the harsh "highlights" which appear instead of proper "light effects."

Cinematographers, both in New York and on the Coast, have raised their profession to a high status, and there is no doubt whatever that the camera staffs of the leading producers are in the main composed of intelligent photographers, while many surprising results noted upon the screen bear witness to painstaking work on the part of the cameramen. Our investigations show, moreover, that in the production of "light effects," the cinematographers in most cases are doing all that the man behind the camera can do to secure a faithful photographic record of the lights, the shadows and the details in the scenes they picture, and we know that most cameramen engaged upon pretentious work are at great pains to label their cans of exposed negative with accurate and complete instructions as to the nature of the effect desired, and a report of the conditions under which the exposures were made.

This forethought on the part of the cameraman goes for naught, however, when the film reaches the laboratory, and it is our intent on this occasion to unconditionally blame the laboratories for the majority of the harsh, absurd and unnatural "effects" mentioned above, for it is a matter of fact that the average developer of negatives in a film laboratory has no conception whatever of the nature of a "light effect," nor of the means and methods by which such effects are produced.

The result is that when negatives exposed to accentuate certain features of a scene, whilst leaving others in comparative obscurity, come into the hands of the average dark-room worker, they are misjudged as underexposures and are so unmercifully forced, or "cooked," to use the cameramen's term, that the highlights are hopelessly overdeveloped (and opaque), while details not meant to be obtrusive are brought into prominence to the dismay of the cameraman and producer.

Lack of knowledge of studio lighting and the camera procedure is perhaps pardonable in the case of the average dark-room man, since developing is regarded as a separate profession in the motion picture industry, but the indifferent and unintelligent work on negative development of most laboratories has driven the cameramen to labeling all of their exposed film with precise information regarding its treatment, in defense of their own reputations.

When, in spite of this, the laboratories continue to ruin correctly exposed and carefully labeled negatives, which in reality occurs every day, the laboratories can no longer escape indictment for many of the harsh results now prevalent in screen offerings, and the officials and production staffs of the various film making concerns should turn to the laboratory, instead of to the cameraman, for the necessary improvement in the photographic quality of "light effects."

which would make me capable of operating a motion picture camera. Are there any books published on this subject and in what ways can I get information or instruction?"

Reply: The study of complete and thorough treatises is always a great help to the beginner or student in any trade or profession, but among the entire literature on cinematography that has appeared in English there is no book which treats of the advanced phases of production camera work and cinematographic technique as practiced in the studios today.

A helpful book for the beginner is Bennett's "Handbook of Kinematography," of which there are several copies in the New York Public Library. This was published by the Kinematograph Weekly, Tottenham street, London, W., but we believe it is now out of print. Although elementary in its treatment of cinematography and projection, it has been succeeded by a still more concise and elementary work by the same author, the later work being entitled "The Guide to Kinematography." This may be obtained from the above publisher for six shillings ($1.50).

A mastery of the motion picture camera, and of production technique cannot, however, be entirely gained through the study of books or articles on the subject, but our correspondent is fortunate in having already gained a working knowledge of still photography and some insight into cinematographic procedure.

To round out into a competent cameraman he must continue as the assistant to a practicing cinematographer, or else secure a camera of his own and "learn the ropes" by actually exposing films, just as an amateur photographer acquires his experience with a hand camera. Although somewhat expensive, the experience gained in this way is the shortest route to success in the actual use of a cine camera.

H. O. Lott New Manager of Bell & Howell New York Office

THE Bell and Howell Company of Chicago, manufacturers of the well-known Bell and Howell cine cameras, printers and perforators, announce that their New York office and display-rooms at 220 West Forty-second street, are now in charge of H. O. Lott, who takes the place of D. J. Bell.

The new manager, Mr. Lott, is an experienced mechanical engineer, and is, in addition, a graduate of the Bell and Howell factory, where he received a thorough training in the manufacture and adjustment of the precise mechanisms embodied in the B. & H. apparatus.

Mr. Lott is also thoroughly versed in studio and laboratory methods, and for a number of years was the mechanical expert at the Triangle laboratory in Ft. Lee, where he designed many devices which facilitated the accurate processing of films. In view of this experience and special training the users of B. & H. apparatus in the East are assured of high class service on the part of the New York office.

Mr. Bell, the retired manager has gone to California where he has extensive interests, and his next role, we are advised, will be that of a "gentleman farmer."

Course of Training in Practical Optics Inaugurated at Rochester

THE optical glass problem in this country has been solved and there is now available manufacturing capacity for optical glass sufficient to supply the Army and Navy, but the skilled labor necessary to work up this glass into lenses and prisms and to assemble these into finished instruments has not been adequate.

To meet this situation the Ordnance Department of the Army is establishing in Rochester, N. Y., a training school for operatives on precision optics. The school is to be located at the Mechanics Institute, in Rochester, and the large optical manufacturing firms in Rochester are providing instructors and aiding in the installation of the grinding, polishing and centering apparatus.

Courses in the different branches of this industry will be given and extended over a period of six weeks. A living wage will be paid to those who take these courses. On completion of the course the student will be in a position to enter one of the optical munition factories and be competent to perform certain of the operations required.

Typhoon Fan Company Moves

SO rapidly has the Typhoon Fan Company grown that it has found it necessary to move from their old quarters at 1544 Broadway to 281 Lexington avenue. Here the company is occupying a building in that section within easy reach of the theatrical district as well as the transportation and terminal facilities of the city.

The Typhoon Fan Company lived at the Broadway address for ten years and has grown from a one-man concern to a business employing a half hundred men and women. With the Lexington avenue force and their branch office in New Orleans, employing a force of twenty, they are better equipped than ever to cool the United States, a statement from the company said this week.

More Power Machines Installed

H. A. Johnson Company of Seattle, Washington, wrote MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week as follows, in regard to the installation of Power projection machines:

"The H. A. Johnson Company has just placed two Power 6B machines in the new American theatre, Sunnyside, Washington; a Power 6A in the new Rex theatre, Tacoma, Washington; a Power 6A at the Charleston theatre, Charleston, Washington; a Power 6B in the Paramount Artcraft Exchange, Seattle, and a new Simplex machine, type "S," at the Wenatchee theatre, Wenatchee, Washington.

Music and Its Relation to the Coming Liberty Loan

HOW music will help to win the war was illustrated more than once during the third Liberty Loan campaign. The playing of patriotic melodies by only one band has created better results than any amount of patriotic four-minute men's speeches. The playing of the various patriotic anthems is visibly bringing together the various racial elements of which our population is composed and in that way, as in other ways, it is bound to assist in accomplishing our purpose to win the war. It is surprising to see a number of foreign-born who speak English badly and sometimes not at all, but who all nevertheless understand the universal language of music and freedom. It is the one form of appeal that reaches every racial element.

Even after we have successfully won this war, the influence of patriotic music will continue to be a factor in helping to maintain that patriotic spirit which has been injected to the masses during these strenuous times of strife. It has been established as a fact that patriotic melodies arouse a mass of people to more responsiveness than any other method ever employed. It is the sound of martial music that can stir people into the highest pitch of patriotic enthusiasm, and it will be the sound of the very same martial music which will accompany our boys back to their loved ones and country after victory is theirs.

Some day when a complete account of the present war is written, when every phase and part of the gigantic struggle will be known, when the indescribable feats of bravery and endurance of our men, together with the material factors which aided in the ultimate victory will have been duly recorded, a considerable chapter will be necessary for the proper presentation of the important and essential, as well as uplifting part which music, in its every form, contributed to our cause.

Every one of the belligerent nations is recognizing this fact and none of them has ever thought of declaring music as non-essential or as a luxury. America too has quickly seen into the need of providing its fighters with every possible form of musical relaxation, not only for the reason of absolute amusement, but, also because of its far-reaching influences as a direct need.

To give a better illustration of how music can instill in the masses the spirit of the present times, I will mention an instance which occurred on the actual battlefield somewhere on "No Man's Land." One soldier, who was made unconscious by the explosion of an enemy's bomb, was unable to be revived. After employing every conceivable medical method of bringing him back to consciousness, one of the soldiers suggested placing the wounded man right next to a military band which was ordered to play the "Star-Spangled Banner." The military band hardly had a chance to finish our national anthem when everyone watching the expression on the face of the inert soldier noticed that the martial spirit of our wonderful anthem had accomplished the marvel of which medicine had failed. This is but one example which has come to my knowledge and I am sure that there is not a living person in the world today who is not in a position to mention several instances where music has produced similar results as outlined in my above-mentioned story.

Music is vital, essential and indispensable in the life of our nation. To deny it would mean taking away one of our strongest and most desirable forces for the upkeep of our spirits, our powers of endurance, our patience, and our belief in ultimate success, and in depriving us of so many factors necessary for victory, it would seem that in the end our enemies would be served and benefited to a much greater extent through such a purpose than we would.

The heart of our nation is warmed by music. The home brightens with a heavenly light. The band puts vigor into marching thousands. The camps are cheered by songs of home. Patriotism is stirred by songs of our Flag and our Country. Courage for battle follows inspiring war songs. Songs of victory are shaping themselves in the hearts of our men.

Who was it who first asked: "Is music a non-essential?"

Review of the Latest Musical Compositions

1—"Howdy," a Yankee "pep" step. A great novelty and feature number for summer band and orchestra work. Just the thing for amusement parks, summer dances. Get it now while it is new. (Sam Fox Pub. Co., Cleveland.)

2—"Military Waltz"—a wonderful medley arrangement of patriotic sings—"Red, White and Blue," "Tenting Tonight," "Dixie," "Marching Through Georgia." Arranged in waltz time by Mr. Logan. (Forster Music Pub., Inc., 736 So. Michigan avenue, Chicago, Ill.)

3—"Moonlight Waltz"—a corking number that is fast becoming very popular. You can't make a mistake by having it in your repertoire. (Forster Music Pub., Inc.)

4—"The Sister of Rosie O'Grady"—a real old-time spieler waltz—the kind they all rave about. (Jos. W. Stern & Co., 103 West 38th Street, New York.)

5—"When We Meet in the Sweet Bye and Bye." One-step. Stanley Murphy's latest. It's going to be one great, big, rousing, rattling success. An irresistible one-step for dancing—you'll have to play it often. (J. H. Remick & Co., 227 West 46th Street, New York.)

6—"Southern Rhapsody," by Lucius Hosmer. Characteristic Southern motives and melodies, interspersed with original themes founded on negro rhythms. Arranger and cued with the practical purpose of rendering it equally effective for small organizations.

7—"Li'l Liza Jan," the song the soldiers are singing—the greatest one-step published. (Sherman, Clay & Co., San Francisco, Cal.)

8—"Plaintive," by Christopher O'Hare; adapted for live scenes, tender restrospects, etc., in moving pictures. (Oliver Ditson Co., 178 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.)

9—"Comic Hurry," by Christopher O'Hare; for live comedies, railroad trains, races, aeroplanes, serio-comic pursuit, etc. (Oliver Ditson Co.)

10—"God Be With Our Boys Tonight"—one of the greatest ballads ever written by Wilfrid Sanderson. This wonderful song, as rendered by Mr. John McCormack, the world's most popular concert singer, is proving a veritable sensation. The intense emotional appeal in this great ballad is stirring the country as no other song of recent times has done. (Boosey & Co., 9 East 17th Street, New York.)

11—"Some Shape"—one-step by George L. Cobb. The one big dance favorite with New York society right now. (Walter Jacobs, 8 Bosworth Street, Boston, Mass.)

12—"Take Me Back to Dear Old Blighty" ("Blighty means home"). Sooner or later it will be absolutely necessary for you to buy either the band or orchestral parts of the famous British trench song. Incidentally, it is one of the best one-steps, dances or marches in this or any other country. (Chappell & Co., 41 East 34th Street, New York.)

13—"Furioso"—composed and orchestrated by Sol. P. Levy; composed with an "aftermath" or "coda" playable at the end of any strain. The only edition of a "Five-Minute Hurry." (Cinema Music Co., Columbia Theatre Building, New York.)

14—"Symphonette Suite," by that well-known composer, Irenee Berge, consisting of four numbers based on one

theme, entitled "Lento Allegro," "Adagietto," "Scherzetto" and "Vivo Finale." Each number insidiously portrays the original theme, but in the tempo of its title. (Belwin, Inc., 701 7th Avenue, New York.)

15—"Babillage," by G. del Castillo; a charming and fascinating Babillage, that winsomely interprets the chattering of the eternal feminine. Arranged for orchestras by Irenee Berge. (S. M. Berg, Columbia Theatre Building, New York.)

Mutual Settings Bring Praise

MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION this week announced that it has received many complimentary letters of appreciation on the musical settings made for its productions which are printed on each press-sheet issued. These settings are compiled by Joseph O'Sullivan, Director of Music Service for Mutual, who has incorporated several interesting and helpful suggestions in his cue-sheets.

Max Adamsky, musical director of the Gold theatre, Chicago, which ran "Love's Law," the first Gail Kane Production released by Mutual, for two nights, is said to be enthusiastic in his praise of Mutual's musical settings. Mr. Adamsky has made music a feature at the Gold. He was soloist of the Chicago Grand Opera Co. for several seasons, and has played with the foremost symphony orchestras.

In a letter to Mutual, Mr. Adamsky says: "I wish to say that it gave me great pleasure to synchronize the music cues compiled by you for 'Love's Law' which was shown at the Gold for two nights. The music was of a classic nature, well selected, and fitted the picture perfectly.

"Kindly send me, as soon as possible, cue-sheets on 'A Hoosier Romance' and 'His Birthright,' which are booked at the Gold. Also, send me orchestration of 'Nipponese,' the theme which you wrote for 'His Birthright.'"

The musical setting made for "His Birthright," the first Haworth Production starring the great Japanese actor, Sessue Hayakawa, contains a theme written by Mr. O'Sullivan titled "Nipponese," which is printed on an insert sent out with each press-book of "His Birthright."

This theme is distinctly Japanese in character, being based on fragments of old Japanese themes, an Old Samurai Prayer and a Love-Lay supposed to have been indited by a Mikado of the seventh century furnishing material for this theme. It should prove a splendid aid in interpreting the character of action in "His Birthright."

Dedicates Music to Petrova

SACHA VOTICHENKO, the Russian musician, who is said to be the only exponent of the tympanon, has dedicated his new Russian and Polish folk-lore music to Olga Petrova. These selections are being arranged for full orchestra as well as for the tympanon, and will probably be played between the acts when Madame Petrova returns to the speaking stage in October in a new four-act play written by herself and W. E. Roberts.

The Complete Plan Book

Advance Reviews

[In addition to Advance Reviews—covering pictures shown too early to be included in The Complete Plan Book—readers will also find under this heading each week the reviews of short features and serial episodes.

For this week, also, there are included some reviews of productions released prior to the inauguration of The Complete Plan Book but not previously reviewed.]

"The Yellow Dog"

(Jewel—Released Oct. 15. Directed by Collins Cambell)

ASIDE from propaganda reasons, which it lends itself splendidly to, this attraction offers clean and wholesome entertainment. It possesses many of the elements that are necessary to a good picture, such as rapidity of action, thrills, suspense and some situations with heart interest.

The plot is based on the story of the same name, by Henry Irving Dodge, published recently in the Saturday Evening Post. Its purpose is to expose those Americans who, by their continual growling, either from being chronic kickers or as the result of underground German propaganda, become the unwilling instruments of the Kaiser and the system he represents. Such persons often misrepresent the actions of the Government.

The picture ends by showing how some American youngsters defeated a scheme of German spies to burn the shipyards with a number of completed ships. Their energetic, often mischievous, nature was used for a good purpose.

This offering will prove satisfactory to all.—P. S. Harrison.

"Transients in Arcadia"

(An O. Henry Story in Two Reels Released by the General Film Co.)

IF you ever happen to be in need of a two-reeler to complete your bill and don't know what to get, book this. In such case, if your feature happens to be weak, disregard it and boost this. It is better than 75 per cent. of the so-called features.

It is a little romance of a young man and a young lady, occupation clerks, who had saved enough money in order that, for once in their lives, they should act like wealthy people living in luxurious hotels.

There are several surprising situations in it, the regular O. Henry style.

The comedy element in it is plentiful.

It is two reels full of clean and wholesome fun. Book it.—P. S. Harrison.

"Getaway Kate"

(Two Reel Pathe Release)

THIS is a fast, well sustained crook plot with a murder mystery that is a real one. Kate Sherwood, who has escaped from the law, has lived in the home of James Marlow as his secretary. David Marlow loves her, but when he asks his father's permission to marry her he refuses. That night James Marlow is found dead. In a highly sustained series of scenes the real culprit is discovered and the girl freed of all suspicion. Helen Chadwick and Henry Gsell are the main players. The story is by Frank Leon Smith, while George B. Seitz produced it.—Peter Milne.

"Ashes of Love"

(Graphic Film Corp.—Six Reels)
